Offset Obligations

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost and benefits of offset obligations incurred by United Kingdom defence companies as part of export defence agreements were in each year since 1992, broken down by nations and regions of the UK. [67308]

Dr. Moonie: Such offset obligations are normally commercial transactions entered into by United Kingdom companies and overseas authorities. Information on these transactions is not held centrally by the Ministry of Defence.

There is, however, one Government-to-Government arrangement. Under the Al Yamamah programme, Her Majesty's Government encourages commercial investment in Saudi Arabia as an offset to the programme costs to the Saudi Arabian Government. This arrangement, which is at no cost to the United Kingdom taxpayer, makes a valuable contribution to this important defence collaboration programme.

Royal Navy Submarines

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made on the testing of a new naval nuclear reactor core that will power Royal Navy submarines for their full operational life; and what problems have been experienced. [67708]

Dr. Moonie: The new naval nuclear reactor Core H that will power Royal Navy submarines for their full operational life is being tested at the Vulcan Naval Reactor Test Establishment located at Dounreay in Scotland. Full power trails started on 5 February 2002 and all initial test results were as predicted. No problems have been experienced with the new core during testing to date.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the testing of a new naval nuclear reactor core that will power Royal Navy submarines for their full operational life has remained within his Department's estimated budget. [69842]

Dr. Moonie: The fixed price contract to deliver testing of the Royal Navy's new submarine reactor core has remained within the Equipment Programme 2002 budget.

Procurement (Interoperability)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria are in place to ensure (a) current and (b) future interoperability with (i) UK, (ii) NATO and (iii) US systems when making procurement decisions; and if he will make a statement. [68677]

Dr. Moonie: Interoperability is a broad subject and no single criterion determines the Ministry of Defence's requirements for interoperability. The issue includes interoperability between different equipment capabilities, between operational and business applications, as well as with allies and coalition partners. The ability to operate effectively alongside NATO partners, including the United States, in multinational operations is considered crucial. For each new equipment project, the Business Case through which the project is approved will consider explicit requirements for interoperability. This will also express, as a Key User Requirement, specific and affordable interoperability requirements for the system.

Gulf War Veterans

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will pay no-fault compensation to former members of the UK armed forces suffering from Gulf war syndrome, in accordance with the recent ruling of the Pension Appeals Tribunal in the case of Mr. Shaun Rusling; and if he will make a statement. [67638]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 9 July 2002]: As my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the armed forces explained in his answers on 2 July, Official Report, columns 226–27W and on 4 July, Official Report, column 520W, the Ministry of Defence does not recognise Gulf war syndrome as a medical condition. Furthermore, the recent Pension's Appeal Tribunal's decision is specific to that case and does not set a legal precedent. It would be wrong to interpret from the tribunal's finding that Gulf war syndrome does exist. However, the fact that there is, at present, no proper basis for recognising Gulf war syndrome as an appropriate diagnostic label does not prevent a Gulf veteran getting a war pension which is paid on a no-fault basis. Gulf veterans may also be eligible for no-fault pension benefits under the armed forces pension scheme.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his policy of providing compensation to invalided soldiers, medical auxiliaries and their families suffering from illness arising from serving in the Gulf War. [68259]

Dr. Moonie: No-fault compensation for United Kingdom service personnel disabled as a result of their service is provided through the War Pension Scheme (WPS). The WPS applies to all those who have served in the UK forces. Veterans may also be eligible for an Armed Forces Pension Scheme (AFPS) occupational pension and, if they have been medically discharged, this is supplemented by attributable benefits linked to the degree of disability or non-attributable benefits linked to length of service, whichever is the greater. Both the WPS and AFPS provide benefits to the dependants of veterans who have died.

The Ministry of Defence has about 2,000 active notices from Gulf veterans and members of their families of their intention to claim common law compensation in respect of illness allegedly arising from the Gulf conflict. However, we have still yet to receive any writs or claims of sufficient detail to allow these cases to be taken forward. When compensation claims are submitted against the MOD, they are considered on the basis of whether or not the Department has a legal liability to pay compensation. Where there is a legal liability to pay compensation we do so.

Military Exports

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of authorised exporters of military supplies based in (a) mainland UK, (b) the Channel Islands and (c) the Isle of Man. [68810]

Dr. Moonie: Such a list does not exist.

Nimrod MRA4

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the Nimrod MRA4 programme; and what problems have been experienced. [69841]

Dr. Moonie: Nimrod MRA4 is a highly complex, software intensive and sophisticated product. The degree of technical challenge has led to a delay in delivery, with the in-service date re-set in 1999 to March 2005. BAE Systems are driving hard for this target and the key interim deliverable of first flight, expected by the end of this year. The Ministry of Defence and the company are also ensuring that Day 1 and whole life support are in place as required. The capability to be provided will be a step change from that currently available. Nimrod will be the leading class product, evidenced by US interest in MRA4 as a contender for their Multi-Mission Aircraft programme.

Afghanistan

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many men have left the initiative to train a standing Afghan army. [69840]

Mr. Hoon: There have been some who have left the Afghan army training programme, but overall in the circumstances there appears to have been a reasonable retention rate, and we are pleased that this multi-ethnic force is beginning to take root.

Eurofighter

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the delays to the Eurofighter. [69843]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 23 May 2002, Official Report, column 478W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Vale of Glamorgan (Mr. Smith).

HMS Albion

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 June 2002, Official Report, column 736W, when the review of the in-service date with BAES Marine is expected to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [70129]

Dr. Moonie: It is expected that the review with BAES Marine of HMS Albion's in-service date will be completed shortly. I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House once the date has been confirmed.

Weapon Locating Radars

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many artillery hunting radars have been leased from Ericsson to fill the capability gap left by the delay in selecting a bidder; what the total cost was of leasing; and if he will make a statement. [70427]

Dr. Moonie: Four Arthur weapon locating radars were leased from Ericsson in April 2002 to satisfy an urgent operational requirement. The systems were deployed operationally by the end of April 2002. The cost of the lease is commercially sensitive and so I am withholding it under Exemption 7 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

A competition to satisfy the Army's requirement for a mobile artillery monitoring battlefield radar was launched in October 2001. Ericsson was selected as the preferred bidder and a contract was placed for four Arthur systems in June 2002. These are an upgraded version of those that have been leased and will offer an increase in capability when brought into service with the United Kingdom armed forces. There was no delay in selecting a preferred bidder, but work to confirm the requirement took longer than expected.

HMS Fearless

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the (a) Brazilian and (b) Argentinean Governments about a possible sale of HMS Fearless. [70163]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 16 July 2002]: I am withholding the information requested in accordance with Exemptions 1 and 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

A600M

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the re-tendering process for the engines for the A600M; what EU funding is available to (a) Pratt and Whitney and (b) Rolls Royce to assist with research and development of bids for the A600M engine project; and when he will announce the outcome of the re-tendering process for the A600M engines. [70162]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 16 July 2002]: I believe that the hon. Member is referring to the A400M aircraft. The A400M prime contractor, Airbus Military, is responsible for selecting the aircraft's engines. In December 2001 the company sought new tenders for the A400M engine after deciding not to proceed with its earlier choice of engine. The hon. Member will recall that the A400M contract is for the development and production of the complete aircraft, including its engines. Airbus Military is free, therefore, to select its suppliers on grounds of performance and cost, thereby ensuring that we obtain best value for money. No EU funding for research and development is available to either Pratt and Whitney or Rolls Royce in connection with the A400M engines. We understand that Airbus Military expect to announce their engine selection when the A400M prime contract becomes effective. Partner nations are working to bring the prime contract into effect at the earliest opportunity.

War Pensions

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he will take to inform ex-servicemen demobbed in 1952 of entitlement to war benefit; and if he will make a statement. [70560]

Dr. Moonie: The Veterans Agency already undertakes a significant amount of publicity to raise awareness about war pensions. It does not however target ex-servicemen demobbed in any particular year.

The Agency issues a range of information leaflets and posters to a number of different outlets such as post offices, regimental museums, GP surgeries and works closely with ex-service organisations. In addition the Veterans Agency website contains comprehensive information and the War Pensioners Welfare Service holds advice days and surgeries using a mobile advice unit to access more remote areas.

There are no time limits for claiming a war pension but the onus is and always has been on the individual to make a claim.

Future Offensive Air Strategy

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Government intend to build new aircraft to fulfil the manned aircraft element of the future offensive air strategy; and if he will make a statement. [70626]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 17 July 2002]: The future offensive air system is currently in the concept phase with a planned in service date of around 2017. We are currently looking at a potential mix of platforms including long range cruise missiles, uninhabited air combat vehicles and manned aircraft. No final decisions have been taken on the solution.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the X-45 in order to fulfil the requirements of the unmanned element of the future offensive air strategy; and if he will make a statement. [70627]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 17 July 2002]: We are at the early stages of evaluating ways in which unmanned aircraft could contribute to our future offensive air system (FOAS) capability. As part of our continuing dialogue with United States colleagues, we have discussed the X-45 vehicle. But we have made no formal assessment of the X-45; and nor have we yet taken any decisions about developing or acquiring specific unmanned aircraft in relation to FOAS.

Predator

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Government intend to buy Predator; and if he will make a statement. [70669]

Dr. Moonie: Under the Watchkeeper programme we are considering how tactical unmanned aerial vehicles can enhance our reconnaissance and imagery intelligence capabilities. Four industry consortia have proposed a range of system solutions (both air vehicles and ground segment elements). The Predator air vehicle is a part of one of these solutions.

We intend later this year to select two potential solutions for more detailed assessment. Our aim is to select a single preferred solution by the end of 2003.

International Security Assistance Force

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his Turkish counterpart concerning the duration of the Turkish armed forces' lead of ISAF; and if he will make a statement. [71034]

Mr. Hoon: I have not had discussions on this subject with my Turkish counterpart, although I did discuss the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) with its Commander, Major General Zorlu of the Turkish Army, when I met him recently in Kabul. UN Security Council Resolution 1413 authorised ISAF to continue operations in Kabul for another six months from 20 June 2002 under Turkey's leadership. It is too early to say what might happen after that.

Joint Strike Fighter

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the Israeli Government about their interest in the Joint Strike Fighter. [70165]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 16 July 2002]: There have been no discussions with the Israeli Government about the Joint Strike Fighter.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he plans to seek an in-flight vectoring capability from Joint Strike Fighters. [70166]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 16 July 2002]: No. We are not planning to seek an in-flight thrust vectoring capability for any variant of the Joint Strike Fighter.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Dance

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to improve community access to participation in dance; and if she will make a statement. [67678]

Dr. Howells: In order to provide a full answer, we have contacted the Arts Council of England to request the information required, and my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for the Arts will write to my hon. Friend as soon as it is available, placing copies of her letter in the Libraries of both Houses.

Communications Bill

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make it her policy in the forthcoming Communications Bill to extend Ofcom's proposed duty to promote equal employment opportunities for disabled people in the broadcasting industry to the (a) telecommunications and (b) internet industries, and work connected with these services. [68306]

Dr. Howells: The EC Directives limit the conditions which can be attached to the provision of electronic networks and services. The permitted categories would not provide a basis for imposing any such controls.

Arts Council

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the Arts Council of England and each Regional Arts Board have spent on (a) legal fees, (b) fees for consultants and change managers, (c) redundancy, retention and bonus payments and (d) other costs of stress reduction during the financial year 2001–02; and if she will make a statement. [68345]

Dr. Howells: The following table outlines expenditure by the Arts Council of England and Regional Arts Boards on (a) legal fees, (b) fees for consultants and change managers and (d) other costs of stress reduction during the financial year 2001–02:

Expenditure 2001–02	Arts Council of England	Regional Arts Board
Legal fees	679,114	137,784
Fees for consultants and change managers	853,319	0
Redundancy, retention and bonus payments	0	0
Other costs of stress reduction	51,834	10,000

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the Arts Council will produce a business plan that will display the costs and benefits of the change process for the three years 2001–04; and if she will make a statement. [68348]

Dr. Howells: The Arts Council of England has been asked to develop a plan to evaluate the costs and benefits emerging from the restructuring of the organisation. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has asked for a progress report on the development of this plan by the autumn.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the work on branding the new Arts Council will be completed; how much will be paid to Wolff Olins for this work; and if she will make a statement. [68347]

Dr. Howells: This is a matter for the Arts Council of England. I understand it is working towards a completion date later in the year. £73,700 in fees and £7,674 in associated costs have been paid to Wolff Olins for work being carried out on the brand.

Public Consultation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the length was of each public consultation undertaken by her Department since 8 June 2001. [68743]

Dr. Howells: The following table indicates the length of each public consultation carried out by the Department since 8 June 2001.

Theatre Funding

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to ensure that the results of the additional funds allocated as core funding to theatre in 2001 are built upon. [68667]

Dr. Howells: This is a matter for the Arts Council of England. Once the new funds announced last year are fully on stream in 2003–04 a full and proper assessment can be made of whether they have delivered the achievements envisaged in its Theatre Review.

Tourism

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was spent by tourists in each (a) Government Office region and (b) local authority in the latest year for which figures are available. [69959]

Dr. Howells: Statistics on expenditure by tourists are not available by Government Office region nor at local authority level. They are however produced according to regional Tourist Board areas. The latest data are shown in the table.

Expenditure by tourists in the UK in 2001

£ million

		Domestic
Tourist board region/ country	Inbound[1]	with overnight stay	day trips	Total

National Stadium

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received objecting to the term National Stadium being applied to the new Wembley site. [70242]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend has received one such representation. This was sent by the hon. Member for Tamworth (Mr. Jenkins) on 20 June 2002.

Licensing Regulations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will place in the Library the studies of licensing regulations in European and US cities made by her Department and the Home Office, in the course of preparing the White Paper 'Time for Reform', and since. [69289]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 16 July 2002]: I will place a report on the studies carried out by officials in the Libraries of both Houses and will inform my right hon. Friend when I have done so. This material focuses on the licensing systems of countries rather than cities and on Europe rather than the United States. Published material on non-European countries was also considered in the development of the proposals set out in 'Time for Reform'.

Sports Coaching

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the contribution made by volunteers in the field of sports coaching. [70666]

Mr. Caborn: Sport, particularly at local club level, would be unable to flourish without 1.5 million volunteers, who include administrators, mentors and officials, as well as coaches. The Government's Plan for Sport recognised the critical importance of volunteers and the need to invest in maintaining numbers through training. The Step into Sport project aims to meet this need by investing £7 million over two years in training 60,000 young people and 8,000 adults to volunteer in sport, and by assisting the national governing bodies of sport to produce volunteer support strategies. A further initiative, Come into Coaching, will aim to attract volunteer coaches and administrators from March 2003.

Audiovisual Works

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the EU Committee for the Implementation of the Training Programme for Professionals in the European Audiovisual Programme Industry and of the Programme to Encourage the Development, Distribution and Promotion of European Audiovisual Works (MEDIA III) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70899]

Dr. Howells: The Management Committee for the Media Plus programme last met on 12 July and is next due to meet on 16 October. No members of the Scottish Executive have been or are members of the committee.

Television Without Frontiers Directive

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the EU Contact Committee for the implementation of the television without frontiers directive is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70900]

Dr. Howells: The Contact Committee established under Article 23a of the 1997 revision of the "television without frontiers" directive last met in Brussels on 11 and 12 July 2002. There is no fixed date for the next meeting of the committee which may be convened at the request of any of the delegations; this is likely to be in the autumn. No members of the Scottish Executive have been or are members of the committee.

Open Source Software

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her policy is towards using open source software; and what percentage is used in her Department. [69324]

Dr. Howells: My Department selects software on the basis of value for money and how well it meets our business needs. Open source software will be reviewed against the same criteria and in line with the forthcoming Government policy on open source software due for publication this summer. At present, my Department does not use any open source software, though such software has been used in the past.

SCOTLAND

External Consultants

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with (a) her Department and (b) executive agencies in each of the past five years. [38732]

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by her Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date, indicating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed. [38734]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 28 February 2002]: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. Since that date the following contracts have been awarded.

Company	Contracts
Serco	Cleaning services
Group 4	Security
Chestertons	Facilities management

The value of these contracts is commercially confidential.

Details of contracts awarded by the former Scottish Office before 1 July 1999 are not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which previously held contracts with her Department (a) won new contracts at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) won new contracts after a period of inactivity with her Department in each of the past five years. [38733]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 28 February 2002]: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. Since that date no contracts have been awarded to organisations which previously held contracts with my Department.

Relocation Expenses

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what her policy is on the payment of relocation expenses to staff in her Department. [41031]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office policy on payment of relocation expenses to staff follows the principles detailed in Section 8 of the Civil Service Management Code, which sets out the conditions under which Departments may reimburse relocation expenses to staff.

Special Advisers

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many special advisers were employed by her (a) between 1 May and 31 December 1997 and (b) in each year from 1998 to 2001 inclusive; and what the total amount spent on special advisers by the Department was in each of those years. [41247]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. There are currently two special advisers in the Department.

On costs, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the number and expected cost to her Department of special advisers in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [43271]

Mrs. Liddell: There are currently two special advisers in my Department.

On costs, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W.

Departmental Contracts

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by her Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed. [43677]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. Since that date the following contracts have been awarded:

Serco—(cleaning services)

Group 4—(security)

Chestertons—(facilities management).

The value of these contracts is commercially confidential.

Details of contracts awarded by the former Scottish Office before 1 July 1999 are not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the target has been in each of the last five years for efficiency savings as a percentage of total running costs for each of the non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible; and if the target was met. [49641]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department is responsible for the Boundary Commission for Scotland. The Commission has a statutory duty to keep under review the parliamentary constituencies in Scotland and, periodically, to conduct a general review. No specific efficiency savings targets have been set, but my Department monitors closely the Commission's expenditure plans and outturn.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the (a) cost and (b) saving from the pursuit of the Department's Public Service Agreement targets in each year since they were introduced. [61048]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department does not have a Public Service Agreement.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the (a) cost and (b) saving has been from the Department's pursuit of Service Delivery Agreement targets in each year since they were introduced. [61637]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office Service Delivery Agreement sets out the Department's agreed strategy for delivering its key performance targets. Each year, details of performance against its targets are published in the departmental report.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many private finance initiative projects have been subject to refinancing after the contracts have been signed; and what has been the financial effect in each case. [50391]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department has no private finance initiative projects.

Better Quality Services Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which of the services of her Department have not been reviewed under the Better Quality Services initiative; and when they will be reviewed. [50323]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. The Department does not deliver executive services to the public and none of its activities have been reviewed under the Better Quality Services initiative.

Liquid Petroleum Gas

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many LPG production sites and distribution sites there are; how many there were in 1990; and if she will make a statement on LPG use in Scotland. [53589]

Mrs. Liddell: Information provided by the LPG Association for the UK, including Scotland, indicates:

there are currently approximately 80 cylinder filling plants/bulk distribution depots;

there are currently 1,104 vehicle filling stations in the UK, an increase from 100 in 1998 (Scotland figures: 38 stations in 2000; 54 sites currently).

LPG offers benefits from reduced emissions and reduced fuel costs for motorists. Scotland Office Ministers have campaigned for increased use of LPG, not least because of the potential benefits to some of Scotland's most remote communities. I am therefore glad to see its availability increase across Scotland.

Regional Funding Mechanisms

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff within her office are allocated to consideration of regional funding mechanisms. [67929]

Mrs. Liddell: There are no members of staff within the Scotland Office allocated to consideration of regional funding mechanisms. The Scotland Office does, however, monitor academic research on these issues.

Departmental Property

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to her answer of 25 June 2002, Official Report, column 799W, on departmental property, what the annual rent charged for her Department's office accommodation in (a) Edinburgh and (b) London was in the last year. [69290]

Mrs. Liddell: The annual rent charged last year for my Department's accommodation was £135,250 in Edinburgh and £10,500 in London.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to her answer of 25 June 2002, Official Report, column 799W, on departmental property, from whom her Department leases office accommodation in (a) Edinburgh and (b) London. [69291]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department leases accommodation in Edinburgh from the Local Authorities Mutual Investment Trust (LAMIT) and from the Crown Estate in London.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General what the (a) cost and (b) saving has been from the Department's pursuit of Service Delivery Agreement targets in each year since they were introduced. [61636]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General what has been the (a) cost and (b) saving from the pursuit of the Department's Public Service Agreement targets in each year since they were introduced. [61049]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Acquittals

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what action has been taken to reduce the number of (a) judge-ordered and (b) judge-directed acquittals since 1999. [60203]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 10 June 2002]: In 1999, the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) introduced an adverse outcome analysis system. This provides CPS areas with a consistent means to identify reasons for adverse outcomes and also to allocate responsibility of any failure. This information is collated centrally.

For the last seven years, many areas of the CPS have had in place, with the police, a system of joint performance management that involves an appraisal of Crown court acquittals, including those ordered and directed by the judge. This process provides areas with information showing particular trends and a means by which improvements can be made.

The Crown Prosecution Service produces quarterly summaries of unsuccessful case outcomes from information drawn from its various case tracking systems. This year the CPS and the police have begun to develop a joint case outcome analysis which builds on these two processes and will focus on avoidable case failure. Under this system, the reasons for judge ordered and judge directed acquittals in individual cases will be jointly assessed for individual training needs and other joint strategies for performance improvement.

The process will be supported by more sophisticated management information following the introduction of the CPS' Compass Case Management System due to roll out between April and December 2003.

The figures in the table show a fall in judge directed acquittals from 1,777 in 1999 to 1,471 last year, a reduction of 17.2 per cent. Over the same period judge ordered acquittals rose from 9,616 to 11,825, an increase of 23 per cent. Much of this increase can be attributed to recent changes in procedures. Since January 2001, the prosecution, unlike before, have been able to discontinue cases in the Crown court. Although this is a prosecution decision, the current system records these as judge ordered acquittals.

Judge ordered and judge directed acquittals 1999–2002

	Number	Percentage of completed cases
1999–2000
Judge ordered acquittals	9,616	11.1
Judge directed acquittals	1,777	2.0
2000–01
Judge ordered acquittals	10,145	12.3
Judge directed acquittals	1,755	2.1
2001–02
Judge ordered acquittals	11,825	14.0
Judge directed acquittals	1,471	1.7

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Report

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost was of publishing his Department's annual report for each of the past five years. [70483]

Jane Kennedy: The Northern Ireland Office has published a separate annual report since 2000. The publishing costs (excluding staff time in preparation of data) were as follows:

2001	6,641.18

The costs for the 2002 report are not yet available.

Paramilitary Symbols

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many arrests have been made in the last five years against persons suspected of (a) erecting flags associated with proscribed organisations and (b) painting murals related to proscribed organisations; and if he will make a statement. [67220]

Jane Kennedy: There are no criminal offences specifically relating to the above.

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criminal offences are committed when persons (a) erect flags associated with proscribed organisations and (b) paint murals related to proscribed organisations; and if he will make a statement. [67221]

Jane Kennedy: There are no criminal offences which relate specifically to the circumstances you describe. There are however a range of offences which might be employed, for example:

In relation to flags associated with proscribed organisations

1. Breach of the Peace (Common Law)
2. Provocative Conduct in Public Place or at Public Meetings or Procession (Article 19(1) Public Order (NI) Order 1987 which states "A person who in any public place or at or in relation to any public meeting or public procession:
   - (i) uses threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour; or
   - (ii) displays anything or does any act; or
   - (iii) being the owner or occupier of any land or premises, causes or permits anything to be displayed or any act to be done thereon, with intent to provoke a breach of the peace or by which a breach of the peace or public disorder is likely to be occasioned (whether immediately or at any time afterwards) shall be guilty of an offence"

3. Intimidation (Section 7, Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act 1875) which states, "Every person who, with a view to compel any other person to abstain from doing or to do any act which such other person has a legal right to do or abstain from doing wrongfully and without legal authority—
   - (i) uses violence to or intimidates such other person or his wife or children, or injures his property; or
   - (ii) persistently follows such person about place to place; or
   - (iii) hides any tools, clothes or other property owned or used by such other person or deprives him or hinders him in the use of thereof; or
   - (iv) watches or besets the house or other place where such other person resides, or works or carries on business or happens to be, or the approach to such a place; or
   - (v) follows such person with two or more other persons in a disorderly manner in or through any street or road, shall be liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a time not exceeding six months or a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale or both".

In relation to the painting of murals related to proscribed organisations:

1. Breach of the Peace (Common Law)
2. Use of Words or Behaviour or Display of Written Material (Article) 9(1) Public Order (NI) Order 1987) which states, "A person who uses threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour or displays any written material which is threatening, abusive or insulting is guilty of an offence if—
   - (i) he intends thereby to stir up hatred or arouse fear; or
   - (ii) having regard to all the circumstances hatred is likely to be stirred up or fear is likely to be aroused thereby".
3. Criminal Damage (Article 3(1) Criminal Damage (NI) Order 1977) which states, "A person who without lawful excuse destroys or damages any property belonging to another intending to destroy or damage any such property or being reckless as to whether any such property would be destroyed or damaged shall be guilty of an offence".

It must be emphasised that contemplating any such prosecution of the above is strictly dependent on the individual circumstances of the case. For instance what may intimidate, provoke etc. a particular reaction at an interface, may not have the same effect in the middle of a Loyalist or Republican estate.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the overseas trips on departmental business that have been undertaken in each of the last five years by officials in his Department; and what the (a) cost, (b) purpose and (c) result was in each case. [68727]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Fireworks

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he consulted the Northern Ireland Fireworks Association during the preparation of the Explosives (Fireworks) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2002. [69341]

Jane Kennedy: Officials from my Department met with a delegation of representatives from the fireworks industry in Northern Ireland in February 2002. At that meeting the delegates indicated their intention to form the Northern Ireland Fireworks Association.

CCTV Cameras

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the operation of CCTV cameras in the Short Strand area of East Belfast; and if he will make a statement. [68928]

Jane Kennedy: CCTV cameras in the Short Strand area are the sole responsibility of PSNI. However, I believe there is a great deal of potential with CCTV and have been monitoring their use. The Police Service has advised that since 12 May, these cameras have identified some 22 people of being involved in street violence; leading to 11 arrests, with more pending.

On a disappointing note, there have been regrettable incidents involving individuals damaging the CCTV cameras, even though they have been installed to enhance the public safety of all. I would call on everyone with any influence to do all they can to bring these attacks to an end.

Water Cannon

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements have been made for the Police Service of Northern Ireland to purchase water cannons for use in Northern Ireland. [71749]

Jane Kennedy: The Police Service of Northern Ireland, following discussion with the Northern Ireland Policing Board and ACPO, will shortly place an order for six new vehicle-mounted water cannon. It is hoped that the water cannon will be delivered before the summer of 2003.

This decision reflects the particular circumstances of North Ireland. It follows receipt of an interim statement, compiled by the independent DSAC Sub-Committee on the medical implications of less lethal weapons, on the medical implications of the use of vehicle-mounted water cannon in public order situations. The DSAC Committee is scheduled to complete the evaluation of vehicle-mounted water cannon before the systems enter service.

I have today placed a copy of the Sub-Committee's statement in the Library of the House.

Smuggling and Counterfeiting

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will introduce sanctions against those political parties whose paramilitary wings are found guilty of (a) smuggling and (b) counterfeiting goods in the United Kingdom. [70663]

Jane Kennedy: The Organised Crime Task Force, which I chair, recognises the lingering, significant influence of paramilitary groups in such organised crime activities and assesses that nearly half of the 76 organised crime groups identified in Northern Ireland are either controlled by, or linked with, republican or loyalist paramilitary organisations.

That said, it is very important that I confirm that the law enforcement agencies represented on the Task Force do not tackle organised criminals or crime groups on the basis of their paramilitary affiliations (or lack of them), but because of their involvement in criminal activities.

The Government believe that the most effective sanctions against those engaged in criminality is to disrupt the activity and bring those involved to justice.

I hope that the hon. Gentleman will agree with me that his firm response by the Police Service of Northern Ireland, HM Customs and Excise and the other agencies represented on the Task Force, is the best response to those involved in smuggling, counterfeiting and, indeed, organised crime in all its forms.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to (a) identify and (b) prosecute those paramilitary and other individuals involved in the (i) smuggling and (ii) counterfeiting of goods in Northern Ireland. [70662]

Jane Kennedy: The Organised Crime Task Force, which I chair, has a clear strategy in place to tackle these two key areas of organised criminal activity, which are laid out in the "Confronting the Threat" threat assessment and strategy documents, published and laid in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament on 23 May 2002.

The threat assessment and strategy documents describe in detail the successes that the law enforcement agencies have had in tackling smuggling, counterfeiting and, indeed, other areas of organised criminality. In brief, the Task Force has identified 76 criminal networks involved in a range of organised criminality. It has been assessed that at 31 March 2002: 41 per cent. of the groups are involved in tobacco smuggling; 30 per cent. engaged in alcohol smuggling; 26 per cent. in hydrocarbon smuggling; and 34 per cent. of the group are involved in counterfeiting goods.

During the last financial year, 57 criminal networks were subject to detailed law enforcement investigation and 43 have had members arrested for a wider range of serious offences. As a direct result of such action, 42 organised crime networks have been disrupted or dismantled.

Drug Users

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of people arrested in Belfast between (a) July and December 2001 and (b) January and March 2002 were known or suspected users of illegal substances. [49902]

Jane Kennedy: The Police Service of Northern Ireland does not have data on the illegal substance habits or suspected habits of arrested persons.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff have contributed to his Department's input to the Spending Review. [68688]

Jane Kennedy: The 2002 Spending Review involves a comprehensive assessment of the Department's performance, priorities and resource requirements and a range of staff make a contribution.

It is not possible to give a total number of staff involved, due to the wide range of contributions, needed from different divisions within the Department.

Full Time Reserve

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many full-time reserve police officers in Northern Ireland were (a) killed and (b) injured each year between 1972 and 1994. [68459]

Jane Kennedy: The statistics relating to reserve police officers killed and injured as a result of the security situation in Northern Ireland each year from 1972 to 1994 is set out as follows. These figures comprise both full-time and part-time reserve officers.

	Number of deaths	Number of injuries
1972	3	20
1973	3	34
1974	3	24
1975	4	64
1976	10	67
1977	6	39
1978	6	37
1979	5	26
1980	6	40
1981	8	56
1982	4	22
1983	9	30
1984	2	54
1985	9	80
1986	2	116
1987	7	48
1988	2	41
1989	2	35
1990	5	40
1991	1	29
1992	1	26
1993	3	23
1994	0	38
Total	101	989

Belfast Agreement

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what progress has been made by the Northern Ireland Office on political development in Northern Ireland; [67334]

(2) what progress has been made in the implementation of the Belfast Agreement during 2001–02. [67337]

Jane Kennedy: Very substantial advances were made in the implementation of the Belfast Agreement in recent times. Since last autumn, the devolved institutions have been operating fully effectively; substantial reforms to the policing and justice systems have been carried forward in the last year and there have been acts of decommissioning by the IRA. Continued implementation of the agreement is essential to the political future of Northern Ireland. It can only be achieved if there is full confidence that all involved have renounced violence for good.

Female Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the staff of his Department are women; and what the percentage was in June 1997. [66916]

Jane Kennedy: Information is not held in the format requested.

In July 2002, 60 per cent. of the staff in the Department are women.

In April 1997, 58.7 per cent. of the staff in the Department were women.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pension Tax Credit

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to implement the pensions tax credit. [68414]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Telford (Mr. Wright) on 28 January 2002, Official Report, column 37W.

Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority

Kali Mountford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to receive the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority's sixth annual report. [71804]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend has received the sixth report of the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority (Opra) which documents how the organisation has carried out its regulatory duties concerned with occupational pensions schemes and new work involving personal and stakeholder pensions. Copies of the report have been laid before Parliament today.

Discretionary Social Fund

Siobhain McDonagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what changes he will be making to the Discretionary Social Fund. [71805]

Malcolm Wicks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be making a number of minor changes to the discretionary social fund, with effect from 18 August 2002. The improvements included in this amendment to directions and guidance have been identified during the course of routine monitoring and also include recommendations made by the Work and Pensions Select Committee and the Independent Review Service for the Social Fund.

Details of the changes have been placed in the Library.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the answer of 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 365W, on housing benefit, what conclusions he has reached in his investigations of how local authorities can receive tailored electronic access to other departmental benefit data; and if he will make a statement. [66580]

Malcolm Wicks: We are committed to improving the Housing Benefit scheme to make it easier for councils to administer and easier for the public to understand.

Providing access to a wider range of Departmental benefit data has long been a requirement for local authorities and we have identified a suitable technical solution to give authorities improved tailored access to this information. We have recently made available to all local authorities tailored access to the Departmental Central Index which enables them to access personal details where a National Insurance number is known, and where necessary trace National Insurance numbers.

Further enhancements are planned including access to details of State Retirement Pension, Incapacity Benefit and Bereavement Benefits. We anticipate that development work will be completed by April 2003 and further access will be made available to local authorities shortly thereafter.

Income Support

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many lone parents in receipt of income support have a youngest child below school age; and what proportion this represents of all lone parents on income support. [69739]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is as follows.

Lone parents receiving income support—February 2002

Number of lone parents receiving income support whose youngest child is under five years of age—420,000.

Percentage of all lone parents receiving income support whose youngest child is under five years of age—48.

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 100.

2. Figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.

3. Lone parents are defined as single people with dependants and who are not receiving the disability or pensioner premium.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants had their jobseeker's allowance reduced during 2001–02 for (a) two weeks and (b) four weeks for not attending or failing to complete (i) Jobplan workshops, (ii) Restart courses, (iii) Workwise and Worklink and (iv) non-prescribed Government programmes where referral was under a jobseeker's direction. [69744]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available.

Jobplan workshops, Restart courses, Workwise and Worklink were phased out when we introduced our New Deal programmes from April 1998. Information on sanctions applied as a result of a person not attending or failing to continue a programme where referral was under a Jobseeker's Direction is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

New Deal

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many persons in Scotland over the age of 45 years have been helped with the upgrade of maritime competence certificates through New Deal schemes; [59664]

(2) what financial help is available to those on New Deal schemes for upgrading of existing maritime competence certificates. [59673]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Information on the number of New Deal participants undertaking specific training courses and qualifications is not available.

The Government offer financial assistance for merchant navy training through the Support for Maritime Training scheme (SMarT). The scheme, which is administered by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, offers substantial financial support to eligible training providers offering to provide approved training, which includes training for maritime competence certificates. In the financial year 2001–02 the overall budget for this support was £7.4 million. Funding is based on an average of course costs at the main maritime colleges. In broad terms this means that 50 per cent. of eligible costs are covered for each participant's course. If maritime competence training is identified as a need for a New Deal participant, their New Deal personal adviser can refer them to a training provider supported by SMarT if appropriate.

There is other provision available as well as the SMarT scheme. For example, if a New Deal participant identifies training that they wish to undertake which has not already been contracted for locally, the Jobcentre Plus district is able to buy in one-off provision (assuming that certain eligibility conditions are met and the participant's personal adviser believes that it is an appropriate type of provision for the participant to undertake).

In addition, the Adviser Discretion Fund gives New Deal personal advisers direct access to money to help people quickly into jobs. Advisers can spend up to £300 on anything that will help a jobseeker obtain a job or, if offered a job, to accept that offer. New Deal participants may be able to access this fund to upgrade their maritime competence certificates, with the agreement of their personal adviser.

Performance Targets

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) cost and (b) coverage is of each PPP/PFI for information systems and technology services now operating in his Department; on what date each agreement was made; and what the performance indicators are for each such contract in each year of operation. [62026]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Department of Social Security and the Employment Service had both made their own contractual arrangements for Information Systems and Technology Services prior to merging to form the Department for Work and Pensions.

Department of Social Security

(a) Cost:

Information concerning the cost of each PPI/PFI for information systems and technology services is commercially confidential and is not provided in line with part 2 paragraph 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

(b) Coverage:

The Department has let four PPP/PFI business allocations for information systems and technology services to date under the ACCORD contract.

The Strategic Outsourcing Business Allocation (SOBA) conferred lead supplier status on EDS/Affinity and gave them responsibility for maintenance, development and operation of the Department's IT systems, together with a range of related IT services. This business allocation commenced in September 2000.

The Child Support Reforms business allocation was awarded to EDS/Affinity, to provide new IT systems in support of the Child Support Agency. This business allocation commenced in September 2000.

The Wide Area Network (WAN) services business allocation was awarded to BT Syntegra in November 2000, to deliver flexible and scaleable networking services to support the next generation of IT systems being delivered to support departmental business initiatives.

The Pensions Forecasting Service (PFS) was awarded to EDS/Affinity on 6 June 2002 for the provision of modernised IT to support the Department's requirement to issue increased numbers and types of state pension forecasts.

The information concerning the departmental key performance indicators are listed in the table:

Year of operation	PPP/PFI business allocation	Key performance indicator
From September 2000 to August 2010	SOBA and WAN	National availability of full, end-to-end service for key services of no less than 98.5 per cent. including service extensions and overtime (End of SOBA Year 1—target met (and exceeded) by EDS/Affinity. Latest performance report for quarter ending 21 April 2002 also demonstrates target met and exceeded). 95 per cent. of incidents resolved within agreed time scales (End of SOBA Year 1—target met (and exceeded) by EDS/Affinity. Latest performance report for quarter ending 21 April 2002 also demonstrates target met and exceeded)
From September 2000 to August 2005	SOBA	25 per cent. productivity gains in development of Legacy Systems over five years with a 2 per cent. improvement by August 2001; a 9 per cent. improvement by August 2002; a 17 per cent. improvement by August 2003; a 22 per cent. improvement by August 2004 and the 25 per cent. improvement by August 2005. (Performance delivered against target profile so far)
From September 2000 to August 2010	SOBA	Development productivity gains should not result in reduction in quality (Quality indicators demonstrate compliance)
From CSR Live. Implementation (not yet implemented) until August 2010	CSR	Service availability, service response times, data transfer, payments issued, bulk outputs issues. These are monthly indicators with specific targets and service payments will be reduced for failure to meet these
From 6 June 2002 to 2006	PFS	Service availability, service response times, accurate and timely combined pensions forecasts, accurate and timely individual pensions forecasts. Once the contract system is in operation these monthly indicators and specific targets will apply; service payments will be reduced for failure to meet these

Employment Service

(a) Costs

Information concerning the cost of each PPI/PFI for information systems and technology services is commercially confidential and is not provided in line with part 2 paragraph 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

(b) Coverage

The Employment Service has let two PPP/PFI business allocations for information systems and technology services to date.

On 1 August 1998 the Employment Service (ES) entered into a partnership agreement with EDS (Electronic Data Systems) for provision of all IT and telephony services. In October 2000 the contract was re-negotiated as part of the Modernising Employment Services (MES) programme.

On 3 February 1997 ES entered into a contract with Siemens Nixdorf Systems Ltd. for provision of the Employment Service Guidance and Communications Project (Escom). The contract expires 3 February 2003.

The information concerning the Employment Service key performance indicators is listed in the table.

Year of operation	PPP/PFI Contract	Key performance indicator
Life of contract	EDS (IT and telephony)	Service, availability, incident resolution. National availability of service on all major applications is 99.5 per cent. Some smaller applications have targets of 98 per cent. Performance reports over the previous 12 months have demonstrated that in the main, targets have been met or exceeded. There have been some small drops in the Labour Market Service (LMS) performance figures over the year as a result of major releases and changes to the system. Where this has been the case service credits have been applied accordingly. Incident resolution targets of 90 per cent. for priority 1–3 cases have been met and regularly exceeded
Life of contract	SNS (Escom)	Availability, access levels, volume of data storage. Targets are in line with the service from EDS (IT and telephony) ie 99.5 per cent. Performance over the last 12 months has been between 99.5 per cent. and 99.8 per cent. demonstrating targets met and exceeded

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many personal capability assessments were carried out by the Benefits Agency in (a) the last six months and (b) the last 12 months. [64331]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Personal Capability Assessment is used to determine ongoing entitlement to Incapacity Benefit. It is a functional test carried out by Medical Services' doctors that assesses a person's ability to perform a range of every-day activities. Personal Capability Assessments have been extended in areas covered by integrated Jobcentre plus offices and work-focused interview sites so that examining doctors can produce capability reports for Personal Advisers. These reports provide constructive information to help plan a person's return to work where appropriate.

The information is in the table.

Number of personal capability assessments carried out

	Number
December 2001—May 2002	258,338
June 2001—May 2002	504,420

Source:
IMPACT data.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people attending work-focused interviews at Jobcentre Plus offices since 22 October 2001, have (a) moved from incapacity benefit into employment; (b) transferred to other social security benefits and (c) remained in receipt of incapacity benefit at (i) the same level, (i) a higher level and (iii) a lower level; [64332]

(2) how many incapacity benefit claimants have been referred for a personal capability assessment as a result of a work-focused interview at a Jobcentre Plus office since 22 October 2001. [64333]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information is not available in the format requested.

Work-focused interviews provide people making new or repeat claims to Incapacity Benefit with a valuable opportunity to discuss their work options, as well as their benefit claim, and to find out from their personal adviser the practical and financial support that is available to help them move into work. These interviews are separate from the Personal Capability Assessment, which is a functional test that assesses a person's ability to perform a range of everyday activities, and which is used to determine ongoing entitlement to Incapacity Benefit after 28 weeks of sickness.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many statutory instruments have been (a) introduced, (b) removed and (c) amended by his Department since 1 January; and what the (i) cost and (ii) saving has been in each case. [64640]

Mr. McCartney: The Department for Work and Pensions has introduced 52 statutory instruments between 1 January and 30 June 2002. Thirty-six of these were amendment instruments; eight were commencement instruments; two were Regulatory Reform Orders; one was a revocation order. Many of the instruments concerned were of a routine nature, for example, updating benefit regulations.

Information relating to costs and savings associated with these instruments, and to repealed and amended regulations, is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, a Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) is completed for each regulatory proposal which impacts on business, charities, or the voluntary sector, unless there are no or negligible costs. The Department for Work and Pensions has published four final RIAs in this period, three of which identified savings for business. These RIAs are available in the House Libraries and on the Department's website.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) individual cases the CSA has handled, (b) absent parents have refused to co-operate with the CSA and (c) deductions from earning orders have been issued in each year since 1997. [65531]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Alan Campbell, dated 17 July 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You ask how many (a) individual cases the Child Support Agency has handled (b) absent parents have refused to co-operate with the Child Support Agency and (c) deductions from earning orders have been issued in each year since 1997.

We don't hold all the information you seek. However the table below sets out:

(a) the number of new applications received each year

(b) the percentage of cases in which the non-resident parent complies with the requirement to pay maintenance

(c) the number of cases in which a deduction from earnings order is applied.

Year to 31st March	Applications	Compliance	Deduction from Earnings Orders applied
1998	402,220	19,064	Data not available
1999	374,455	2,456	123,084
2000	369,226	13,578	Data not available
2001	303,797	5,360	133,444
2002	365,414	5,686	115,003

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many existing cases need to be transferred to and how many new cases have been assessed under the new Child Support scheme. [69531]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 17 July 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You have asked the following questions:

"To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many existing cases need to be transferred to and how many new cases have been assessed under the new Child Support scheme".

No cases have yet been assessed under the new Child Support scheme. We can only begin to assess cases under the new scheme when Ministers have decided to implement the new arrangements. When they do so they will have to lay a Commencement Order before Parliament. They will only do that when they are confident about when our new computer system, that is currently being tested, will be operational.

Based on current forecasts of the predicted Agency caseload, it is estimated that approximately one million existing cases would require to be transferred to the new child support scheme.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases have been referred by the CSA to their Special Payments Unit in each of the past five years, broken down by region; and of these, what percentage resulted in a compensatory payment being made. [66860]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 4 July 2002]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the my hon. Friend.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Russell Brown, dated 17 July 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

Your ask how many cases have been referred by the Child Support Agency to the special payments unit in each of the past five years broken down by region; and of these what percentage resulted in a compensatory payment being made.

We don't collect information in quite this format. The table below sets out, by reference to our business units, the number of cases each year in which the special payments team authorised payment.

	Year to 31 March
Business Unit	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002
Eastern	1,156	2,010	2,210	2,379	1,209
Wales & North West	580	781	998	1,005	599
Midlands	851	1,475	1,528	1,576	768
Scotland & North East	724	1,226	1,225	1,405	716
South East	575	848	1,019	1,292	732
South West	580	882	1,067	1,962	1,006
Total	4,466	7,222	8,047	9,619	5,030

These figures represent for each year the following percentage of cases referred to the special payments team for consideration for redress of a consolatory payment:

1999	87%
2000	82%
2001	83%
2002	80%

0870 Telephone Numbers

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his policy is on using 0870 telephone numbers for inquiries by the public to the Department and its agencies. [66200]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Most existing services, and new services that are being set up, will generally be provided for the cost of a local call (0845 numbers) or, in some circumstances, free. Where different charges currently apply (e.g. 0870 numbers), services are expected to move to the local rate/free charging regime as opportunities arise to do so.

Pensions (Backdating)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reason the maximum backdating allowed for the retirement pension is three months; and if he will make a statement. [66557]

Mr. McCartney: The absolute time limit of three months for claiming retirement pension was introduced in April 1997 as part of the rationalisation of time limits for all benefits undertaken at that time. Before this date there were a large number of different rules and time periods for the backdating of the claims for different benefits. It was a confusing picture and it was widely recognised that there was a need to simplify the rules. It was considered appropriate for people to have three months in which to make a claim for one of the contributory benefits. Retirement pension is one of those benefits.

Pension Schemes

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effect of the reduction in the (a) number and (b) membership of final salary schemes on long-term pension savings. [70440]

Mr. McCartney: There has been a long-term decline in the number and membership of final salary pension schemes, for a combination of reasons.

The Government have announced that it will be taking a radical look at occupational and personal pension provision and coming forward with proposals in a Green Paper in the autumn.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of (a) 20 to 30, (b) 30 to 40, (c) 40 to 50 and (d) 50 to 60-year-olds belong to (i) personal pension schemes and (ii) occupational pension schemes. [70439]

Mr. McCartney: Information on the percentage of people who are members of pension schemes is not available. The information in the table shows estimates of percentages of people for whom contributions are being made by themselves or by their employer to pension schemes.

Age	20–29	30–39	40–49	50–59
Percentage of adults contributing to a personal pension scheme	7	17	17	15
Percentage of adults contributing to an occupational pension scheme	23	38	41	33

Notes:

1. The figures relate to the percentage of all adults (defined as all those aged 16 and over, except 16 to 18-year-olds in full time non-advanced education) whether in employment, self employed or economically inactive.

2. Adults contributing to both types of scheme will be contained in both sets of figures.

3. The figures will not include those who have previous pension rights in a scheme but who are not currently contributing.

4. The estimates are based on sample counts that have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors that control for region, council tax band and a number of demographic variables. Estimates are subject to sampling error and to variability in non-response.

Mr. McCartney: The information requested is not available. Information on the percentage of people contracted out of SERPS covering the period 1992–93 to 1996–97 is in the table.

Notes:

1. Figures are taken from the Lifetime Labour Market Database (LLMDB), extracted from the National Insurance Recording System (NIRS).

2. Figures are taken from a 1 per cent. sample so may be subject to sampling variation.

3. The number of individuals who have opted out of SERPS was calculated by determining how many individuals were members of contracted-out occupational schemes or Appropriate Personal Pension (APP) schemes at some point during each year.

4. The percentages were derived from the number of individuals in each age group, in each year who were Class 1 National Insurance Contribution Contributors, i.e. those individuals who were in employment and could thus opt out of SERPS.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many occupational schemes are in operation in the UK; and how many employees have belonged to each scheme in each of the last 10 years. [70443]

Mr. McCartney: The information is not available in the form requested. The available information is set out as follows.

Number of occupational schemes registered as 'live' (to nearest 1,000)—103,000.

Notes:

1. 'Live' schemes include:

schemes which are open to new members;

'closed' schemes which new members can not join;

schemes which have 'frozen' where no new benefits are being accrued; and schemes that are in the process of winding up.

2. Figure is as at 2 July 2002.

Notes:

1. Between 1998–99 and 1999–2000 there was a change in methodology on the Family Resources Survey—the estimates for the years 1999–2000 and 2000–01 are not comparable to those for previous years.

2. Figures include both employees who are contributing and/or for whom contributions are being made by the employer.

Pensions

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what plans he has to reform pension law to ensure that pensioners have direct representation on boards of trustees; [69997]

(2) what plans he has to reform pension law to require boards of trustees to include employers, employed members and pensioners on an equal basis. [69784]

Mr. McCartney: We have no such plans.

The role of a trustee is not to be a representative of a particular group or category of member. All trustees have the same responsibilities regardless of how they come to the role, and the most important thing is that they have the skills and knowledge to fulfil those responsibilities. It would be inappropriate to expect certain trustees to have responsibilities relating only to certain categories of member.

We do, however, recognise that having ordinary scheme members on trustee boards helps to provide a balance of skills and experience and helps promote member confidence, which is why we are working toward ensuring that every scheme has at least one third member-nominated trustees.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will amend the law relating to the management of actuarial surpluses of pension funds to ensure that pensioners are not marginalised. [69998]

Mr. McCartney: There are no plans to make changes in this area.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to clarify the law regarding ownership of pension funds to establish pension funds as the property of the pensioners. [69999]

Mr. McCartney: Scheme assets are owned by the scheme, and managed by the scheme trustees. Scheme members have no legal rights to the assets, but have a right to benefits as laid down by the trust deed. We have no plans to change the law.

Female Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of the staff of his Department are women; and what the percentage was in June 1997. [66911]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State (Mr. Alexander), Cabinet Office, on 5 July 2002, Official Report, column 622W.

Occupational Pension Schemes

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the clawback of the state pension by occupational pension schemes. [67836]

Mr. McCartney: Occupational pension provision is voluntary, and it is for employers to decide the nature of the scheme and the benefits provided. The decision as to whether a scheme should continue to operate on an integrated basis, or if not, how and when integration should be abolished, is a matter for employers.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of the public service agreements of his Department set out in the document, "Public Services for the Future 1998", have been met; and if he will make a statement. [68715]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 10 July 2002]: Information relating to the Department's public service agreement targets can be found in the Department's departmental report 2002.

Benefits

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many suspensions of benefits were reversed following evidence of the medical condition of the applicant in the Portsmouth, South constituency in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement; [69066]

(2) if he will list the reasons for the suspension of benefits in the Portsmouth, South constituency in the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [69067]

(3) how many claimants, broken down by age group, have had their benefits suspended in the Portsmouth, South constituency for failing to keep an appointment at a jobcentre in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [69068]

(4) what the average time taken to reinstate benefits following suspension was in the Portsmouth, South constituency in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [69069]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: For information on the circumstances in which payment of benefit may be suspended, I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to the hon. Member for Angus (Mr. Weir) on 8 July 2002, Official Report, columns 753–54W.

No information is collected centrally on benefit suspensions, at either national or constituency level.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many unemployed young people there are in (a) the Glasgow Pollok constituency, (b) Glasgow, (c) Scotland and (d) the United Kingdom; what the figures were in each of the last five years; if he will list the steps that are being taken to focus help on those youngsters with the greatest difficulty in finding employment; and if he will make a statement. [69228]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information is in the table.

Number of unemployed young people, aged 18–24[1]

	Glasgow Pollok	Glasgow	Scotland	UK
May 1997	758	7,375	40,146	396,734
May 1998	765	6,570	35,777	331,974
May 1999	645	5,408	31,421	286,485
May 2000	503	4,528	27,452	251,578
May 2001	457	4,364	26,094	232,995

Office for National Statistics

As these figures show, youth unemployment nationally has fallen by 40 per cent. since 1997, to around its lowest level since the mid- 1970s. Moreover, long term youth unemployment has been virtually eradicated.

The New Deal for Young People has played an important part in this success. By the end of March 2002 it had helped over 360,000 young people into jobs. This includes more than 700 young people in my hon. Friend's constituency.

Many of these young people faced significant barriers to employment. The New Deal has given them the skills and motivation to help them move into work. However, we recognise that some young people continue to face difficulties in the labour market. We are introducing a range of measures to provide even more help for these young people.

Action Teams for Jobs are already helping disadvantaged groups in the most employment deprived areas in the country into work. The nine teams operating in Scotland have already helped nearly 1,300 young people into work so far, more than 400 of them in Glasgow.

This spring we introduced progress2work, a £40 million initiative to give unemployed people who are recovering from a drug problem the extra help they need to get into work. The first progress2work projects have started in 27 pathfinder areas, including two in Glasgow and 3 in other parts in Scotland. Phase 2 of progress2work will start in October 2002 in a further 36 areas and the programme will be rolled out to all parts of the country from 2003. In the autumn, we will extend the progress2work model to help other groups facing disadvantage in the labour market, including ex-offenders.

In April 2002, we launched StepUP, a £40million initiative providing transitional jobs for people who have not been able to find work through New Deal. Six pilots are already up and running, including one in Scotland, and we are introducing a further 14 throughout the year.

We also introduced in April a new £15 million outreach initiative to engage more effectively with, and improve the job prospects for people from ethnic minorities. This will build on the success of the New Deals, which have already helped over 63,000 people from ethnic minorities into work.

Universal Bank

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment his Department has made of the number of benefit claimants without a bank account who may wish to transfer to the services of the Universal Bank; and whether the services offered will be restricted to those currently without a bank account. [70015]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We estimate that around 3.5 million adults in the UK do not currently have access to a bank account; the overwhelming majority of this group will be benefit recipients. Universal banking services will consist of two elements—access to the banks' basic bank accounts and the card account at the Post Office. Universal banking services will not be restricted to those currently without a bank account.

Employment Zone

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the evaluation of the Employment Zone project will be completed; and if he will recommend an extension of the scheme. [70022]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Employment Zone contracts are subject to qualitative and quantitative evaluation. The qualitative study of Zone operations between winter 2000 and summer 2001 was published on 17 July 2002 (Working Age Evaluation Series, Number 124). A copy has been placed in the Library. A cohort study comparing characteristics and outcomes of Zone participants with those of similar long-term unemployed people will be published in late spring 2003.

Our evaluation to date shows that Employment Zones are making a positive contribution in helping long-term unemployed people in deprived areas move off benefit and into work. The 15 Zones have already helped over 22,300 people into jobs. We have recently extended the current Zone contracts to March 2004 and, as the Chancellor announced on 15 July, we will also be testing the Employment Zone approach with other groups such as lone parents and people returning to the New Deals for a second time.

The qualitative evaluation report highlights some encouraging findings about the Zones, recognising, for example, that they have a genuinely innovative delivery system and underlining the importance of the flexibility afforded to Personal Advisers in helping people move into jobs. We will study the report's findings closely and consider what lessons can be learnt from the Employment Zone approach.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how the employment zone scheme interacts with the work of Jobcentre Plus. [70023]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Jobcentre Plus works with Employment Zone contractors to help long-term unemployed people in 15 deprived areas move off benefit and into work. By the end of February 2002, the zones had helped over 22,300 people into jobs.

People aged 25 and over, living in a zone area and claiming income-based jobseeker's allowance, become eligible for employment zone help after either 12 or 18 months' unemployment (depending on the employment zone area). Jobcentre Plus identifies and refers eligible people to the employment zone at the appropriate time. Eligible participants who fail to attend an employment zone are brought to the attention of Jobcentre Plus by their personal adviser and may have their benefit sanctioned if there is no good cause for their non-attendance.

Jobcentre Plus and employment zone contractors have developed a strong working relationship. One of the ways they have achieved this is through the secondment of Jobcentre Plus staff to employment zones. Employment zones also have access to Jobcentre Plus premises and labour market information systems. This strong partnership ensures that payments to clients are accurate, and the zones contribute to Jobcentre Plus' achievement of the best job outcomes for clients.

Regulatory Impact Unit

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many members of his Department have been employed in its regulatory impact unit in the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [65978]

Mr. McCartney: From April 1997 to the present date, the Department for Work and Pensions has employed the following numbers of staff in its regulatory impact unit (RIU):

April 1997 to October 1997: Two full-time members of staff (combining RIU work with other work responsibilities)

October 1997 to April 1999: One full-time member of staff (combining RIU work with other work responsibilities)

April 1999 to the present: One full-time member of staff dedicated to the work of the Department's RIU.

It is the job of Department's regulatory impact unit to establish and promote in the Department the principles of good regulation, so that all officials within it may contribute effectively to the Government's regulatory reform initiative. The unit also works closely with the regulatory impact unit in the Cabinet Office, and with the small business service. A key element of the unit's work is to help minimise the impact on business, charities, and the voluntary sector, of those Departmental regulations which are necessary.

Note:

Data before April 2001 refer to the Department of Social Security.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Director of Public Prosecutions

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many premises are used by the DPP; where these are located; and what the functions of each are. [39662]

Jane Kennedy: I have been asked to reply.

Seven premises are currently occupied by the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland. Of these, five are located in Belfast, including the Royal Courts of Justice, and cover the Director's Office; Belfast/eastern circuit; northern/southern circuit; High Court and Appeal Office; Fraud and Departmental Office and the Criminal Justice Review Implementation Team.

The two remaining offices which are attached to the northern and southern circuit are in Omagh and Coleraine.

Contact Orders

Vera Baird: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what investigations the Department is undertaking of the cases of 15 children killed while subject to contact arrangements in England and Wales; how many contact orders were involved in these cases; and in how many of these cases the resident parent was advised by court professionals to agree to informal contact arrangements. [6831[illegible]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Lord Chancellor's Department is working with the Home Office and Department of Health to identify cases brought to our attention where children may have been killed while the subject of contact orders. In some cases it appears contact orders were in place. We are now looking for court files to determine the basis on which contact was ordered. We have not yet established whether the former Court Welfare Service played a role (if any) in the above cases. Court staff do not give legal advice. The advice given to parents by their legal advisers is subject to professional confidentiality.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many contact centres offering supervised contact there are in (a) Bristol, (b) Birmingham, (c) Bournemouth, (d) Bradford, (e) Cardiff, (f) Coventry, (g) Leicestershire, (h) Liverpool, (i) Manchester, (j) Nottingham, (k) Northampton, (l) Oxford, (m) Swindon, (n) Southampton, (o) Stoke-on-Trent, (p) Swansea, (q) Taunton and (r) Worcester. [68211]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Child contact centres are run by the voluntary sector. No comprehensive data is kept on how many child contact centres offering supervised contact exist. We are aware that of the approximate 280 child contact centres in England and Wales currently affiliated to the National Association of Child Contact Centres (NACCC), 35 offer supervised contact. One of these is located in Manchester.

The Child Contact Centre Stakeholder Group, which includes NACCC, is currently working in partnership with the Lord Chancellor's Department to map the provision of child contact centres in England and Wales. This will assist in developing a national network of child contact centres that can provide safe and meaningful contact between children and their non-resident parent.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many contact centres offering supervised contact there are in Wales. [68210]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Child contact centres are run by the voluntary sector. No comprehensive data is kept on how many child contact centres offering supervised contact exist. We are aware that in Wales there are 11 centres currently affiliated to the National Association of Child Contact Centres (NACCC). Of these, one offers supervised contact and is located in Newport. The Child Contact Centre Stakeholder Group, which includes NACCC, is currently working in partnership with the Lord Chancellor's Department to map the provision of child contact centres in England and Wales. This will assist in developing a national network of child contact centres that can provide safe and meaningful contact between children and their non-resident parent.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the overseas trips on departmental business that have been undertaken in each of the last five years by officials in his Department; and what the (a) cost, (b) purpose and (c) result was in each case. [68736]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All overseas travel by officials in my Department is undertaken in accordance with the principles set in Chapter 8 of the "Civil Service Management Code", and the detailed rules and guidance set out in LCDHQ and Associated Offices Staff Handbook. The detailed information requested about individual trips is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The total cost of overseas visits made by officials in the Department, including travel, accommodation and subsistence costs, for the years 1998–99 to 2001–02 is as follows:

	Total cost
1998–99	60,254.52
1999–2000	74,961.47
2000–01	94,146.45
2001–02	85,512.69

Prior to 1998–99 overseas and domestic travelling and subsistence costs were not separately identified.

Consultation

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many complaints his Department has received about its 2001 consultations in (a) electronic and (b) printed form. [70464]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has received four complaints about public consultation papers it issued during 2001. No records have been kept about whether the complaints were received in electronic or printed form.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department whether his Department has a designated consultation co-ordinator in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70466]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Yes. An assistant consultation co-ordinator has also been designated.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department in what format his Department has published the results of its 2001 written consultations. [70462]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Response Papers have not been issued for all of the public written consultation papers issued in 2001, but the table below lists the formats used for the Response papers issued so far:

Response paper title	Published	Format
Community Legal Service—Financial Conditions for funding by the LSC	July 2001	Online, hard copy
Pre-Action Protocol for Judicial Review	October 2001	Online, hard copy

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department whether consultation documents published by his Department in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70461]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All public written consultation documents published by the Department in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many consultation documents published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form his Department has monitered and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70463]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All of the eleven public written consultation documents issued by the Lord Chancellor's Department in 2001 were available in both electronic and printed form. All of them were monitored and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office's Code of Practice on Written Consultations. The findings were passed to the Cabinet Office as part of its role in monitoring the effectiveness of public written consultation exercises carried out under the terms of the Code.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how long her Department allowed for consultation on each consultation document it published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form. [70460]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All public consultation documents issued by the Lord Chancellor's Department in 2001 were available in both electronic and printed form. The length of time allowed for consultation is the same for both electronic and printed versions. The length of each public written consultation undertaken by the Lord Chancellor's Department in 2001 was as follows:

Title	Month	Length of consultation (weeks)

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, which consultation documents published by her Department in 2001 were not made available as paper copies. [70465]

Ms Rosie Winterton: None.

Legal Services

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what proposals she has for reforming the regulation of legal services. [70244]

Ms Rosie Winterton: None. Neither I nor the Lord Chancellor have proposals for reforming the regulation of legal services at present.

Mentally Incapacitated People

Mr. Drew: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what plans she has to bring forward legislation following the consultation paper "Making decisions: helping people who have difficulty in deciding for themselves". [70172]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government remain committed to reforming this important area of the law. When parliamentary time allows, they will legislate to improve and clarify the decision-making process for those who are unable to make decisions for themselves or who cannot communicate their decisions. In advance of securing parliamentary time, the Government are taking forward a number of initiatives which will benefit people today and enable legislation to be quickly effective. One such initiative is the best practice guidance leaflets proposed in the consultation paper referred to by my hon. Friend.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department with reference to the consultation on 'Making Decisions: Helping People who have Difficulty in Deciding for Themselves', what discussions she plans to have with elected members on the issue of extending legal protection for those patients who are unable to communicate for themselves. [70170]

Ms Rosie Winterton: When parliamentary time allows, the Government will legislate to improve and clarify the decision-making process for those who are unable to make decisions for themselves or who cannot communicate their decisions. I have already met some hon. Members at their request to discuss issues arising from this consultation paper, and recently took part in a parliamentary seminar to discuss the legislation. I would be happy to meet other hon. Members.

Clinical Negligence

Tim Loughton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many claimants have successfully claimed legal aid costs in clinical negligence cases against the NHS in the last (a) five, (b) 10 and (c) 20 years. [71100]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the form requested.

The number of publicly funded clinical negligence cases—reported as having been concluded—in which the claimant was successful in obtaining damages and full payment of their solicitor's costs, leaving no deficit on the legal aid fund was as follows:

(a) in the last five years—1997–98 to 2001–02—10,881

(b) in the last 10 years—1992–93 to 2001–02—19,568.

As a result of the changes to the Legal Services Commission's computer systems, information is not available for the last 20 years.

The figures exclude cases which were settled without costs in full, or which went to trial (the latter being a very small number). This means that the figures underestimate the success rate of cases because they exclude settled cases where most costs are recovered, save a residual claim against the legal aid fund for part of the costs; and cases which succeeded with full costs at trial.

The figures given do not relate exclusively to cases brought against the NHS. It is not possible to separate cases which involve the NHS from those which do not.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Telephone Bills (Pensioners Concessions)

Ms Walley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to discuss with the regulator concessions for pensioners' telephone bills; and if he will make a statement. [69765]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

All telecoms customers, including pensioners, have benefited from price reductions of over 50 per cent. since 19984. In addition BT is required by Oftel to provide a Light User Scheme (LUS) targeted at low users, including pensioners. The LUS enables those on the scheme to obtain rebates on their total bill.

Children's Play Areas

Mark Tami: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance his Department gives to local authorities regarding the (a) provision and (b) size of children's play areas. [70399]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

In Wales, responsibility for Children's Play issues rests with the National Assembly for Wales, who are in the process of producing a play policy for Wales, and not with Whitehall Departments, who are only responsible for play matters in England.

In December 2000, DCMS produced a guidance document for English local authorities entitled "Creating Opportunities", which encourages local authorities to develop and implement Local Cultural Strategies. The guidance explicitly lists play as something to be within the scope of cultural strategies, encompassing: children's play, playgrounds and play activities, parks and open spaces.

DCMS also funded "Play as Culture", researched and published by Playlink, a document which provides detailed guidance about incorporating play in cultural strategies. It was co-sponsored by the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) and the then Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, and was publicised and disseminated via the Local Government Association (LGA), the Institute of Leisure and Management and Early Years Partnerships. There is also soon to be a weblink directly to the document on the Playlink website from the DCMS website and a second round of distribution is about to begin.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently revising "Planning Policy Guidance note 17: Sports, Recreation and Open Space" (PPG17) which will provide guidance on the provision of a full range of urban open spaces, including play space. The revision, along with associated good practice guidance, will provide guidance for improving local assessments of need for such spaces and for carrying out audits of existing spaces. While these will encourage the setting of local standards for provision of new spaces, they will not give any specific guidance on the size of play spaces.

Social Services

Clive Efford: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what has been the change in expenditure from original budget allocations in London boroughs on (a) children's social services, (b) older people, (c) learning disabilities, (d) mental health and (e) services for physically disabled in the last five years; [69152]

(2) if he will list actual spend against original budget estimates for London boroughs' social services budgets (a) in cash and (b) as a percentage (i) for each borough and (ii) for London as a whole in each of the last five years. [69149]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Clive Efford: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average variation is from SSA for London local authority social services budgets (a) in cash and (b) as a percentage for (i) each borough and (ii) London as a whole in each of the last five years. [69146]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The tables compare personal social services standard spending assessment (SSA) with local authority social services budgets, which have been adjusted to make them comparable with SSA. The figures provided are for each local authority and for London as a whole, for each of the last five years.

Compulsory Purchase

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what conclusions he has reached following the consultation exercise on his proposals for reforming the system of compulsory purchase and compensation. [71684]

The Deputy Prime Minister: In my oral statement to the House today I referred to our proposals for planning reform. I announced that I am publishing today our response to the recent Planning Green Paper consultation, copies of which are in the House Library. I am also making public a more detailed statement entitled "Compulsory Purchase Powers, Procedures and Compensation; the way forward", copies of which are available in the House Library and on the ODPM website. This summarises our policy in the light of the responses to the December 2001 consultation paper.

The paper sets out our plans for making compulsory purchase and compensation simpler, fairer and quicker through a change to the compulsory purchase power for planning purposes, and through changes to procedures and compensation arrangements.

The Law Commission is continuing its work on consolidation, codification and modernisation of the current legislation, and will consult on its initial conclusions shortly.

Town Planning

Mr. Tony Clarke: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes he proposes to make to the arrangements for producing Regional Spatial Strategies and Local Development Frameworks, further to the Planning Green Paper. [71685]

The Deputy Prime Minister: In my oral statement to the House today I referred to our proposals for planning reform. I announced that I am publishing today our response to the recent Planning Green Paper consultation, copies of which are in the House Library. I am also publishing a more detailed paper entitled "Making the System Work Better—Planning at Regional and Local Levels" on our proposals for creating Regional Spatial Strategies and Local Development Frameworks. I am placing copies of that in the House Library and on the ODPM website.

Statistics

Mr Laws: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the statistics that are collected by his Department by English parliamentary constituency; and if he will make a statement. [67093]

Mr Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton West (Ruth Kelly) on 8 July 2002, Official Report, Hansard, (column 769W).

HEALTH

NHS Trusts

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on not-for-profit organisations contributing to the running of (a) hospital trusts and (b) primary care trusts. [67608]

Mr. Hutton: At present organisations outside of the national health service do not contribute to the management of any NHS trusts, including acute-hospital trusts and primary care trusts.

The Department is setting up a register of interest for organisations outside of the NHS which are interested in taking on the management franchise for poorly performing NHS trusts. The register may include not-for-profit organisations.

Rural Hospitals

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding will be made available to rural hospitals across the new strategic health authorities. [67617]

Mr. Hutton: We currently allocate funding to health authorities, and they allocate funding to primary care trusts, on the basis of the relative needs of their populations.

It is for health authorities in partnership with primary care trusts and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

In future the intention is that allocations will be made direct to primary care trusts. Primary care trusts will then purchase appropriate services to meet the needs of their local populations, which may include services from rural hospitals.

Mixed-sex Wards

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress the Government have made in eliminating single sex wards; what plans he has to eliminate them; and if he will make a statement. [68536]

Mr. Hutton: Guidance on maintaining privacy and dignity was first issued to the service in 1997 and since then the national health service has been working towards a clear target to provide single sex accommodation.

The target set is for three objectives to be achieved in 95 per cent. of trusts by December 2002.

The three objectives are:

Ensuring that appropriate organisational arrangements are in place to secure good standards of privacy and dignity for hospital patients;

Achieving fully the Patient's Charter standard for segregated washing and toilet facilities across the NHS;

Providing safe facilities for patients in hospital who are mentally ill which safeguard their privacy and dignity.

Trusts are required to re-assess and report their position annually. This information has been collected through health authorities. Separate validation programmes are undertaken to ensure that information provided is robust and reliable.

We are working with the NHS to provide professional and technical support to ensure progress towards meeting this target continues.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the names of mixed-sex wards in operation, broken down by region. [68529]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available in this format as compliance is measured on a trust by trust basis and not at individual ward level.

The reasons for measuring at trust level is because hospital wards generally care for both men and women. To provide the required levels of privacy and dignity for patients, wards are split into single sex bays, or single rooms, or otherwise configured to provide adequate segregation of gender. It is the responsibility of each national health service trust to determine the most appropriate configuration to meet their specific requirements.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many sexual harassment and sexual abuse cases there have been in (a) mixed-sex wards and (b) single sex wards, over the past five years. [68530]

Mr. Hutton: We do not collect this information centrally. Each national health service trust should ensure appropriate security arrangements are in place, covering staff as well as patients.

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled in each medical professional competency in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [66079]

Mr. Hutton: Data are not collected on the number of cancelled operations broken down by medical professional competencies. Data on the number of operations cancelled by the hospital, for non-medical reasons, on, or after the day the patient was due to be admitted are available in the Library.

Violence Against NHS Staff

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to announce the findings of the NHS survey into violence against NHS staff. [71073]

Mr. Hutton: The results of the Department's survey of reported violent or abusive incidents, accidents involving staff and sickness absence in national health service trusts and health authorities in England in 2000–01 was published in June 2002. The survey found that there were 84,273 reported violent or abusive incidents against staff in 2000–01. A copy of the report has already been placed in the Library.

Hospital Nurseries

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS hospitals provide on-site nurseries; and what estimate his Department has made of the number of NHS hospitals that intend to provide on-site nurseries by (a) 31 December 2002 (b) 31 December 2003 and (c) 31 December 2004. [68285]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 July 2002]: A national survey of national health service child care provision, undertaken early in 2001, found that 114 NHS trusts provided nursery facilities for their staff. Since April 2001, a further 94 schemes have had capital funding agreed as part of the NHS child care strategy, which is aiming to develop 150 new on-site nursery schemes by April 2004. In 2002–03 we expect at least 50 new nurseries, or extensions of existing nurseries to be opened providing an additional 2,500 places.

Nurses

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to protect patients from the risks posed by nurses who carry HIV. [69221]

Ms Blears: Existing guidelines place nurses and other health care workers, who are or may be HIV infected, under ethical and legal duties to protect the health and safety of their patients by seeking counselling and HIV testing if they believe they have been at risk of infection. If infected, they are required to seek and follow confidential occupational health advice about the need to modify or limit their working practices.

While the safety of patients is of paramount importance, it should be recognised that the procedures involved in most nursing duties do not pose a risk of HIV infection to patients, provided normal infection control precautions are observed. There have been no reported cases of HIV transmission from infected health care workers to patients in the UK.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what checks he makes on foreign nurses for HIV before they are employed in the United Kingdom. [69222]

Mr. Hutton: Nurses recruited into the national health service from abroad are subject to the same pre-appointment checks as those recruited within the United Kingdom. NHS employers are required to satisfy themselves of the immunisation status of applicants and only when an applicant does not pose a risk of infection to patients from infectious diseases should employment be recommended.

Being HIV positive is not a bar to NHS employment but does preclude certain invasive (exposure prone) procedures being performed such as surgery and midwifery.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Morecambe and Lunesdale (Geraldine Smith) of 2 July 2002, Official Report, column 310W, on nurses, how many nurse consultant posts have been introduced; and of these how many are new nurses to have been recruited to these roles. [71069]

Mr. Hutton: Over 750 nurse, midwife and health visitor consultants posts have now been approved in 10 tranches, the first in January 2000 and the latest in June 2002.

Nurse, midwife and health visitor consultants appointees are senior, experienced practitioners with advanced education and qualifications relevant to the speciality to which they are appointed. Guidance issued to the national health service, Health Service Circular 1999/217, makes it clear that selection should be by fair and open competition.

Medical Devices Agency

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the 2001–02 annual report of the Medical Devices Agency. [71906]

Mr. Lammy: The report and accounts of the Medical Devices Agency have today been laid before the House of Commons pursuant to section 7 of the Government Resources and Accounts Act 2000. Copies have also been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Overseas Treatment

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many NHS patients treated elsewhere in Europe have subsequently required further referrals; [71083]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the quality of outcomes of NHS patients treated elsewhere in Europe. [71082]

Mr. Hutton: Information about follow-up care following inpatient treatment and associated referrals for further treatment is not collected centrally from the national health service. NHS organisations may collect and analyse this kind of information, among other indicators of quality, as part of their local clinical governance arrangements designed to assure and continuously improve the quality of care for all NHS patients. Primary care trusts and NHS trusts are responsible for ensuring that NHS patients receive high clinical standards of care wherever they are treated.

ME

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the effects of holistic and complementary therapies in helping patients with myalgic encephalomyelitis. [63143]

Jacqui Smith: The recent report of the chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME) working group noted patients' comments to the effect that certain complementary therapies were helpful in alleviating some symptoms. It also noted a need for guidance in using such therapies.

Guidance is currently being prepared by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence on palliative care for cancer patients, including the use of complementary therapies. This may be of some help to CFS/ME sufferers.

Mental Health

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the rate of emergency psychiatric readmissions was in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1999–2000 and (c) 2001–02. [69295]

Jacqui Smith: The rate of emergency psychiatric re-admissions for 1997–98 was 14.3 per cent.; 1999–2000 was 13 per cent. and 2001–02 was 12.7 per cent.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental health crisis resolution teams have been established since the publication of the NHS Plan. [68277]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 10 July 2002]: As at autumn 2001 there were 52 mental health crisis resolution teams.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which region has the smallest percentage of assertive outreach services for mental health; and if he will make a statement as to the reasons. [68175]

Jacqui Smith: North-western region has the lowest proportion of assertive outreach services with 14 teams. This constitutes approximately 7.7 per cent. of all teams and reflects the lower demand of the local population: 9.4 cases per 100,000 individuals compared with the national average of 17.5 cases for the same number of people.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many staff work in mental health early intervention teams in England; [68136]

(2) what the total work force in community mental health teams was in each of the last five years. [68127]

Mr. Hutton [holding answers 11 July 2002]: The Department does not collect information covering all components of early intervention schemes and community mental health teams. However, the Centre for Public Mental Health at Durham University has been sponsored by the Department to develop mapping of the mental health work force. Further work is required to validate the returns but their latest information, available at www.dur.ac.uk/service mapping, provides the best information we have on the distribution of the mental health work force.

Community psychiatric nurses are a key element of both teams and community learning difficulties nurses are important for the delivery of community mental health services. Between 1997 and 2001 the numbers of nurses working in these specialties have increased by 25 per cent. and 28 per cent. respectively. Further information is shown in the table.

Department of Health non-medical workforce census

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the NHS budget was spent on mental health in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02. [68146]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 11 July 2002]: The expenditure figures for 2000–01 will not be available until late August 2002. The expenditure figures for 2001–02 will not be available until late August 2003.

Mr. Kolathuv Unni

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the circumstances (a) in which Mr. Kolathuv Unni was allowed to practise psychiatry in the NHS, having previously been struck off by the General Medical Council and (b) the General Medical Council took into account when they reinstated him to the register. [68746]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 11 July 2002]: There is no bar on working in the national health service if an individual has been restored to the medical register following erasure. NHS employers must make informed decisions based on the information provided during the recruitment process.

Guidance on pre- and post-appointment checks for NHS staff has recently been strengthened. This includes a requirement for applicants for certain posts to make a declaration regarding any previous disqualifications from the practice of a profession by a regulatory body in the United Kingdom or in another country.

Decisions on whether or not to restore an individual to the register are a matter for the General Medical Council. However, the GMC has agreed to respond to the second part of this question upon receipt of a written request from the hon. Member.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what investigations were made by UK authorities in New Zealand into the conduct of Mr. Kolathuv Unni (a) prior to his initial recruitment to the NHS and (b) at the time of his successful application to be re-admitted to the medical register. [68745]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 11 July 2002]: This is a matter for the General Medical Council, the independent statutory body responsible for the registration of doctors to practise medicine in the United Kingdom. They have agreed to provide this information direct on receipt of a written request from my hon. Friend.

Child Care

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Weston-Super-Mare (Brian Cotter) of 4 July 2002, Official Report, column 574W, on child care, how much remuneration an NHS child care co-ordinator receives. [71070]

Mr. Hutton: The remuneration of childcare co-ordinators is a matter for local determination. Guidance issued by the Department in 2001, recommended a starting salary in line with general Whitley Council pay scales for administrative and clerical staff grade 6/7, spring point 24–32. In 2002–03 this equates to £19,592-£27,887 per annum.

Carers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to encourage an increased number of foster carers. [71071]

Jacqui Smith: Foster carer recruitment is a very important area, in which a lot of work is being taken forward. The Department is currently undertaking a major review ("Choice Protects") of the commissioning of placements, with a special emphasis on foster care services—so that choice and stability of placements may be improved for children in care. Within this, we will be examining:

Role and status of foster carers;

Recruitment and retention;

What support services are required;

Best ways to reward foster carers;

The training needs of foster carers.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many assessments of carer needs have been carried out, broken down by carer age groups, since the introduction of the Carers and Disabled Children Act 2000. [71039]

Jacqui Smith: This information is currently being collated and will be published in late autumn as part of "Community Care Statistics 2001–02: Referrals, Assessments and Packages of Care, for Adults".

Climbié Inquiry

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will produce a timetable for the publication of findings from the Climbié Inquiry. [71092]

Jacqui Smith: Lord Laming continues to receive and to consider evidence, and intends to complete his report later this year. It will be published, following its receipt by my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Health and the Home Department, and will be made widely available.

Social Workers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many extra social workers are in training as a result of the Government's campaign to increase the number of social workers. [71072]

Jacqui Smith: The main aim of the social care recruitment campaign is to raise the number of people applying for social work training by 5,000 by 2004. As the earliest that someone reacting to the campaign could join a course is autumn 2002, we do not yet have any information on numbers of extra social workers in training. These figures will be published in December 2002 by the social work admissions service.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the conclusions were of the review of milk tokens for pregnant women in asylum-seeking families; and what changes he plans to make. [42952]

Ms Blears: The review of the welfare food scheme did not look specifically at pregnant women in asylum seeking families. Pregnant women who receive certain social security benefits (income support or an income-based jobseeker's allowance) are entitled to receive milk tokens. Pregnant women who do not receive social security benefits are supported by the national asylum support service.

Careers Information

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average response time is between prospective NHS employees registering online for information on careers in the national health service and subsequently receiving information; and what guidelines he has issued. [71091]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service careers service was established in April 1999 by the Department to provide accurate and up-to-date information on careers throughout the NHS. It has a website www.nhs.uk/careers through which publications can be ordered.

It is not possible to give the average response time between ordering and receipt of publications as we do not know when the requested items are received.

The service level agreement for responding to online requests sets out that at least 95 per cent. of the requests must be sent out within 48 hours. The requested items are posted second class.

Premature Retirement

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS staff, broken down by employment type, are expected to take premature retirement during 2002–03. [56280]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 14 May 2002]: Premature retirement is one of the factors that make up overall wastage from the national health service work force. Wastage is taken into account in the Department's modelling but is not broken down into its component parts.

Regional Wage Differentials

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that regional wage differentials are reflected in the funding of the national health service. [68891]

Mr. Hutton: Allocations made to the national health service already take account of differential regional staffing costs. The weighted capitation formula used to calculate health authority target shares of revenue allocations includes a staff market forces factor. The aim of the staff market forces factor is to reflect the unavoidable geographical variation in staff costs that NHS employers incur.

In addition for 2002–03 a further £101 million was allocated to the high cost areas of London and the South of England to fund cost of living supplements for qualified nurses and some allied health professionals.

Future arrangements are being kept under review and will take account of the outcome of the negotiations on a new NHS pay system.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will answer the question from the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South of 15 May, reference number 56711, on financial assistance to nurses; and if he will make a statement. [65750]

Mr. Hutton: I replied to the hon. Member on 8 July 2002, Official Report, column 777W.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the holding reply dated 1 July to written question 291 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, when he intends to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member dated 23 May with regard to Mr. J. Greenhalgh. [70348]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

I will be replying, in light of the Chancellor's Spending Review statement, shortly.

HOME DEPARTMENT

External Consultants

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much expenditure his Department has incurred in each year since 1997 on employing external consultants to deal with the press and public relations of his Department. [59494]

Beverley Hughes: The total expenditure incurred by the Home Department since 1997 on employing external consultants to deal with the press and public relations of the Department is as follows:

1998	0
1999	81,299
2000	172,314
2002	0

These costs include the modernisation of the Home Office Press Office to provide a better service to journalists, the launch of the Police Recruitment Campaign, the establishment of the Home Office website and the launch of the Child Protection on the internet campaign.

Public-private Partnerships (Consultants)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total external spending by his Department was on public- private partnership consultants in each of the last four years; how many full-time equivalent consultants were employed over this period; how many billed consultancy days there were per year; what the implied average cost of each PPP consultant was; how many consultancy firms were used by his Department over this period; and if he will make a statement. [43187]

Beverley Hughes: The information requested is not available in the format requested. To provide the hon. Member with a full answer would incur disproportionate cost. I can, however, provide information detailing total spend on consultancy work on public- private partnerships (PPPs) in each of the last four years and also the number of consultancy firms used by the Home Office and its agencies on PPP projects over this period. This is as follows:

Total spend on PPP consultants:

1999: 89,473

2001: 7,298,967.

Number of consultancy firms used by the Home Department on PPP projects:

1998: 1

2001: 4.

The increase in expenditure is largely due to two projects, firstly the setting up of the Criminal Records Bureau and secondly various business change services relating to Immigration and Nationality Department's programme to enable the improvement of case management.

Energy

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated (a) level and (b) cost of energy use in his Department and associated agencies was in each year since 1997; what proportion of energy was generated from renewable sources; and if he will make a statement. [65948]

Beverley Hughes: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend, the Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth on 3 July 2002, Official Report, column 385W.

Identity Cards

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the projected costs of implementing the identity card proposals. [69754]

Beverley Hughes: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary made a statement to the House on 3 July, announcing the publication of a consultation paper on Entitlement Cards and Identity Fraud. The consultation period will last until 10 January 2003. The Government has made it clear that the introduction of an entitlement card would be a major step and that it would not proceed without consulting widely and considering all the views expressed very carefully.

The paper includes a number of estimates of what a scheme would cost, depending on the sophistication of the card. A reasonable estimate would be that a scheme would cost around £1.5 billion over a 13 year period covering the three years it would take to set up the necessary Information Technology systems and the 10 year period for which the first cards would be valid.

This would include much more stringent identity checks than currently apply for passports and driving licences in response to increased levels of fraudulent applications.

It would also include the costs of using biometric information (fingerprints or iris images) which would uniquely link the card holder with a card.

This estimate does not include any savings to Government through more efficient administration and reductions in fraud. The paper also sets out how the costs might be recovered through increases in fees for driving licences and passports and charging a fee for entitlement cards issued to those who did not qualify for or who did not want to apply for a card in the form of a photocard driving licence or passport card. It would not be the Government's intention to use funds allocated for investment in public services for a card scheme.

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for 1997–98 and for each subsequent financial year, including the current year to date, the amount spent by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) its non-departmental public bodies on (i) food and (ii) alcohol, indicating how much was spent on guests, and how much in respect of (A) Ministers and (B) staff, broken down to show how much was provided directly by his Department and how much reclaimed. [34445]

Beverley Hughes: The detailed information required is not available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. The available information relating to expenditure on hospitality and entertainment by the department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies is shown in the table:

Financial years	Expenditure
1997–98	68,803
1998–99	84,468
1999–2000	91,509
2000–01	74,655

Expenditure by Ministers on hospitality and entertainment averages four per cent. of the Departmental total each year.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the overseas trips on departmental business that have been undertaken in each of the last five years by officials in his Department; and what the (a) cost, (b) purpose and (c) result was in each case. [68725]

Beverley Hughes: The following table lists the total cost, to the Home Office and its agencies, of official duty visits abroad in each of the past five years.

The other information is not collected in the format the hon. Member requires and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

	Core Home Office	Forensic Science Service	Passport Agency	Prison Service
2001–02	3,907,148	264,490	10,705	32,946
2000–01	2,416,802	221,425	26,420	97,681
1999–2000	2,295,825	220,843	58,816	124,441
1998–99	1,731,182	149,176	18,435	56,157
1997–98	2,724,330	142,219	5,223	48,827

Comprehensive Spending Review

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff have contributed to his Department's input to the Spending Review. [68697]

Beverley Hughes: Staff from the different business areas of the Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) have contributed to the Home Office input to the Spending Review but it is not possible to quantify the amount of their time spent on this work. No central record has been kept.

Building Values

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the buildings owned by his Department and estimate the market value of each of them. [66940]

Beverley Hughes: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 3 July 2002, Official Report, column 340W.

Staff Training

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the Department has spent on staff training and development in each of the last five years. [61071]

Beverley Hughes: The Department recognises that the development of the skills, knowledge and experience of our staff is crucial to the delivery of business objectives and to helping staff achieve their career aspirations. The Department is, therefore, committed to ensuring that effective and affordable learning opportunities are available to staff. We have achieved the Investors in People Standard and are committed to ensuring that training and development are effectively focused on achieving our aims.

The following information is an estimate of the total amount spent on training and development in the Home Office and its executive agencies; it does not include the cost of many informal learning activities since such costs often go unrecorded:

1997–98: £22 million

1998–99: £25.1 million

1999–2000: £27.3 million

2000–01: £28.1 million

2001–02: £35.2 million.

Castle Award

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department has applied for a Castle award for equal pay. [65222]

Beverley Hughes: Since the inception of the Castle awards on 8 March 2002, the Home Office and its related agencies have not applied for such an award. The Department is in the process of conducting Equal Pay audits and when these have been completed, it is possible they may apply.

Work-related Illness

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many claims for work-related illness were settled by his Department in the last year for which records are available; and what the cost in compensation was. [56060]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 20 May 2002]: Information on claims for work-related illness and compensation payments are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department is aware of its obligations to provide a safe working environment and takes steps to ensure that it meets the requirements of health and safety legislation.

The Revitalising Health and Safety Strategy Statement published in June 2000 set targets for all stakeholders aimed at reducing inter alia the number of working days lost from work-related injury and ill health by 30 per cent. by 2010; the incidence rate of cases of work-related ill health by 20 per cent. by 2010; and achieving half the improvement under each target by 2004.

Green Minister

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who his Department's Green Minister is; when they (a) have attended and (b) plan to attend meetings of the Green Ministers' Committee; what the outcomes of meetings were for his Department's activities; and if he will make a statement. [65982]

Beverley Hughes: The Home Office Green Minister is my noble Friend Lord Filkin who was appointed to the ENV(G) Committee in June 2002. Having only recently been appointed he has yet to attend any of the Committee's meetings but intends to do so in the future.

It is established practice under exemption two of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet Committees.

Immigration

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce a buddy system for immigrants similar to the one practised in Canada. [69006]

Beverley Hughes: The Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Bill presently before Parliament contains provision for language and citizenship education for people seeking naturalisation. A group of experts is to be formed to advise my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, on how these proposals might be implemented in practice. Among other things, the group will be asked to advise on the practicality of a national voluntary scheme for mentors to assist naturalisation applicants in making contacts in their local community.

Membership of the advisory group will be announced shortly.

In addition, a European refugee fund grant has been secured in respect of a mentoring project for refugees in London, Birmingham and Glasgow. The project, "Time to Belong", is organised by TimeBank, a registered charity, and aims to provide mentors and coaches for 150 refugees.

People Trafficking

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there is a specific offence in United Kingdom law on the trafficking of human beings; and if he will make a statement. [70121]

Beverley Hughes: The Government are committed to ensuring that stronger measures are in place to penalise people who traffic in human beings. We have signed the protocol on trafficking to the United Nations Convention on Transnational Organised Crime and have negotiated an European Union Framework Decision, which commits the United Kingdom to introducing offences of trafficking for the purposes of labour or sexual exploitation within two years of its adoption.

We have acted quickly to deal with the worst forms of exploitation by creating a new offence of trafficking for the purposes of controlling someone in prostitution within the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Bill currently before Parliament. It will carry a maximum penalty of 14 years imprisonment, as for drug trafficking offences. This is a stop gap offence pending more wide-ranging offences of trafficking for sexual and labour exploitation when parliamentary time permits, which will implement our international obligations.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the mechanism by which the holder of an asylum seeker's identification card can obtain access to the information contained on the card. [67763]

Beverley Hughes: The personal information contained on the card is that provided by the holder when the card is created. The holder is shown a copy of the information when the card is created. The card can only be updated at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) offices on the authorised system equipment. This would necessitate the holder's attendance and therefore their knowledge that the data held on the card had been updated.

The information held on the card is available on application to the Subject Access Bureau on payment of a fee of £10 payable to the Home Office Accounting Officer.

The address of the bureau for Immigration and Nationality Department inquiries is:

Subject Access Bureau
Home Office
Lunar House, 40 Wellesley Road
Croydon
CR9 2BY.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers in London were (a) supported by the London boroughs, (b) supported by the National Asylum Support Service through the provision of emergency accommodation, (c) supported by the London boroughs and National Asylum Support Service through the scheme for disbenefited asylum seekers and (d) received assistance in the form of vouchers or cash only provided by the National Asylum Support Service in (i) 1999, (ii) 2000 and (iii) 2001. [69958]

Beverley Hughes: Information is not available in the exact form requested.

The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) took on responsibility for supporting asylum seekers from April 2000 when it began operation. Before that time asylum seekers were supported by local authorities or the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP). NASS is responsible for supporting disbenefited asylum seekers who initially applied for asylum at a United Kingdom port of entry before 3 April 2000, were receiving support from DWP, had a negative decision recorded on their claim on or after 25 September 2000 which ended their entitlement to benefits, but who have subsequently appealed against that decision.

The only available figures for the number of asylum seekers supported by the London boroughs come from local authority grant claims sent to the Home Office as at September 2001. These show that local authorities in the London boroughs were supporting 14,420[1] singles and 11,060[1] families. Figures including dependants are not available. Figures for cases supported by NASS are not available by London borough.

The number of asylum seekers (including dependants) supported by NASS in emergency accommodation in London was 5,900[2] as at the end of December 2000, and 3,200[2] as at the end of December 2001.

As at the end of December 2001 NASS was supporting 820[1] asylum seekers (including dependants) in London through the scheme for disbenefited asylum seekers. There were no asylum seekers being supported by NASS in London through this scheme as at the end of December 2000.

NASS did not support asylum seekers before April 2000. The number of asylum seekers (including dependants) receiving subsistence only support from NASS and staying in the London region was 6,210[1] as at the end of December 2000, and 17,910[1] as at the end of December 2001.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many unaccompanied asylum-seeker children were supported by each of the London boroughs in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02; and how much funding was (i) applied for by and (ii) allocated to each local authority in London to meet the cost of essential social support services for such children. [69957]

Beverley Hughes: The Home Office assumed responsibility for reimbursing local authorities for supporting Unaccompanied Asylum Seeking Children (UASC) as of 1 April 2000 and does not have records for 1999–2000. Local authorities under either section 20 or section 17 of the Children Act 1989 for support provide these amounts.

The table shows the numbers supported by each of the London boroughs from the grant claims submitted and also the amounts claimed and paid.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers from Zimbabwe have (a) been detained and (b) had their cases certified since his announcement to suspend removals to that country on 15 January; and if he will make a statement. [37678]

Beverley Hughes: The latest available information on the number of persons detained solely under Immigration Act powers relates to 30 March 2002. As at that date, 30 Zimbabweans (to the nearest five) were being detained who are recorded as having claimed asylum at some stage, which excludes persons detained in police cells. Provisionally, 55 certified refusals were made on asylum applications lodged by nationals of Zimbabwe in January 2002, 35 in February and 45 in March.

I regret that information on the number of asylum seekers from Zimbabwe who have been detained since 15 January is not available.

The suspension of removals of asylum seekers to Zimbabwe is a temporary measure. We are monitoring events in the aftermath of the Zimbabwe presidential election in close liaison with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO). There is no set time scale, but it would be unrealistic to be able to make any decision on a resumption of removals until the immediate post-election situation has calmed down and we have had time to assess properly the risks to returnees and gather and consider the views of FCO and others. Zimbabwean asylum seekers have continued, where appropriate, to be detained at Oakington Reception Centre as part of the fast-track asylum process. Aside from such individuals, there will be a very small number of people who are detained at present pending removal while outstanding applications, appeals and other matters are resolved. Once such issues have been resolved, the persons concerned will normally be granted bail or temporary admission as appropriate while the suspension of removals remains in place.

Information on Immigration Act detainees as at 29 June and refusals in the second quarter (April to June) of 2002 will be published on 30 August on the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Asylum Seekers Accommodation Centres

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the initial sites for possible asylum accommodation centres were identified; which outside consultants were involved in the process; and how much they were paid. [42654]

Beverley Hughes: The initial sites for accommodation centres were identified through a programme of searches involving major landowners, including other Government Departments, for properties that met a set of criteria. This included looking for sites with the capacity to cater for several hundred residents plus facilities either as new-build or conversion, a non-urban location and a reasonable geographical spread beyond the south east of England. This work was supported by property consultants Lambert Smith Hampton and planning consultants CgMs Consulting.

The information relating to fees paid to external consultants cannot be divulged as this is subject to commercial confidentiality.

Civil Penalty Charges

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civil penalty charges, established under the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999, have been issued; and how many clandestine entrants have been found in lorries, since 22 February. [69694]

Beverley Hughes: Since the implementation of penalty provisions for road vehicles on 3 April 2000 and as at 31 March 2002, a total of 1,429 penalties have been imposed in respect of 7,516 clandestine entrants.

Between 22 February 2002 and up to 31 March 2002 for which the latest information is available, a total of 267 clandestine entrants have been found concealed in road vehicles arriving at Dover.

Right of Entry

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account is taken of whether a child was conceived within a lawful marriage overseas in determining right of entry to the United Kingdom to join a parent who is a British national. [69733]

Beverley Hughes: Under the Immigration Rules, a child aged 18 or under can be granted entry to join one parent in the United Kingdom, provided that the other parent is dead or that the parent here had had sole responsibility for their upbringing. A parent is defined as the father as well as the mother of an illegitimate child (where he is proved to be the father).

Illegitimate birth overseas to a British citizen father and non-British citizen mother would usually mean that the child was not a British citizen. However, discretion within the British Nationality Act 1981 can be used to register as a British citizen the illegitimate child of a British citizen father. Also, if the parents of an illegitimate child subsequently marry, and the law of the country in which the father is domiciled legitimises a child of the relationship upon the parents' marriage, the child will be treated as having been born legitimate. The child would then be regarded as a British citizen from birth and would be entitled to enter and remain freely in this country.

Asylum Applications

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many duplicate applications for asylum have been detected through matching fingerprints since 1993. [69308]

Beverley Hughes: Some 6,700 individuals have been detected as having made two or more applications through the matching of fingerprints since 1993.

Passport Service

Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the UK Passport Service will publish its annual report and accounts for 2001–02. [71806]

Beverley Hughes: The United Kingdom passport service annual report and accounts 2001–02 has been published today and I am pleased to say that copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

Israeli Embassy and Balfour House Bombings

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what conclusions the British scientists investigating the 1994 Israeli Embassy and Balfour House bombings reached on (a) the type and amount of explosive and mechanism used in the bombings, (b) where the explosives were made up, (c) where the car bombs were assembled, (d) who wrote the letters claiming responsibility and (e) who drove the cars; and what reports were received from Israeli scientists following removal of samples from the sites. [67862]

Mr. Blunkett: An appeal to the House of Lords is pending in relation to these events. Since the matter is therefore sub judice it would not be right for me to comment.

Terrorist Organisations

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those terrorist organisations that make use of anti-coagulant as part of their armoury; and if he has undertaken liaison work with the Department of Health on this issue. [68334]

Mr. Blunkett: We do not disclose information on the weaponry or capability of any terrorist organisation, but we monitor the terrorist threat to the United Kingdom closely and remain vigilant, taking all necessary precautions. I liaise closely with my right hon. Friend the Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on these matters.

In addition, Home Office officials are in regular contact with officials from the Department of Health and other Government Departments on all aspects of counter-terrorist contingency planning.

Terrorism

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests have been made as a result of the initiatives undertaken since September in the fight against terrorism; how much expenditure his Department has incurred in pursuing the fight against terrorism in the financial year 2001–02; and if he will make a statement. [69188]

Mr. Blunkett: By 11 July, 137 people had been arrested since 11 September 2001 under the Terrorism Act 2000. In addition, 11 people have been detained under Part 4 of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001. Two of those have since left the United Kingdom voluntarily. It would not be appropriate, for security reasons, to publish details of Home Office expenditure on counter-terrorism.

International Sikh Youth Federation

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received concerning the banning of the International Sikh Youth Federation. [68016]

Mr. Blunkett: The organisation itself has made representations to the proscribed organisations appeal commission. In addition, I have received a small number of letters from members of this House, and from the public.

Parliament Square Demonstrations

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contingency plans (a) there are and (b) are being developed to prevent demonstrations on Parliament Square from disrupting traffic and endangering pedestrians. [62169]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 17 June 2002]: Demonstrations in the area of the Palace of Westminster are subject to the Sessional Order, and policing arrangements for any demonstration always take into account the need to maintain the safety of the public. The policing is the operational responsibility of the Commissioner.

England Fans

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many England fans were banned and prevented from visiting Japan and Korea for the 2002 World Cup; how many such fans were found to have travelled to Japan or Korea; how many England fans were deported from Japan or Korea, and for what offences they were deported; and if he will make a statement. [69946]

Mr. Denham: 1,053 people were prevented from travelling to the World Cup by the conditions of their football banning orders. One individual subject to a banning order attempted to enter Japan but was intercepted by the Japanese immigration authorities and returned to England. No England fans were deported from Japan and Korea for misbehaviour but two individuals were deported by the Japanese Immigration Bureau following revocation of their landing permission. In accordance with commitments given during passage of the Football (Disorder) (Amendment) Act 2002, a detailed report on the World Cup security operation, including the impact of football-related legislation, will be submitted to Parliament on receipt of closing information from the Japanese authorities.

Criminal Records Bureau

Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Criminal Records Bureau will publish its annual report and accounts for 2001–02. [71807]

Hilary Benn: The criminal records bureau annual report and accounts for 2001–02 have been published today, and I am pleased to say that copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what representations he has received from (a) potential umbrella registered bodies and (b) others concerning the financial implications of operating as such a body with the Criminal Records Bureau; and if he will make a statement; [30530]

(2) if he will provide funding to assist umbrella registered bodies with additional costs incurred in setting up an office and processing applications from volunteers to the Criminal Records Bureau; [30529]

(3) how many organisations have registered as umbrella registered bodies with the Criminal Records Bureau; and what the Bureau's original estimate was. [30528]

Mr. Denham: We have been determined that employers and organisations wishing to use the Criminal Records Bureau's service will have a ready means of access. To meet the needs of those employers and organisations which do not wish to register with the Bureau in their own right, we have encouraged others to consider acting on their behalf, as umbrella bodies. It would have been inappropriate to plan on the basis of a pre-determined target number of umbrella bodies. As at close of play on 2 July, some 852 organisations had been registered as umbrella bodies.

Higher-level disclosures will be issued free of charge to volunteers. A number of representations have been made by potential umbrella registered bodies and others. We are not persuaded that it would be appropriate for additional Government funding to be made available for the purpose of establishing umbrella bodies.

Mobile Phone Thefts

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of reported mobile phone thefts which were insurance fraud in the last 12 months. [42791]

Mr. Denham: The requested information is not routinely collected centrally.

Women's Organisations

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which women's organisations have been consulted on proposed legislation by his Department during 2000–01 and 2001–02 sessions; and if their responses have been published. [66524]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 2 July 2002]: This information is not held centrally within the Home Office and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Transsexuals

Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if transsexual people will be able to have their transsexual name and gender recorded on an identity card system introduced by the Government. [70007]

Beverley Hughes: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary made a statement to the House on 3 July, announcing the publication of a consultation paper on Entitlement Cards and Identity Fraud. The consultation period will last until 10 January 2003. The Government has made it clear that the introduction of an entitlement card would be a major step and that it would not proceed without consulting widely and considering all the views expressed very carefully. The consultation paper outlines how a scheme might be delivered by building on the existing driving licence and passport systems.

In the consultation paper the Government states that it is not proposing any changes to the law on transsexual people in the consultation exercise and that the existing procedures for issuing passports and driving licences in these cases would apply for any entitlement card scheme.

The Government announced on 21 June that it was reconvening the Working Group on transsexual people whose report has been under active consideration since it was presented to Parliament in July 2000. The Group will look further into the implications of the possible changes in policy identified in the report, and of the judgments of the European Court on Human Rights in the cases of Goodwin v. The United Kingdom and I v. The United Kingdom which were delivered on 11 July. The Group will report to Ministers later this year but no commitment can yet be given on any likely recommendations or the timing of their implementation. Any recommendations will be taken into account in the design of an entitlement card scheme should the Government decide to proceed after the consultation exercise.

Gender Impact Assessment

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the subject of each gender impact assessment drawn up by his Department since June 1997, indicating in each case whether the outcome has been (a) put out to consultation and (b) published. [66607]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 2 July 2002]: Details regarding gender impact assessments are not centrally held and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Data Series

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new data series separated by gender, race, disability and age have been commissioned by his Department since August 1997. [66608]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 2 July 2002]: Since August 1997 the Research, Development and Statistics Directorate of the Home Office have commissioned the following data series (including further exercises of regular on-going surveys):

(i) The 2001 Home Office Citizenship Survey collects information on sex, race, disability and age. Reports on the Citizenship Survey planned for 2002 will analyse the data by sex, race and ethnicity.

(ii) The 2000 sweeps of the British Crime Survey (BCS) incorporated ethnic "booster samples". This has allowed the experience of ethnic minorities with respect to both crime victimisation risk and other experience and views regarding the police and other parts of the Criminal Justice System (CJS). From January 2001 the BCS has moved to an annual cycle with a permanent ethnic boost.

(iii) From 1 April 1999 the information collected by the Home Office on police arrests was extended to provide information for persons arrested for notifiable offences by ethnic appearance of suspect, gender, age group and offence group.

(iv) From 1 April 2001 police forces have been asked to provide returns on the number of racist crimes recorded by ethnic appearance of victim, offence group, age group and gender of victim and detection rate. Currently this return is voluntary and it is currently proposed that it will become mandatory from 1 April 2003.

In addition to new data series the Department has commissioned, conducted itself a number of one-off or time-limited exercises, yielding information including one or more of these dimensions.

Antisocial Behaviour

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further measures he is taking to tackle anti-social behaviour. [42898]

Mr. Denham: Tackling anti-social behaviour is a priority for the Government. We have included legislative changes in the Police Reform Bill that will improve the effectiveness of Anti-Social Behaviour Orders (ASBOs). We will be issuing revised guidance to all agencies involved in the process of obtaining ASBOs in order that they can make maximum use of this valuable sanction measure.

The Bill also includes measures that will enable the police to enlist the assistance of their own civilian staff as well as the staff of other agencies in the community in tackling anti-social behaviour. Chief officers will be able to appoint support staff from their civilian ranks to provide a visible presence in the community and exercise limited powers to deal with a range of crime, including those which constitute anti-social behaviour. A similar role is also proposed for some of those staff from other agencies who are already working with the police in the community, such as street wardens, and environmental health officers.

Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships throughout the country are appointing co-ordinators for action against anti-social behaviour. They will be responsible for ensuring that robust local strategies, based on the needs of their communities, are in place.

Finally, under the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 we introduced fixed penalty fines for a number of disorder offences including disorderly behaviour while drunk in a public place and the throwing of fireworks in a throughfare. This provision will be piloted within five police areas this summer.

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many ASBOs have been issued by South Yorkshire police in each of the last two years; [68866]

(2) how many Acceptable Behaviour Contracts have been issued in South Yorkshire in the last 12 months. [68865]

Mr. Denham: Data on the number of Acceptable Behaviour Contracts are not collected centrally.

Anti-social behaviour orders (ASBOs) were introduced from 1 April 1999 and up to 31 May 2000 data were collected on the total number of ASBOs issued by police force area only. These data do not include information on the applicant. The table shows the number of ASBOs reported to the Home Office from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2001.

Number of anti-social behaviour orders reported to the Home Office and issued within South Yorkshire from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2001

Year	Number where applicant was the police	Total number issued
June to December 2000	1	1
January to December 2001	4	7

We are currently considering whether any further checks are needed to ensure the accuracy of the number of ASBOs reported.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many anti-social behaviour orders have been issued in Hampshire; and if he will make a statement. [46442]

Mr. Denham: Anti-social behaviour orders (ASBOs) were introduced from 1 April 1999. The latest available data covering the period up to the end of December 2001, show that seven ASBOs have been issued within Hampshire (including the Isle of Wight).

We are currently considering whether any further checks are needed to ensure the accuracy of the number of ASBOs reported.

Youth Crime

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on Government plans to tackle youth crime in Lancashire; [50635]

(2) if he will make a statement on Government plans to tackle youth crime in Wales. [50634]

Mr. Denham: The Government is supporting a wide programme to tackle youth offending in all areas, which includes action to prevent children being drawn into crime in the first place. This includes work with families, in neighbourhoods to tackle deprivation, with education services to reduce exclusions and improve attendance, and implementation of the 10 year anti-drugs strategy.

We also support a number of preventative programmes to steer young people, including those most at risk, away from crime. These include Youth Inclusion Programmes: of which there are at present two in Lancashire and three in Wales; Splash Schemes: in 15 localities in Lancashire and seven localities in Wales; and the Positive Futures programme: one project in Lancashire and two in Wales.

In addition, improvements to the youth justice system, reduced delays, new sentences and programmes, and expanded powers available to the police and courts all help to ensure that we are tackling youth criminality head on.

Alcohol

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he has held on the impact of the withdrawal of authority from police to remove unopened containers of alcohol from underage youths in public areas in 2001; and if he will make a statement. [61094]

Mr. Denham: The existing police powers to confiscate alcohol from under-age drinkers in public places, provided by the Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997, were amended by section 29 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001. This makes it clear that the police can now confiscate alcohol in containers that have been opened, but not alcohol in sealed containers. This adjustment was made to ensure consistency with new police powers to confiscate alcohol from persons in designated public places, provided by section 12 of the 2001 Act.

We have discussed the effect of this change with the Association of Chief Police Officers and we have received correspondence about it from representatives of the Police Superintendents' Association, police forces and Members of Parliament.

In the light of these representations, we have asked the Association of Chief Police Officers for advice on whether a further change in the law would be helpful to clarify or strengthen police powers to confiscate alcohol from under-age drinkers.

Illegal Drugs

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of people aged under 25 was estimated to be using illegal drugs in each year since 1997, and if he will make a statement. [66288]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 4 July 2002]: Results from the 1998 and 2000 British Crime Surveys estimate that 29 per cent. of adults aged between 16 and 24 reported to have used an illegal drug in the previous year.

Results from the 2001 survey on "Drug use, smoking and drinking among young people in England" (published in a Statistical Press Notice by the Department of Health on 15 March 2002) estimates that 20 per cent. of school children aged between 11 and 15 reported to have used an illegal drug in the previous year. A revised and more detailed method for measuring the prevalence of drug use was introduced in 2001. The questions used in 2001 provide new estimates on drug use and are not comparable with results from previous sweeps. Estimates from previous years were 12 per cent. in 1999, 14 per cent. in 2000 and 20 per cent. in 2001.

Police Training

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the training period is for (a) police officers and (b) special constables; and if he will make a statement. [59303]

Mr. Denham: The initial training period for new police officer recruits is two years, and the bulk of this training is provided locally within individual forces.

Training periods vary from force to force and this data is not held centrally for specials. A new special constabulary foundation-training package is currently being developed.

The National Competency Framework which is being introduced into police training, will ensure support police officers, special constables, support staff and others including community support officers are trained to the appropriate level of competence.

Hampshire Police Authority

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the regularity and subject matter of communications between his Department and Hampshire police authority in June. [69256]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 12 July 2002]: The Home Office does not have a regular cycle of correspondence with police authorities on a monthly basis. A trawl of the Department and inquiries of Hampshire police authority has identified 14 items of correspondence sent from the Home Office and Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary to the police authority between 1 and 30 June 2002. These covered a range of issues including police reform, police performance and funding arrangements.

Leicestershire Police Authority

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the names of members of the Leicestershire Police Authority, their occupations and remuneration. [54498]

Mr. Denham: This information is not held centrally. Under the Police Authorities (Model Code of Conduct) Order 2001, a police authority must maintain a register of financial and other interests, including details of employment. There is no obligation on members to register their personal income. Under paragraph 25A of Schedule 2 of the Police Act 1996 (inserted by section 107 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001), police authorities must publish arrangements for the payment of allowances to their members. Members of Leicestershire police authority must have registered their interests by 28 May 2002. The hon. Member may wish to contact the Clerk of Leicestershire police authority for publicly available information on authority members.

Police

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police authorities have been provided with PFI credits for new buildings and major refurbishments; what the capital value of each investment is; how many new buildings are proposed within each project; and at what stage they are in the PFI procurement process. [59839]

Mr. Denham: Details on the Private Finance Initiative (PFI) projects for police authorities where contracts have been signed are set out in table 1. Credit approval has been given for all these schemes.

A number of forces have been given provisional approval for schemes which are in the earlier stages of procurement. These are listed in table 2.

ITN—Invitation to Negotiate issued to a selected number of contractors.

FBC—Final Business Case: preparation or conclusion of the full and final business case for the proposed development in light of final bids.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Police Reform and Bill Unit was established; how much it cost in 2001; how many staff it employs; and what its remit is. [62348]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 17 June 2002]: The Police Reform Bill and Implementation Unit—as it is now known—was established in June 2001 to co-ordinate the implementation of the police reform programme, as set out in the White Paper "Policing A New Century: A Blueprint for Reform", and to manage the Police Reform Bill.

The unit currently employs 11 staff. Total costs for the last financial year were approximately £525,000.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police stations there were by region in England and Wales, in each of the last 10 years. [62164]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 17 June 2002]: Information on the number of police stations by region in each of the last 10 years is given in the table.

Comprehensive information is available from all 43 forces for the three years to March 2000, March 2001 and March 2002, but some forces were unable to provide data for earlier years. This is reflected in the table.

[1] Totals given for 1992–97 cover 34 forces only. The remaining nine forces were unable to supply the relevant data. The total figures for 1998 and 1999 cover 35 forces only. For 2000, 2001 and 2002 all forces provided data.

[2] As a result of boundary changes in April 2000, 12 police stations were transferred from the Metropolitan Police Service to Essex (2), Herts (4) and Surrey (6).

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in Portsmouth have less than two years' experience; and if he will make a statement. [58561]

Mr. Denham: The information requested has been provided by the Chief Constable of Hampshire Constabulary (Mr. P. R. Kernaghan Esq. QPM).

In the Portsmouth Division of the Hampshire Constabulary there were 72 officers with less than two years' experience as at 30 April 2002. This is 17.4 per cent. of the total strength of the Division, which was 413 at the same date.

Police force performance does not depend solely upon the number or experience of officers available. The proposals in the White Paper "Policing a New Century: A blueprint for Reform" set out a radical and ambitious programme of reform, with the overall aim of reducing crime and the fear of crime and to tackle antisocial behaviour. The test of success will be whether the measures being put in place will make a real difference to the quality of life of individuals and communities up and down the country.

The public have a right to expect the same high standards of service wherever they live and the Government propose to put a framework in place to ensure that all police forces come up to the standard of the best.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers are employed by the Devon and Cornwall Police Force; and if he will make a statement. [59366]

Mr. Denham: Figures supplied by the Chief Constable (Sir John Evans QPM) show that on 31 January 2002 Devon and Cornwall constabulary had 3,030 officers. This figure is for full-time equivalent officers, was an increase of 166 over force strength at 31 March 1997 and was a record strength for the force.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department at what point in their recruitment and training a new recruit to the police force counts for the purposes of his figures on police strength. [52336]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 25 April 2002]: New recruits to the police service count toward the statistics for police strength from the date of their appointment to a police force.

Training takes place after appointment. Recruits normally begin accompanied patrol about 19 weeks after recruitment and usually qualify to undertake independent patrol after about 31 weeks.

Police strength is at record levels, but it is not only the number of officers which matters. The Government are committed to ensuring that forces are making best use of existing resources and that patrol officers are spending as much time as possible on the front line, carrying out their core functions.

The public have a right to expect the same high standards of service wherever they live and the Government propose to put a framework in place to ensure that all police forces come up to the standard of the best.

Police Checks

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy that adults working with vulnerable adults are police checked prior to commencing employment in this sector; and if he will make a statement. [49926]

Mr. Denham: Once part VII of the Care Standards Act 2000 is implemented, anyone being considered for a care position, within the terms of that Act, working with vulnerable adults will have to be the subject of a higher-level check via the Criminal Records Bureau. This will include both police records and the new list provided for under the Act of persons considered unsuitable to work with vulnerable adults.

Prison Service

Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress the Prison Service has made in the last year towards improving its environmental performance; and if he will make a statement. [71808]

Hilary Benn: The Prison Service continues to make progress in this area. During the last year there have been a number of achievements as regards biodiversity, energy efficiency, procurement, transport and waste management. These are described in the service's second annual environmental report published today, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

In introducing a formal greening operations policy in March 2000, the Director General of the Prison Service made clear his own personal commitment to improving the environmental performance of the service. A challenging programme of work in line with that commitment, and detailed in the report, has been set for the current year.

Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the performance of Her Majesty's Prison Service in 2001–02. [71809]

Hilary Benn: I am pleased to report that the Prison Service Annual Report and Accounts have today been published. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Correspondence

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Passport Agency will respond to the letter of 27 February from the hon. Member for Christchurch, concerning the case of Mr. Bevis and Miss Biddiscombe. [70351]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 16 July 2002]: The United Kingdom Passport Service replied to the hon. Member on 12 July and have apologised for the delay in sending their response.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Chief Executive of the Integrated Casework Directorate (Nationality) will respond to the letter of the hon. Member for Christchurch sent on 17 June. [70350]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 16 July 2002]: A senior official from the Nationality Group wrote to the hon. Member on 16 July 2002 in response to his earlier correspondence.

Committee Mandates

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the mandate of the Committee for the implementation of the Community action programme on preventive measures to fight violence against children, young persons and women (Daphne) is; how many times it has met over the last 12 months; what the UK representation on it is; what the annual cost of its work is to public funds; if he will list the items currently under its consideration; if he will take steps to increase its accountability and transparency to Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [58456]

Mr. Denham: The Daphne Committee assists the European Commission in the management and implementation of a programme which co-funds projects to promote the protection of children, young persons and women from violence and abuse. It normally meets twice a year, initially to agree the annual work programme and criteria for evaluating the selecting bids for funding and subsequently to discuss the bids which have been received and to agree the allocation of funds to successful projects.

The United Kingdom is represented on the Committee by a Home Office official (for issues concerning domestic violence and violence against women), an official from the Department of Health (for child protection issues) and an official from the United Kingdom Permanent Representation in Brussels.

The Daphne programme is funded by the European Community budget and travel costs to attend Committee meetings are met by the European Commission. The Home Office pays a subsistence allowance to cover attendance at a Committee meeting.

The Commission is required to prepare reports on the implementation of the programme in its second and final years which will be submitted to the Council and European Parliament. The reports will also be published in the EUROPA internet website. I do not see a need for further measures to increase the Committee's accountability and transparency.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many statutory instruments have been (a) introduced, (b) removed and (c) amended by his Department since 1 January; and what the (i) cost and (ii) saving has been in each case. [64611]

Beverley Hughes: 57 statutory instruments have been made by Home Office Ministers since 1 January 2002. Three have been revoked. Information is not available about the costs and savings of implementation and repeal and could not be made available other than at disproportionate cost.

Information Database

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 5 February 2002, Official Report, column 882W, if he will place in the Library a full description of the network information database. [70070]

Beverley Hughes: I presume that the right hon. Member is referring to the Case Information Database (CID), which was developed and implemented during 2001–02 as the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND's) main database system.

It is not intended to place a description of the database in the Library.

The functionality and data management is subject to continual revision. In that connection, a significant enhancement programme is currently under way to enable the implementation of many IND policy initiatives and process improvements planned for the next two years. It is considered that the work required in maintaining a "full description" of the database would prove disproportionate.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, (1) pursuant to his answer of 5 February 2002, Official Report, column 882W, if he will place in the Library an explanation of how the database will be used to monitor the Department's performance; [70072]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 5 February 2002, Official Report, column 882W, when the casework information database will be fully operational. [70071]

Beverley Hughes: The Case Information Database (CID) was successfully developed and implemented during 2001–02 as the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND's) main database system.

It is not intended to place in the Library an explanation specifically of how CID is used to monitor performance. The means by which IND monitors its business and it's approach to performance management generally are described within documents such as IND's Business Plan and the plans of individual units within IND.

Home Office Traffic Reporting

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the procedure is relating to the production of documents at a police station within seven days of being stopped in a motor vehicle; and whether a receipt or NCR copy should be provided on production of an HORT2 form. [59449]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 10 June 2002]: Police officers are entitled under the Road Traffic Act 1988 to require motorists to produce a range of driver and vehicle related documents for inspection. A motorist failing to produce such documents on request is guilty of an offence, unless he produces them at a police station of his nomination within seven days.

If any of the required documents cannot be made available at the time of the police request, the motorist is issued with a form HORT 1. This formally notifies him that within the specified time he must present the documents at a police station of his choice, which is recorded on the form.

The HORT 1 is in two parts. The top copy is issued to the driver, the bottom is retained within the issuing force to monitor and control the subsequent presentation of the documents. Upon their presentation, staff at the nominated police station inspect them and record the necessary details on a two part document known as the HORT 2. One part of the HORT 2 is then retained by the nominated police station and the second part sent to the originating police force so that they can verify compliance with the original request.

The HORT system has no statutory basis. It is operated by the police for administrative convenience without any direct Government involvement. In 1996 an Association of Chief Police Officers Working Group considered whether the system should include the issue of a receipt for documents produced. The Group unanimously concluded that the costs incurred would far exceed any benefit.

PRIME MINISTER

Advisory Committee on Business Appointments

Albert Owen: To ask the Prime Minister if he has received the Fifth report of the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; who the members of the Committee are; and if he will make a statement. [72102]

The Prime Minister: The Advisory Committee on Business Appointments has submitted its fifth report to me and I have today placed copies in the Libraries of both Houses. The report gives an account of its work from 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002.

The Committee is an independent body which advises me on business appointment applications from the most senior civil servants and members of the Armed Forces. Where the applicant is a senior diplomat, it advises the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under the similar rules which apply in the Diplomatic Service. The Committee also gives advice, under published guidelines, to former Ministers about any outside appointments they wish to take up after leaving office. It includes members with extensive experience of public life in England, Scotland and Wales, and, in this respect, it acts as a joint body although it provides its advice directly to those who seek it in accordance with the provisions of their Ministerial Code.

The current members of the Committee are:

The Right Hon. Lord Mayhew of Twysden QC DL (Chairman)
Sir John Blelloch KCB (Vice-chairman)
The Right Hon. Lord Morris of Aberavon QC
The Right Hon. Lord Maclennan of Rogart
The Lord Wilson of Tillyorn KT GCMG
Admiral Sir Kenneth Eaton GBE KCB FEng FIEE
Sir Bryan Nicholson

The Committee has an important role, and I am very grateful to all the members for giving their time so freely to it.

TRANSPORT

Rail Regulator

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his reply of 10 July 2002, Official Report, column 982W, on the Strategic Rail Authority and Rail Regulator, if he will list the type or nature of the occasions on which it is deemed approporiate for him and other departmental ministers to meet the (a) Chairman of the Strategic Rail Authority and (b) Rail Regulator. [70639]

Mr. Jamieson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport and other departmental Ministers would expect to meet the Chairman of the Strategic Rail Authority and the Rail Regulator to discuss matters of common interest, and at wider industry meetings and events.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the responsibilities of (a) the office of the Rail Regulator and (b) the office of the international rail regulator; and if he will make a statement. [70661]

Mr. Jamieson: The functions and duties of the Rail Regulator are set out in Part I of the Railways Act 1993 as amended by the Transport Act 2000; and those of the International Rail Regulator in the Railway Regulations 1998 (SI 1998/1340).

Strategic Rail Authority

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the Strategic Rail Authority will consult on its review of rail fares policy. [72100]

Mr. Darling: The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) has today published its consultation paper on fares policy. Copies have been placed in the House libraries and the document can also be viewed on the SRA website (www.sra.gov.uk). The consultation period will end on 11 October 2002. This process is part of the SRA's review of fares policy announced in the Authority's Strategic Plan, published in January this year.

Network Rail

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his statement of 27 June 2002, Official Report, columns 971–73, on Network Rail, if he will make a statement on the Government's proposal to incur the contingent liabilities set out in the associated minutes he laid before Parliament. [72012]

Mr. Darling: In my statement on 27 June on Network Rail, I informed Members of two minutes I had laid in the House that day, setting out the contingent liabilities I proposed to incur on behalf of the Government to enable Railtrack plc to be acquired by Network Rail.

This classification of Network Rail was a decision taken, not by the Government, but by the Office for National Statistics. The ONS takes independent decisions in matters concerning the classification, preparation and publication of statistics. It was their view that Network Rail would be classified as a private sector corporation — once its board has been ratified by its membership — and that the company's borrowing could be classified as private sector borrowing in the national accounts. In reaching this conclusion the ONS has, I understand, based their considerations upon the European System of Accounts 1995 (ESA95).

As I explained to the House in my statement of 27 June the SRA is providing Network Rail with standby credit facilities. It is the commercial debt markets that will provide the required borrowing for Network Rail, with the credit facilities called upon in identified, though unlikely, circumstances. On this basis the SRA's standby credit facilities are considered to be contingent liabilities and would only score as public expenditure in the extremely unlikely event of them being called upon.

The Comptroller and Auditor General of the National Audit Office has, in his capacity as auditor of the SRA, concluded that Network Rail should be accounted for as a subsidiary of the SRA. This judgement is based on the application of UK Generally Accepted Accounting Practice (UK-GAAP). As such the expenditure and liabilities of Network Rail will be accounted for in an open and transparent way—a very welcome step.

The provision of any funds necessary to meet the SRA's financial obligations could be made by way of grant under paragraph 7 of schedule 14 of the Transport Act 2000 or by permitting the SRA to borrow in accordance with paragraph 8 of that schedule. Whether the SRA's financial obligations (subject to normal supply procedures) would be met by a grant, by allowing it to borrow, or a mixture of both would be determined if the need arose.

It therefore remains my intention to proceed as proposed and incur the liabilities set out in the minutes.

The Government judges that the contingent liabilities set out in the minutes I laid before the House on 27 June provide robust means of quickly setting up a strong and well-managed company to take over the responsibilities of Railtrack as network operator. And to do so by uniting the rail industry to work together under the strategic guidance of the SRA with Government with the overall aim of delivering the efficient, safe and reliable railway network that customers want.

Rail Services (Plymouth)

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement with respect to (a) achieving and (b) building on the three hour target for rail journeys to Plymouth. [67600]

Mr. Spellar: I understand that the winter timetable will include a 3 hour service between London and Plymouth. The SRA has recently concluded a consultation on the potential combination of the Great Western and Thames franchises in 2006, which would provide an opportunity to review service patterns with a view to improving journey times between London and Plymouth, and other destinations in the South West. Decisions will be announced in due course.

Commuter Lines

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which lines are to be considered as commuter lines with regard to the intended output for more frequent services on commuter lines as given in his 10-year plan at paragraph 6.22, page 49; and if he will make a statement. [71158]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 July 2002]: Those on which a substantial proportion of passenger journeys and/or passenger kilometres involve travel to, or from, work. There is no standard definition, but traffic on such lines is generally heaviest in the morning and evening peaks.

Passenger Rail Demand

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the methodology behind his Department's estimate, on page 20, paragraph 49 of the 10-year plan background analysis, that just under two thirds of the increased passenger rail demand due to fare reductions and service quality improvements will be from car users switching to rail; what percentage of the total estimated increase in passenger kilometres, resulting from the 10-year plan, this will represent; and what estimate has been made as to the number of car users switching to rail as a result of (a) economic growth and (c) car traffic growth. [71055]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The estimate of the proportion of rail demand that would be a result of car users switching to rail came from evidence available at the time, collated by consultants to the Department, with the methodology reported in "Modelling using the National Road Traffic Forecasting framework for Tackling Congestion and Pollution and Transport 2010: The 10 Year Plan—Technical Report" (DETR, December 2002).

This proportion represents about 15 per cent points of the growth in passenger demand over 2000 levels (from the total 50 per cent increase), as the two thirds factor was only applicable for patronage growth resulting from plan policies.

No separate estimates were made of the impacts of economic growth and car traffic growth respectively. It is intended that the multi-modal National Transport Model we are developing will be able to address such questions in the future.

Rail Freight

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many tonnes of freight were moved by (a) rail and (b) road in each of the last five years. [71058]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The figures for Great Britain are set out below:

	Road billion tonne kms	Rail billion tonne kms
1997–98	152.4	16.9
1998–99	150.5	17.3
1999–2000	149.4	18.2
2000–01	149.5	18.1
2001–02	not available	19.7

Rail Investment

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) proportion and (b) total value is of the required passenger infrastructure and rolling stock investment, as outlined in the SRA plan, that is expected to be funded from increases in fare revenues. [71056]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The Strategic Rail Authority's Strategic Plan assumed no change to existing policies on fares regulation.

Safer Stations

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his reply of 2 July 2002, Official Report, column 208W, on safer stations if he will list those train operating companies which are committed to seeking accreditation to which he refers; what steps have been taken; and when full accreditation is likely to be granted. [70642]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority is working with the Train Operating Companies, as part of the franchise renewal and extension process, to agree commitments to both the Secure Stations Scheme and the Secured Car Park Scheme. As a number of these franchise negotiations are currently taking place, it would not be appropriate to disclose which Train Operating Companies are seeking Secure Stations accreditation for all their stations.

Nuclear Waste Shipments

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contingency plans have been put in place against the event of a shipwreck involving a ship carrying nuclear waste to Sellafield off the coast of the UK. [70372]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 17 July 2002]: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) response to an incident involving a ship carrying radioactive materials will follow the procedures laid down in the National Contingency Plan (NCP) for Marine Pollution from Shipping and Offshore Installations. The MCA would lead and co-ordinate a multi-agency response bringing in key organisations to provide advice and support as required.

British Nuclear Fuels plc (BNFL) and its subsidiary Pacific Nuclear Transport Limited (PNTL) have produced emergency response procedures that are compatible with the NCP for their fleet of seven vessels which are specifically designed for the carriage of radioactive materials. Each ship of the fleet has a Shipboard Marine Emergency Plan which follows the guidelines prepared by the Marine Environment Protection Committee of the International Maritime Organization. BNFL and other nuclear operators are technically competent in responding to incidents involving radioactive material and would provide radiological advice to the MCA as required.

National Air Traffic Services

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the appropriate level of insurance cover for NATS; [71117]

(2) what level of insurance he is requiring from NATS; [71118]

(3) what discussions he has held with NATS over their insurance cover. [71116]

Mr. Jamieson: With effect from 1 July NATS has obtained aviation third party liability insurance to a level comparable with that secured by other major aviation interests post the events of 11 September.

NATS is continuing to investigate alternative markets that it has been advised may facilitate further cover. NATS and its lenders will take a view of this matter once quotes have been obtained for this additional layer of insurance.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many air traffic controllers were (a) employed and (b) in training in each year since 1990; [71121]

(2) what steps (a) have been taken and (b) are planned to increase the number of trained national air traffic controllers; and if he will make a statement; [71160]

(3) how many air traffic controllers were (a) employed and (b) in training in each year since 1990; and if he will make a statement; [71162]

(4) what steps he has taken to increase the number of air traffic controllers; [71119]

(5) what the target staff complement is of National Air Traffic Services; how many vacancies and at what levels are unfilled; how many individuals have (a) left, (b) retired from and (c) joined NATS in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [71163]

Mr. Jamieson: These are operational matters for National Air Traffic Services (NATS).

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what discussions he has had with NATS, the unions, the CAA and other air traffic control providers about increasing the number of air traffic controllers; and what representations he has had from these bodies on this subject; [71120]

(2) what recent (a) representations he and his Department has received and (b) discussions he and his Department has had with (i) NATS and (ii) the CAA regarding the number of trained national air traffic controllers; and if he will make a statement. [71161]

Mr. Jamieson: Ensuring that there is an adequate number of air traffic controllers, is an operational matter for NATS.

However, the Department, in its capacity as a responsible shareholder, has regular meetings with NATS. It is understood that unions and management are working together to find an effective and acceptable solution, that accords with the requirements of the air traffic control approval granted by the CAA.

Railway Statistics

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the methodology used by the SRA in order to seasonally adjust passenger kilometres. [71063]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 July 2002]: Passenger Kilometres data are collected in four-weekly periods and are susceptible to seasonal effects. The SRA seasonally adjusts the four weekly data using a variant of the "X11 Arima" package, developed by Statistics Canada and used (and recommended) by the Office for National Statistics.

The SRA publishes both seasonally adjusted and unadjusted figures.

Vehicle Charging

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when he will publish guidelines related to (a) workplace parking and (b) road use charging; whether the guidance will be retrospective; and if he will make a statement; [70814]

(2) when he will publish guidelines related to (a) work place parking and (b) road user charging; and if this guidance will be retrospective. [71051]

Mr. Jamieson: I am considering the nature and scope of guidance on the workplace parking levy and on road user charging.

Congestion

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the level of congestion in large urban areas in England was in 2000; and what criteria are used to define such areas. [71625]

Mr. Jamieson: We plan to publish congestion data relating to 2000 in the autumn. These data will form a baseline against which future congestion data will be compared. For the PSA congestion target, large urban areas are defined as all those urban areas with a population of above 250,000: Greater London; the former metropolitan counties centred on the cities of Birmingham, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle and Sheffield; and the urban areas of Blackpool, Bournemouth, Brighton, Bristol, Hull, Leicester, Middlesbrough, Nottingham, Plymouth, Portsmouth, Southampton and Stoke. These urban areas may include parts of neighbouring local authority areas to give consistency with the area definitions in the Department's National Transport Model.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the level of congestion was on the inter-urban trunk road network in 2000; and what criteria are to be used to measure changes in congestion each year. [71626]

Mr. Jamieson: We plan to publish congestion data relating to 2000 in the autumn. These data will form a baseline against which future congestion data will be compared.

Multi-Modal Studies

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans there are for (a) guidance and (b) legislation relating to the implementation of multi-modal studies; and if he will make a statement. [70742]

Mr. Jamieson: There are no plans for (a) guidance or (b) legislation relating to the implementation of Multi-Modal Studies. Implementation of agreed recommendations from the Studies will be the responsibility of the relevant delivery agencies. Government Offices will have a co-ordinating role.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the new trunk road and bypass schemes which (a) have been given approval and (b) are awaiting approval after being part of a multi-modal study. [70618]

Mr. Jamieson: We have made announcements on three Multi-Modal Studies and have asked the Highways Agency and relevant local authorities to take forward work on the trunk road and bypass schemes listed below. Final decisions on schemes will be taken following completion of the normal statutory processes.

Postal Voting

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps he is taking to (a) safeguard the secrecy of the ballot, (b) protect voters from intimidation and (c) ensure that postal votes are completed by the voter to whom they belong, in postal ballots. [59174]

Ms Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply. We recognise that it is essential to make sure that new methods of voting do not undermine the integrity and security of the election process. Safeguards in relation to the postal voting have been in place for many years, and we have no reason to believe that they do not operate satisfactorily in all postal ballots. The Electoral Commission is evaluating the local authority pilot schemes that ran all postal ballots in the May 2002 local and mayoral elections, including issues such as security and privacy. The Commission will publish its report on 1 August 2002.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

CDC Capital Partners

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will list (a) those to whom CDC Capital Partners' sold its enterprise investments in the last three years and (b) the enterprise investments sold to them. [67390]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: In the last three years, CDC has sold the following significant equity investments to the following companies:

2000:

Investment	Buyer
Tip Top (Nicaragua)	Sun Valley Foods (Cargill Inc)
Usutu Pulp (Swaziland)	Sappi
Industrial Credit Company (Zambia)	Loita Capital Partners
Nanga Farms (Zambia)	Incumbent management team
PT Semen Andalas, (Indonesia)	Lafarge

2001:

Investment	Buyer
Housing Development Finance Corp (India)	Swiss Re Insurance Group
Pan Africa Cement	Lafarge
Zambia Sugar Corporation	Illovo Sugar
Eutco, Kawalazi, Sable (Tanzania and Malawi)	Global
Rwenzori Highlands Tea, Uganda	James Finlay
CG Glass, (India)	Koninklijke Philips Electronics

There have been no outright disposals so far in 2002.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will break down by (a) region and (b) sector the representations her Department has received regarding the environmental impact of CDC Capital Partners' investments since 1997. [67367]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: In 1999 my Department received a representation concerning orange peel waste deposit by CDC in the Area de Conservacion Guanacaste, Costa Rica, under a local agreement. This was part of an experiment to recycle organic material to rehabilitate an area of degraded cattle pasture. In 2000 and 2001 representations were received concerning deforestation issues relating to oil palm plantations respectively in Indonesia and Papua New Guinea. The latter included concerns about protection of the habitat of the Queen Alexandra's Birdwing Butterly.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will list the debts to the Treasury by CDC Capital Partners. [67388]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: CDC owes Government £755m in respect of loans made to CDC by my Department in the past. These were in the form of exchequer advances funded from the development assistance programme. CDC does not owe any debt to HM Treasury.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what criteria are used in determining annual performance-related bonuses to CDC Capital Group executives [67371]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: The annual bonus pool, from which individual bonuses are paid, is determined by the Board from a set of objectives which is agreed each year. These objectives cover the areas of financial performance, portfolio management and non-financial factors, and are weighted appropriately:

Financial — accounting for 60 per cent of the pool

Portfolio management — accounting for 20 per cent of the pool

Non-financial — accounting for 20 per cent of the pool

Individual bonuses also depend on a number of factors including a 360-degree performance review and the individual's performance against personal targets.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will list the sub-Saharan agri-businesses advertised for sale in 2001 by CDC Capital Partners; and what proportion those businesses represented in 2001 in CDC Capital Partners' sub-Sahran agri-businesses. [67381]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: The agribusinesses advertised for sale in 2001 are listed below. The figures in brackets represent their approximate proportionate value of the 2001 sub Saharan agribusiness portfolio.

Rwenzori Highlands Tea (10 per cent)

Shiselweni Forestry (2 per cent)

Sulmac (3 per cent)

York Farms (2 per cent)

Mpongwe Farm (15 per cent)

Kilombero Valley Teak (5 per cent)

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, how many Commonwealth nationals employed by CDC Capital Partners have been made redundant since 1997. [67413]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: Since 1997 a total of 217 Commonwealth nationals (including UK employees) have been made redundant.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what (a) current and (b) proposed (i) annual performance related bonus programmes and (ii) long term incentive plans exist for CDC Capital Partners' mid-level executives. [67373]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]:

(i)(a) A current annual bonus programme exists which allows the Remuneration Committee to approve cash awards up to 50 per cent of an individual's base salary.

(b) No additional or new bonus plan is proposed.

(ii)(a) A long term incentive plan linked to NAV growth over a three-year period is in place.

(b) No new long-term plan has been proposed.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what the proportional growth of CDC Capital Partners' (a) retail and (b) healthcare investments has been since 1997. [67393]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]:) (a) retail — in 1997, retail represented 0.86 per cent of CDC's portfolio; today, retail represents 4.61 per cent of CDC's portfolio

(b) healthcare — in 1997, healthcare represented 0.16 per cent of CDC's portfolio; today, healthcare represents 3.25 per cent of CDC's portfolio

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will list the countries where CDC Capital Partners (a) has received and (b) receives exemptions on environmental regulations on its investments. [67377]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: CDC Capital Partners does not ask for or receive exemptions on environmental regulations on any of its investments. CDC makes investments on the basis that any shortfall in the standards of social and environmental performance of the company, not only against local legislation but also against international good practice, will be addressed. Where substantial environmental improvements are required, it is possible that the investee company will request exemption from local environmental regulation in the short term, but this is only acceptable to CDC in the context of long-term improvement.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will list CDC Capital Partners' agricultural investments in sub-Saharan Africa by country since 1997; describing the commercial activities in each case. [67361]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: CDC Capital Partners' new investments in agribusiness:

Year	Country	Company name	Commercial activity
2002	Tanzania	Tatepa	Tea blending and packaging business
1999	Tanzania	South Highlands Tea	Privatisation of smallholder tea factories
1998	Zimbabwe	Ariston	Diversified agribusiness holding co
1998	Kenya	Sulmac	Modernise floriculture and develop vegetable enterprise for export
1997	South Africa	New Farmers	Agricultural Investment Fund
1997	Mozambique	AGRIMO	Cotton production and ginning

Including the investments listed above, CDC has 37 agribusiness equity holdings as at end 2001.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will list the countries where CDC Capital Partners (a) has received and (b) receives tax breaks on its investments. [67369]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: There are 44 countries in which CDC has a tax exemption not always available to other companies. Until recently CDC also received tax exemption in Costa Rica under an Operating Conditions Agreement (OCA) which CDC voluntarily gave up due to special circumstances in 2000.

A list of the 44 countries where CDC currently receives a tax exemption is below:

Country

1 Anguilla
2 Bangladesh
3 Barbados
4 Belize
5 Bolivia
6 Botswana
7 Cameroon
8 Cote d'Ivoire

42 Zambia

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if she will list the unsuccessful formal investments and sale tenders in which CDC Capital Partners has participated, by sector, since 1997; [67398]

(2) if she will list the unsuccessful formal investments and sale tenders in which CDC Capital Partners has participated, by country, since 1997. [67341]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: This information is not kept by CDC.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will list CDC Capital Partners' disposal of investments by (a) sector, (b) size and (c) country since 1997. [67342]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: Full details are not available without disproportionate cost. However for a list of significant disposals, I would refer the hon. Member to my reply to his question. [67390]

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will list by (a) country and (b) sector the environmental impact studies (i) performed and (ii) contracted by CDC Capital Partners since 1997. [67378]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: An environmental impact study is carried out by CDC on every investment where the environmental risk is high, and where thorough mitigation, management and monitoring is therefore required. Where the risk is perceived to be medium or low, a detailed study and management plan is not required but a basic assessment of environmental issues will be undertaken by the Investment Manager, with advice from CDC's Business Principles Unit.

CDC does not hold records of environmental impact studies going back to 1997, but the following investments made in each of the years 1997 to 2002 were subject to a detailed environmental review.

Year	Country	Sector	Client Company
1997	Ghana	Minerals Oil & Gas	Abosso Goldfields Limited
1997	Kenya	Other Sectors	Nairobi Business Park Ltd

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will list the investments visited by CDC Capital Partners for monitoring purposes; and how many times each has been visited since 1997. [67362]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: It is not possible to answer this question without disproportionate cost.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will list, by country, the publicly guaranteed debt owed to CDC Capital Partners. [67386]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: As part of CDC's restructuring efforts, all outstanding public sector loans, guaranteed by host governments, were transferred to the Department for International Development in 2000. Therefore, there is no publicly guaranteed debt owed to CDC Capital Partners.

The Government does not stand as guarantor for any debt owed to CDC.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will list the funds containing private capital (a) managed and (b) joint-managed by CDC Capital Partners; and how much capital has been in each fund since 1997. [67364]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: Between 1997 and 2000, CDC Capital Partners did not jointly manage any private equity funds. In 2001 CDC formed a joint venture fund management company with Norfund under the name Aureos Capital. A series of country funds which hitherto had been solely managed by CDC were rolled up as part of Aureos Capital and are now jointly managed.

Funds containing private capital managed and joint-managed by CDC Capital Partners since 1997

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what discussions she has had with CDC Capital Group board members regarding annual performance-related bonuses to CDC Capital Group executives. [67372]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: There have been periodic discussions over the last two years between my Department, the Treasury and senior CDC management about the Long Term Incentive Plan (LTIP), which has been approved on an annual basis. Otherwise annual performance bonuses to CDC staff are the responsibility of the Board of CDC and its Remuneration Committee.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what proportion of CDC Capital Partners' (a) retail and (b) healthcare investments are in (i) low-income and (ii) least-developed nations. [67392]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: CDC has no retail or healthcare investments in low-income or least-developed countries.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will list CDC Capital Partners' investment partners by (a) sector, (b) country and (c) size since 1997. [67344]

Clare Short [holding answer 11 July 2002]: It is not possible to answer this question without disproportionate cost.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when her Department's review period for the financial advice service provider in relation CDC Capital Partners (a) began and (b) ends. [69056]

Clare Short: An advertisement was submitted to the Official Journal of the European Communities (OJEC) on 5 June inviting expressions of interest. The new contract is due to be awarded from 1 August 2002.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will renew the contract of CDC Capital Partners' chief executive. [69052]

Clare Short: The Chief Executive's contract is with CDC, not with my Department. The contract is automatically renewed unless either side (the employer or the employee) serves notice.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development who (a) has participated and (b) will participate in selecting a financial advice service provider in relation to CDC Capital Partners. [69044]

Clare Short: An advertisement was submitted to the Official Journal of the European Communities (OJEC) on 5 June, in accordance with EU procurement rules, inviting expressions of interest. Formal bids have yet to be considered. The independent member on the evaluation panel has yet to be decided.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with the Treasury regarding her Department's solicitation of financial advice service providers in relation to CDC Capital Partners. [69060]

Clare Short: No discussions have been held with the Treasury about the re-tendering of the financial advice consultancy to DFID for work on CDC. The Treasury has been kept informed about the exercise.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the status is of CDC Capital Partners' (a) chief executive and (b) chairman. [69050]

Clare Short: Information about the Chairman and the Chief Executive is contained in the annual review for 2001. Copies of this are available in the Library of the House.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what tenders criteria her Department uses in selecting financial advice service providers in relation to CDC Capital Partners; [69042]

(2) what criteria were used in selecting a financial advice service provider in relation to CDC Capital Partners. [69043]

Clare Short: Formal bids will be assessed according the following criteria:

a. Demonstrated experience and knowledge of personnel and firm in (a) corporate finance, (b) private equity investment management (c) private equity and other funding instruments, (d) fund management contracts, (e) fund performance assessment, (f) incentivisation arrangement for fund managers and other personnel, (g) negotiation of transactions in these and related fields, and (h) access to current information on markets parameters and trends. (15 per cent).

b. Demonstrated experience and knowledge in capital markets and investment conditions in the poorer developing countries. (10 per cent)

c. Demonstrated capability to access potential UK and international investors and partners for CDC, including institutional investors, development finance institutions, and corporate investors. (5 per cent)

d. Demonstrated recent experience and understanding of UK Government PPPs and privatisations. (20 per cent)

e. Demonstrated appreciation of DFID's approach to pro-poor private sector development and the role of CDC in this context. (10 per cent)

f. Methodology of work proposed. (5 per cent)

g. Total cost, fees, average daily rates, number of days offered, special contractual conditions. (35 per cent)

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which financial advice service providers followed up on their expressions of interest regarding providing financial advice in relation to CDC Capital Partners; and when the follow-ups took place. [69058]

Clare Short: One firm of consultants, following its expression of interest, approached the department with a query about the form in which its proposal should be submitted. It would not be appropriate to identify the firm, and the query was answered promptly. A further firm, which was not invited to make a formal bid, has also now approached the Department to ask why it was not short-listed. The closing date for receiving bids was 18 July.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when her Department expects to complete the tender for providing financial advice in relation to CDC Capital Partners. [69054]

Clare Short: It is currently envisaged that the contract will be awarded on 25 July, with the new contract taking effect from 1 August 2002.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of the effectiveness of CDC Capital

Partners in improving the export competitiveness of lesser developed countries; and if she will make a statement. [69172]

Clare Short: None.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the background investigations performed on service providers tendering expressions of interest in providing financial advice in relation to CDC Capital Partners. [69046]

Clare Short: None. No background investigations have been performed.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations her Department has received regarding private investors' expressions of investment interest in CDC Capital Partners since 1999; and which private investors expressed investment interest and when. [69049]

Clare Short: No direct representations have been received.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what responses she has received, and when, to her Department's notice seeking expressions of interest from financial advice service providers in providing her Department with financial advice in relation CDC Capital Partners. [69057]

Clare Short: As the re-tendering exercise is currently in progress, it would not be appropriate to divulge this information.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if the current performance of CDC Capital Partners' chief executive would trigger a bonus payment. [69053]

Clare Short: Yes. The Chief Executive is eligible for a bonus along with all other CDC employees. Criteria are set each year in line with CDC's business plan. The amount is determined by the Remuneration Committee and, in the case of the Chief Executive, may be discussed with the Department.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the real terms expenditure of CDC Capital Partners was on (a) publicity, (b) advertising and (c) press and public relations in each of the financial years since 1997; and what the figures are for the present year. [69171]

Clare Short: An exact breakdown is not available except at disproportionate cost. CDC retained a UK public relations agency in 1997 and 1998, but stopped their services in mid 1999.

CDC uses consultancies on a project basis, as and when required. CDC has no advertising/sponsorship campaign in place.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how long the contract is for the financial advice service provider in relation to CDC Capital Partners. [69045]

Clare Short: It is currently intended that the contract will be for 24 months, with the possibility of an extension for up to twelve months.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with CDC Capital Partners' senior executives regarding her Department's tender for financial advisers in relation to CDC Capital Partners. [69061]

Clare Short: None.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when the contract of CDC Capital Partners' chief executive expires. [69051]

Clare Short: The contract of the Chief Executive would normally expire on his 60th birthday unless terminated earlier.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the financial advice service providers with whom her Department is negotiating to provide financial advice in relation to CDC Capital Partners. [69059]

Clare Short: It would not be appropriate to divulge which firms have been invited to tender for the financial advice consultancy.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the external consultants and advisors retained and used by her Department in respect of its plans to tender for financial advice in relation to CDC Capital Partners. [69055]

Clare Short: None.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her assessment is of the implementation CDC Capital Partners privatisation plan. [69047]

Clare Short: In the current market conditions, the Government does not believe that it will be possible to sell a majority of CDC's shares in the near future at a price that represents good value for the development assistance programme. We are therefore exploring alternative ways to achieve the objective of the Public Private Partnership, to mobilise increased investment for the benefit of poorer developing countries.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her Department's criteria are for private investors in CDC Capital Partners. [69048]

Clare Short: The willingness of private investors to invest in CDC or to work with CDC in joint ventures or at project level is entirely a commercial matter. Investors will, at the outset, be aware of the distinctive nature of CDC, and its commitment to investing for the benefit of developing countries and to ethical business principles.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what information she has collated in respect of the humanitarian situation in the Sud Kivu region of the Democratic Republic of the Congo; and if she will make a statement. [70329]

Clare Short: We are trying to monitor recent developments in Sud Kivu, particularly the renewed fighting in the Hauts Plateaux region, although the current insecurity and problems of access have made it difficult for the international community to obtain a full picture of what is happening. We are aware of the distressing humanitarian situation for the many people who appear to have been displaced by the recent fighting there. Together with the wider international community and the UN we are pressing for the cessation of all fighting in the eastern DRC, the full implementation of the Lusaka peace accords and for the armed groups to allow full humanitarian access to the areas affected.

We are helping to fund a range of humanitarian support in the Kivus through the UN and international NGOs. My officials are presently visiting this region to monitor progress on current projects, and for discussions with local and international NGOs on the scope for further DFID support for peace and reconciliation-related activities in the area.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of the ~~importance of~~ economic factors in respect of the continuing violence in the east of the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [70330]

Clare Short: The primary factor in the continuing violence in eastern DRC is the absence of a political settlement between the main parties to the conflict and the attempt by forces that supported the genocide in Rwanda to invade the country. The final report of the UN Panel on resource exploitation in the DRC is due in the autumn. We shall study the report carefully and participate fully in the Security Council's deliberations on its recommendations. We are very conscious that the sad history of the Congo has meant that these resources have never been used for the benefit of the people of the Congo. We continue to believe that the surest way of converting resource exploitation into legitimate trade to benefit the Congolese people is to achieve an end to the conflict and restore peace in the region.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations her Department has made to (a) the Government of Rwanda and (b) the Rassemblement Congolais pour la Democratie—Goma on the importance of maintaining peace and security in the east of the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [70331]

Clare Short: My Department maintains regular dialogue with all parties to the conflict in the DRC, including the Government of Rwanda and RCD-Goma. We strongly support the full implementation of the Lusaka accords in order to achieve a lasting peace for the DRC and the wider Great Lakes region.

Angola

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the recent warning by the United Nations on the number of people in Angola facing starvation. [70236]

Clare Short: According to the United Nations, half a million people are facing starvation in Angola and more than a million others are completely dependent on food aid for their survival. The end of the long running civil war has increased the number of people within the reach of the humanitarian agencies by between two million and three million in a matter of months. The needy are widely scattered, with a greater range of needs than ever before.

We are trying to respond as quickly and flexibly as possible. We have so far contributed £1.7 million to the 2002 United Nations appeals for Angola to ensure that critical humanitarian needs are met and to assist in the reception areas for ex UNITA fighters and their families. We await a further UN appeal, which is due later this month. We have also committed over £2 million to the ICRC and MSF, who are at the forefront of the humanitarian response

Zimbabwe

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what reports she has received that refugees in the Tongogara camp have been sexually abused by relief workers affiliated to non-Governmental organisations. [71127]

Clare Short: We understand that the allegations in this case, which relate to a camp in Zimbabwe, have been investigated and that two members of staff of the organisation involved have been dismissed.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) which non-Governmental organisations the Government are assisting to help small scale farmers revive maize production in Zimbabwe; and if she will make a statement on these projects; [70889]

(2) which non-Governmental organisations the Government are assisting to help poor farmers in the communal areas to increase food production in Zimbabwe; and if she will make a statement on these projects. [70894]

Clare Short: The next season for dryland maize planting, which is mostly carried out by small scale farmers in the rural areas, starts in October. We are discussing with a number of NGOs proposals for inputs for planting, and will make allocations shortly.

Burundi

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department has taken to aid the economy of Burundi; and if she will make a statement. [70264]

Clare Short: The UK does not have extensive developmental links with Burundi. We are supporting international efforts to promote an end to conflict and achieve a secure and lasting peace, which we believe is a necessary prerequisite for sustained economic development. We are at the same time supporting humanitarian programmes through non-governmental channels.

The UK has pledged a contribution of just over $1 million towards the Burundi Multilateral Donor Trust Fund (MDTF). This has recently been established with the objective of providing transitional debt relief to Burundi during the period leading to its access to the Enhanced Highly Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative, and to increased inflows of donor assistance. The MDTF will help enable the country's debt to international financial institutions to be serviced in a timely manner. This is supplementary to the £3 million we are planning to spend in bilateral assistance and our contributions to the EU in this financial year. We will also be posting a DFID representative to Burundi to help in the process of donor re-engagement there.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what information her Department has collated in respect of the recent numbers of extra-judicial killings by the Burundian army; and if she will make a statement. [70327]

Clare Short: I am not aware of any recent extra-judicial killings by the Burundian army.

We are however aware of continuing fighting between the Burundian army and Burundian rebel groups and that there has been a recent escalation both around the capital in Bujumbura Rural province, and in the southeast of the country. We welcome the prospect of all the Burundian parties meeting later this month in Tanzania under the auspices of the Arusha Process facilitators to address outstanding issues delaying a full peace agreement.

Food Shortages (Africa)

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the barriers preventing the transportation of the surplus in cereal production in northern Mozambique to areas of the country facing food shortages; what steps her Department is taking to overcome these barriers; and if she will make a statement. [70872]

Clare Short: Along with relevant Government Departments, other donors and NGO's, DFID supported a recent FAO/WFP Crop and Food Supply Assessment Mission in Mozambique. The mission confirmed the forecast export surplus of about 100,000 tonnes of maize, available following increased cereal production in the northern region.

Logistics and traditional trading patterns will result in most of Mozambique's surplus being exported to Malawi and other neighbouring countries — the worst affected countries in the region.

Compared with imported South African grain, high internal transport costs make it uncompetitive to move the maize surplus from the north to deficit areas in the south and parts of the central region. The shortfall in these areas is expected to be covered mainly by food aid and commercial imports. This strategy takes into account the regional context as well as consideration of the options for alleviation within Mozambique.

DFID is commissioning a short consultancy to advise on the most effective contribution we can make to alleviation and future prevention of the Mozambique food security crisis.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with her counterparts in European Union countries on the World Health Organisation appeal for additional resources to help combat starvation in southern Africa. [70494]

Clare Short: We expect the health elements of the crisis to be covered in the country appeals due to be presented this week, and will then consult with other donors on our response.

Northern Africa

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the potential for political conflict arising from a shortage of water in northern Africa; and if she will make a statement. [70492]

Clare Short: My Department is supporting international partnerships advocating integrated water resource management, and is sponsoring research projects looking at ways in which management of transboundary waters can lead to reduced tensions.

The ten countries in the Nile basin recognise the need to work together to manage Nile waters for poverty alleviation, resource protection, and mutually beneficial gains. Working with the World Bank, they have set up the Nile Basin Initiative to pursue the sustainable development and management of the Nile waters. The UK fully supports these efforts.

DFID is providing some funds for the Eastern Nile Technical Regional Office (ENTRO) in Addis Ababa, and plans to support two projects in the Shared Vision Programme, designed to build confidence and the capacity of Nile countries to work effectively together on Nile management.

Uganda

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid is being given to the people of Northern Uganda affected by the civil war between the Ugandan Government and the Lord's Resistance Army. [71369]

Clare Short: Since 2000, DFID has committed almost £2m for conflict resolution programmes in the area. In addition, as an initial short-term response to the recent escalation in insecurity, DFID are providing humanitarian supplies for displaced persons through UNICEF, and supporting a programme for child welfare.

Malawi

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what was the total monetary value of the aid given by the British Government to Malawi in the last financial year; and if she will list the three most important items of this aid. [70763]

Clare Short: Provisional figures indicate that the government provided £48 million to Malawi in the financial year 2001–02. This included £12.5 million in direct budget support. The three most important expenditures by value are in health, education and rural livelihoods sectors.

Environmental Know How Fund

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Malcolm Bruce), of 10 July 2002, Official Report, column 959W, what recommendations were published for, and what assessment she has made of, her Department's involvement in the Environment Poverty Workshop in Albania during 2001–02. [71250]

Clare Short: The purpose of the Government of Albania, DFID and World Bank Poverty and Environment Workshop was to sensitise and raise awareness among a broad stakeholder group of the issues and links surrounding effective environmental management, poverty reduction and economic growth in Albania. This was done in the context of Albania's preparation of a Poverty Reduction Strategy paper. The group agreed several recommendations which have not been published but which were taken into account in the preparation of the Poverty Reduction Strategy. A copy is in the Libraries of the House.

As a result of my Department's involvement in the Workshop, a technical assistance programme has been developed with the Government of Albania, focused on institutionally developing and reforming the Ministry of Environment (formerly the National Environment Agency).

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Malcolm Bruce), of 10 July 2002, Official Report, column 959W, which United Kingdom companies were involved with her Department's work in the Strengthening Partnerships for Municipal Sustainable Development project in Romania during 2001–02. [71249]

Clare Short: WS Aktkins International Limited.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Malcolm Bruce), of 10 July 2002, Official Report, column 959W, if she will outline the (a) aims, (b) methodology and (c) outcomes of the Rural Livelihood Project. [71251]

Clare Short: 1. The main aim of the Rural Partnerships Programme in the Baltics is to enhance the capacity of local communities to improve rural livelihoods on a sustainable basis.

2. The methodology adopted by the project is centred on the use of participatory approaches for communities to assess their problems and needs, and plan and implement solutions and mechanisms for fuller representation through all levels of government. The project provides a range of experts and practitioners of community development and participatory processes, local government, regional development and EU who are transferring knowledge and skills through a number of different ways eg workshops, training, study tours, focus groups and mentoring.

3. The project is working towards achieving six outcomes:

(i) Area based strategies for tackling rural poverty and social exclusion.

(ii) Increased capacity within municipalities in applying participatory approaches and in accessing EU funds.

(iii) Community based projects developed and implemented through partnerships between community groups, NGOs, municipalities and the private sector.

(iv) Enhanced local skill base to manage and influence the rural development agenda.

(v) Improved capacity of rural business support/employment services as effective partners in the local development process.

(vi) National and Regional policy agenda and framework embrace inclusive area based partnership approaches to rural development.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Malcolm Bruce), of 10 July 2002, Official Report, column 959W, which United Kingdom companies have been involved with her Department's work in the Capacity Building on the Public Private Partnership project in Romania during 2001–02. [71248]

Clare Short: Mott MacDonald Limited.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Malcolm Bruce), of 10 July 2002, Official Report, column 959W, (a) what assessment she has made and (b) what recommendations her Department has made of the Rural Livelihood Project in (i) the Baltic states and (ii) Central and Eastern Europe in 2001–02; and if she will make a statement. [71246]

Clare Short: The Baltics Rural Partnerships Programme was formally reviewed in October 2001 and has been monitored on a regular basis since then. It is an institutional building project focused at local and national levels with communities, government, NGOs and Civil Society to enhance the capacity of local communities to improve rural livelihoods. The project is assisting the authorities in the three Baltic countries to change the way regional planning is implemented in line with good EU practice by the introduction of a more participative and bottom-up approach to decision making processes.

DFID assessments have shown that the project is providing value for money in terms of its impact on (i) the progress being made in building local capacity and networks and (ii) links being made into the national policy debate to inform regional policy in preparation for accession to the EU and future effective use of structural funds. Recommendations to the Baltic authorities are made through on-going dialogue between the relevant authorities and institutions in the Baltics and project managers.

The regional Central and Eastern Europe project consisted of a study on the appropriateness of the rural livelihoods approach in transition economies. I will place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Afghanistan

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department provides to internally displaced people in Afghanistan. [71141]

Clare Short: Internally Displaced People (IDPs), are targeted by UN agencies, the Red Cross Movement and non-governmental organisations (NGOs) for the urgent provision of humanitarian assistance. The Afghan Transitional Administration and the international community are working to ensure the reintegration of uprooted Afghans — both IDPs and refugees — who wish to return home. Programmes coordinated by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and the International Organisation for Migration (IOM) are underway to facilitate return, build the capacity of communities to absorb returning families, and integrate short-term programmes with longer-term strategies to ensure sustainable reintegration of returnees. Since September 2001, my Department has contributed £5 million to UNHCR and £4.6 million to IOM for their programmes in the region.

Pacific Rim Plantation

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations her Department has received regarding (a) erosion and (b) soil degradation resulting from the Pacific Rim Plantation. [69040]

Clare Short: In 2000 my Department received representations from Down to Earth and a number of Indonesian NGOs about possible deforestation/land issues at two palm oil plantations in which CDC had invested in Indonesia. In 2001 representations were received from Friends of the Earth concerning deforestation issues in Papua New Guinea. I am content that CDC looked into the allegations fully.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations her Department has received regarding the Pacific Rim Plantations environmental effect on Queen Alexandra's Birdwing butterfly habitat. [69039]

Clare Short: In 2001 my Department received representations by Friends of the Earth in relation to conservation of the Queen Alexandra's Birdwing Butterfly. The butterfly's habitat is in a province of Papua New Guinea where CDC has invested in the establishment of new oil palm plantations.

Great Lakes Region

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of the (a) World Bank and (b) IMF policy towards states in the Great Lakes region. [70328]

Clare Short: The World Bank and IMF both have key roles to play in the Great Lakes region in supporting programmes for the demobilisation and reintegration of armed groups, post-conflict reconstruction and longer term economic development, and I believe the two institutions are approaching these tasks constructively. However the primary requirement remains to achieve a settlement of the Great Lakes conflict, without which no regeneration programmes can be successful. We continue to believe that full re-engagement by the Bank and IMF in the Democratic Republic of the Congo should be contingent upon achievement of an inclusive political settlement as provided for under the Lusaka peace accords.

Consultation

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) how long her Department allowed for consultation on each consultation document it published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form; [70467]

(2) whether consultation documents published by her Department in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations; [70468]

(3) in what format her Department has published the results of its 2001 written consultations; [70469]

(4) how many consultation documents published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form her Department has monitered and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations; [70470]

(5) how many complaints her Department has received about its 2001 consultations in (a) electronic and (b) printed form; [70471]

(6) which consultation documents published by her Department in 2001 were not made available as paper copies; [70472]

(7) whether her Department has a designated consultation co-ordinator in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70473]

Clare Short: We attach considerable importance to engaging with a wide range of groups across society on our international development work, for example through our Development Policy Forums, publications and briefing notes on major international meetings. However, the nature of the issues for which my department is responsible mean that formal consultation processes are likely to be of interest only to a limited range of people. So while we take account of the principles set out in the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations, and have appointed a designated consultation co-ordinator in accordance with the Code, we do not regard our consultation activities as generally falling within the full provisions of the Code.

In 2001 we carried out limited consultations on one DFID Target Strategy Paper:

(a) "Meeting the Challenge of Urban Poverty" which was made available for public consultation from November 2000 until 12 January 2001. The final document was published in April 2001.

The consultation document was made available in print, and in electronic form via the DFID website. It is DFID practice to make consultation documents available in print and on line until the publication of the finished document. No complaints were received in 2001 regarding this document. At the close of the consultation period the results were published as a final DFID Target Strategy Paper.

HIV/AIDS

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money the Government have spent on HIV/AIDS prevention and treatment programmes in developing countries in each year since 1997. [70493]

Clare Short: Under my department's bilateral programmes we have spent the following amounts on HIV/AIDS related work in developing countries;

	£ million
1997–98	38
1998–99	45
1999–2000	75
2000–01	125
2001–02	200 (provisional)

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to the answer of 11 July, ref 68323, on HIV/AIDS, on what occasions HIV/AIDS related projects funded by her Department have been changed following impact assessments. [71136]

Clare Short: Examples of changes made to our HIV/AIDS programmes following impact assessments include:

1. Zambia — a project to inform adolescents about HIV/AIDS was not reaching its intended audience. We have since co-funded a follow-on project which is better designed to reach young adults through their peers.

2. Cambodia — a brand of condom targeted at young people was found to be too closely associated with commercial sex. Consideration is being given to how the brand of condom can be repositioned.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to the answer of 11 July, 2002, ref. 68323, on HIV/AIDS, what action her Department is taking to ensure information of good practice in high impact projects is shared for the benefit of other projects seeking to tackle the HIV/AIDS virus. [71135]

Clare Short: Regular contact between sectoral and geographical departments, including through our HIV/AIDS multi-sectoral task force, helps ensure that lesson learnt about the epidemic are disseminated widely, both internally and externally to DFID. Our communications systems have also been improved significantly and provide ready access to up to date technical guidance (including UNAIDS' best practice) and lessons learned from programmes. We are also working closely with other government departments to ensure a consistent government approach to the epidemic.

Medicines

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what records her Department keeps of the (a) quantity and (b) type of medicines donated by UK drugs companies to developing countries. [70499]

Clare Short: The Government does not keep records of the quantity or type of medicines donated by UK drugs companies to developing countries.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what steps she is taking to prevent the donation of expired and nearly expired medicines to developing countries; [70496]

(2) what guidelines exist to ensure that medicines donated by UK drugs companies to developing countries are suitable for the needs of the recipient country; [70507]

(3) what steps she is taking to ensure medicines donated to developing countries are (a) properly labelled and (b) written in the language of the recipient country. [70497]

Clare Short: My Department worked closely with the World Health Organisation (WHO) to produce their "Guidelines for Drug Donations".

The WHO guidelines clearly set out inter alia that drug donations should: constitute a sustainable contribution to government health strategies in developing countries; be based on need and relevant to the disease pattern of recipient countries; have at least 1 year remaining shelf life; be of a quality which complies with the standards of donor and recipient countries; be properly labelled and written in the language of the recipient country; and only provided after consultation and at the request of the recipient.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the impact the donation of free medicines from drug companies has had on local drugs markets in developing countries. [70498]

Clare Short: The Government worked closely with the World Health Organisation (WHO) to produce their guidelines on drug donations. These guidelines clearly set out that drug donations should only be provided after consultation and at the request of the recipient.

WHO is responsible for monitoring the impact of drug donations on developing countries. In discussions with them, we have received no evidence that UK donations have undermined local drug markets.

Departmental Report

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the cost was of publishing her Department's annual report for each of the past five years. [70480]

Clare Short: The cost of publishing my Department's Annual Report for each of the last five years is as follows:

Year	£'000
1998	34
1999	65
2000	98
2001	107
2002	82

WORK AND PENSIONS

Housing Benefit

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average processing time was for housing benefit in each local authority area in Scotland for each of the last six years; and if he will make a statement. [69491]

Malcolm Wicks: Prior to the introduction of Best Value performance indicators in April 2000, information was not collected from local authorities on the length of time taken to process Housing Benefit claims.

Performance indicators for Scotland are the responsibility of the Accounts Commission for Scotland. Information on the average time taken by each local authority in Scotland to process new Housing Benefit claims for 2000–01 is in the Accounts Commission publication "Performance Indicators 2000–01: Benefits, Finance and Corporate Issues", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of housing benefit claimants received their payment within the Government's 14-day target in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [65861]

Malcolm Wicks: Information is not available in the format requested.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when findings from the housing benefit review will be published. [61384]

Malcolm Wicks: The first publication of findings from the housing benefit review is expected in Autumn 2003.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many prosecutions for fraud were undertaken by staff employed by his Department and its agencies in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000 and (d) 2000–01; and how many of these were successful. [69858]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 15 July 2002]: In each year since 1997, over 98 per cent of prosecutions carried out by the Department and its agencies have resulted in convictions. Information on the number of prosecutions is in the table.

Department for Work and Pensions investigations

Year	Prosecutions	Cautions and penalties as an alternative to prosecution	Total
1997–98	11,700	—	11,700
1998–99	10,238	2,835	13,073
1999–2000	9,124	11,029	20,153
2000–01	11,403	15,555	26,958

Benefit Fraud Investigation Service and Benefits Agency Security Investigation Service

Notes:

(1) The data on cautions and penalties for 1998–99 is derived from the database preceding the current database and there may be some overlap with 1999–2000.

(2) Administrative penalties, as an alternative to prosecution, were introduced by the Social Security Administration (Fraud) Act (1997) with effect from December 1998.

(3) From 1 April 2002, the Benefit Fraud Investigation Service became the Counter Fraud Investigation Service and the Benefits Agency Security Investigation Service became the Counter Fraud Investigation Division Operations.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases of benefit fraud were established as a result of investigations carried out by the Benefits Agency in each year since 1997; and how many of these resulted in prosecutions. [45329]

Malcolm Wicks: For the number of cases of benefit fraud established as a result of investigations carried out by the Benefits Agency in each year since 1997 I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton (Mr. Nick Gibb) on 16 July 2002, Official Report, column 88W.

For the number of prosecutions, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton (Mr. Nick Gibb) on 9 January 2002, Official Report, column 923W.

Benefits Take-up

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of (a) the numbers of persons eligible for benefit who have not taken up their entitlement and (b) the total value of unclaimed benefits. [69734]

Malcolm Wicks: The latest available information is published in "Income Related Benefits—Estimates of Take-Up 1999–2000", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Alignment Payments

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list all of the circumstances in which (a) interim payments and (b) alignment payments are made. [67859]

Malcolm Wicks: Interim payments are discretionary payments on account of benefit which can be made to avoid hardship where the Decision Maker is satisfied that the basic conditions of entitlement for the benefit are met. Interim payments can be made in a number of circumstances:

where a benefit claim has been made but cannot immediately be determined and the delay is not the fault of the customer; in an emergency. This covers a variety of different situations from civil emergencies to industrial action; where a claim has not been made in the correct manner but it is not the fault of the customer, for example because the claim form has been completed incorrectly by a visiting officer;

while an appeal is ongoing but the customer clearly has some residual entitlement to benefit;

Interim payments follow the same payment cycles and periods as the main benefit being claimed and are not made before the person's first benefit pay day. The amount of any payment is recoverable from the main benefit when it is awarded.

"Alignment payment" is an administrative term used to describe Social Fund crisis loans made to help with day to day living expenses to people awaiting a first payment of benefit which is paid in arrears. Any crisis loans made under these circumstances will cover the recipients' needs until their first benefit pay day, following which full or interim payments of benefit can be made. Alignment payments can also be made to people moving from benefit into work who need financial help until they receive their first wage.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 1 July, Official Report, column 95W, on alignment payments, over what time alignment payments have to be repaid. [67861]

Malcolm Wicks: As with all Social Fund loans, the period over which crisis loan alignment payments are repaid varies depending upon the size of the loan and the weekly repayment rate. Repayment rates are flexible and take account of each individual's financial position.

New Deal

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of those going through the new deal for (a) long-term 25-plus, (b) 50-plus, (c) lone parents and (d) new deal 18–24 left for (i) unsubsidised employment, (ii) transferred to another benefit, (iii) left for an unknown reason and (iv) left for an unknown destination in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [66822]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Information on the destination of people leaving New Deal 50 plus is not available. The only measure of participation in the programme is the number of people who move into work and claim the programme's in-work financial support, the Employment Credit. Up to April 2002, nearly 70,000 people had been helped into work through New Deal 50plus.

The information on the other New Deals is in the table. In addition to those leaving for unsubsidised employment, independent surveys have shown that a significant proportion of leavers to unknown destinations also find work. For example, over 50 per cent of people leaving New Deal for Young People for unknown destinations move into work.

Destination of participants leaving New Deal programmes (April 2001–March 2002)

Programme	Total Leavers	per cent of leavers moving into unsubsidised employment	per cent of leavers moving on to other benefits	per cent of leavers moving for other known reason[1]	per cent of leavers moving to unknown destinations[2]
New Deal for Young People	178,500	37.2	11.6	19.7	31.5
New Deal 25 plus	63,600	29.7	21.2	29.7	19.4
New Deal for Lone Parents	90,720	57.4	1.1	34.0	7.5

Notes:

[1] Other known reasons include moving into education or training or moving abroad.

[2] Includes participants leaving the New Deal programmes for an unknown reason.

Universal Bank

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest assessment is of the implementation costs of the Universal Bank. [70017]

Malcolm Wicks: Contracts are in place between the Government and Post Office Ltd for the provision of the new card account at the Post Office. Elements of the set-up costs are included in the contract, but information on detailed implementation costs is a commercial matter for Post Office Ltd.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will make a statement on the progress of the Universal Bank towards meeting its April 2003 deadline for the provision of banking services to benefit claimants; [70014]

(2) what progress is being made with the Universal Bank; and if he will make a statement; [70018]

(3) what his assessment is of the viability of the April 2003 implementation date for the Universal Bank; [70019]

(4) what contingency plans are in place should the April 2003 deadline for the payment of all benefits via automated credit transfer not be met. [70020]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the Written Answer given to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) on Friday 5 July 2002, Official Report, column 630W.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of benefit recipients received their benefit payments via automated credit transfer in each year since the introduction of ACT. [70013]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given to the hon. Member for Weston-super-Mare (Mr. Brian Cotter) on 26 February 2002, Official Report, column 1263W.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people receive benefits by (a) automated credit transfer and (b) other methods, broken down in each case into recipients of each of the main benefits. [68485]

Malcolm Wicks: Statistical information, by benefit, is collected quarterly on the number of customers currently receiving benefit by ACT and other methods.

The table below is based on information available at March 2002 and shows the number of people that receive their benefits by ACT and other methods of payment, broken down into each of the main benefits.

For ease of reference, the figures have been rounded to the nearest 5,000 and the numbers paid by other methods are mainly by order book and girocheques with a small number of payable orders.

Benefit	Customers	Number Paid by ACT	Number Paid by Other Methods
Attendance Allowance	430,000	280,000	150,000
Child Benefit	7,005,000	3,145,000	3,860,000
Disability Living Allowance	1,925,000	795,000	1,130,000
Incapacity Benefit	1,465,000	485,000	980,000
Income Support	3,950,000	695,000	3,255,000
Invalid Care Allowance	400,000	75,000	325,000
Jobseeker's Allowance	800,000	208,000	590,000
Retirement Pension, Widows Benefit & Bereavement Benefit	10,250,000	5,175,000	5,075,000
Veterans Agency (War Pension)	270,000	155,000	115,000

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many, and what proportion of, benefit claimants have had bank accounts that are compatible with automated credit transfer in each year since 1997. [68484]

Malcolm Wicks: The table below sets out the number and percentage of benefit customers with access to ACT compatible bank accounts. These are estimated figures, taken from the annual Family Resources Survey. Figures for 2001–02 are not yet available.

	Customers with ACT Compatible Accounts
Year	Number	Percentage
1997–98	17,830,000	83
1998–99	17,920,000	84
1999–2000	17,830,000	84
2000–01	17,590,000	83

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made in discussions with the European Commission about winter fuel payments being available to people in EEA countries. [72209]

Mr. McCartney: We have now concluded our discussions with the European Commission with regard to the extent of the UK Government's responsibilities under European law. As a result, generally EEA nationals who first qualify for a Winter Fuel Payment in the UK and currently reside in another EEA country may now be entitled to Winter Fuel payments. We will publicise the change, and give details of the claims procedure.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what plans he has to introduce further measures to give the Child Support Agency power to take action against parents not paying their rightful alimony; [67043]

(2) what action he will take to provide further support to single parents whose former partners are avoiding paying their rightful contribution to their child's upbringing. [67044]

Malcolm Wicks: The purpose of the child support reforms is to ensure that more children receive the maintenance that is their right.

To achieve this, the Government has legislated, in the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Act 2000, for a new child support scheme. This is simpler than the current scheme. This reduction in complexity will translate into fewer resources being required for initial and further assessment of cases, enabling more resources to be put into ensuring that liabilities are enforced.

To support the Child Support Agency in its administration of the new scheme, a new IT system is being built. The new scheme will only be introduced when the technical backup necessary to make a success of the scheme is in place. The combination of modern technology, informing the staff of the Child Support Agency of a failure to pay maintenance, and the Agency having more resources to act on that information, should ensure that maintenance due to children is paid.

In further support of the new scheme, to deter those seeking to avoid their responsibilities, section 13 of the Act created two new criminal offences, of failing to give information and of knowingly giving false information. Conviction for either of these offences carries fines of up to £1,000. The provision has been in force since last year.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to introduce the changes to the CSA; and if he will make a statement. [70799]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement made to the House on 20 March 2002 by my right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State (Mr. Darling), Official Report, columns 315–324W.

Decision Making

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will publish his report into the standards of decision making in the Benefits Agency, Child Support Agency and Employment Service for 2000–01. [72210]

Maria Eagle: The report has been laid before Parliament today (HC 1017).

This is the first report under the new decision making and appeals system introduced by the Social Security Act 1998. It covers the period 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001, the first full year of operation of the new regime. The report shows variable standards in performance. As the report explains, steps have been taken to improve performance in all areas.

Post Office (Cash Payments)

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what actions his Department is taking to promote the use by benefit and pension recipients of cash payments from post offices from 2003 onwards. [70847]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 18 July 2002]: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Weston-super-Mare (Mr. Brian Cotter) on 11 June 2002, Official Report, column 874W.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the percentage of benefit and pension recipients who will wish to collect their benefit moneys (a) in cash from a post office and (b) by ACT payments in (i) 2003, (ii) 2004, (iii) 2005, (iv) 2006 and (v) 2007. [70848]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 18 July 2002]: Between 2003 and 2005 we will move to paying all benefits and pensions direct into bank accounts ("automated credit transfer" or ACT). Already over 40 per cent of customers are paid this way.

Even where a customer is paid directly into an account, they can still collect their cash at the post office, either through existing Network Banking arrangements between Post Office Ltd and several banks or, from 2003, through universal banking services at post offices. We have not estimated how many customers will choose to access their accounts at post offices, but research suggests that many will do so.

Pension Inquiry

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the recently started pension inquiry will be completed; and if he will make a statement on the methodology of this inquiry. [68993]

Ruth Kelly: I been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Bill Wiggin dated 9 July 2002:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question on the pension inquiry. I am replying in his absence. (68993)

The National Statistician announced the review of pension contribution statistics in a statement on 2 July. The terms of reference, which have been placed in the House of Commons Library, state that the review should be completed by the end of September 2002.

The objectives of the review are:

To establish what information is needed, in terms of frequency, scope and quality, and to advise on the best available data.

To comment specifically on the quality, coverage and methodology of the range of sources of private pension contribution statistics available.

To advise on how this data should be presented.

To recommend appropriate action.

The panel will include representatives from ONS, industry, academic experts, the Department for Work and Pensions, Inland Revenue, HM Treasury and the Government Actuary's Department.

Pensions Schemes

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to support defined benefit occupational pension schemes with taxation breaks. [69996]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The Government keeps all taxes under review as part of the normal Budget process.

The Government already provides very generous tax relief to encourage saving in pensions for retirement, including upfront income tax relief and tax-free lump sums on retirement, at a cost to the Exchequer of over £14 billion a year.

Council Tax

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to adjust arrangements for council tax benefit restriction (a) thresholds and (b) caps in 2003–04. [68889]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him on 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 383W.

Consultation Documents

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the public consulations undertaken by his Department since 1997, indicating for each consultation (a) if copies were available online, (b) if copies were available in print, (c) the date the time period given for responses opened and (d) the date the time period given for responses closed. [69802]

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how long the Department allowed for consultation on each consultation document it published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form. [70083]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government's code of practice applies to written consultations which have a national impact on policy and services from January 2001. The Department for Work and Pensions came into being in June 2001. All copies of consultation documents are published online on both the Department for Work and Pensions and UK Online websites. Paper copies are also available.

The Department for Work and Pensions follows the Cabinet Office's guidance on written consultation that sets 12 weeks as the standard minimum period for a consultation. The table lists the consultations the Department has begun, or completed since 8 June 2001. There were two occasions where shorter consultations have been conducted, and the reasons for this are included in the table. All the Department's consultations are published electronically with paper copies available.

Title of consultation	Start date	End Date	Period in weeks	Reason for shorter consultation
Changes to Invalid Care Allowance	July 2001	July 2001	12

Equality, opportunity, and independence for all [RRAA]	May 2002	September 2002	17

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many consultation documents published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form his Department has monitored and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultations. [69845]

Malcolm Wicks: In accordance with the Government's guidance on written consultation the Department for Work and Pensions evaluates all written consultation documents.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints his Department has received about its 2001 consultations by (a) electronic and (b) printed means. [69829]

Malcolm Wicks: Of the consultations published by the Department of Work and Pensions since its inception, we have received one complaint on one document. This concerned the clarity of the wording of a specific proposal. Officials ensured that the point was clarified and gave additional time for a response, resolving the issue to the satisfaction of all parties.

Devolution

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the EU Advisory Committee on incentives in the field of employment is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [67738]

Malcolm Wicks: The Committee on Community measures in the field of employment is due to meet next on 12 November 2002. Each Member State can only have one representative and for the UK the representative is drawn from the Department for Work and Pensions. That is because the business of the Committee is largely about the European Employment Strategy and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions has lead responsibility for the Strategy. However, my right hon. Friends the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, the Scottish Executive Ministers, Secretaries of the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Executive Ministers also have an interest. There is close contact between relevant officials to ensure that Ministerial responsibility is properly represented.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the EU Committee of the European Social Fund is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [67741]

Malcolm Wicks: The Committee of the European Social Fund (ESF) is next due to meet on 27 September 2002. Representatives from the Scottish Executive have attended the Committee but are not members.

Funeral Grant

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the cost of an average funeral; what the value is of the funeral grant; what items it covers; and he will make a statement. [67596]

Malcolm Wicks: We are committed to providing a payment for a respectful funeral to people receiving income-related benefits or tax credits who have good reason for organising the funeral. Social Fund Funeral Payments provide help with necessary funeral charges; the items covered are set out in regulation 7 of the Social Fund Maternity and Funeral Expenses (General) Regulations 1987, as amended, which are available in the Library.

In addition, up to £600 is allowed for other funeral expenses. This gives the person arranging the funeral the freedom to select the items or services they consider appropriate.

Funeral arrangements vary widely in expense and type across the country and it is not possible to price an average funeral. However, the average Funeral Payment award in 2000–2001 was £892. We keep the level of support provided to people with funeral costs under review.

Press Subscriptions

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the magazines and periodicals subscribed to by his Department, stating for each subscription (i) the number of copies taken, and (ii) the annual cost. [52836]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 26 April 2002]: Details of subscriptions taken by the Department's library and legal library have been placed in the Library. Subscriptions may also be taken at local level and information about these is not collected centrally.

Buildings Value

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the buildings owned by his Department and estimate the market value of each of them. [66942]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary (Paul Boateng) on 3 July, Official Report, column 339W.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Domestic Violence

Vera Baird: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many hours of training are provided for judges and magistrates in relation to domestic violence. [68318]

Yvette Cooper: Judicial Training is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board (JSB) which is an independent non-departmental public body. It is chaired by Lord Justice Waller.

All newly appointed part-time judges, and all judges who are authorised to hear family cases, are required to attend a residential Induction course in the relevant jurisdiction. Thereafter, both full- and part-time judges attend residential continuation seminars every 3 years in each jurisdiction they exercise. The amount of training time provided on Domestic Violence in JSB courses and seminars is shown in the annexed table. Many judges also attend locally organised conferences.

In addition all full and part-time judges sitting in the Crown Court attend an annual one-day Circuit Seminar on sentencing issues, for which the theme last year was Domestic Violence. This provided, on average, up to 5 hours of additional training on this subject in 2000–2001

Although the overall framework for the training of magistrates is set by the JSB, statutory responsibility for delivery of training lies with individual Magistrates' Courts Committees. Information on the number of hours training on domestic Information on the number of hours training on domestic violence provided to magistrates in each committee area could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Open Source Software

Brian White: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what his policy is towards using open source software; and what percentage is used in his Department. [69321]

Yvette Cooper: The Lord Chancellor's Department ICT Strategy (www.courtservice.gov.uk/info/reps/ict_strategy.pdf) is committed to the use of open standards and the Department will follow the Government policy on the use of Open Source Software which is due to be published later in the summer. The draft policy on this subject is currently available at http://www.govtalk.gov.uk/rfc/rfc_document.asp?docnum=429.

No percentage figures are available for usage within the Department, however the current deployment of Open Source Software is limited to a small number of specialist applications.

County Court Judgments

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans there are to take payment of fines, pursuant to County Court judgments by switch and debit cards. [69975]

Yvette Cooper: County Court judgments are principally paid directly to the person who is owed the money. Court leaflets advise the defendant to liaise with the claimant on which method of payment is most suitable, but suggest using a method which provides proof of payment. The only circumstance where payment of a judgment debt will be accepted by a court is where enforcement has been initiated, for example through a bailiff's warrant. In 2000 the Court Service piloted a system which gave the defendant the option of paying his/her judgment debt by debit card. The take up rate of this service was very low so it was decided not to implement this system across the courts at that time. We will keep this issue under review.

At present fines issued by county court judges for contempt of court can only be paid by cash or cheque. The Court Service is considering ways of providing court users with more choices in a number of areas, including payment methods. For instance, users can already issue a claim on line via the internet and pay the fee for that claim using a debit or credit card.

European Parliamentary Elections

Mr. Drew: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what consultations were entered into with hon. Members prior to the second reading of the European Parliamentary Elections Bill [Lords]; [71262]

(2) what research his Department has undertaken on open lists, with specific reference to the European Parliamentary Elections Bill [Lords]. [71263]

Yvette Cooper: The European Parliamentary Elections Bill is a consolidation Bill, which re-states in a single Bill the law currently contained in a number of Acts, without any change to its substance. It was considered by the Joint Committee on Consolidation Bills, a committee of both Houses, in the usual way.

Fines

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what proportion of fine-defaulters were in full time employment since 1990. [65123]

Yvette Cooper [pursuant to her reply, 9 July]: This information is currently not collected centrally. In 1994–1995, the Home Office conducted a survey of 2,000 offenders who appeared in means courts. It found that only 20 per cent of male and 11 per cent of female offenders in the sample had any sort of job. We are considering ways to collect more information on the means of offenders.

Ambulance Staff (Attacks)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many offenders have been prosecuted by the Crown Prosecution Service in 2002 for attacks against ambulance service staff. [71101]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to reply. The Crown Prosecution Service do not hold this information centrally and could only provide it at a disproportionate cost.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Temporary Staff

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost to his Department was of employing staff in (a) London and (b) south-east from employment agencies in each year since 1997. [56514]

Mr. MacShane: [holding answer of 16 May]: The cost to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office from employing staff in London and the south east from employment agencies in each financial year since 1997 is as follows:

Financial Year	£
1997–98	445,944
1998–99	804,788
1999–2000	971,657
2000–01	1,255,817
2001–02	1,933,841

Western Sahara

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by UK representatives to the UN Security Council concerning the General Secretary's special report on Western Sahara to be discussed on 31 July; and if he will make a statement. [70942]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UN Secretary General asked Security Council members to choose a suitable direction for his special envoy James Baker to pursue in helping the parties find a solution to the dispute in Western Sahara.

We have been working with all Security Council members in New York and in their capitals, and have consulted the parties and interested observers in an effort to reach a consensus direction before 31 July.

HMG continues to support the efforts of the United Nations Secretary General in trying to find a just and durable resolution to the dispute.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what visits to the Western Sahara have been made by UK diplomatic staff in the past year; which (a) individuals and (b) organisations they met; and if he will make a statement. [70943]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Five members of UK diplomatic staff from our Embassies in Rabat and New York have visited Western Sahara in the last year.

The primary purpose of these was to visit MINURSO. Where time and schedules allowed they met as wide a range of Moroccan and Saharawi interests groups as possible. They also met UNHCR and OAU representatives.

Sudan

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Sudanese Government regarding its willingness to ratify the Convention Against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman and Degrading Treatment or Punishment. [71371]

Mr. MacShane: The Sudanese government has signed the Convention Against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman and Degrading Treatment or Punishment. The Embassy in Khartoum has regularly lobbied the Government of Sudan to ratify the Convention. The Head of the joint FCO/DFID Sudan Unit also lobbied the Government of Sudan last month. We expect the Sudanese Government to present a Bill to Parliament in the near future.

Indonesia

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent violence in the Moluccas Islands directed towards Christians and other minorities by the Liskar Jihad movement, and the breakdown of the Malino Peace Agreement between the Christian and Muslim communities. [70773]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Tensions remain high in the Moluccas with Christian and Muslim extremists trying to undermine the Malino Agreement. HMG deplores the continuing violence. The Indonesian Government is taking steps to improve coordination between the army, police and the civilian governor, including the appointment of a new regional military commander. A National Investigation Team has been appointed by the President to assess the progress of the Malino Agreement and to draw attention to areas of concern. We have offered to share with police officers in the Moluccas the UK experience of policing inter-communal conflict.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the UK Government are taking to encourage the Indonesian Government to promote inter-faith dialogue between the groups and to prosecute persons responsible for inciting violence between religious communities. [70774]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The FCO is sponsoring a visit to Indonesia by a mixed-faith delegation of Westminster Parliamentarians from 28 July to 2 August. The visit aims, amongst other things, to discuss inter-faith initiatives in Indonesia. The UK Government supports the Malino Agreement for the Moluccas and encourages the Indonesian Government to pursue inter-faith solutions to communal conflict.

Indonesian authorities have arrested Laskar Jihad leader Ja'far Umar Thalib and Maluku Sovereignty Front leader Alex Manuputty, and are pursuing prosecutions against them. They have also sent additional judges and prosecuters to the Moluccas to tackle a back-log of criminal cases.

Nepal

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Nepal regarding reports of unlawful killings by Government security forces; and if he will make a statement. [71479]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have consistently made clear to the Nepalese government the need for Nepal to fulfill its international obligations in the field of human rights, and to investigate in a fair and transparent way any allegations of abuses of human rights. We have raised this issue with the Nepalese government at all levels and on numerous occasions. We have also lobbied in conjunction with other EU Member States to ensure the investigation of recent allegations of abuses by security forces in the Chitwan district—an investigation which led to disciplinary action being taken by the Army. We also lobbied for the investigation of recent allegations concerning the fate of the journalist Krishna Sen. We have made clear that continued international support for Nepal is dependent on firm action being taken to maintain human rights and investigate allegations of human rights abuses.

China

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he had during his visit to China about trade. [69698]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary had a substantive discussion with Foreign Minister Tang Jiaxuan, during which our commercial interests in the oil and gas, ports and aerospace sectors were raised. In addition, the state of our bilateral commercial relationship was discussed more generally during talks with President Jiang Zemin.

Macedonia

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to send observers to the parliamentary elections in Macedonia on 15 September. [69778]

Mr. MacShane: The UK attaches great importance to the forthcoming parliamentary elections in Macedonia. Holding these elections successfully and peacefully will be an important step in Macedonia's progress towards integration into Euro-Atlantic structures. To support this process, the UK will be sending seventy-five short-term observers (deployed for a week), two medium-term observers (for three weeks) and three long-term observers who will be on the ground for six weeks. This is, as is normal, 10 per cent of the OSCE total.

European Security and Defence Policy

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place a copy of the Ankara Document laying out the participation of non-EU NATO member countries in the ESDP in the Library. [71564]

Mr. Straw: No. The arrangement for the participation of non-EU NATO member countries in ESDP are still under negotiation between the EU and NATO, and it would not assist the process of negotiation for the document to be made public.

Export Controls

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the annual report on strategic export controls will be published. [72211]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The 2001 annual report on Strategic Export Controls is being published today. It covers arms export licensing decisions and exports in 2001, as well as domestic and international policy developments. Since 1997, the reports have established themselves as among the most transparent produced by any arms exporting country, giving Parliament and public the ability to scrutinise our export licensing policy as never before. This year's Report will be a clear restatement of that commitment to accountability and transparency in Strategic Export controls. The report will be available on the FCO website (www.fco.gov.uk) and through the Stationery Office.

Gibraltar

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the dates of meetings that have taken place between British and Spanish ministers under the Brussels Process since it was set in place. [70625]

Peter Hain: On 10 April 1980 Lord Carrington and the Spanish Foreign Minister (Sr Oreja) agreed a joint statement (the Lisbon Declaration) "to start negotiations aimed at overcoming all the differences between them on Gibraltar". On 27 November 1984, Sir Geoffrey Howe and the Spanish Foreign Minister (Sr Moran) agreed the Brussels Communique which established a formal negotiating process under the Lisbon Declaration. The Brussels Communique stated that "Both sides accept that the issues of sovereignty will be discussed in that process". Between November 1984 and February 1999 more than 60 meetings (including 16 at ministerial level) were held under the Brussels Process. Since the relaunch of the Brussels Process in July 2001, three ministerial meetings have been held (on 26 July 2001, 20 November 2001 and 4 February 2002).

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who will construct the wording for any referendum in Gibraltar concerning its future status. [70722]

Peter Hain: No decisions have been made on the timing or modalities of any referendum because there is no Agreement to have a referendum about.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what estimate she has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Docman IT project for the Serious Fraud Office by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49668]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 17 April 2002]: The original contract, which covered the Docman project as well as the provision of internal IT services was signed in January 1998.

The reasons for taking the PFI route were:

The size of the task was too great for the SFO to manage in house;

The main task was the creation of an on-line document management system and this represented a major item of software which was to be written by suppliers;

The contract transferred the majority of the project risk to the suppliers;

The contract included a significant element of service, which permitted the suppliers to be paid in terms of the number of cases using the completed system.

The whole project represented value for money. It is not practical to quantify the savings, which would have been made from adopting the PFI route as opposed to a non PFI route as the Docman project did not proceed on the lines planned. The contract was amended in September 2000 to exclude the Docman project. This is now being carried forward separately on a non-PFI basis. The first case went live on the Docman system in June 2002.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General how many staff have contributed to her Department's input to the Spending Review. [68683]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 12 July 2002]: The Spending Review involves a comprehensive assessment of the performance priorities and resource requirements of all the Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible and a range of staff make a contribution.

Performance Targets

Tony Wright: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will list the performance targets that her Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies are required to meet, apart from those set out in the public service agreements for 1999 to 2002 and 2001 to 2004; and if she will specify for each target (a) who sets it and (b) who monitors achievement against it. [60460]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 10 June 2002]: There are many performance targets contained in public service agreements or service delivery agreements that affect the Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible. Government targets set and monitored centrally cover a range of initiatives and projects. The information provided below is based on additional performance targets:

Crown Prosecution Service

Apart from those set out in the public service agreements for 1999–2002 and 2001 to 2004, the CPS Business Plan for 2002–03 requires the following targets to be met:

Serving committal papers to the defence within agreed timescales in 80 per cent of cases.

Submitting briefs to counsel within agreed timescales in 83.5 per cent of cases.

Reducing to 6 per 100,000 the number of cases dismissed on a submission of no case to answer in the magistrates' courts which are attributable to failures in the review process.

Reducing to 5 cases per 1,000 the number of nonjury acquittals in the Crown Court which are attributable to failures in the review process.

Increasing to 86 per cent the proportion of relevant cases where the prosecution comply with statutory duties of primary disclosure.

Increasing to 83 per cent the proportion of relevant cases where the prosecution comply with statutory duties of secondary disclosure.

Increasing to 7 per cent the proportion of advocates whose performance is significantly above normal requirements.

Targets are set by the CPS Board and achievement against targets is monitored quarterly by the CPS Resources and Performance Group, who report to the CPS Board.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor's Department has one published target whish is not incorporated in the current Public Service Agreements. This relates to ill-health retirements. The Treasury Solicitor's Department will be seeking to achieve a level of ill health retirements consistent with or better than the best quartile of 3.72 retirements per 1,000 employees by 2005. The target is st by the Attorney General and achievement is monitored by the Treasury Solicitor.

HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate

The purpose of the Inspectorate is to promote continuous improvement in the efficiency, effectiveness and fairness of the prosecution services within a joined-up criminal justice system through a process of inspection and evaluation, the provision of advice and the identification of good practice.

The Inspectorate strives to achieve excellence in all aspects of its activities and in particular to provide customers and stakeholders with consistent and professional inspection and evaluation processes together with advice and guidance, all measured against recognised quality standards and defined performance levels.

In the year 2002–03 the Inspectorate is committed to:

completing the first cycle of inspections of CPS Areas and Headquarters Directorates; consulting with CPS Headquarters and Areas on its approach to, and the planning and organisation of, the second cycle;

commencing the second cycle of CPS inspection activity; undertaking the pilot inspection of Manchester Customs and Excise prosecution function; conducting a joint inspection of West Midlands with HM Inspectorate of Constabulary and HM Magistrates' Courts Service Inspectorate; continuing with thematic and joint inspection activity.

The Inspectorate's strategic plan for 2002–05 contains four strategic objectives and its Business Plan for 2002–03 contains 28 objectives which, taken together, provide the targets against which current Inspectorate performance will be judged.

These objectives are systematically measured against criteria set out in the annual Business Plan which also contains a series of challenging deadlines for the achievement of each objective.

The Inspectorate's Strategic and Business Plans are agreed by its management team in consultation with the Attorney General's Advisory Board. Progress against the Business Plan objectives is monitored monthly by the management team on the basis of information collected and supplied by the Inspectorate's Corporate Services Manager. At each of its meetings, the Advisory Board receives a report detailing the action which the Inspectorate has taken towards the achievement of its objectives.

Further monitoring is provided by the quarterly and annual reports which the Chief Inspector provides for the Attorney General.

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what the cost was of the Department's 2001 staff Christmas party; and how many people attended. [61649]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 18 June 2002]: Any Christmas parties for staff in any of the Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible will have been financed by the staff themselves.

Information on their cost or numbers of attendees is not held.

Serious Fraud Office Annual Report

Helen Jones: To ask the Solicitor-General when the Director of the Serious Fraud Office will publish her Annual report. [72131]

The Solicitor-General: I have today placed copies of the Annual Report in the libraries of the House.

Review of the Year

Helen Jones: To ask the Solicitor-General when the law officers will publish their "Review of the Year". [72130]

The Solicitor-General: I have today placed copies of the Law Officers' "Review of the Year" in the libraries of the House.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will list the overseas trips on departmental business that have been undertaken in each of the last five years by officials in her Department; and what the (a) cost, (b) purpose and (c) result was in each case. [68735]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 12 July 2002]: All overseas travel by officials in the Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible is undertaken in accordance with the principles set out in Chapter 8 of the Civil Service Management Code. The detailed information requested about individual trips is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Salaries

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what the annual cost was of Ministerial salaries in her Department in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 2001–02. [61037]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 17 June 2002]: The following information relates to the financial year and the figures comprise of the salaries paid to the individuals together with Employer's Related National Insurance Contributions.

£141,044.89

6 April 2001–5 April 2002

£179,231.82

Staff Training

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General how much the Department has spent on staff training and development in each of the last five years. [61051]

The Solicitor-General [holding reply 17 June 2002]: The amount spent by each of the Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible in each of the last five years is set out below.

Crown Prosecution Service

1997–98	1,234,217
1998–99	1,339,271
1999–2000	2,069,216
2000–01	2,700,903
2001–02	5,620,922

Serious Fraud Office

1996–97	127,051
1997–98	134,962
1998–99	124,949
1999–2000	180,936
2000–01	237,996

Treasury Solicitor's Department

Figures for the last four years are:

1998–99	213,460
1999–2000	230,690
2000–01	337,900
2001–02	402,080

Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers

1998–99	13,820
1999–2000	8,800
2000–01	11,750
2001–02	10,500

HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate

Information is only available for the year 2001–02 as before 1st April 2001 the Inspectorate was part of the Crown Prosecution Service and training costs form part of the figures provided by the CPS. The sum expended on training in 2001–02 was £26,600.

Staff Numbers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General how many staff were employed by his Department on (a) 2 May 1997 and (b) 31 May 2002. [60919]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 17 June 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office on 13 June 2002, Official Report, column 1402W.

Staff Pay

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what the cost in 2001–02 was of the pay increase to staff in her Department, agencies and the non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible; and what the cost of the forthcoming increase will be in 2002–03. [50422]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 18 April 2002]: Figures are only available for the year 2001–02.

The figures for the Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

£12.7 million

Serious Fraud Office

£303,000

Treasury Solicitor's Department (which includes Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers and HM cps Inspectorate)

£1,065,000

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General how much and what proportion of the departmental expenditure limit for 2002–03 will be accounted for by staff costs; what the figures were for 2001–02; and if she will make a statement. [61023]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 17 June 2002]: Figures for the year 2001–02 are not yet available.

The departmental expenditure limit for the Treasury Solicitor's Department, which also includes expenditure by the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers and HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate, is set in net terms and takes account of receipts from charges to client Departments for legal services provided to them. It would be misleading, therefore, to show staff costs as a percentage of that figure. However, after allowing for receipts, £24,773,000 (60 per cent.) of Treasury Solicitor's Department's gross administrative costs were accounted for by staff costs in 2001–02.

The departmental expenditure limit for the Serious Fraud Office for 2001–02 was £21,850,000, of which staff costs amounted to £7,785,000 (35.6 per cent.).

The departmental expenditure limit for the Crown Prosecution Service for 2001–02 was £402,200,000, of which staff costs amounted to £196,600,000 (49 per cent.).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General how much and what proportion of the departmental expenditure limit for 2002–03 had been spent by 31 May; what the figures were for 2001–02; and if she will make a statement. [61013]

The Solicitor-General [holding reply 17 June 2002]: Reliable estimates for 2002–03 spending to 31 May are not available. Estimated outturn spending figures for 2001–02 can be found in Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 2002–03 published in May 2002 as Command Paper 5401.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General which categories of important cases require the CPS to communicate directly with complainants; and what the purpose and outcome is of these communications. [60221]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 10 June 2002]: Under the current Victim's Charter the CPS must, on request, meet families bereaved as a result of crime in order to explain the decision on prosecution.

In addition, in April 2001 the CPS commenced a phased programme of implementation of the Direct Communication with Victims initiative. This follows recommendations made by Sir William MacPherson and Sir Ian Glidewell. All Areas who have implemented this initiative now:

provide all identifiable victims with a written explanation when the prosecution decide to discontinue their case, or alter charges substantially; and in cases involving child abuse, sexual offences or racially aggravated offences, offer to meet victims to explain the basis of the decision if a further explanation is required.

Full national implementation will be completed by October 2002.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will make a statement on the (a) reasons for and (b) impact of significant staff turnover within the (i) Derbyshire, (ii) Hertfordshire, (iii) Humberside and (iv) North Wales CPS regions, with reference to the training budget as a proportion of turnover on 1 January. [59657]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 12 June 2002] As with any large organisation, the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) has turnover of staff. Table 1 (attached) shows that, there has not been a significant staff turnover in Derbyshire, Hertfordshire, Humberside or North Wales CPS, over the last twelve months, as compared to the national average for the CPS. The main reason for the loss of staff has been resignations.

In recent months Derbyshire, Hertfordshire, Humberside have seen an increase in the number of staff employed.

Loss of staff, particularly if they are experienced, impacts on the working of any organisation. New staff requires induction and training, which may vary from going on appropriate courses to "on the job" training. Inevitably this affects the training budget. It also means new staff members take some time before they are fully effective. However, the introduction of new staff, especially where they represent an addition to the existing numbers, is to be welcomed.

Table 2 (attached) shows the proportion of each local Area budget spent on training against their total running costs.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Solicitor-General what proportion of advocacy by the Crown Prosecution Service met the CPS's advocacy standards in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [69107]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 11 July 2002]: Advocacy standards form a part of the annual performance appraisal of all Crown Prosecutors and performance assessment markings are awarded to reflect the individual's overall performance throughout the whole reporting period. In each of the years since 1997, more than 99 per cent of Crown Prosecutors received a performance assessment marking of Box 3 (Performance fully meets the standard required) or better in advocacy standards.

HMCPSI include advocacy standards as part of their inspections of each CPS Area. These are reported in their individual inspection reports but there is no aggregation of data in relation to any specific aspect of an Area's performance.

Under the Department's training of Higher Court Advocates, candidates must additionally pass an assessment managed by the Nottingham Law School before they can be considered for deployment as advocates in the Crown Courts.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Animal Health and Welfare

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on animal health and welfare expenditure trends shown in the Departmental report for 2002. [72082]

Mr. Morley: Tables 5.1 to 5.5 in the Departmental Report for 2002 contain a number of errors. These arose from differences in the way information is loaded on central data bases, complications with compiling historical information following the recent Machinery of Government changes, and the re-structuring of DEFRA with the revised objectives that followed. Unfortunately, the tight timetable for producing these tables interfered with the quality assurance procedures that would normally have applied.

The Department's quality assurance procedures are being revised to prevent similar errors in future. Meanwhile, work is in hand to re-issue corrected tables. This is a significant task involving the re-loading of central data bases which are subject to a number of timetable constraints. The intention is to provide revised figures by the Autumn.

Meanwhile, it is possible to clarify that underlying provision for resources available to control animal disease have risen in real terms over the period as follows:

£ million

1999–2000 Cash Outturn	2000–01 Cash Outturn	2001–02 Provisional Resource Outturn	2002–03 Resource Budget
152	183	159	206

These figures exclude expenditure incurred on foot and mouth disease, given this was funded centrally out of the Reserve. The drop seen in 2001–02 can be explained by the diversion of state veterinary staff to tackling foot and mouth disease.

Veterinary Laboratories Agency

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what targets she has set the Veterinary Laboratories Agency for 2002–03. [72214]

Mr. Morley: I have set the Veterinary Laboratories Agency the following performance targets for 2002–03.

Quality of Service

1. To maintain current third party accreditations.

2. To achieve ISO9000 accreditation for the TSE Archive.

Service Delivery

3. To achieve a minimum of 85 per cent of ROAME project milestones.

4. To meet 95 per cent of published turnaround time for export tests.

5. To set a baseline for the customer satisfaction survey.

Efficiency

6. To achieve £500k savings on procurement spending.

7. To achieve a 3 per cent improvement of overheads against turnover using the baseline established in 2001–02.

Financial Performance

8. To recover from Government Departments, Agencies and external customers, the full economic costs of the Agency's services.

Fisheries

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether Spain's Northern quota entitlements expire at the end of 2002 unless renewed, reduced or extended by agreement at the EC level prior to that date; and whether the same position will apply to Portugal. [67317]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 July 2002]: Yes. Our interpretation is that the special northern quota entitlements outlined in the Spanish Treaty of Accession will expire at the end of 2002, but that they will stand to be taken into account when determining future quota allocations in accordance with relative stability.

Small Farms

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been paid to small family farms in (a) Scotland, (b) Wales and (c) England in each of the last five years for environmental schemes. [70438]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 July 2002]: Average environmental scheme payments to small full-time farms in England as recorded by the Farm Business Survey are given in the table. Requests for information on payments in Scotland should be referred to the Scottish parliament. Requests for information on payments in Wales should be referred to the National Assembly for Wales.

Average environmental scheme payments to full-time small farms in England (£ per farm)*

England	350	450	630	990	980

*Includes Environmentally sensitive area, organic farming, organic aid, countryside stewardship, woodland grant, farm woodland premium, nitrate sensitive area, moorland, habitat, countryside access and SSSI schemes

Biodiversity

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the (a) loss and (b) creation of UK biodiversity action plan habitat since the 1992 Rio Earth Summit as a result of (i) inland flood defence schemes and (ii) coastal flood defence schemes. [68099]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 July 2002]: In 1999, under High Level Target 9, DEFRA put in place a mechanism for operating authorities to report losses and gains of Biodiversity Action Plan habitats as a result of flood management works. The first annual report was produced for DEFRA in July 2001. This report indicates an overall gain in BAP habitats during the reporting year of 53.37 Ha of fresh water habitats (plus 200 metres of chalk river) and 112.84 Ha of coastal or intertidal habitat. Copies of the 2000–01 report are available from Flood Management Division of DEFRA and annual reports will be available in subsequent years.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much money her Department has successfully reclaimed from (a) the Duke of Richmond and (b) the Earl of March in respect of overpayments relating to the ESA scheme; and if she will make a statement. [69403]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 12 July 2002]: The Goodwood Estates Company Limited entered into an Environmentally Sensitive Areas agreement in 1992. The area involved covered some 400 hectares. Some of the land, comprising less than 10 per cent of this area, was subsequently used for other purposes. The department reclaimed the relevant proportion of ESA support from the company, plus interest.

Environment Agency

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to issue a revised management statement to the Environment Agency. [72083]

Mr. Meacher: I am please to inform the House that the Management Statement has been issued to the Environment Agency today. The statement sets out: the relationships between the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, the Welsh Assembly Government, exercising powers delegated by the National Assembly for Wales, and the Environment Agency; the framework within which the Agency will operate; and other guidance relevant to its functions. The Management Statement has been drawn up in consultation with the Agency and is being issued jointly with the Welsh Assembly Government.

A copy of the Statement has today been placed in the libraries of both Houses.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many calls have been received by (a) Eaga Partnership and (b) TXU Warm Front Ltd. call centres in each (i) local authority area and (ii) Government office region about delays in installations under the home energy efficiency scheme in each quarter for which information is available; [43569]

(2) what proportion of heating installations have been completed by (a) Eaga Partnership and (b) TXU Warm Front Ltd. in each (i) local authority and (ii) Government office region in (A) less than a month, (B) one to two months, (C) two to three months, (D) three to four months, (E) four to five months, (F) five to six months, (G) six to seven months and (H) over seven months. [43570]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 18 March 2002]: The Home Energy Efficiency Scheme has an overall target of improving 800,000 properties in the period 2000–04. Between June 2000 and March 2002, in excess of 113,000 heating measures were installed.

The remaining information requested is not available without incurring disproportionate costs. But I have previously written to the hon. Member with information regarding measures installed under the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme. A copy of the letter and the data has been placed in the library of the House.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the (a) types and (b) numbers of energy efficiency and conservation measures installed by (i) Eaga Partnership and (ii) TXU Warm Front Ltd in each (A) local authority and (B) Government office region in each of the last four quarters for which information is available. [43572]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 18 March 2002]: The Home Energy Efficiency Scheme has an overall target of improving 800,000 properties in the period 2000–04. Between June 2000 and March 2002 almost 998,000 measures were installed under the scheme.

To provide the data in the form requested would incur disproportionate costs. But I have previously written to the hon. Member with information regarding measures installed under the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme. A copy of the letter and the data has been placed in the library of the House.

Water Level Management

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the water level management plans being implemented; and what percentage of the total number of water level management plans this represents. [69628]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 July 2002]: According to our records, there are 90 Water Level Management Plans (WLMPs) currently being implemented on the following sites:

Gordano Valley
Puxton Moor PSSSI

This represents 18 per cent of the total number of WLMPs. However this list does not include sites where the WLMP did not identify any changes to be implemented, or sites where the plan identified a need for further monitoring before effecting any changes. The implementation of a number of other plans was delayed by and access restrictions during the foot and mouth outbreak.

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department are taking to ensure that water level management plans comply with the EC Water Framework Directive; how many completed water level management plans comply with the EC Habitats and Birds Directives; and what steps she is taking to ensure that water level management plans deliver conservation benefits. [68169]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 11 July 2002]: When the EC Water Framework Directive is transposed into English and Welsh law, it will require consideration of all aspects of the water cycle with an emphasis on ecological water quality. In implementing the Water Framework Directive, it will be important to ensure effective integration between the Directive requirements and Water Level Management Plans (WLMPs). WLMPs are designed to be reviewed at regular intervals and should incorporate any guidance which arises as a result of the implementation of the Water Framework Directive.

The operating authorities (Environment Agency, Internal Drainage Boards or Local Authorities) are the competent authorities in respect of ensuring that WLMPs comply with the Habitats and Birds Directives. They have a duty to ensure that their activities, including those relevant to water level management, comply with the Directives, as implemented in the UK by the Habitats Regulations. Under these Regulations they are required to assess whether any schemes which are not necessary for site management for nature conservation are likely to have a significant effect on the site. If so, an Appropriate Assessment must be undertaken before any works can be carried out. We are not aware of any Appropriate Assessments completed to date in relation WLMPs. English Nature and the operating authorities are working with DEFRA on guidelines to provide advice to operating authorities in undertaking such an Appropriate Assessment.

Operating Authorities draw up WLMPs in consultation with English Nature, who propose conservation objectives for each plan. All WLMPs must be agreed with English Nature before implementation.

In 1999, MAFF issued guidance to flood and coastal defence operating authorities on conservation benefits and WLMPs. This guidance was agreed with English Nature and the RSPB, as well as the operating authorities.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on whether internationally designated sites have (a) water level management plans for individual hydrological units and (b) a single water level management plan for numerous hydrological units. [69178]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 11 July 2002]: The decision as to whether a Water Level Management Plan (WLMP) is based on individual hydrological units or numerous units will depend on technical, environmental and economic factors which vary significantly between sites. As a result, all Water Level Management Plans are designed and implemented on a case-by-case basis and there is no policy on a preferred approach. In many cases, particularly for relatively small, discrete sites, operating authorities have prepared a single plan to cover all the hydrological units within an international site. However, for larger sites with separate hydrological units that have different operating authorities (e.g. the Somerset Levels), separate WLMPs have been prepared, for example, for each constituent Site of Special Scientific Interest.

DEFRA is currently working with English Nature and the operating authorities to prepare guidance on the effects of the Habitats Regulations on Water Level Management Plans. Amongst other things, this will advise operating authorities on the geographical scale at which the implications for the Habitats Regulations should be considered.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much (a) the Environment Agency, (b) the Internal Drainage Boards and (c) local authorities have spent on consultants to prepare water level management plans in each of the last five years. [69180]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 11 July 2002]: I regret that DEFRA does not hold this information as preparation of Water Level Management Plans is the responsibility of the operating authorities. The information cannot therefore be obtained in the form requested except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much her Department has spent on the preparation and production of water level management plans in each of the last five years. [69179]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 11 July 2002]: The flood and coastal defence operating authorities (Environment Agency, Internal Drainage Boards and Local Authorities) have funded the preparation of Water Level Management Plans (WLMPs) from their own budgets. The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs does not fund preparation and production of WLMPs. We do, however, provide grant aid for flood management works required to implement WLMPs.

Departmental Spending Plans

Ms Munn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the spending plans for her Department and for the Forestry Commission are for the next three years following the 2002 Spending Review; and if she will make a statement. [72215]

Mrs Beckett: The results of the Spending Review for DEFRA and the Forestry Commission are summarised in Chapter 16 of the White Paper on "2002 Spending Review" (Cm 5570). The key figures are as follows:

£ million	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06
Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs
Resource Budget	2,443	2,765	2,742	2,792
Capital Budget	241	316	344	354
Total Departmental Expenditure Limit[1]	2,523	2,902	2,890	2,944
Department of Environment Food and Rural Affairs[1]	2,426	2,808	2,796	2,850
Forestry Commission[1]	97	94	94	94
Near-cash spending in DEFRA DEL[2]	2,341	2,727	2,710	2,757

[2] Consistent with previous control basis.

When DEFRA was created, the objective was have a step change in the way environment, agriculture and rural issues were treated in Government. The aim was to create a department with sustainable development at its heart—and with responsibility for supporting sustainable development across Government. For DEFRA this means working to achieve a better environment at home and internationally. It also means a food and farming industry working within a prosperous countryside, producing the food that consumers want in harmony with the environment.

For the Government as a whole, sustainable development goes much further. The vital importance of sustainable development for Government as a whole underlay the decision to make it a central theme of the Spending Review. As custodian of the Government's sustainable development strategy, I particularly welcome the elements of the Settlement, for my own Department and for others, which will deliver significant improvements in key policy areas. These include:

Climate change—where we will invest in innovation to meet our Climate Change objectives, building on existing funding for renewable energy sources with an additional £38 million in 2005–06 compared with 2002–03, and make further progress towards our greenhouse gas emissions targets

Health—where we have announced the biggest ever sustained spending growth in the history of the NHS, to improve health outcomes and the quality of care for patients;

Education—where increased spending and further reforms are aimed at getting and helping 16–19 year olds into further education;

And Crime—where extra funding for the police will help them target reductions in vehicle crime, domestic burglaries and robbery, and reduce the gap between the highest crime local areas and the best comparable areas

In addition, new spending on transport and regeneration will improve the quality of our local environments. For example, capital expenditure on capital transport plans—which includes expenditure on home zones, cycling, walking and local safety schemes—is doubling in real terms from 2001–2011 as part of the Ten Year Transport plan. The Neighbourhood Renewal fund is being increased from £400 million in 2003–04 to £525 million in 2005–06, in part reflecting an increased commitment to safer and cleaner communities.

Let me now explain how the Spending Review settlement will impact on DEFRA's programmes over the next three years and will assist the Department in pursuing its aims and objectives.

Departmental Spending Plans

Sustainable Farming and Food

When DEFRA was created, the farming industry was in crisis. Foot and mouth disease, coupled with the lowest farm incomes in many years—had destroyed farmers' confidence, and in some cases, their livelihoods. The Review provides DEFRA with the resources to make progress—working together with the industry—towards a more sustainable future for the farming and food industries. Investment totalling over £500 million over three years will be available to support the key recommendations of the Policy Commission chaired by Sir Don Curry, and to improve animal health and welfare:

Action through the England Rural Development Programme, including:

A new broad and shallow agri-environment scheme which will reward farmers for delivering environmentally friendly outcomes to be piloted over the next 2 years and then rolled out in full in 2005–06;

An expansion of schemes such as the Rural Enterprise Scheme, the Processing and Marketing Grants Scheme, and the Vocational Training Scheme, to assist people in rural areas retrain, diversify and extend their businesses;
A more efficient food chain;
Enhanced farm advice;
Further measures to improve animal health and welfare, including livestock identification and tracing systems, enhanced testing for TSE-type disease (such as BSE); and further action to prevent illegal meat imports.

The additional funding will rise to £200 million in 2005–06 of which £75 million has been specifically allocated to fund, alongside equivalent EU funding, the full roll-out of the new agri-environment scheme in England. Additional funding will also be made available to the Devolved Administrations to allow them to increase expenditure on their Rural Development Programmes. In return for the investment in their industry, farmers will be expected to play their part in making the industry sustainable, for example by acting to reduce the risks of animal diseases. I know they will co-operate with us fully in achieving these joint goals.

The Government will continue to press for radical reform of the Common Agriculture Policy (CAP) in the negotiations on the Mid-Term Review of Agenda 2000 which began earlier this week. But the resources allocated in the Spending Review allow DEFRA to press ahead with reform and modernisation of the farming industry now. The Department will publish its strategy for sustainable farming and food in the autumn. I am very pleased that Sir Don Curry has agreed to chair a Group which will act as a driver and overseer of change in the farming and food sectors through the implementation of the farming and food strategy, to ensure that we move rapidly towards a more sustainable, competitive and diverse farming and food industry which contributes to a thriving rural economy. The Group will report to me.

The Settlement recognises the need to prevent, control and manage the risk of animal disease, where we are driven by the memory of last year's outbreak of Foot and Mouth Disease as well as the legacy of BSE. The additional resources provided will allow funding of a wide range of work on animal health issues These measures will be set in the context of a comprehensive animal health and welfare strategy, as recommended by the Policy Commission. This will address ways in which the industry should bear its share of the costs of animal health controls and services. I am also please to be able to announce that we have secured additional funds to deal with Bovine TB this year. These will be used to pay for the extra staff and resources already committed to work on the TB testing backlog and control measures, and additional casual staff who will be recruited to supplement this work. Testing is being carried out on the basis of a veterinary risk assessment, with those posing the greatest risk being tested first.

A countryside for all to enjoy

In addition to the new agri-environment scheme, which will play an important role in making the countryside more attractive and in helping to preserve biodiversity, the Spending Review has allocated an additional £5 million in 2004–05 and £10 million in 2005–06 for work in bringing our major wildlife sites into favourable condition. In addition, the extra funding of £5 million in 2003–04 and £10 million in the two following years to implement the Countryside and Rights of Way (CROW) Act will increase public access and enjoyment of our beautiful countryside landscapes.

Thriving rural economies and communities

The investment in sustainable food and farming, in improving the condition of Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSSIs) and in opening up access to the countryside will benefit the wider rural economy. However, DEFRA's leadership role on rural affairs goes beyond this and our new rural PSA target reflects this. It commits us to reducing the gap in productivity between the least well performing rural areas and the English average and making services more accessible for rural people. DEFRA will work with other Government Departments and agencies to deliver this and to ensure that the rural-proofing of their policies and programmes helps to deliver real improvements in prosperity and access to public services. The Spending Review White Paper sets out a range of commitments from other Departments to deliver key services in rural areas, and ensure that rural people benefit from the extra resources delivered through the review. The extra £25 million allocated in the Settlement over three years, will further increase the additional funds announced in the Rural White Paper to help regenerate in market towns and improve the ability of rural communities and the rural voluntary sector to deliver services in support of the socially excluded and progress towards solutions to key rural concerns in each region.

Protecting our communities from flooding

Government investment in flood defence has increased significantly in real terms since 1997. Additional funding of £15 million a year was made available in the wake of the autumn 2000 floods. The new funds over and above this which have been allocated in the Spending Review will ensure that this growth will now accelerate to reach 8.6 per cent a year in real terms over the SR2002 period. The further allocation to the Department of £15 million in 2004–05 and £40 million in 2005–06, together with the amounts available for grants to local authorities and the revenues we expect to be able to raise from new funding mechanisms, will deliver an increase of £150 million in the third year of the Review. This level of resources, together with simplification of the administration of flood defences and effective partnership working with homeowners, local government, the Environment Agency, scientists and the insurance industry will allow us to reduce the risk of threats to life and damage to property from flooding.

Sustainable use of resources: the challenge from waste

The Spending Review Settlement takes into account the pressures on local government and provides for spending on environmental, protective and cultural services, including waste management, to rise by £671 million by 2005–06. The funds will also enable them to deal with the short-term problems of fridge disposal and changes to the legislation on hazardous waste. Final decisions on additional resources for addressing the challenge of growth in municipal waste and moving away from landfill disposal and on other policy measures will be made available when the Performance and Innovation Unit (PIU) publishes its report into sustainable waste management in the autumn. These decisions and those on landfill tax and the future of the Landfill Tax Credit Scheme (LTCS) will deliver a step change in performance. DEFRA's PSA target of 25 per cent recycling and composting of household waste by 2005–6 demonstrates the government's commitment to radical reform of municipal waste management.

Science

Evidence-based policy work is central to DEFRA's approach. I want, at the very least, to maintain the Department's expenditure on research in real terms over the Spending Review period. This is consistent with our commitment to the development of a strong and high quality science base. It will ensure that DEFRA's policy making continues to be based in the latest evidence and scientific and economic analysis. We will aim to increase science spending in our identified priority areas. These include: environmental horizon-scanning, climate change and extreme weather, a supercomputer to strengthen the UK climate change research capability, non-food crops, organic food production, and animal disease. We will also examine the findings of the Foot and Mouth Disease inquiries closely and determine if any additional funding for research is required in these areas.

Investment in the Department

A theme of the Spending Review across all Departments has been ensuring that they have the necessary capacity to deliver. That has been a primary focus of the Developing DEFRA change programme that was set up after the Department was created last year. Additional funding of £140 million over the Spending Review period for investment in the Department will enable it to take forward the next phase of the change programme flowing from the recent Joint Strategic Review carried out with the Office for Public Service Reform (OPSR). The investment will give staff the tools they need to change their ways of working, focus on customers and deliver the high quality services that will build DEFRA's reputation as a respected, high performing, and efficient Department.

Forestry Commission

The Forestry Commission is funded on a net basis after taking account of the income it received, mainly from sales of timber from the public forests. Its timber income has fallen significantly in recent years due to a worldwide slump in timber prices. The Spending Review Settlement provides additional funding of £5 million a year on top of the 2003–04 baseline to enable the Commission to continue to drive forward the Government's England Forestry Strategy despite the reduction in timber income. This new money underlines forestry's important place in England's rural affairs and will allow the Commission to extend sustainable forests management, restore more native woodlands, increase community forests and the role of forests in tackling industrial dereliction. In addition to the funding shown in the White Paper, the Commission is also benefiting from special funding from the Capital Modernisation Fund and the Invest to Save Budget amounting to almost £11 million in the next 2 years.

Conclusion

Spending by the Department in 2005–06 will be more than £400 million higher than in 2002–03, supporting a programme of reform. It fulfils the Government's pledge to introduce a significant programme of measures to move the food and farming industries to a long-term sustainable basis, to create thriving and prosperous rural economies and communities and to improve the environment. And it takes full account of the Department's lead role in promoting sustainable development across Government for the good of our citizens, both now and in the future.

Correspondence

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will respond to the letter of the hon. Member for Hexham of 2 April on the stay warm scheme. [65644]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 2 July 2002]: The Department for Trade and Industry have responsibility for the Warm Stay Scheme. The hon. Member's letter has therefore been transferred to that Department.

Devolution

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the EU Advisory Committee on the protection of animals used for experimental and other scientific purposes is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70575]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: I have been asked to reply.

Article 22 (3) of European Directive 86/609/EEC (on the approximation of laws, regulations and administrative provisions of the Member States regarding the protection of animals used for experimental and other scientific purposes) provides for the Commission to establish "a permanent consultative committee within which the Member States would be represented, which will assist the Commission in organising the exchange of appropriate information, while respecting the requirements of confidentiality, and which will also assist the Commission in the other questions raised by the application of this Directive". The Commission made a decision on 9 February 1990 (90/67/EEC) for setting up the Advisory Committee on the Protection of Animals for Experimental and Other Scientific Purposes under Article 22 of the Directive, including provision for representation and working methods. However, the Committee has never been established. The Commission has recently made a recommendation for the Directive to be revised. In its initial comments on what amendments might be considered, the United Kingdom has suggested that the Commission should consider either dispensing with or establishing the Advisory Committee.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Devolution

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the EU Committee for the Adaptation to Technical Progress and for the Implementation of the Directive on Contained Use of Genetically Modified Micro-organisms is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [68552]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

No date has yet been fixed for the next meeting of this Committee. Officials from the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) represent the UK on the Committee. The Scottish Ministers and HSE comprise the Competent Authority for implementation of the Directive on the contained use of genetically modified micro-organisms in Scotland. HSE officials consult the Scottish Executive on agenda items in which it might have an interest in accordance with our Concordat with the Devolved Administrations.

Job Creation

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what extra financing has been secured for regional development agencies to create positive job creation in the manufacturing sector. [69076]

Alan Johnson: RDA funding will increase from £1.24 billion in 2000–01 to £1.80 billion in 2003–04. Alongside this, the Government has given the RDAs financial flexibility to pursue their regional priorities. From 1 April this year, the RDAs are getting their funding from Government as a single funding stream which they can use as they judge best in order to meet a set of agreed targets. Under this general framework there is also a modest component of extra funding specifically designated for manufacturing to match fund RDAs' Regional Centres for Manufacturing Excellence (delivering the Manufacturing Advisory Service) but their role is not specifically one of job creation. However, one of the underpinning objectives of the single pot is to increase competitiveness and therefore employment, including in the manufacturing sector. The RDAs are working closely with Government to put in place strategies at the national and regional levels which will encourage the development of a strong and forward-looking manufacturing sector.

Construction Products

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the EU Standing Committee on the approximation of the laws relating to construction products is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [66423]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

The Standing Committee is due to meet on 10 and 11 September 2002. The United Kingdom delegation consists of officials of the Office of The Deputy Prime Minister and a representative from the construction industry. International negotiation is a reserved matter, and the Scottish Executive is not, and has not been, represented on the Standing Committee. However, officials consult regularly with their opposite numbers in the devolved administrations on relevant issues prior to such negotiation.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Cultural Co-operation

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the EU Committee for the implementation of the programme establishing a single financing and programming instrument for cultural co-operation (Culture 2000) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70898]

Dr. Howells: The Culture 2000 Management Committee last met in Brussels on 31 May 2002. There is no fixed date for the next meeting of the Committee, although this is likely to be in the autumn. No members of the Scottish Executive have been or are members of the Committee.

Devolution

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the EU Committee on the export of cultural goods is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70915]

Dr. Howells: The exact date of the next meeting of the Advisory Committee on Cultural Goods is unknown. However, there are normally two meetings each year; and since the last meeting took place on 4 July, it is anticipated that the next meeting will be at the beginning of 2003. Representatives of the Scottish Executive have not attended meetings of the committee. The Scottish Executive is not a member since the committee is responsible for advising the European Commission about a non-devolved matter. A representative of the Scottish Executive is, however, welcome to attend as an observer.

TREASURY

Light Dues

Nick Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the total income from light dues has been in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement; [70052]

(2) what the total income from light dues, broken down by port, has been in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [70053]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply

The total income from light dues in each of the last 10 years is listed on the attached sheet.

We do not hold information on income, broken down by port but have provided information on income broken down by region, in the last 5 years. The information is not held beyond that period. The income listed to Trinity House is light dues payments made directly to Trinity House Lighthouse Service.

The figures do not include any Light Dues refunds that were made.

The figures for Ireland are shown in £ sterling after conversion.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of an abolition of light dues on (a) shipping, (b) port business and (c) tourism; and if he will make a statement. [70051]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

We do not intend to abolish light dues but are considering how the present system could be improved. We have issued a consultation document entitled "Light Dues Review: Meeting the Costs of Marine Aids to Navigation" seeking the views of the maritime industry on the structure of UK light dues. The consultation will consider whether charging can be extended to other users or redistributed among existing payers. We have asked consultees to identify the impact of light dues charges on their business operations.

The consultation period ends on 31 July. In the light of responses received, we shall consider where improvements can be made to the present system and determine the strength of support for change within the industry.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average payment made to Treasury was per ship entering British ports, in light dues for each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [70064]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not held in the form requested.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to change the level of light dues; and if he will make a statement. [70050]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

We have no plans at present to change the current level of light dues. The rates are reviewed annually and set at a level to meet the expenditure requirements of the General Lighthouse Authorities.

The consultation exercise on the Light Dues Review will determine whether improvements are made to the present system and if this will require changes to the regulations and current rates.

Equitable Life

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he expects the Penrose Inquiry into Equitable Life to be published in 2002; and if he will make a statement. [71613]

Ruth Kelly: Arrangements for publication will be considered once the report of the Penrose Inquiry has been received. No firm date has been specified for the completion of the Inquiry, though Lord Penrose is keen to ensure that the Inquiry proceeds as quickly as possible consistent with producing a thorough and authoritative account.

UK Citizens

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of UK citizens were born abroad; and what the corresponding figure was in each of the past 30 years. [71132]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Barry Sheerman, dated 19 July 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question concerning what percentage of UK citizens were from abroad; and what the corresponding figure was in each of the past 30 years. (71132)

The information you have requested is not available. Information on the citizenship of residents in the UK is derived from the Labour Force Survey. This identifies the number of British citizens resident in the UK, however, it is not possible to separately identify how many of these UK citizens arrived in the UK from abroad.

Devolution

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the EU Contact Committee on certain schemes for collective investment in securities is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [70902]

Ruth Kelly: The EU Contact Committee on certain schemes for collective investment in transferable securities is next due to meet in autumn 2002. A precise date has not yet been fixed.

The UK is represented on the Committee by officials from HM Treasury and the Financial Services Authority. Financial regulation is not a devolved matter. Representatives of the Scottish Executive do not attend the Committee.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Challen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were (a) in employment and (b) in unemployment expressed as a percentage of the total population in (i) Leeds, (ii) Yorkshire and the Humber and (iii) London in each of the past 10 years. [69939]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Colin Challen, dated 19 July 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question about employment and unemployment in Leeds, Yorkshire and the Humber, and London. (69939)

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Offshore Fire-fighters

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the level of risk to which staff fire-fighting on offshore facilities are exposed. [67329]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 8 July 2002]: I have been asked to reply.

The Health & Safety Executive (HSE) has not commissioned any research into these matters However, duty holders of offshore installations are required to demonstrate to HSE they have evaluated the risks to which their personnel could be exposed during fire-fighting activities and that those risks are effectively controlled.

Empty Homes

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which Government Departments and agencies have (a) adopted and (b) not adopted the revised guidance on securing the better use of empty homes published by the DETR in 1999; and if he will make a statement. [70261]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Unfit Dwellings

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) houses, (b) houses in multiple occupation and (c) other dwellings were declared unfit for human habitation, broken down by (i) failure of gas appliance, (ii) failure of kitchen amenities, (iii) failure of bathroom and drainage facilities, (iv) structural failure and (v) other failures, in each of the last five years. [66676]

Mr. McNulty: The most recent information available is for private sector dwellings and houses in multiple occupation in 1997–98. This is shown in the table below.

(1) The number of reasons is greater than the numbers of dwellings identified because a dwelling or HMO can be unfit for more than one reason

(2) A HMO can be unfit under both sections 352 and 604, therefore the total is less than the sum of the components

Housing Improvement Grants

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what funding he is providing to local councils for housing improvement grants in (a) England and (b) Gloucestershire; and if he will make a statement. [64443]

Mr. McNulty: The Government no longer allocates specific funding to local authorities for housing improvement grants. Each housing authority must decide how much it will allocate towards this purpose from the total capital funding provided to it by the Government each year.

Total capital resources made available for housing purposes for all authorities in England for 2002–03 is £2.5 billion. For Gloucestershire the figure for 2002–03 is £16.6 million, an increase of 85 per cent on 1997–98.

Planning Decisions

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent steps have been taken to speed up planning decisions. [71022]

Mr. McNulty: The comprehensive package of planning reforms announced by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister on 18 July 2002, Official Report, columns 438–442W includes measures to speed up planning decisions. These include extra resources for central and local government, tough targets for delivery of plans and development control decisions, and proposals to improve the efficiency of the planning system and raise the quality of outputs.

Urban Renewal

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much private investment there has been in urban renewal in each of the last five years. [69380]

Mr. McNulty: Information on all the private investment that contributes to urban renewal is not collected by Government.

Traveller Encampments

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he plans to revise regulations regarding traveller encampments. [71096]

Mr. McNulty: On 5 July, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in conjunction with the Home Office, issued a joint news release outlining the Government's new approach to tackling unauthorised Traveller camps.

The new procedures include stricter powers for the police to move on unauthorised Traveller encampments, provided the local authority have made adequate provision for sites in the area; producing new guidance on managing unauthorised camping and improved local Gypsy site provision.

A copy of the news release has been placed in the Library of the House.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will obtain a reply for the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton to the letter with regard to Mr. Pat McGuinness that he sent on 13 March to the then Secretary of State for Transport, Local government and the Regions and to which that Department sent a holding reply dated 25 April saying that the letter had been transferred to the Planning Inspectorate. [68659]

Mr. McNulty: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State for the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions on 2 May, Official Report, column 902W.

Departmental Property

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library his Department's departmental-owned residential property record. [70768]

Mr. Leslie: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not directly own residential property.

London City Racecourse

Linda Perham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will make a decision on the planning application for the London city racecourse. [70750]

Mr. McNulty: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister expects that a decision on the London City Racecourse will be issued by the end of July.

E-mail Press Release Service

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when his Department intends to establish an e-mail press release service similar to that previously provided by the former Department of Transport, Local government and the Regions. [70656]

Mr. Leslie: We expect that the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will establish a similar service by Autumn 2002.

Delayed Discharge

Clive Efford: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement about the Government's strategy to tackle delayed discharge in London; and what resources will be needed to meet the level of demand. [69147]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

In September 2001 there were 1126 people who experienced a delayed transfer of care from an acute hospital bed in London. By March 2002, the target reduction to 901 beds had been met. London Boroughs received their share of the £300 million made available through the Building Care Capacity Grant to end unnecessary delayed discharges from hospital. Their total allocation was £42,560,387 over the two years 2001–02 and 2002–03.

London Boroughs have agreed challenging targets for further reductions, averaging between 20 per cent and 25 per cent by March 2003. The targets were set as part of the conditions for receiving the grant. For Personal Social Services, we have already announced annual average growth in real terms of 6 per cent from 2003–04 to 2005–06.

CABINET OFFICE

Recycling

Sue Doughty: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what proportion of (a) paper and (b) other goods purchased by his Department was recycled paper in each year since 1997; what the annual total cost of these purchases was; what plans there are to increase these proportions; and if he will make a statement. [65773]

Mr. Alexander: The Cabinet Office purchases all its standard photocopier/printer paper from "sustainably managed" sources. A small amount of high quality premium paper, which does not come from the same sources, is purchased and used for specific jobs. We are seeking a more "environmentally friendly" alternative to this product.

We have successfully tested re-cycled paper for use in our office machinery and are now working in partnership with a number of other departments to establish a contract for the purchase of recycled paper.

Information on other goods derived from recycled paper purchased by the Cabinet Office could only be produced at disproportionate cost.

Strategy Unit

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what additional projects are planned for the Strategy Unit; and if he will make a statement. [72101]

Mr. Alexander: The Prime Minister has asked the Strategy Unit to carry out a project looking at how to tackle the problems associated with alcohol misuse.

The large majority of people who drink do so without causing themselves or others harm. The focus of the project will be the harm that can be caused by excessive drinking. It will pay particular attention to issues such as alcohol-related crime and anti-social behaviour, problems faced by vulnerable groups such as children and what works best in tackling the problems of alcohol misuse.

My hon. Friend the Under Secretary of State for Public Health, will be Sponsor Minister for the project.

The scoping note for the project is available on the SU website (www.strategy.gov.uk). There will be a wide-ranging consultation on the issues, commencing from this announcement, during which all interested parties are encouraged to contribute their views. The Strategy Unit aims to complete its study by Spring 2003.

Monthly Audits

Brian Cotter: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many monthly audits of regulation have taken place since 1997 relating to (a) the number of new regulations introduced and (b) the number of regulations repealed. [71266]

Mr. Alexander: Regulatory Impact Assessments are produced for regulations that have an impact on business, charities and the voluntary sector. These can be found in the House libraries. They are also reported monthly to the Cabinet Office. Since 1997 (inclusive), 27 Deregulation Orders have been made under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act; a chronological list is available on the Cabinet Office's website. In February 2002 the government published the Regulatory Reform Action Plan, setting 63 proposals for Regulatory Reform Orders (RROs). RROs enable government to repeal more easily unnecessary regulation.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Student Loan Company

Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost was to the Student Loan Company to issue cheques to each student in higher education every term in each of the last five years. [70155]

Margaret Hodge: Only the first loan instalment is paid by cheque each Academic Year. Subsequent instalments are paid by BACS. I have asked the Chief Executive of the Student Loans Company to write to my hon. Friend with further information, and to place a copy of the letter in the House library.

Further Education

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the impact of the pay gap between schools and the further education sector on recruiting (a) music, (b) maths, (c) IT and (d) construction and engineering lecturers to further education colleges. [65078]

Margaret Hodge: We have not carried out an assessment of this type. As independent organisations it is for each college to recruit their own staff and to agree pay within the context of the overall resources available to them. We know that there are differences between salaries in general further education colleges and schools and this issue is being considered as part of the current Spending Review settlement.

An additional £314 million is available for FE this year compared with 2001–02; by 2003–04 total funding for FE will be up by 26 per cent in real terms since 1997 and total funding per full-time equivalent student will be up by 16 per cent over the same period. In 2002–03, the Learning and Skills Council has increased colleges' participation funding rates by 2.5 per cent in cash terms, compared to a 1.5 per cent increase in 2001–02.

As part of the overall funding allocation, we are investing more than £300 million in the Teaching Pay Initiative (TPI). TPI is an important initiative designed to help modernise further education (FE) pay arrangements and to recruit, reward and retain teachers and lecturers as part of the drive to improve teaching and learning. Alongside TPI, we are introducing Training Bursaries, Golden Hellos and, subject to the approval of Parliament, a scheme to pay-off over time the student loans of new teachers in FE shortage subject areas. All of these initiatives offer significant financial rewards both to students training to be FE lecturers as well as those taking up teaching posts in FE shortage subject areas.

Marketing (Universities)

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what information she collates on expenditure by individual universities on marketing. [70024]

Margaret Hodge: This information is not collated centrally. The Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) collects data annually which show the expenditure of each higher education institution broken down by various categories, but expenditure on marketing is not identified separately.

City Academies

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what flexibility there is for city academies to choose (a) their catchment area for admissions and (b) the feeder schools they will work with. [69724]

Mr. Miliband: It is a condition of the Funding Agreement between the Academy and the Secretary of State that each Academy's admissions arrangements are consistent with the law on admissions and the Statutory Codes of Practice as they apply to maintained schools. Within these requirements Academies have the right to determine their own admissions policies and admission arrangements, including oversubscription criteria. Acceptable criteria can include catchment areas and transfer from named feeder primary schools, in addition to others such as sibling links and distance from school. Academies will not operate in isolation but are required, as part of the Funding Agreement, to share their facilities with other schools and the wider community.

Specialist Schools

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the specialist schools for which progress reports were submitted in September (a) 2000 and (b) 2001, broken down by (i) local education authority, (ii) specialism, (iii) status of the school, (iv) the total number of applications for places, (v) the number and percentage of pupils selected by aptitude, (vi) the number and percentage of pupils with statements and (vii) the number and percentage of pupils receiving free school meals. [68173]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 17 July 2002]: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries.

School Statistics

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils in secondary education in England there were and; how many and what percentage of pupils were in fee paying (a) secondary and (b) primary schools, broken down by sex, in each of the last three years. [68171]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 15 July 2002]: The available information is shown in the table below:

Foreign Teachers

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assistance her Department gives to schools seeking to recruit teachers from abroad. [70181]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 17 July 2002]: The Department does not give any special assistance to schools for overseas recruitment. But more broadly, my right hon. Friend has allocated £44 million from the recruitment and retention fund for 2002–03 to schools in areas where the cost of living can make it harder to attract and keep the best teachers, following the £33 million allocated last year. A new Recruitment and Retention Unit in the Government Office for London will also support London LEAs in, amongst other things, overseas recruitment.

School Expulsions

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children were expelled from school in Somerset over the last two years. [69398]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is shown in the table.

Further Education

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the reasons for the delays in notifying colleges of their funding allocations for 2002–03; and what instructions she has given the Learning and Skills Council to ensure that colleges, have adequate time to fulfil its requirement that corporations must approve a budget before the beginning of its funding year on 1 August. [68514]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 10 July 2002]: It is hard to compare progress on final allocations in 2002–03 with earlier years since the process is now different. In the past, the allocation of funding to colleges did not take into account colleges' previous performance. The old system of funding led to some colleges bidding and receiving funding for unachievable growth targets, retaining funds which their performance did not justify (last year estimated at over £150 millions) which could more usefully have been allocated elsewhere, and ultimately having to pay the money back.

This year, as part of our drive to improve standards, performance and efficiency, and target funding where it can have the most impact, the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) has used its budgetary discretion so that money is allocated more effectively. It has introduced new arrangements which will stimulate growth, particularly for 16–18 year olds and basic skills, by putting in place a more robust allocations process and challenging those providers who have consistently been unable to achieve their projected performance levels in the past. This process has led to detailed and at times protracted negotiations with some providers. However it has ensured that we no longer have millions of pounds sitting in college bank accounts not working effectively towards our priorities.

Despite this change which might have been expected to cause delays, by 5 July the LSC had made 313 (48 per cent) final allocations to colleges. This is well ahead of last year when only 16 per cent of institutions had received final allocations by the first week in July. We recognise however that there is still considerable scope for improvement and the LSC is looking at ways of doing better in the future so that final allocations can be made even earlier.

Dyslexia

Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what training is required for teachers to deal with pupils diagnosed with ADHD and dyslexia. [70156]

Stephen Twigg: It is important that all teachers are properly prepared for the range of special educational needs (SEN) they will encounter in schools. That is why, as part of their initial teacher training, all student teachers must show that they understand their responsibilities under the SEN Code of Practice, and know how to seek advice where necessary. These skills are reinforced and developed during their induction period, when teachers have to demonstrate that they can plan effectively to meet the needs of pupils with SEN.

There are no specific training requirements placed on teachers in relation to dealing with pupils diagnosed with either Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) or specific learning difficulties, such as dyslexia. However, opportunities for in-service training and continuing professional development for teachers in post are supported under the training component of the SEN category of the Department's Standards Fund, through which £91 million of locally supported expenditure is available for SEN in 2002–03. Under the Standards Fund, LEAs and schools can draw on grant aid to address the training and development needs of teachers, and other staff, in relation to particular SEN conditions, including ADHD and dyslexia. The support on offer covers activity ranging from awareness raising events to more specialised in-depth training. It is, however, for individual local education authorities and schools to determine and prioritise the training and development needs of their staff, in the light of local circumstances. We have also introduced in 2002–03 two new £1 million funding streams, under the SEN Small Programme Fund and the SEN Training and Development Fund, to support the creation of new or extended training opportunities and resources for teachers and other staff. Under these initiatives, competitive bids were invited from voluntary organisations and higher education institutions. Included amongst the successful bids were a number of ADHD and dyslexia projects.

Safe Routes to Schools

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the Safe Routes to Schools initiative. [69485]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We continue to work with the Department for Transport, and other partners on the School Travel Advisory Group, to make the journey to school safer. This Department has also produced guidance for schools, governors and local education authorities to help them put in place initiatives to promote healthier, safer and more sustainable school travel.

Morley and Rothwell

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many mature students in Morley and Rothwell have applied for a child care grant. [69362]

Margaret Hodge: Information on mature students who apply for a childcare grant is not available centrally.

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people in Morley and Rothwell received help from the Community Champions Fund. [69363]

Margaret Hodge: The Scarman Trust, who administer the Community Champions fund in the West Yorkshire region, have received five applications from people in the Morley and Rothwell area. Unfortunately, none of these applications were successful, either because they were from large, established community groups, or because they did not meet the criteria for Community Champions funding.

However, we would welcome further applications from individuals and small groups in Morley and Rothwell who want to increase their skills to participate in the regeneration of their communities. In the first instance, they should contact the Government Office for Yorkshire and The Humber at the address below.

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people in Morley and Rothwell have (a) taken up modern apprenticeships, (b) started a foundation degree course and (c) received help from Individual Learning Accounts. [69365]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is as follows:

(a) started modern apprenticeships.

(a) started a foundation degree course.

Provisional figures for autumn 2001 show that there were 6 students on Foundation degrees.

(b) received help from individual learning accounts.

A total of 1,202 people have received help from the Individual Learning Account programme that was in operation from September 2000 to November 2001.

Agricultural Colleges

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what help will be given to agricultural colleges to cope with the change in the rural economy resulting from the foot and mouth epidemic. [65145]

Margaret Hodge: Funding and planning of provision by agricultural colleges in the further education sector is the responsibility of the Learning and Skills Council. I have therefore asked John Harwood, the Council's Chief Executive, to write to the hon. Member providing the information requested and to place a copy of his reply in the Library. Agricultural colleges in the higher education sector are responsible for their own management and development, in discussion with the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE).

Training Organisations

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 26 June 2002 to my hon. Friend the Member for Huddersfield (Mr. Sheerman), Official Report, column 910W, on training organisations, what payments were made to each NTO in each financial year since April 1997; and what the sector coverage was of each NTO in March. [70295]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The first NTO recognitions were in 1997. NTO recognition was withdrawn as of 31 March 2002. The totality of payments recorded for each financial year since April 1997 made by the Department in respect of work contracted by each NTO and sector coverage is as attached in Annex 1.

Unfortunately in our response of the 26 June, one organisation's total was included twice. This explains the difference in the 2001–2002 figures.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of the public service agreements of her Department set out in the document Public Services for the Future 1998 have been met; and if she will make a statement. [68716]

Stephen Twigg [holding answer 10 July 2002]: Information relating to the Department's Public Service Agreement targets can be found in the Department for Education and Skills Departmental Report 2002.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff have contributed to her Department's input to the Spending Review. [68681]

Estelle Morris: The spending review involves a comprehensive assessment of the department's performance, priorities and resource requirements and a range of staff have made and will make contributions.

Software

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her policy is towards using open source software; and what percentage is used in her Department. [69323]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Currently there is very little use of Open Source Software in the Department.

Our future use of Open Source Software will follow the Government policy which is expected to be published in summer 2002.

The draft policy document is available for viewing at http://www.govtalk.gov.uk/rfc/rfc_document.asp?docnum=429.

Mr. Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance her Department has issued to primary schools, secondary schools, colleges, universities and education authorities relating to the purchasing of computer software; and how much she estimates was spent by these bodies on computer software over the last five years. [70004]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not currently provide direct guidance to schools, colleges, universities and education authorities about which software products to purchase. There are however a number of sources of advice, such as the British Educational Communications and Technology Agency (Becta), to help institutions make purchasing decisions.

Guidance supporting the National Grid for Learning Standards Fund Grant for ICT encourages schools to spend at least 15 per cent of this grant on the procurement and development of educational and operational software.

The Department does not routinely collect data on total spend on software however the 2001 ICT in Schools Survey did report that in 1999–2000 schools in England spent an average of £800 per primary school and £5,230 per secondary on Software and Online Content.

Pressure-treated Wood

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Health regarding the safety of CCA pressure-treated wood. [69627]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has discussed the safety of CCA pressure-treated wood with officials from the Department of Health. We have also discussed the issue with DTI who represent the views of the Construction Industry; and with HSE who carried out a risk assessment of CCA products used to treat wood, under the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986.

In the UK wood preservatives are covered by the Control of Pesticide Regulations, and the Health and Safety Executive lead on such non-agricultural pesticides. CCA is approved for the pre-treatment of timber by pressure impregnation at industrial sites. This follows the advice to Ministers from the independent Advisory Committee on Pesticides (ACP) that such products do not present any risk to human health or the environment.

Recently the EU Scientific Committee on Toxicity, Ecotoxicity and the Environment advised that there was a small risk to children from the use of CCA treated wood in playground equipment. Applying the precautionary principle, the Commission have subsequently drawn up proposals under the Marketing and Use Directive, which would prevent the use of CCA treated wood, with some exceptions such as for railway sleepers and electricity and telephone poles. This would prevent its use in playground equipment.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations her Department has received regarding the number of playgrounds using CCA pressure-treated wood. [69626]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 17 July 2002]: The Department has not received any representations regarding the number of playgrounds using CCA pressure-treated wood. However Copper Chrome Arsenic (CCA) pressure-treated wood preservative is the most common wood preservative for softwoods which are often used externally and have been used extensively in playgrounds. There are alternative materials which can be used in place of CCA treated wood in playground equipment.

HEALTH

Social Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) the average fee paid per person per week in each social services authority in England on purchasing places in the private and voluntary sector by social services, (b) the percentage increase in each social services authority in England, (c) the retail price index change and (d) the average wage level change was in each year since 1993–94. [69715]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the average fee paid per person per week on purchasing places in the private and voluntary sector by local authority social services is not available centrally.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was allocated to each London borough through (a) personal social services standard spending assessment and (b) special grants in 2001–02. [69964]

Jacqui Smith: The tables show how much was allocated to each London Borough through (a) personal social services standard spending assessment and (b) special grants in 2001–02.

In addition, the City of London was allocated £1,280,000 from the drugs and alcohol specific grant and was responsible for pan-London services for all London Boroughs.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what vacancies there were for social workers and social care staff in London social services; what the average age was of social workers and social care staff employed by the London boroughs; and how many people took early retirement from social work and social care employment by the London boroughs in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [69963]

Jacqui Smith: This information is not available centrally.

Mutual Organisations

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with mutual organisations which are delivering health and social care. [65013]

Ms Blears [holding answer 27 June 2002]: I hosted a seminar in June with experts and practitioners in the field of social enterprise to explore thinking around social enterprise activities, and their potential contribution in partnership with public services.

Speech and Language Therapy

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when Morecambe Bay NHS Primary Care Trust will lift its temporary recruitment freeze on speech and language therapists. [68938]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 15 July 2002]: Morecambe Bay Primary Care Trust has not implemented a freeze on any posts, and this includes posts in the speech and language therapy service. Lancashire Education Authority recently provided additional funding of 0.4 whole time equivalent to provide speech and language therapy input to the paediatric services. The recruitment process is currently underway.

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to improve paediatric (a) occupational, (b) physiotherapy and (c) speech and language therapy services in Morecambe and Lunesdale. [68939]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 15 July 2002]: Children's and adolescent services are one of the priorities for the Morecambe Bay health community modernisation programme. As part of this process, the group will be reviewing the needs of children with disabilities and the therapy resources which are available to support them.

Medical School

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to encourage more men to attend medical school; and if he will make a statement. [70054]

Mr. Hutton: The overall number of medical school places is being increased by 2,150 places over 1997 levels. The increase will have been delivered by autumn 2005. As part of this increase 10 medical schools will be offering shortened graduate entry 4 year courses to students with appropriate qualifications. This is intended to broaden the base of medical school intake.

Since 1997 the number of male entrants to medical school increased by over 250. We expect that trend to continue as the remaining new places come on stream.

Both the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Skills are committed to ensuring that there is a balanced and diverse medical student population of the requisite quality to meet the demand for doctors. This is a matter for ongoing discussion with the universities and medical schools. The Department and Higher Education Funding Council for England joint medical expansion group will continue to monitor the situation closely.

Universities are autonomous bodies who are responsible for operating their own application systems but they collectively adhere to the "Guiding Principles for the Admission of Medical Students" issued by the Council of Heads of Medical Schools in February 1999. This guidance follows principles of fairness, diversity and equity in access.

UK Plasma Products

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the safety of UK plasma products; and if he will make a statement. [68142]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 July 2002]: Since 1998 United Kingdom plasma has not been used in the manufacture of plasma derived products, including clotting factors, supplied to the National Health Service. This step was taken to reduce the unknown risks of transmission of vCJD.

Plasma products are tightly regulated by European and United States authorities to minimise the risk of viral transmission. This is achieved by the screening of donor blood and the anti-viral measures taken during manufacture. However no medicinal product can ever be completely free of risk.

Live Kidney Donations

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the number of live kidney donations. [69161]

Mr. Lammy: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State announced plans to increase organ donation and transplantation, including living kidney donation, at a transplant summit in February 2001. UK transplant, a special health authority established to carry out a range of functions to support transplantation, has been given increased funding to help more renal transplant units to set up live donor transplant programmes.

Live Donors

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for primary care trusts to contribute to a permanent fund for live donors. [69162]

Mr. Lammy: National Health Service commissioners are expected to provide for the cost of a live donor operation and to reimburse any reasonable expenses incurred by a live donor.

Shipman Inquiry

James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the first report on the Shipman inquiry. [72081]

Mr. Milburn: Dame Janet Smith, chairman of the Shipman inquiry published her first report today. I am grateful to her for the work she has so far carried out. Copies of the inquiry's report have been placed in the Library.

Forced Marriages

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will amend Schedule 2, Part I, of the Children Act 1989, to require local authorities to have regard to the services provided to the victims and potential victims of forced marriages. [70074]

Jacqui Smith: Children who are the victims or potential victims of forced marriages fall within the scope of section 17 of the Children Act 1989, which places a duty on local authorities to safeguard and promote the welfare of children within their area who are in need. That duty would not be strengthened by amending the wording of Part 1 to Schedule 2 of the Act.

EU Directives

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the EU directives and regulations that have been implemented through his Department in 2002; and what was the cost of each to public funds. [64971]

Mr. Lammy: The following European Union Directives and regulations have been implemented through the Department in 2002:

European Parliament and Council Directive 2001/83/EC on the Community Code Relating to Medicinal Products for Human Use, which incorporated Commission Directive 2000/38/EC on administrative action relating to medicinal products (pharmacovigilance), was implemented by SI 2002/236. There was no cost to public funds associated with implementing this directive.

Directive (2000/70/EC) and Directive (2001/104/EC) was transposed by Medical Devices Regulations 2002 (SI 2002 No. 618). No information is held on costs to public funds for this regulation but a regulatory impact assessment has been produced and placed in the House libraries.

My Ministerial team is also responsible for making legislation in policy areas covered by the Food Standards Agency. Listed below are the relevant EU Directives and regulations that have been implemented in 2002.

Directive 92/116/EEC and Directive 91/495/EEC were transposed by The Poultry Meat, Farmed Game Bird Meat and Rabbit Meat (Hygiene and inspection) (Amendment) (England) Regulations 2001 (SI 2002/3399)

Directive 2001/50 EC was transposed by The Colours in Food (Amendment) (England) Regulations 2001 (SI 2002/3442)

Directive 2001/30/EC was transposed by The Miscellaneous Food Additives (England) (No. 2) Regulations 2001 (SI 2002/3775)

Article 9 of Directive 89/398/EC was transposed by The Notification of Marketing of Food for Particular Nutritional Uses (England and Wales) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/333)

Directive 2001/52 was transposed by The Sweeteners in food (Amendment) (England) Regulations 2002 (SI2002/379)

Regulation 2001/466 and Directive 2001/22 was transposed by The Contaminants in Food (England) Regulations 2002 (SI 20/02/890)

The cost to public funds of this EU legislation is not recorded centrally and could only be assembled at disproportionate cost.

Prescription Charging

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the system of prescription charging, with specific reference to patients in (a) day wards and (b) in-patient centres. [70003]

Mr. Lammy: There is no charge for medication administered on hospital premises whether the patient is an in-patient, out-patient or day surgery case. Out-patients and day case patients are required to pay a prescription charge for any medication they are given to take at home, unless they qualify for free prescriptions under the extensive charge exemptions and remission arrangements or hold a pre-payment certificate. In-patients get their discharge medication free of charge. We have no plans to change the current charging arrangements.

Health Service Expenditure

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by NHS hospital trust in England and Wales what has been spent on improving accident and emergency services and minor injuries services in each year since 1995. [69775]

Mr. Lammy: The Department does not have this information by National Health Service hospital trust.

A total of £150 million has been invested in accident and emergency departments through the accident and emergency (A&E) modernisation programme. It is the biggest investment in A&E services since the start of the NHS.

The A&E modernisation programme enabled 180 A&E departments to be modernised. Work at 173 of these has been completed and the programme is currently 96 per cent complete.

Delayed Discharges

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the (a) progress of the London boroughs in meeting his targets for the reduction of delayed discharge from hospital between September 2001 and April 2002 and (b) outstanding challenges facing the London boroughs. [69965]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply. In September 2001 there were 1126 people who experienced a delayed transfer of care from an acute hospital bed in London. By March 2002, the target reduction to 901 beds had been met. London Boroughs received their share of the £300 million made available through the Building Care Capacity Grant to end unnecessary delayed discharges from hospital. Their total allocation was £42,560,387 over the two years 2001–02 and 2002–03.

London Boroughs have agreed challenging targets for further reductions, averaging between 20 per cent and 25 per cent by March 2003. The targets were set as part of the conditions for receiving the grant. For Personal Social Services, we have already announced annual average growth in real terms of 6 per cent from 2003–04 to 2005–06.

Solihull Hospital

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish and make locally available a document setting out which services and specialties are (a) now and (b) prospectively available to patients of Solihull hospital, and in particular details of accident and emergency services at that hospital. [67614]

Mr. Lammy: A wide range of information is available to local residents about emergency and other services provided at Solihull Hospital by the Birmingham Heartlands and Solihull National Health Service Trust. Any changes to the services provided will be published as part of the annual patient prospectus.

Mental Health

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many admissions there were of residents and former residents of each Government office region to (a) NHS and (b) private hospitals under the Mental Health Act 1983 in (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) 2001–02. [68905]

Jacqui Smith: The table shows numbers of admissions to National Health Service and private facilities, estimated by Government office region area, of patients detained under the Mental Health Act 1983 in England, for 1999–2000 to 2000–01. Figures for 2001–02 will be available later this year.

NHS facilities exclude high security psychiatric hospitals.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he received concerning the new draft Mental Health Bill prior to its publication; and if he will place them in the Library. [67961]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 8 July 2002]: The proposals in the Draft Mental Health Bill have been the subject of a long process of consultation by the Government, starting with the Green Paper Reform of the Mental Health Act 1983 published in November 1999. Responses to that document (where the respondent gave permission) were placed in the Libraries of the House of Commons and the House of Lords. Since then there have been informal discussions with key stakeholders and letters have been received, for example following the publication of the White Paper Reforming the Mental Health Act published in December 2000. None of these, however, were part of a formal consultation process and there was no expectation by those making representations that the comments would be made public.

Correspondence

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letter to the Minister of State, Dept of Health from the hon. Member for Salisbury dated 29 April about mental health services in South Wiltshire. [68930]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 11 July 2002]: A reply was sent on 17 July.

Fostering

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many placements of foster children have taken place in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [61358]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 17 July 2002]: The data available is shown in the table.

Estimated number of placements in foster care starting during the years ending 31 March 1997 to 2001

England	Number
Year	Number of foster placements
1997	59,400
1998	60,000
1999	57,500
2000	56,900
2001	49,000

Notes:

The above table excludes children looked after under a series of short term placements

It will also be noted that the fall in the number of foster placements starting in any one year is mirrored by the increase in their duration. That is, in any one year, whilst there are fewer placements, they last longer.

Dentistry

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the impact dental charges are having on the provision of dental health care for people from low income backgrounds; [68825]

(2) what steps the Government are taking to ensure necessary dental health care is provided to those who are working on low incomes and not receiving benefit. [68824]

Mr. Lammy: Working people who are receiving Working Families' Tax Credit or Disabled Person's Tax Credit at the full rate or maximum credit reduced by £72.20 or less per week do not have to pay National Health Service dental charges. Others on a low income may be entitled to free treatment via the NHS low income scheme and those not entitled to full remission of charges may get partial help under this scheme.

The table below shows the number of exempt adult courses of treatment in England for the years 1996–97 to 2000–01. It is not possible to draw firm conclusions about the impact of dental charges from these figures, but the most likely explanation is that they reflect an improvement in economic circumstances. Research has indicated that increases in charges do not have any significant long-term effect on attendance. There are many factors that influence attendance patterns, the primary ones being attitude and habit.

Energy

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated (a) level and (b) cost of energy use in his Department and associated agencies was in each year since 1997; what proportion of energy was generated from renewable sources; and if he will make a statement. [65954]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Member to the reply provided by my right hon. Friend the Minister for State at the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Alun Michael) on 3 July 2002, Official Report, column 384–85W.

The information provided does not reflect the current Department of Health position with regard to the procurement of Renewable Energy.

The Department's main electricity supply contract was re-tendered in November 2001 and the approved supplier, London Electricity, provides 92.1 per cent. of our electricity requirement with renewable energy which is not subject to the climate change levy.

Empty Properties

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the empty residential properties in each London borough in the ownership of his Department and its agencies, giving (a) the type of accommodation, (b) how long each property has been vacant and (c) what the intended future use is of the property. [69495]

Mr. Lammy: The Department and its agencies has no empty residential properties in any London borough.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department further to his answer to the hon. Member for the Isle of Wight (Mr. Turner) of 11 February 2002, Official Report, column 48W, on antisocial behaviour orders, how many of the antisocial behaviour orders given in each police/magistrates' court committee area between 1 April 1999 and 30 September 2001 have been breached; and how many of these breaches have resulted in a sentence of imprisonment. [46608]

Mr. Denham: The information is currently being collated, and I will write to the hon. Member when the results are known.

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been applied by UK local authorities in the last year. [70404]

Mr. Denham: An anti-social behaviour order (ASBO) is a civil order made by a court which currently can be applied for by a local authority or the police or both combined. The table shows the number of notifications received by the Home Office of ASBOs issued in England and Wales for 2001 (latest available). There were 11 ASBO applications during this period which were refused. Where an ASBO is refused we do not hold information on the applicant.

Number of anti-social behaviour orders reported to the Home Office for 2001

Applicant	Total number issued
Local Authority	173
Police	94
Joint application	9
Not known	7
Total	283

We are currently considering whether any further checks are needed to ensure the accuracy of the number of ASBOs reported.

Matters relating to local authorities in Scotland and Northern Ireland are for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland (Helen Liddell) and Northern Ireland (Dr. John Reid).

Young Offenders

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young people aged 18 to 20 years have a criminal record by region expressed as (a) a percentage and (b) total number, ranked in descending order according to percentages for the latest date for which figures are available. [30593]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 30 January 2002]: The latest available information relates to an analysis of a cohort of people born in 1978. Of the 307,000 males and 289,000 females born in 1978 it is estimated that 14.8 per cent of males and 3.0 per cent of females had a conviction for a standard list offence by the age of 20. No information is available on the number of persons with cautions, reprimands or final warnings.

Information is not held centrally on the address of an offender. However the police force area in which an offender received his or her most recent conviction can be used as a proxy. The police force areas have been combined to show numbers and percentages convicted by Government Office region.

Persons born in 1978 with a conviction for one or more standard list offences whilst aged 20 or under, by region and gender (1).

Wales	6.6 per cent	5.0 per cent	3,000	400
North East	5.6 per cent	7.8 per cent	2,500	620

[1] The number of persons in the table is obtained by examining the criminal histories of all persons born during four weeks of 1978; the distribution of offences and geographic location is representative of all persons born during 1978; the numbers are scaled to represent all 1978 births. The region shown covers the police force area in which the individual received his or her most recent conviction; any previous convictions could have been recorded in other regions.

Race Riots

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total public cost of the 2001 race riots was, broken down by local authority concerned. [25036]

Mr. Denham: The cost of the disturbances in the summer 2001; as broken down by local authority areas are as follows:

Oldham (26–29 May 2001)	£165,451	cost to local authority;
	£2,244,354	additional costs to Greater Manchester Police: at event;
	£32,097	subsequent high visibility patrols;
	£218,077	cost of repair and replacement of vehicles to Greater Manchester Police;
Burnley (24–26 July 2001)	£110,000	cost to local authority;
	£1,266,851	additional costs to Lancashire Constabulary;
Bradford (7–10 July 2001)	£121,347.03	cost to local authority;
	£3,453,000	additional costs to West Yorkshire Police;
Stoke-on-Trent	£870,000	additional costs to Staffordshire Police.

Greater Manchester, Lancashire and West Yorkshire Police Authorities have also received claims for compensation under the Riot (Damages) Act (1886). I understand that the settlement process is still continuing.

On 30 January I announced to the House, Official Report, column 302W that the Home Secretary had agreed to meet around two-thirds of extra cost of policing the disturbances, and had agreed grants as follows: West Yorkshire Police Authority £2.22 million; Greater Manchester Police Authority £1.44 million; Lancashire Police Authority £0.82 million; Staffordshire Police Authority £0.56 million. The sums paid are higher than would normally be provided under arrangements for special grant.

Drug Crime

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the most recent figures are for the proportion of crime that is drug related in (a) Lancashire, (b) the North West of England and (c) Wales. [70321]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Recorded crime figures include statistics on drugs offences; such as possession, and on acquisitive crimes, such as burglary, but do not record whether the latter are related to an offender's drug habits.

The New English and Welsh Arrestees Drug Abuse Monitoring (NEW-ADAM) research programme of interviewing and drug testing those arrested by the police sheds some light on the links between drugs and crime, although the conclusions do not relate specifically to the North West region or to Wales. As a guide to the proportion of crime that is drug-related, research based on eight locations (1999–2000) indicates that more than three-fifths (by value) of acquisitive crime, is committed by users of both heroin and cocaine/crack.

The numbers of acquisitive crimes recorded by the police in each of the three areas in 2001–02 are set out in Table 1. Acquisitive crimes are burglary, theft and robbery.

Table 1: Acquisitive crimes recorded by the police, 2001–02

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were (a) arrested and (b) convicted of drug dealing in (i) Lancashire, (ii) the North West of England and (iii) Wales in the last year for which figures are available. [70323]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Arrest data are not available centrally to the level of detail required. The following table presents information for each area requested on the number of (a) drug dealing offences referred to court and (b) drug dealing convictions in 2000.

Number of drug dealing offences in 2000

Area	Referred to court	Convicted
Lancashire (police force area)	369	249
Wales	1,078	734

(1) Police forces included in the total for the North West (Government Office Region) are as follows: Cheshire, Greater Manchester, Lancashire and Merseyside. Police forces included in the total for Wales are: Dyfed Powys, Gwent, North Wales and South Wales.

(2) The term "dealing" is taken to cover the following drug offences: possession with intent to supply unlawfully, unlawful supply, and unlawful import/export.

Drugs

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what he estimates to be the social and economic costs in the most recent year for which figures are available of illegal drugs in (a) Wales and (b) Lancashire. [70322]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The University of York, Centre for Criminal Justice Economics & Psychology (Culyer A., Eaton G., Godfrey C. et al., 2002) has recently completed a research report for the Home Office entitled "The Economic and Social Costs of Class A Drugs Misuse in England and Wales, 2000". The report will be published as a Home Office Research Study (HORS) Autumn 2002, but does not include any country or regional breakdown of costs.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has collated of links between (a) acquisitive and (b) violent crime and the use of (i) cannabis, (ii) amphetamines, (iii) LSD, (iv) cocaine, (v) ecstasy, (vi) heroin and (vii) crack. [66664]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: No statistical data are collected on offences that may have been committed due to specific drug taking. However, the New English and Welsh Arrestee Drug Abuse Monitoring (NEW-ADAM) research published between 1998 and 2001 sheds some light on the links between drugs and acquisitive crime. The research is insufficiently advanced to reveal the precise links between drugs and violent crime.

What the most recently published research does indicate is that users of both heroin and cocaine/crack (just under a quarter of the arrestees interviewed) are responsible for more than 60 per cent of the illegal income reported. Furthermore, 53 per cent of the arrestees reported having committed one or more acquisitive crimes in the last year. This increased to 62 per cent of those who had used any drug in the past 12 months, and 75 per cent of those who had used heroin and/or cocaine/crack in the last year. The latter group reported an average of 432 acquisitive crimes in the year—nearly 10 times the rate for non-drug-users. Therefore, drug use in general, and especially use of heroin and/or cocaine/crack, is associated with higher levels of crime.

There is little evidence of any strong links between acquisitive or violent crime and cannabis, amphetamine, ecstasy or LSD use.

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were convicted of (a) class A and (b) class B drug offences in (i) Leeds and (ii) each of the English regions in the past 10 years. [69953]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The information requested, relating to persons convicted for (a) Class A and (b) Class B drug offences in Leeds and the English regions for the years 1993 to 2000 is shown in the table.

A breakdown between the different classes of drug was not collected centrally prior to 1993. Statistics for 2001 will be available in the Autumn.

Cannabis

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how much cannabis a person would have to possess to be able to arrest them for dealing in the drug; [70137]

(2) how many cautions a person will be allowed to receive for possession of cannabis; [70138]

(3) what measures are in place to ensure that cannabis is not (a) used and (b) dealt near schools and other places where children are present; [70140]

(4) which class A and B drugs are to have sentences for dealing and possession increased; and what the new sentences will be. [70139]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: There are no plans to increase sentences for supply and possession of any Class A or B drug. The table sets out the current maximum penalties.

Misuse of drugs offences—current maximum penalties

Offence	Class A	Class B
Supply of a controlled drug	Life or a fine or both	14 years or a fine or both
Possession of a controlled drug	7 years or a fine or both	5 years or a fine or both

The police can arrest someone who is in possession of cannabis, as a dealer, if they have reasonable grounds to suspect that the person has committed an offence of possession with intent to supply. The Home Affairs Committee, however, was not persuaded that an intent to supply should be presumed on the basis of the amount of a drug found and the Government has accepted this view. There would be considerable practical difficulty in setting a figure for the amount of cannabis possessed to constitute a criminal offence of possession with intent to supply. Dealers would exploit this by ensuring that the amount of the drug held by them remained below such a figure. The amount of the drug found in possession is an important factor, but not the only one, to consider in deciding on intent to supply. Other factors, such as other items in the person's possession or intelligence information gathered, might also be relevant.

The Association of Chief Police Officers is currently developing a model for enforcing cannabis possession offences which they expect to issue this Autumn, following consultation. It is expected that the majority of first offences of cannabis possession by an adult will be dealt with by way of a formal warning from the police, together with confiscation of the drug. Further offending, or offending where there are aggravating factors, such as that involving a flagrant disregard for the law or which threatens public order, could result in arrest, followed by a caution or prosecution.

Youth offenders will be dealt with in the same manner as they are for all other offences, as detailed in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 Final Warning Scheme. Under that scheme, they should be reported for the offence and a decision should be made on their case disposal from the options of a reprimand, final warning or charge. A young person with no previous offending history should receive a reprimand. A second offence will lead to a warning or charge, depending on its seriousness. Any further offending following a warning will normally result in a charge being brought.

Frequent use is an indication of vulnerability and this needs to be taken seriously. Hence, after a final warning, a youth offender must be referred to the Youth Offending Team to arrange a rehabilitation programme to prevent reoffending.

We are currently launching local Safer Schools Partnerships with an initial 100 police officers in schools by September, which will help to make the communities around schools safer places to be. The Department for Education and Skills encourages all schools to have a drug incident management policy agreed by the governors, staff and parents in consultation with the local police. Schools are also encouraged to involve pupils in this process.

We are considering the introduction of a separate criminal offence of supplying drugs to young people which would attract higher maximum sentences than are currently available. Those who deal near schools would be sentenced severely.

Law Enforcement Priorities

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he gives to individual police forces regarding priorities in law enforcement. [70410]

Mr. Denham: Under the Police Act 1996 the Home Secretary sets strategic objectives for the police. These are commonly known as the Ministerial Priorities. For the current year, 2002–03, these are:

To help create safe communities by reducing crime, anti-social behaviour and disorder through effective partnership working, including reducing the availability and use of Class A drugs.

To reduce the fear of crime in all sections of the community and in particular to increase the trust and confidence in policing amongst minority ethnic communities.

To increase the number of offences for which offenders, and particularly persistent offenders, are caught and brought to justice, in partnership with other criminal justice agencies.

Guidance on how best to achieve these priorities is not issued by the Home Office. It is for each Chief Officer, in consultation with their police authority, to determine the allocation of resources in a way which ensures that the Ministerial Priorities are complied with.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many frontline Metropolitan police officers have less than two years' experience, broken down by Greater London borough; and if he will make statement. [67007]

Mr. Denham: The information in the table has been provided by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. Newly appointed Police Officers serve a period of probation which normally lasts for two years. The table shows the number of probationer officers by borough. They all perform frontline duties.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the Metropolitan Police accommodation used to house police officers undergoing their intial training is owned by the Metropolitan Police Force; who owns the properties being used by the Metropolitan Police for accommodation which are not owned by the Metropolitan Police; and if he will make a statement. [66817]

Mr. Denham: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that the Metropolitan Police Authority owns or leases all the accommodation used to house police officers undergoing their initial training. Currently, 18 per cent of available bed spaces for recruits are leased from the Ministry of Defence at Mill Hill Barracks.

Special Constables

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average gap between recruitment and enlistment of special constables was in the Metropolitan Police in the last 12 months. [65497]

Mr. Denham: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that the average processing time for applicants to the Metropolitan Special Constabulary in the past 12 months was 12 weeks (from date of receipt of application to attestation).

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special constables there were in Buckinghamshire in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [68523]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 16 July 2002]: The Home Office records the number of special constables by police force, not by county. The number of special constables in Thames Valley Constabulary at 30 September between 1997–2001 is as follows:

1997	1998	1999	2000	2001

Figures supplied by Thames Valley Police.

Special constables are a key element of our police reform agenda. We are working on a package of measures to help reverse the decline in the number of special constables by improving the way they are recruited, managed and deployed. We are publishing guidance on good practice by the end of the year. We are also keen to improve liaison with employers and to encourage recognition of the wealth of skills and experience that specials bring to the workplace. We have also set aside £300,000 to help "specials champions" drive forward initiatives to improve recruitment and retention.

Police Stations

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police stations (a) closed and (b) opened in each police authority area in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement. [66615]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 2 July 2002]: Data are only available from 1990–91. Copies of the table detailing the number of police stations closed and opened, and the total numbers of police stations for each police authority since 1990–91 will be placed in the Library.

Information is available from all 43 forces for the total number of police stations for the three years to March 2000, March 2001 and March 2002. A number of forces were unable to provide data on total police stations or on numbers opened or closed for earlier years and this is reflected in the table.

(6) The totals given for 1990 cover data from 33 forces only. Data was not available from the remaining 10 forces. The totals given for 1991–97 cover data from 34 forces. The total figures for the number of police stations for 1998 and 1999 cover data from 35 forces. Although the figures for the total number of police stations for March 2000 covers data from all 43 forces, data on the number of openings/closures in 1999–2000 are only available from 37 forces.

Police (National Insurance)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by how much he estimates he would have to increase his Department's grant to the West Mercia Constabulary from April 2003 to meet the costs of the increased national insurance employers' contributions due from that month. [61281]

Mr. Denham: In common with other public sector employers, police authorities will be expected to meet any additional National Insurance employer's contributions within funding available to them from 2003–04.

Speed Enforcement

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average (a) number and (b) proportion of each police force was employed in speed enforcement on roads in the last five years. [70409]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Information in the form requested is not collected. Data is however collected by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) for the number of officers who are deployed to all traffic duties. The table shows the number of police officers, as at 31 March, for each year from 1998 to 2001 who were deployed to traffic duties in each force in England and Wales and what proportion this was of the strength of each force. Figures for 2002 are not yet available.

The basis on which HMIC classify police service staff changed in the year 1999–2000 so the figures for 31 March 2000 and 31 March 2001 are not directly comparable with those for earlier years. Some officers counted as deployed to traffic duties in earlier years may, from 1999–2000 onward, have been recorded as deployed to duties relating to traffic wardens.

Deaths in Custody

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) deaths in custody have occurred, (b) public inquiries into deaths in custody have taken place and (c) convictions of police officers secured as a result of cases arising out of deaths in custody, in each year since 1990; [69838]

(2) what procedures the police are required to follow when investigating a death in custody; and if he will place a copy of his guidance in the Library; [69839]

(3) how many independent inquiries into deaths in custody his Department has participated in each year since 1990. [70092]

Mr. Denham: The Home Office publishes annual statistics of deaths in police custody or otherwise following contact with the police. The figures for each year since 1990 are shown in the table. Statistics for 2001–02 are currently being finalised.

Year	Total number of deaths
1990	61
1991	60
1992	48
1993	31
1994	39
1995–96*	50
1996–97	57
1997–98	69
1998–99	67
1999–2000	70

There have been no public inquiries into deaths in police custody in any year since 1990. Statistics on the number of police officers who have been convicted as a result of cases arising out of deaths in police custody are not collected centrally.

The Home Office have not participated in any independent inquiries into deaths in police custody in any year since 1990.

The procedures relating to the investigation of a death in police custody are contained in sections 70–76 of the Police Act 1996. Where such a death occurs the police are required to refer the investigation to the Police Complaints Authority (PCA) for supervision. It is the responsibility of the PCA supervising Member to approve the appointment of the Senior Investigating Officer (SIO), either from the force where the death occurred or from another force, and to agree the terms of reference for the SIO covering the parameters of the investigation. The PCA recently published their supervision manual which sets out the Authority's approach to supervision and the standards its supervising members will apply.

Investigatory Branch CIB 3

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many allegations of perjury at hearings of bail applications have been made against officers from CIB 3 during the last four years. [69325]

Mr. John Denham: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that the Metropolitan Police Service complaints and discipline system indicates that there have been seven allegations in respect of perjury and irregularities in evidence against officers from the Anti-Corruption Unit of the Metropolitan Police Service's Directorate of Professional Standards (formerly CIB3) in all types of courts during the last four years.

Detective Chief Superintendent John Yates

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what investigations have been carried out into a complaint of perjury by Detective Chief Superintendent John Yates at Horseferry Road Magistrates' Court on 18 January 1999. [69330]

Mr. Denham: I am informed by the Commissioner of the Metropolis that no investigations were carried out into complaints of perjury by Detective Chief Superintendent John Yates at Horseferry Road Magistrates' Court on 19 (not 18) January 1999. Two complaints were made by a convicted police officer and his father. After considering the complaints under the Police Act 1996, the Police (Discipline) Regulations 1985 and as a criminal allegation, the Metropolitan Police Service decided that there were insufficient grounds to appoint an investigating officer.

Litigation

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases (a) his Department and (b) its agencies have defended in (i) industrial tribunals and (ii) the courts in each year since 1997; how many were concluded in their favour; and what the total cost to his Department of litigation was in each year. [41111]

Mr. Blunkett: I refer the hon Member to the reply I gave him on 11 July 2002, Official Report, column 1198W.

Credit Card Fraud

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department has taken with credit card companies in 2002 to help combat credit card fraud. [71098]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The Home Office in association with the trade association for credit card companies has set up a two-year pilot of a unique policing unit, the Dedicated Cheque and Plastic Crime Unit. The unit, based in London, was launched in April 2002, with the Home Office providing 25 per cent of the funding requirement.

The Home Office is also actively supporting the credit card companies in their work towards implementation of Chip and personal identification number (PIN) by April 2005. Under this initiative, microchips will be introduced into payment cards to help authentication. This will be combined with the introduction of PIN as a more secure method of authentication than signature.

Officials are in frequent contact with the Association for Payment Clearing Services (APACS) to discuss and encourage implementation of other credit card fraud reduction initiatives such as verification of Internet transactions.

Crime and Disorder Partnerships

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 June 2002, Official Report, column 102W, on crime and disorder partnerships, what action he intends to take to ensure that police authorities obtain the views of people on the changes to policing. [68045]

Mr. Denham: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 15 July 2002, Official Report, column 89W.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the number of offences committed in each police authority area in England in each reporting period since 1995–96; and if he will make a statement. [56237]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 21 May 2002]: The requested information is given in the table.

The period requested covers the change in counting rules for recorded crime on 1 April 1998, and the boundary change involving the Metropolitan Police on 1 April 2000. Some forces adopted the principles of the National Crime Recording Standard in advance of its national implementation on 1 April 2002. This may inflate the number of crimes those forces recorded.

* Adopted the principles of the National Crime Recording Standard prior to 1 April 2002.

(1) The number of crimes recorded in that financial year using the coverage and rules in use until 31 March 1998.

(2) The number of crimes recorded in that financial year using the expanded offence coverage and revised counting rules which came into effect on 1 April 1998.

(3) New boundaries for the police force areas of Hertfordshire, Essex, Metropolitan Police and Surrey came into effect on 1.4.2000. These figures are the totals for the new areas in the previous year.

Elderly Crime Victims

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many victims of crime there were aged 65 and over in each year since 1997 in each constabulary. [56569]

Mr. Denham: Recorded crime statistics collected centrally do not identify the age of the victim, and therefore the requested information is not available for individual police forces. Information on the age of victim is only available from the 2000 sweep of the British Crime Survey (BCS). The BCS estimates that in 1999 there were 273,000 personal crimes in England and Wales committed against those aged 65 and over. Those aged 65 and over represent 20 per cent of the population for England and Wales, but only experience 4.9 per cent of all personal crimes. The BCS also estimates that there were a further 1,090,000 household crimes against households headed by persons aged 65 or over. These BCS figures cannot be reliably broken down to constabulary level.

Personal offences here covers assault, robbery, theft from the person, other personal theft. Household offences here covers bicycle theft, burglary, theft in a dwelling, other household theft, theft of and from vehicles and vandalism to household property and vehicles. The BCS does not cover crime against those not living in private households, for example in care homes.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government are taking to reduce crime against pensioners. [58365]

Mr. Denham: British Crime Surveys show that elderly people are far less likely to suffer crime than younger people. But we recognise the impact that crime can have on elderly people. In addition to the work we are pursing to reduce crime generally, we have funded several schemes specifically to tackle crime against the elderly.

We have set up a Distraction Burglary Task Force, with £1 million Home Office funding, to gather data, publicise good practice, raise awareness and provide guidance for victims of this type of burglary, which is committed predominantly against the elderly.

We have allocated over £1 million, under the Crime Reduction Programme, to three distraction burglary projects in Leeds, Sheffield and a consortium of forces led by Derbyshire.

We have funded a two-year programme to provide home security upgrades for low income pensioners in areas with burglary rates above the national average. This scheme runs in conjunction with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA's) Warm Front scheme, which provides heating and insulation improvements. By the end of May, some 114,000 eligible homes had been surveyed, of which over 58,000 are receiving additional locks or bolts.

We know that people over the age of 65 are among the most likely to fear crime despite being the group least likely to become a victim of crime. Research suggests this may in part be because the impact of crime can be far more traumatic for the elderly and vulnerable than for those of a younger age.

We are working closely with Age Concern and Help the Aged to identify ways to tackle misperceptions about the risk of victimisation and also to educate the elderly as to the sensible precautions they can take to protect themselves. The Home Office are seeking to run a workshop at the Help the Aged annual conference in October during which these issues will be addressed; solutions identified will be incorporated into the Home Office strategy for reducing the fear of crime.

Retail Crime

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what study he has made of the link between alcohol consumption and drug-related violent crime against retail staff. [69812]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: No study has been undertaken to look specifically at the link between alcohol consumption and drug-related violent crime against retail staff. However, we are aware from the British Retail Consortium (BRC) ninth annual survey published this year of their concerns about the level of crime affecting retailers and the concerns they have that this is being driven by theft by drug and alcohol abusers. We are carrying out a commercial crime victimisation study of retail and manufacturing sectors later this year (the first for 10 years). This will give a firm basis for identifying the main crime problems affecting business and give valuable indicators of the best ways to tackle these issues.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to address violence against shop staff. [69809]

Mr. Denham: The Home Office is working with the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) to raise awareness of the need to tackle work related violence as part of the Health and Safety Commission's three-year programme of work (2000–03) to help reduce the incidence of work-related violence. The HSE published "Work-related violence: managing the risk in smaller businesses" on 9 July 2002. The publication includes 10 case studies on reducing risk of violence to staff. The HSE has also published specific guidance for the retail sector "Preventing Violence to Retail Staff". "Don't Discount Crime", a new user-friendly crime reduction guide for retailers became available in May 2002. This is being circulated among their members by retail trade organisations (including the British Retail Consortium), who were actively involved in deciding its content and design. It is of particular relevance to small retailers and includes basic guidance on what steps to take to reduce crime as well as what to do in crime situations.

Karl Bluestone

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what action was taken by the police authority in respect of (a) domestic violence perpetrated against his first wife and (b) subsequent incidents of domestic violence in the Bluestone murder case; [35655]

(2) how many incidents of domestic violence perpetrated by Mr. Bluestone were (a) recorded and (b) subject to disciplinary action. [35656]

Mr. Denham: Four incidents of domestic violence perpetrated by Karl Bluestone were brought to the attention of Kent County Constabulary, and all were recorded. The alleged victim in each of these incidents was Jill Bluestone. The Police were not aware of the incidents perpetrated against Mr. Bluestone's first wife.

In two of the incidents described above, reference was made to the Crown Prosecution Service who decided to take no further action. No disciplinary action was undertaken in relation to any of the incidents.

Following the murders perpetrated by Karl Bluestone, a number of reviews have been convened to examine the behaviour of the different agencies that had contact with the family. Reports already received have made a number of recommendations for the police and other agencies in order to minimise the risk of further tragedies and highlighted the lessons to be learnt from this particular case. The Home Office has been working closely with Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) to take forward those recommendations. Once the new ACPO lead officer takes up his duties in September, we shall set a target date for issuing guidance to forces on how to deal effectively with perpetrators of this crime who work within their ranks.

Entry Refusal (Sexual Exploitation)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been refused entry to the United Kingdom because of concerns that they would be sexually exploited in each of the last five years. [70282]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the reasons for which people were refused is not collated centrally and is therefore not available.

Yarl's Wood Fire

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the cost (a) to date and (b) in the next year to the Bedfordshire police, arising from the Yarl's Wood fire. [68623]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 July 2002]: The Chief Constable of Bedfordshire has informed me that the cost of the operation to date is approximately £2.9 million and that it is not possible to estimate future costs. The criminal investigation into the circumstances of the incident, and the forensic search of the material removed from the site is continuing.

English Language Teaching

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of people from (a) India and (b) Pakistan who are permanently settled in the UK and do not have a working knowledge of English. [68880]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have been asked to reply.

There is currently no information on the number of people from India and Pakistan who are permanently settled in the UK and do not have a working knowledge of English. However, the DfES has recently commissioned a large survey of adult basic skills needs, which should give us an indication of English language ability by ethnic group.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on English language teaching for (a) those from India and Pakistan settled permanently in the UK and (b) new arrivals with an inadequate grasp of English in each of the past five years broken down by constituency; and if he will make a statement. [68881]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Comprehensive data on the cost of providing English language training to these groups is not available.

People Trafficking

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been of people living in the United Kingdom for offences connected with the trafficking of women in each of the last five years; and of these, how many have been (a) convicted, (b) sentenced to imprisonment and (c) fined or deported. [70120]

Beverley Hughes: As there is at present no specific offence of trafficking, the police and other law enforcement agencies are not able to say how many people connected with the trafficking of women have been prosecuted, convicted, sentenced, fined or deported in the last five years.

The Government is creating a new offence of trafficking for the purposes of controlling someone in prostitution within the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Bill currently before Parliament. It will carry a maximum penalty of 14 years imprisonment. This is a stopgap offence pending more wide-ranging offences of trafficking for sexual and labour exploitation when Parliamentary time permits.

In May 2000, we set up Reflex, a multi-agency taskforce on organised immigration crime, including people trafficking. Led by the National Crime Squad (NCS), Reflex brings together all the key agencies from law enforcement, Government and the intelligence community, including the Immigration Service, the National Criminal Intelligence Service (NCIS) and police forces such as the Metropolitan Police, Kent Constabulary and the British Transport Police.

Under Reflex, we have set up a joint operational unit comprising NCS and Immigration Service officers with sites at Gatwick and Heathrow. This will provide a significant new capability to respond to allegations of trafficking in women.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the policy is of the Metropolitan Police in combatting the trafficking of people into the London area for work in the sex industry. [70285]

Beverley Hughes: The Metropolitan Police Service is a member of Reflex, a multi-agency taskforce on organised immigration crime, including people trafficking. Reflex targets the organised criminals involved in the trafficking and smuggling of people.

The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that the policy of the Metropolitan Police Service is to work with other agencies in detecting, prosecuting and, where appropriate, rescuing prostitutes, some of whom may have been trafficked, working both on and off the street. In order to tackle associated issues, kerb crawlers and those who affix prostitute cards are also prosecuted. Where there is evidence of trafficking for the purposes of prostitution, this is passed on to Reflex.

Immigration Officers (Prague Airport)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many British immigration officers are based at Prague airport; and what plans he has to increase this number. [71102]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 18 July 2002]: There are no British Immigration Officers based permanently at Prague airport.

A bilateral agreement reached with the Czech government in February 2001 allows passengers travelling from the Czech Republic to the United Kingdom to be precleared before their arrival in the United Kingdom.

Under the terms of the agreement a team of 12 British immigration officers, attached to our Embassy in Prague as consular officials, operate a pre-clearance control at Prague airport.

Pre-clearance operations in Prague are intended to be a short term and flexibly applied response, dependant on the number of inadmissible passengers arriving in the United Kingdom and are therefore re-introduced when operational pressures necessitate. The operation has been implemented on 12 occasions in total.

There are no plans at present to increase the size of the team.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of ordinary written Questions for his Department were answered within a week of tabling in each month since June 2001; and what proportion of questions for named day received a substantive answer on that day in each month since June 2001. [58976]

Beverley Hughes: The information requested is given in the following table:

Ordinary Written (OW) Cases answered within 7 days of tabling between 1 June 2001 and 25 June 2002

Type	Month	Total	Within 7 Days	Percentage

The Department recognises that our performance in answering PQs is not as good as it needs to be and we have implemented an action plan to improve the timeliness of our responses to PQs.

Imams

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the (a) number and (b) percentage of imams in the United Kingdom who received their religious education and training outside the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [69788]

Beverley Hughes: We do not collect this information.

Our recent White Paper "Secure Borders, Safe Haven—Integration with Diversity in Modern Britain" contains a proposal to allow those present in the United Kingdom (UK) in some other capacity to fill local vacancies as ministers of religion. It is envisaged that it is more likely that those who have already spent some time in the UK will have absorbed something of our culture and be better able therefore to relate their particular faith to the context of the UK. In addition, someone who has been in the UK is more likely to be able to speak English, which will enable him or her to play their part effectively as a religious leader and aid community relations. It will also be easier to verify the religious training or studies that have been undertaken by individuals whilst in the UK.

Nuisance Neighbours

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what legislation applies to nuisance neighbours in sheltered housing schemes; and if he will make a statement. [45621]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 26 March 2002]: There are a number of legislative measures that apply to nuisance neighbours. These include:

The Housing Act 1996, which makes provision for eviction and injunctions.

The Environmental Protection Act 1990, under which local authorities can deal with nuisance problems such as noise, smoke, fumes or gases emitted from premises.

The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 which introduced Anti-Social Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) which can be used to prohibit individuals from acting in a manner liable to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more people in another household.

The Protection from Harassment Act 1997, which makes it a criminal offence to cause another to fear that violence will be used against him or her.

The Government's consultation exercise on "Tackling Anti-Social Tenants" ended on 12 July. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will now be considering the responses and taking this work forward.

Speed Cameras

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many convictions relating to the use of mobile speed cameras there were for each police force in the last five years; [70408]

(2) how many convictions relating to the use of fixed-site speed cameras there were for each police force in the last five years. [70407]

Mr. John Denham: Data on convictions for speeding as the result of the use of cameras in England and Wales are not available centrally. Court records reported do not separately identify proceedings where cameras have been used.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the Government's response to the consultation on road traffic penalties; what plans he has to introduce an offence of negligent driving; what will constitute negligent driving for the purposes of the offence; and if he will make a statement. [69785]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: We aim to publish the Government's response to the consultation exercise on road traffic penalties before the summer recess.

There are no plans to introduce a negligent driving charge. However, one of the recommendations in the research report "Dangerous Driving and the Law" (Road Safety Research Report No. 26) commissioned by the Department for Transport, is that the Government should consult on the creation of an intermediate offence to deal with driving behaviour not amounting to Dangerous Driving but significantly more serious than Careless Driving, with more severe penalties than the lesser offence, including imprisonment.

We are currently considering this recommendation and whether changes in the law or its administration are needed.

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers police forces have in respect of road traffic offences carried out on unadopted roads. [70400]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Road traffic legislation applies to all roads, defined as any highway or other road to which the public has access. It would be for the courts to decide whether any particular unadopted road was one to which the public had access. Where the public does have access to such a road, the police are able to use their full range of powers to enforce road traffic legislation.

Security Industry Authority

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Security Industry Authority will begin to operate a national register of those licensed to work within the security industry. [58171]

Mr. Denham: The Security Industry Authority (SIA) will begin to compile registers of licence holders as soon as personal licensing begins. The SIA will come into existence on 1 April 2003 and we anticipate personal licensing will begin later that year.

Medical Confidentiality

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the extent to which the system of medical confidentiality allows for full access to a child's medical records, with specific reference to those held by general practitioners. [69759]

Mr. Lammy: I have been asked to reply.

Access to the confidential medical records of children, held by general practitioners or other parts of the health service, must be in accordance with the law. This would normally require the consent of a competent child or of someone with parental responsibility for the child. Where there is no one able to provide this consent, the best interests of the child might justify access. Where consent is withheld or it is not appropriate to seek consent, access would be possible where there is a statutory basis for permitting it or where the holder of the record feels that matters of public concern outweigh obligations of confidentiality.

Passports

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent improvements have been made to speed up the process of application for passports and renewing passports. [70134]

Beverley Hughes: On 14 January 2002, the United Kingdom Passport Service (UKPS) introduced two new guaranteed services at its counters: a premium same day service for renewals and a fast-track one week service for all applications. The standard service, available by post or through the UKPS High Street partners (i.e. selected branches of the Post Office and Worldchoice travel agents) is two weeks. This is not guaranteed but is currently being met in 99.5 per cent of applications. A pilot exercise to test the possibility of extending the fast track service to the High Street partners is currently taking place. Applications for passports can also be completed by telephone or on the Internet; the completed form is posted to the applicant for signature. Improvements to the electronic application channel are being developed on which the UKPS has sought the views of the Consultative Panel of Passport users. It would be technically possible for the improved electronic application channel to be available through private sector partnerships but there are no specific proposals at present.

Monday 22 July 2002

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Digital Licences

2. Mr. Mole: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the awarding of digital licences by the Independent Television Commission. [68958]

Tessa Jowell: The Independent Television Commission are solely responsible for the award of licences under the Broadcasting Acts. They considered that the BBC/Crown Castle joint proposal was best suited to ensure the long-term future of digital terrestrial television, subject to conditions mainly designed to prevent any competition issues. This will give a fresh start to the platform, offering free-to-view digital TV and enabling many consumers to enjoy the benefits of digital television.

School Sport

12. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she last discussed the subject of sport and physical education in schools with the Secretary of State for Education and Skills. [68969]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has regular discussions on this subject with her right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, and their last formal meeting was on 2 July.

25. Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding is available to local councils for sports facilities for schools. [68983]

Mr. Caborn: Funding for the development and improvement of sports facilities at schools is available to local education authorities through the New Opportunities Fund PE and Sport Programme which is providing £581 million in England, the Space for Sport and Arts Programme which is providing £130 million in England and Sport England's Lottery funded School and Community Sports Initiative. All facilities provided under these programmes are available to the local community.

Theatres (Barnsley)

13. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent representations she has received regarding theatre provision in Barnsley. [68970]

Dr. Howells: I have received no representations regarding this subject.

Sydonia Swimming Pool

14. Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will take steps to promote the reopening of Leominster's Sydonia swimming pool. [68972]

Mr. Caborn: Local authorities are key providers of sport and recreation facilities and play a central role in the delivery of sport in the community. The provision of swimming facilities is a matter for local authorities to consider in the light of local needs and the appropriate mixture of pubic and private provision. The Government support the provision of sport and leisure facilities through various means including funding from the Sports Lottery Fund, and I understand that Leominster city council has applied to Sport England for such funding.

Arts (North-East)

15. Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on Government support for the arts in the north-east. [68973]

Tessa Jowell: In 2003–04 Northern Arts will distribute almost £14 million in grant in aid in the north-east.

A further £4 million has been earmarked for Creative Partnerships to invest in the Tees Valley, Durham and Sunderland. Since 1995, almost £132 million of Lottery funding has been awarded to the north-east region by the Arts Council of England.

These awards have funded 956 projects including the BALTIC and Music Centre, Gateshead.

Arts Board

16. Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the changes proposed to the regional structure of the Arts Board. [68974]

Tessa Jowell: On 1 April 2002 North West Arts Board joined with other Regional Arts Boards and the Arts Council of England to create a new single arts funding and development organisation for England. The Arts Council will be producing a progress report on the development of the new organisation which I will consider in due course.

Sport (Young People)

17. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had with Sport England and other sports councils in the UK to discuss provision made to nurture sporting talent to compete successfully on the world stage. [68975]

Mr. Caborn: Officials from my Department hold regular meetings with members of Sport England to discuss the programmes in place to nurture sporting talent. My Department also maintains contact with the devolved Administrations concerning their programmes to support talented young athletes as well as fund athletes with the potential to win medals in significant future international competitions through Lottery funds.

Lord Nelson

18. Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will take steps to (a) purchase and (b) put on public display the collection of Lord Nelson's personal artefacts to be auctioned in the autumn. [68976]

Tessa Jowell: My Department does not acquire historical artefacts for public display and has no locus to intervene in the sale of private property. The purchase and subsequent display to members of the public of any of Lord Nelson's personal artefacts to be auctioned in the autumn is a matter for the Trustees or governing bodies of museums with an interest in such material.

Tourism

19. Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the tourism industry's recovery since the foot and mouth outbreak and 11 September last year. [68977]

Dr. Howells: According to the latest International Passenger Survey, in the three months to May this year, inbound visits and expenditure by overseas visitors were both 2 per cent. up on the same period in 2001.

Domestic tourism has also performed well. Data from the UK Tourism Survey show that, in the first quarter of 2002, trips were up 13 per cent. on 2001, while tourist spending was up by 18 per cent.

22. Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to support tourism in Oxfordshire and the Cotswolds; and if she will make a statement. [68980]

Dr. Howells: The Southern Tourist Board has produced a tourism strategy setting out the potential role for tourism in Oxfordshire and has distributed promotional literature to both domestic and overseas markets. The Regional Development Agency is also working with South West Tourism on a 10-year plan for tourism which directly involves representatives from around the Cotswolds.

The Government have also put £20 million into their biggest ever campaign for attracting visitors from abroad to the United Kingdom—the Million Visitors Campaign, whose aim is to attract that additional number to Britain, benefiting the whole country, including Oxfordshire and the Cotswolds. On 13 May, we announced proposals for the modernisation and reform of tourism in England. Our intention is for more resources to be devoted to marketing all of the English regions.

Music

20. Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures she will take to promote music as a cultural and economic activity. [68978]

Tessa Jowell: I recognise the central role played by music in our economic and cultural life. My Department works closely with all sections of the music industry and other Government Departments to identify and take forward a wide ranging work programme to ensure the continued success of the UK industry and our artists, at home and abroad.

Summer Play Schemes

21. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support her Department is giving for summer play schemes involving sport. [68979]

Tessa Jowell: We are today, jointly with the Youth Justice Board, launching a comprehensive programme of summer activities aimed at children and young people at risk of offending. The programme—Splash Extra—builds on the board's excellent Summer Splash programme.

Resourced through the New Opportunities Fund, Splash Extra is aimed at children and young people aged nine to 17 identified as at risk of offending and living in 300 estates in and around the street crime 'hotspot' areas.

It will provide a varied programme of quality sports, arts and other cultural activities, as well as personal development and education. We expect to reach at least 48,000 children and young people and possibly many more.

Splash Extra will be supported by key workers from Youth Offending Teams, the Connexions Service and the Children's Fund. As well as providing something to do over the summer for those at risk of offending, the programme will also support them back into education and training once it finishes.

Sport England is also supporting a range of activities mainly through work in Sport Action Zones including in West Cumbria, Luton, Bradford, Liverpool and East Manchester.

BBC Charter

23. Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she plans to announce the timetable for the review of the BBC Charter. [68981]

Tessa Jowell: I have already made clear that I expect the process of BBC Charter review to start in 2004.

Crime Initiative

24. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her Department is doing to support the Government's street crime and robbery initiative. [68982]

Tessa Jowell: My Department is playing a full part in the Government's drive to tackle street crime. We are today, jointly with the Youth Justice Board, launching a comprehensive programme of summer activities aimed at children and young people at risk of offending in the street crime areas. The programme—Splash Extra—builds on the Board's excellent Summer Splash programme.

Resourced through the New Opportunities Fund, Splash Extra is aimed at children and young people aged 9 to 17 identified as at risk of offending and living in 300 estates in and around the street crime 'hotspot' areas.

It will provide a varied programme of quality sports, arts and other cultural activities, as well as personal development and education. We expect to reach at least 48,000 children and young people and possibly many more.

Supported by key workers from Youth Offending Teams, the Connexions Service and the Children's Fund, Splash Extra will not only provide something for those at risk of offending to do over the summer. It will also ensure that they are supported back into education and training once the programme finishes.

Euro

26. Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she has recently met the English Tourism Council to discuss the acceptance of euro notes and coins. [68984]

Dr. Howells: No I have not. The British Tourist Authority have, in consultation with the tourism industry and HM Treasury, issued guidance entitled "The Euro—A guide for small tourism businesses" to assist tourism firms. Copies were placed in the Libraries of both Houses on 25 March.

Tennis

27. Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had with the Lawn Tennis Association and the All England Lawn Tennis Club on developing access to tennis coaching for children from poorer neighbourhoods. [68985]

Mr. Caborn: I met the chief executive and representatives from the LTA on 5 September 2001 to discuss the City Tennis Scheme which encourages children from inner city areas into the sport. I discussed the scheme further while attending the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Championships on 6 July.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not met either the Lawn Tennis Association or the All England Lawn Tennis Club specifically to discuss this subject.

Historic Buildings (Public Access)

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 3 July 2002, Official Report, column 314W, how many of the properties (a) grant aided through the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 and Local Government Act 1985 and (b) aided by the Heritage Lottery fund allow some public access. [68299]

Dr. Howells: 129 properties in London have received grants administered under the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 and Local Government Act 1985. There is no power under this legislation to require public access as a condition of the grant. These grants are for external repairs and improvements which can be viewed by the public from the street. Some buildings do allow an element of public access by virtue of their function, such as places of worship and shops.

As part of the condition of grant, the Heritage Lottery Fund requires that grantees ensure that the general public has appropriate access to properties and that no one is unreasonably denied access.

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 3 July 2002, Official Report, column 315, for what reason there is no automatic access requirement when properties are grant-aided under the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 and the Local Government Act 1985. [68300]

Dr. Howells: The grants English Heritage is empowered to give under the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 and Local Government Act 1985 are wide in scope. They are a transfer of responsibility from the former Greater London Council to English Heritage, along with the special statutory powers that the former Greater London Council held. There is no power under this legislation to require public access conditions. The grants are normally given for listed buildings at risk where they make a contribution to the appearance of a conservation area and where the works can be seen by the public from the exterior.

Historic Buildings (Grant)

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what requirements are placed on the owners of buildings of historical interest who are grant-aided by English Heritage and the Heritage Lottery Fund to refund the grant or part of the grant, if the property is sold. [68302]

Dr. Howells: For grant aid administered by English Heritage under Section 3A of the Historic Buildings and Monuments Act 1953, the whole grant is usually recoverable if the property is disposed of within 10 years of the original offer. Recovery conditions may be omitted where it is considered unnecessary or unenforceable.

Grant aid administered by English Heritage under the Planning (Listed Building and Conservation Areas) Act 1990 includes the following condition:

> "The grant or any such part of it as the Council sees fit, may be recovered from the grant recipient under Sections 58 and 80(7) of the Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990 if:
> (b) during the period of 3 years beginning with the day on which the grant is made, the recipient disposes of the interest held in the property on that day (the relevant interest), or any part of that interest, by way of a sale exchange or lease for a term of not less than 21 years."

When an applicant is awarded a Heritage Lottery Fund grant a contract is issued containing conditions of grant relating to the project. These include the following condition:

> "If you [the applicant] sell or dispose of a property we [the Heritage Lottery Fund] have funded within the period specified in our contract, we may ask you to repay our grant."

These conditions of grant are detailed on pages 8 and 9 of the Heritage Grant application pack, which is available on-line at www.hlf.org.uk.

Drugs (Sport)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to create an independent body responsible for drug-testing in sport. [69726]

Mr. Caborn: UK Sport currently has responsibility for the anti-doping programme in the UK. UK Sport is subject to scrutiny by the British Standards Institute, the World Anti-Doping Agency, the International Standards Organisation and the National Audit Office. Its achievement of certification by these bodies provides an independent assessment of the validity and effectiveness of its anti-doping programme and procedures. UK Sport's anti-doping programme, as it currently stands, provides appropriate levels of independent scrutiny and is well respected throughout the rest of the world.

South Bank Centre

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the South Bank centre has spent on (a) accountants, (b) legal advisers, (c) planning consultants and (d) other professionals, to work on the Rick Mather master plan to develop the south bank. [70997]

Dr. Howells: Between April 1998 and March 2002 the South Bank centre has spent £1.493 million, of which £300,000 has come from private donations, on the development of the master plan for the redevelopment of its three arts buildings, the British Film Institute Film Centre and the 27-acre riverside estate.

Of this sum, £399,000 was architectural costs, £160,000 was for planning advice, £224,000 legal costs, £149,000 was for other professional advice and £217,000 for public consultations. Other costs relate to technical studies, an economic option appraisal and the cost of international architectural competitions.

Consultation

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which consultation documents published by her Department in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultations. [70977]

Dr. Howells: A number of the consultation documents published in 2001 referred to the consultation criteria although none reproduced them in full.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many consultation documents published in (a) electronic or (b) printed form in 2001 her Department has monitored and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultations. [70979]

Dr. Howells: The Department regularly monitored and evaluated consultations in 2001.

Pride of Place

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to the answer of 13 May 2002, Official Report, column 414W, how many copies of "Pride of Place" have been sold. [70869]

Dr. Howells: This figure will not be available until the end of August. I have asked the Arts Council to write to the hon. Member directly once they have it and also to confirm how many projects have taken up their offer of complimentary copies.

Spectrum Scarcity

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her policy is on spectrum scarcity in the digital environment; and what implications her policy has for the continuation of a statutory ban on religious organisations holding a wide range of broadcasting licences. [71712]

Dr. Howells: Although digital broadcasting has relieved some pressure on spectrum, scarcity remains an issue. The Government's aim is to ensure that limited spectrum is distributed so as to satisfy as many viewers/listeners as possible, and in terms of religious broadcasting, to avoid giving one religion an unfair advantage over another, so that everyone's beliefs are equally respected. The Government's position is set out in the document "The draft Communications Bill—The Policy" which states that, where there is sufficient spectrum availability, restrictions on religious bodies holding licences will be removed (paragraph 9.3.3).

The Radio Authority, which licences all independent radio services in the UK, is currently given discretion under the Broadcasting Act 1990 to award local analogue, satellite and cable licences to religious bodies, subject to compliance with the Authority's codes, and the ITC can also award cable and satellite TV licences to religious organisations.

The draft Bill increases the number of types of licences which religious bodies can hold by giving OFCOM discretion to award local digital sound programme service licences, digital additional service licences, digital programme service licences and TV restricted service licences.

S4C

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the cost of the 10 hours of programmes provided by the BBC for S4C each week in each of the last five years. [71757]

Dr. Howells: The cost to the BBC of providing programmes to S4C in accordance with section 58 of the Broadcasting Act 1990, in each of the last five years, was:

	£ million
1997–98	16.7
1998–99	16.3
1999–2000	16.9
2000–01	16.0
2001–02	16.4

Information Campaigns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much her Department spent on information literature, advertising and campaign material in financial year 2001–02; if she will list the campaigns that spent over £250,000; and if she will make a statement. [70203]

Dr. Howells: The Department's spending on information literature in 2001–02 was £300,591.

No advertising or campaign material was produced during this period.

Creative Partnerships Programme

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the progress of the Creative Partnerships Programme. [68957]

Tessa Jowell: We have established Creative Partnerships in 16 of the most deprived areas of the country. Each partnership will offer children and young people the opportunity for unprecedented access to creative learning, through bringing cultural and educational institutions and practitioners together. The first projects will begin with the new school year in September.

Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Totnes dated 28 June about the number of road and carriageway closures in Royal Parks; and if she will make a statement on the delay in responding. [71191]

Tessa Jowell: I received the hon. Gentleman's letter on 1 July 2002. As the subject of his letter is an operational matter for the Chief Executive of the Royal Parks Agency, I asked him to respond on my behalf and I understand that he did so on 17 July 2002.

My Department aims to reply to Members' correspondence within 18 working days of receipt. In this case a reply was issued to the hon. Gentleman in 13 working days.

Sport (Chorley)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on her plans to develop sport in the Chorley constituency. [68962]

Mr. Caborn: The Government are committed to increasing opportunities for participation in sport for all people, particularly youngsters, in all parts of the country. My Department is working closely with the Department for Education and Skills to improve access to and quality of PE and school sport in all parts of the country. I am aware that Chorley Council is working with a number of organisations including Lancashire Sport, the Chorley and District Sports Forum and Sport England to improve sporting provision in the Borough.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

European Parliament Elections

36. Norman Baker: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what consideration is being given by the Commission to the merits of the method of election used for elections to the European Parliament. [68950]

Mr. Beith: I understand that no such consideration is being given by the Commission. However, in accordance with its responsibilities under the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000, the Commission will conduct a review of the next scheduled elections to the European Parliament in June 2004.

Local Government Elections (Wales)

37. Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what work the Electoral Commission plans to undertake on electoral arrangements for local government in Wales. [68951]

Mr. Beith: I understand from the Chairman that the Commission has no plans at present for work on local government electoral arrangements in Wales.

40. Kevin Brennan: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission, what consultations he has had with the Electoral Commission on recommendations relating to local government elections in Wales. [68954]

Mr. Beith: The Speaker's Committee has not had any consultations with the Electoral Commission on this subject.

All-Postal Voting

39. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission, if the Committee will ask the Electoral Commission to undertake research on the impact of all-postal voting pilots on the secrecy of the ballot. [68953]

Mr. Beith: The Electoral Commission is currently preparing its evaluation of the all-postal voting and other pilot schemes that took place in May 2002. The evaluation, which will be published on 1 August, will consider the impact of the pilot schemes on the secrecy of the ballot. The Commission is also undertaking a wider review of the law and practice in relation to absent voting, which includes consideration of secrecy and security of the ballot and related issues.

Franchise

41. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission, whom he will be consulting on the question of reducing the voting age to 16. [68955]

Mr. Beith: I understand the Commission intends to start work on its formal review of the minimum age for voting in UK elections in January 2003. The Commission intends to include in its review a significant period of open public consultation, giving interested individuals and organisations the opportunity to make their views known.

The Commission will also be approaching a number of groups directly, including young people's representative forums and agencies, Members of Parliament, and the devolved bodies in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

GM Crops

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what separation distances she recommends should be imposed between GM and non-GM or organic crops of (a) sugar or fodder beet, (b) maize and (c) oilseed rape, to avoid contamination of the non-GM or organic crop above 0.01 per cent. [46621]

Mr. Meacher: There are insufficient data to determine separation distances between crops that would achieve a cross-pollination threshold of 0.01 per cent. Furthermore, 0.01 per cent. is below the level at which an incidental GM presence can reliably be quantified with current analytical methods.

In 2000 the National Institute of Agricultural Botany (NIAB) reported on the separation distances required to ensure that cross-pollination is below specified limits. These distances for oilseed rape and maize are shown in Table 1. NIAB did not recommend a distance for beet crops because beet is biennial and generally does not flower in the year of harvest, and any "bolters" can and should be removed before flowering. In addition, incoming pollen would not affect the vegetative parts of the plant (beet root and foliage). In 2001 the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment augmented the NIAB advice in respect of maize (Table 2). The NIAB study took account of work undertaken for the Soil Association by the National Pollen Research Unit (NPRU) which recommended separation distances to achieve an incidental GM presence which was not quantified but described as "very low risk". These distances are shown in Table 3. The NIAB study also reviewed work from a variety of researchers, such as Jones and Brooks—"Effectiveness of distance and border rows in preventing outcrossing in corn"; Oklahoma Agricultural Experimental Station, Technical Bulletin No. T-38, 1950.

Table 1: Summary of separation distances (m) required to maintain cross-pollination of the whole fields at below specified levels for fields of 2ha or more metres

Crop	Threshold levels of cross-pollination 1%	0.5%	0.1%
Oilseed rape (B. napus and rapa)
Conventional varieties and restored hybrids	1.5	10	100
Varietal associations and partially restored hybrids	100	[1]—	[1]—
Maize/sweetcorn
For grain	200	300	[1]—
For silage	130	200	420

[1] Insufficient information to produce a recommendation (see report for more detail).

NIAB report "Review of the use of separation distances between genetically modified and other crops", August 2000.

Table 2: Summary of ACRE's advice on cross-pollination in relation to Farm Scale Evaluations of Genetically Modified Maize, 1 May 2001

metres

	Separation distances from GM maize[1]
Neighbouring crop (organic and non-organic)	Adventitious GM presence in the grain or silage (upper limit) 1%	0.5%	0.1%
Maize grown for grain (sweetcorn, seed crops)	130	200	420
Maize grown for silage (forage maize)	80	130	290

[1] The table refers to varieties of GM maize, such as that used in the farm scale evaluations, which are heterozygous for the GM trait. For any homozygous varieties the amount of GM presence will be approximately double the above figures at the same separation distances.

NPRU's recommended "very low risk distances", January 2000

metres

Crop	Very low risk distance
Maize	3,000
Sugar beet	[1]1,000
Oil seed rape	6,000

GMOs

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will publish her detailed response to the Agriculture and Environment Biotechnology Commission report; and if she will launch the public debate on genetic modification. [65519]

Mr. Meacher: The Government are considering the details of the advice from the Agriculture and Environment Biotechnology Commission on a public debate on GM issues and will respond as soon as possible. Our intention is that the public debate will start as quickly as possible once the detailed arrangements have been finalised.

Committee LIFE

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the mandate of the Committee on the Financial Instrument for the Environment (LIFE) is; how many times it has met over the last 12 months; what the UK representation on it is; what the annual cost of its work is to public funds; if she will list the items currently under its consideration; if she will take steps to increase its accountability and transparency to Parliament; and if she will make a statement. [56724]

Mr. Meacher: Council Regulation EC 1655/2000 establishes the Financial Instrument for the Environment (LIFE). The LIFE Committee is a regulatory Committee provided for under Article 11 of the LIFE Regulation. The mandate of the Committee is to assist the Commission with the establishment of guidelines for the type of projects to be funded, and to approve the lists of projects selected for funding.

The Committee has met twice in the last 12 months. Two representatives are permitted from each member state. The Commission pays for one representative to attend from each member state. Additional representatives from the UK cost around £400 per meeting. The cost of attending this Committee over the last 12 months was approximately £800.

The main issues being considered by the Committee are the guidelines and application process for the Instrument, communication and lists of projects to be funded under both LIFE Environment and LIFE Third Countries.

Swillfeeding

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact on British businesses of the ban on swillfeeding. [68492]

Margaret Beckett: The change in national legislation was based on the advice of the Chief Veterinary Officer in the context of the outbreak of foot and mouth disease and is consistent with the requirements of forthcoming EU legislation on Classical Swine Fever and animal by-products. The index case of the FMD outbreak was at premises where the producer has been subsequently prosecuted for feeding unprocessed catering waste.

The proposal to ban swillfeeding was the subject of a full public consultation and a Regulatory Impact Assessment. The majority of respondents were in favour of a ban on the feeding of catering waste containing meat or meat products as swill to livestock. The final RIA was published with the Animal By-Products (Amendment) (England) Order 2001 and a copy is available from the Library of the House.

Animal Feed

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the risk to animal health from the use of waste cooking oil as an additive in animal feed. [68488]

Margaret Beckett: Used cooking oils are almost solely of vegetable origin in the UK and are not in themselves unsafe, although there is a risk that they may become contaminated. That risk can be removed if an effective control and traceability system is in place.

TB

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the scope, progress, timetable and conclusions of her Department's research projects on TB in wildlife other than badgers. [68505]

Margaret Beckett: There are currently two research projects under way which focus on TB in wildlife other than badgers. Summary details are given in the table:

Title of research project	Start date	End date
The risk to cattle from Mycobacterium bovis in wildlife species other than badgers	1 May 1999	30 April 2004
The risk to cattle from wildlife species other than badgers in areas of high herd breakdown risk	1 January 2000	31 November 2003

The research projects are proceeding according to plan. Following completion the findings of each project will be published.

Water Level Management

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many water level management plans have received grant aid for implementation from her Department in each of the last five years; and what assessment she has made of the adequacy of this level of expenditure. [68192]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA provides grant towards the cost of approved capital works undertaken by the Environment Agency, local authorities and Internal Drainage Boards (IDBs), inter alia, to implement water level management plans (WLMPs). The numbers of works in relation to WLMPs approved for grant in each of the last five years is:

	Number
1997	2
1998	2
1999	3
2000	2
2002 (to date)	1

The Department is committed to its WLMP initiative. In February 2001 in order to encourage implementation of plans I announced an increase in grant rates for IDBs to 80 per cent. for sites of international importance, and 50 per cent. for sites of national importance.

The operating authorities have a High Level Target in relation to completion and implementation of WLMPs. Part B of this target is to have in place a detailed programme for implementing and reviewing WLMPs:

For European and Ramsar sites (by April 2002)

For other SSSIs (by April 2003).

The Environment Agency is also required to report to DEFRA on operating authorities progress in implementing and reviewing WLMPs against their published programme. We will be reviewing the information received from this reporting process to see whether expenditure is adequate.

Floods

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many feasibility studies have been (a) commissioned and (b) completed by the Environment Agency following the flooding of autumn 2000; what (i) flood alleviation measures have resulted and (ii) expenditure has been incurred up to April of this year; and if she will make a statement. [69191]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency has developed a database to monitor progress at all the flood locations identified in their Lessons Learned Report on the autumn 2000 floods. The database covers locations for which local authorities are considering flood management options as well as those for which the Agency is taking the lead, and is reviewed every six months. A current review is nearing completion and I understand that the results will be available in early August. I have asked the Agency to provide you with the information requested as soon as it is available. Since the floods of autumn 2000, DEFRA has approved for grant aid a total of 274 new flood and coastal schemes and studies at an estimated cost of £386 million, although of course not all relate to locations flooded that year.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was spent on flood defences in England broken down by (a) constituency and (b) Government regional development agency in the past five years; and if she will make a statement. [70606]

Mr. Morley: Expenditure on flood defences in England is incurred primarily by the Environment Agency, local authorities and Internal Drainage Boards. The Agency does not keep financial records on the basis of constituency or government regional development agency. The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Common Fisheries Policy

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) who will be responsible for the policing of the baseline/12 mile limit zones under the proposals for post 2002 in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland; [69389]

(2) whether (a) the baseline/six mile limit zone and (b) the six to 12 miles limit zone are to be merged to form one zone of baseline/12 mile limit zone within the proposals for the post 2002 CFP; [69387]

(3) to whom the management of the baseline/12 mile limit zone would be accountable under the proposals for the post 2002 CFP; [69391]

(4) whether the competency for the baseline/12 mile limit will be returned to member states within the proposals for the reformed Common Fisheries Policy post 2002; [69386]

(5) whether the establishment of a permanent baseline/ 12 mile limit fishing zone to the member state concerned would require a treaty change; [69390]

(6) whether the consultation of management will include all those member states who have fishing rights within the six to 12 mile limit zone within the present proposals for the CFP post 2002. [69388]

Mr. Morley: The Communication from the Commission on the reform of the Common Fisheries Policy ("Roadmap") (Com(02) 181) makes it clear that the Commission proposes to continue the current regime applicable to the six to 12 mile zones.

Bushmeat Trade

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if her Department has approached Governments in countries in Central and West Africa to establish mechanisms to control the illegal international trade in bushmeat. [70305]

Mr. Meacher: As a result of my Department's representations at the eleventh Conference of CITES Parties in April 2000, the CITES Bushmeat Working Group was established. We have contributed £55,000 to the Group, which aims to help Central and West African range states develop and implement their own solutions, including the revision and harmonisation of their wildlife policies and legislation. We have also funded research analysing existing knowledge and expertise on the bushmeat trade, highlighting gaps in data and understanding, and making recommendations on further action. The results of this research have been made available to the CITES Working Group and we expect them to be discussed at the Group's next meeting, due to take place in Brazzaville later this month. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) hopes to represent the UK at this meeting.

Through the FCO, we have also been using the UK diplomatic missions in Harare, Accra, Abuja, Cairo, Pretoria, Kampala, Abidjan, Maseru, Dakar, Luanda, Nairobi, Kigali, Mbabane and Tunis to raise awareness of the restrictions on importing meat into the UK.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to raise the issue of the unsustainable bushmeat trade at the Convention on the International Trade in Endangered Species. [70301]

Mr. Meacher: The Secretariat to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) has prepared a progress report on the work of the CITES Bushmeat Working Group, and a draft Decision extending the life of the Working Group, for consideration by the forthcoming Conference of CITES Parties in November. We shall support the draft Decision and continue to encourage and support the work of the Working Group.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has made to the Department for International Development to establish a joint approach to tackling the unsustainable bushmeat trade. [70303]

Mr. Meacher: The Department and the Department for International Development (DfID) already takes a joint approach to tackling unsustainable trade in bushmeat, and are in regular contact on this issue. For example, officials participate in the UK Tropical Forest Forum's Bushmeat Working Group; DEFRA and FCO are represented on the Steering Group for DfID's Wildlife and Poverty research study; DfID represented UK (including DEFRA) interests at the IUCN's Bushmeat Seminar in Yaounde in September 2001, and officials from DfID and the Overseas Development Institute produced DEFRA's bushmeat paper for the last CITES Conference in April 2000.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if her Department plans to support Type 2 Initiatives arising from the World Summit on Sustainable Development. [70310]

Mr. Meacher: The UK is enthusiastic about the inclusion of partnerships (the so called "Type 2" Initiatives) within the outcomes of the World Summit since Governments alone cannot implement sustainable development. My Department is supporting the development of a range of partnerships in the run up to the summit, as are others, and we hope that a number of these will be registered as Type 2 initiatives. These include the EU initiative on water, several energy partnerships including the Global Village Energy Partnership, the EU Energy for Sustainable Development Initiative and the Global Network on Energy for Sustainable Development, the UK-led Partners for Water Supply and Sanitation and Sustainable Tourism initiatives, the London Principles on Sustainable Finance and the US-led Caribbean Partnership on improved marine management. Final decisions on the level of UK support for these and other partnerships will be made nearer the time.

Plastic Waste

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what waste products are produced when plastic products are disposed of by (a) incineration and (b) burial in landfill sites. [70258]

Mr. Meacher: Plastics products comprise a wide range of polymerised organic compounds mixed with additives to enhance particular properties. By-products produced on disposal will depend on the type of plastic. When incinerated, plastics will mostly form carbon dioxide and water. Chlorinated plastics, such as PVC, will produce hydrochloric acid. In general they will not degrade to any great extent in landfill and will make little contribution to the production of leachate and landfill gas.

Organic Foods

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what controls are in place on the spraying of organic foods with chemicals by (a) wholesalers and (b) retailers. [70245]

Mr. Morley: Council Regulation 2092–91 (EEC) prescribes the standards which must be observed if food is to be labelled as organic, including the inputs which may be used in the production and preparation of organic food. The Regulation permits only a restricted range of inputs to be used.

Countryside Stewardship Schemes

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what countryside stewardship schemes are available for small dairy farmers. [70246]

Mr. Morley: There are a number of existing options under the Countryside Stewardship Scheme that may be relevant to dairy production. For example, buffer strips within improved grassland are designed to protect habitats and conservation features from potentially damaging agricultural operations. Capital works programmes under the Scheme can also be relevant to livestock units, including those that are primarily involved with dairy production. In addition, we have recently begun a six-year research programme to investigate a range of possible environmental measures that would be compatible with intensive dairy farming.

Following the announcement of the outcome of the Spending Review on 15 July, the way is now open to implement the recommendations of the Curry Commission on an 'entry-level' agri-environment scheme. This will be designed to be as accessible as possible to all farmers, including those in the dairy sector and will be piloted for two years and rolled out in 2005–06.

New Forest National Park

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will delay the commencement of the public inquiry into the proposed New Forest national park until the current public inquiry into the proposed development of Dibden Bay by ABP has been concluded. [71026]

Alun Michael: Following a pre-inquiry meeting on 1 July, the Inspector has produced a draft programme for the New Forest inquiry. This shows that most of the parties involved in both inquiries are not due to appear at the New Forest inquiry before January. The Inspector has indicated that he is prepared to be sensitive to difficulties experienced by such parties in the programming of their appearances at this inquiry.

I therefore do not intend to delay the start of the public inquiry into the New Forest national park as that would not be in the public interest. I recognise that the October start date may be inconvenient for some who are also involved in the current Dibden Bay inquiry, but that inquiry is due to close in December. Much of its work will therefore be over by October when the New Forest inquiry opens.

Vehicular Access

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the criteria by which roads and pathways will be categorised under the Countryside, England Vehicular Access Across Common and Other Land (England) Regulations 2002. [71232]

Alun Michael: No such criteria exist because the only rights that can be created under the regulations are private ones. The regulations apply where the owner of premises can show vehicular use of any piece of land for such a time and in such a manner that, had it not been an offence to drive across the land, a prescriptive right would have been acquired. The only categorisation of the type of land is that it must be land over which it is a criminal offence to drive.

Village Halls

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many village halls were built in England between 1997 and 2002. [71235]

Alun Michael: This information is not held centrally in the manner requested and the information could be secured only at disproportionate cost.

In 1997 the Countryside Agency published research which showed that 72 per cent. of villages had a village hall. The definition has been refined following responses to that research which indicated that some villages have a community hall which is technically not a "village hall" but fulfils largely the same purpose. In November 2001 the Countryside Agency published a report entitled "Rural Services in 2000" which revealed that 85 per cent. of parishes had a village hall or a community hall in 2000. The proportion of parishes with a hall is 32 per cent. for those below 100 population, 77 per cent. for those with between 100 and 300 people, 92 per cent. for those between 300 and 500, 94 per cent. for those between 500 and 1,000, 95 per cent. for those between 1,000 and 2,000, 98 per cent. for those between 2,000 and 5,000, and 96 per cent. for those over 5,000.

Village halls can play a vital role in rural communities as multi-purpose community centres and hubs for village life. We are supporting the development of active local communities and parish and town councils in a variety of ways; the village hall as a hub for social activity and service provision fits in well with our policy objectives, and support of village halls and the activities that take place there is available from a range of public sector and other sources.

Annual Reports

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of publishing her Department's annual report and those of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in each of the past five years; and if she will provide a breakdown of the cost incurred. [70105]

Mr. Morley: The DEFRA annual report for 2001–02 was produced with the assistance of the Central Office of Information at a cost of £17,887, exclusive of VAT.

Description	£[1]
Proofreading	3,962
Design, layout and cover	13,400
Production of web version	525
Total cost excluding printing	£17,887

[1] ex-VAT

DEFRA did not incur any of the print production costs. The Stationery Office prints and distributes the annual report as a commercial venture.

The production costs and any print costs for the previous five annual departmental reports for MAFF could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Pesticides Safety Directorate

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will publish the 2001–02 Annual report for the Pesticides Safety Directorate. [72776]

Mr. Morley: The 2001–02 Annual report and accounts for the Pesticides Safety Directorate were laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Banned Pesticides/Plant Treatments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the five pesticides and plant treatments which are banned in the United Kingdom but most widely used elsewhere. [60836]

Mr. Morley: There are 25 agricultural pesticides which have had approvals revoked in the United Kingdom but are still available in the rest of the European Union or elsewhere. The majority of these are the organophosphate and carbamate compounds that were not supported in the UK anticholinesterase review, for example, carbofuran. There is a much larger number of substances which have never been approved for use as pesticides in the UK, but may be used in other countries. Differences in approvals between countries can arise because different approval conditions are applied or because commercial approvals are not sought in all countries.

However, it is not possible to list the five pesticides which are banned in the UK but most widely used elsewhere. Accurate information on the quantities of pesticides used elsewhere could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Consultation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what formal consultation has (a) taken place and (b) is planned relating to the EU Directive 2002/15/ED; and if she will make a statement. [70741]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

My Department is consulting informally with both sides of industry on the transposition of the Directive into domestic legislation and on how it might operate. We expect to launch a formal consultation exercise early next year.

Timber Procurement

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what impact the draft EU public procurement directive will have on the ability of the EU to ensure that all timber procured is from legal and sustainable sources; and if she will make a statement. [68034]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The proposals for amending the public procurement directives include provisions which make clear the scope to take account of green production processes, eco-label criteria and environmental management systems at the appropriate stages of the procurement process. These provisions should, therefore, enable contracting authorities to be clear about their ability to specify, in a non-discriminatory way, that timber and timber-related products should be obtained from legal and sustainable sources. The Government are currently considering its approach to the procurement of sustainable and legal timber in the light of the proposed new directive and the Commission's interpretative communication on environmental issues which preceded it.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions there have been relating to proposed European Directive on public procurement, Article 53 so as to ensure that timber used on EU projects in future will come from legal and sustainable sources; and if she will make a statement. [68033]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have been heavily involved in discussions, both domestically and in Brussels, on the scope to take environmental considerations into account under the EC procurement directives. The proposals for clarifying, simplifying and updating these directives, on which political agreement was reached at the Internal Market Council on 21 May, make it clear that relevant green production processes and eco-label criteria can be used in specifications (Article 24). This clarification should enable a procurer to specify—in a non-discriminatory way—timber from legal and sustainable sources and to exclude offers which are non-compliant in this or other relevant respects. The award stage (article 53), which is concerned with the evaluation of compliant bids on the basis of various value for money criteria, is too late in the process to introduce such specification issues. However, environmental considerations which provide a benefit to the contracting authority, in terms of the most economically advantageous tender, can be taken into account at that stage.

Energy Shortfall

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to address the future shortfall in energy from traditional sources. [71931]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

The Government launched a consultation on energy policy on 14 May with a view to publishing a White Paper around the turn of the year.

The consultation document seeks views on the supply of energy from traditional and renewable sources as well as on issues relating to demand such as energy efficiency.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Recycling

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee, pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2002, Official Report, column 1277W, on recycling, if she will publish the monthly data; if she will add the recycling of plastic bottles and plastic covering to the list; and if she will make a statement. [70217]

Mrs. Roe: The monthly data will be placed in the House of Commons Library. Plastic will not be added to the list at present because the quantities generated here are relatively small and priority is being given to maximising the recycling of the other materials on the list.

Computer Access

Bob Spink: To ask the Chairman of the Information Committee if he will enable hon. Members to log onto their systems via hon. Members' computers in the Library. [71454]

Michael Fabricant: It is already possible for Members to use the computers in "A" Room to gain access to their e-mail accounts. New instructions are being provided to explain the necessary log-in procedures more clearly. These computers are primarily intended, however, to provide access to on-line information systems available on the parliamentary intranet and the internet. For the convenience of Members, other applications, such as word-processing and spreadsheets, are also provided.

There are also connection points throughout the Members' Library to allow Members to gain access to the Parliamentary Data and Video Network using their own laptops.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Press Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the President of the Council how many (a) full time equivalents were employed by his press office and (b) secondees were placed in his press office in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [70534]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 8 March 2002, Official Report, columns 605W, and both my replies to the hon. Member for West Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 69W.

Parliamentary Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the President of the Council, pursuant to his answer of 15 July 2002, Official Report, column 83W, to the right hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Mr. Forth), on parliamentary pensions, if he will estimate the additional cost to the Exchequer of that part of those improved pensions which are not covered by the increase in hon. Members' contributions over the period before the full cost of the accrued rate is borne by hon. Members. [71677]

Mr. Robin Cook: The Exchequer contribution to the parliamentary pension scheme is set by the Government Actuary, as part of his triennial valuation of the scheme. The Government Actuary is currently working on his valuation of the scheme as at 1 April 2002. He will take into account, in setting the Exchequer contribution to apply from April 2003, the number of hon. Members and office holders who choose to pay higher contributions to secure a higher pension accrual.

The Government Actuary has estimated the cost of the improved pension as 5.1 per cent. of pay. If all hon. Members and office holders were to decide to opt to pay increased contributions of 9 per cent. of pay rather than 6 per cent. with effect from 15 July 2002, the additional costs to the Exchequer over the period to 31 March 2003 may be estimated as being in the order of £600,000 in the year 2002–03 and £860,000 for a full year.

Privy Council

Norman Baker: To ask the President of the Council who was present at the meeting of the Privy Council on 26 June; and what business was transacted. [71795]

Mr. Robin Cook: The following were present at the Council held on 26 June:

The Queen

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry

The Attorney-General

The Minister of State, Department for Culture, Media and Sport (Minister for Sport)

The Clerk of the Council.

The following Orders were approved at the Council. For statutory Orders the enabling power is given in brackets.

Orders appointing Dawn Primarolo, MP, George Foulkes, MP, and Dr. Oliver Letwin, MP members of the Privy Council;

Proclamation determining the specification of three £5 coins commemorating Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother and an order directing the Lord Chancellor to affix the Great Seal to the Proclamation (Coinage Act 1971);

Order approving the grant of a Charter of Incorporation to the Institution of Occupational Safety and Health;

Order amending the Charter of the Institute of Materials;

Order appointing Lord Brooke of Sutton Mandeville to be a member of the Council of the University of London;

Order appointing Angus John Allan one of Her Majesty's Inspectors of Education in Scotland (Education (Scotland) Act 1980);

The Consular Fees Order 2002 (Consular Fees Act 1980);

The Air Navigation (Amendment) (No. 2) Order 2002 (Civil Aviation Act 1982);

The General Dental Council (Constitution) Order 2002 (Dentists Act 1984);

The Exempt Charities Order 2002 (Charities Act 1993);

The Scotland Act 1998 (Modifications of Schedule 5) Order 2002 (Scotland Act 1998);

Three Orders approving the following Acts of the States of Jersey:

1. Criminal Justice (Evidence of Children) (Jersey) Law 2002;
2. Companies (Amendment No. 7) (Jersey) Law 2002;
3. Public Finances (Administration) (Amendment No. 10) (Jersey) Law 2002;

Order approving an Act of the States of Guernsey entitled "The Terrorism and Crime (Bailiwick of Guernsey) Law, 2002";

Order approving an Act of the Chief Pleas of Sark entitled "The Conveyancing (Sark) Law, 2002";

Order under the Burial Act 1853 giving notice of the proposed discontinuance of burials in three places;

Seventeen Orders confirming pastoral schemes of the Church Commissioners (Pastoral Measure 1983).

Information on the dates of Privy Council meetings is now available on my Department's website, www.privycouncil.gov.uk. A list of the Orders approved at each meeting is published on the site shortly after it has taken place.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Commonwealth Education Projects

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what initiatives her Department has taken in 2002 in connection with education projects within the Commonwealth. [70614]

Clare Short: The Government are strongly committed to the Millennium Development Goals on education: achieving universal primary education by 2015 and eliminating gender disparities in primary and secondary schooling by 2005. Since May 1997, DFID has committed over £700 million to support primary education for poor people, mainly in the Commonwealth. We are using these funds to support national education policies which form part of developing country Governments' broader poverty reduction strategies. In 2002 our priority is to implement successfully these long-term programmes and to develop new partnerships with Commonwealth Governments.

Achieving these education goals will require a strong commitment from Commonwealth Governments to prioritise primary education within their spending plans. Many Commonwealth countries will also need considerable external assistance. The Government are working to mobilise the international community in support of Education for All. Our aim is to achieve consensus by the end of 2002 on well co-ordinated international action for mobilising new resources and better co-ordinated programmes designed to meet this goal. We are giving high priority to working with the World bank to develop its new Action Plan for accelerating progress towards Education for All. We believe the Action Plan's fast track initiative provides an opportunity to try to ensure that no country genuinely committed to economic development, poverty reduction and good governance is denied the chance to achieve universal primary education through lack of resources.

The bank's fast track initiative offers seven poor Commonwealth countries the chance to qualify for additional financing for primary education if they can demonstrate that their Government is fully committed and has effective policies in place. A further four Commonwealth countries can apply for assistance in building capacity, filling gaps in data and developing effective policies for primary education. We will continue to support the fast track proposals and participate in on-going discussions with the World bank about implementation arrangements.

Afghanistan

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of the number of attacks on aid workers in Afghanistan. [71139]

Clare Short: There have been a handful of attacks on aid workers in some areas of Afghanistan and we remain concerned about reports of insecurity in northern Afghanistan, including attacks on aid workers. We support the actions of the Special Representative of the United Nations Secretary-General, Lakhdar Brahimi, who has written to President Karzai, and visited the north to discuss security issues with the various factions.

We shall continue to monitor the situation closely and to encourage the transitional Administration to work to ensure that all parts of Afghanistan are as safe as possible in order to allow aid work to continue across the country.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with the Defence Secretary regarding his Department's assistance in reconstruction work in Afghanistan. [71143]

Clare Short: I have regular discussions with Cabinet colleagues on a number of issues. Reform of the security sector is vital to the future stability of Afghanistan. DFID, in consultation with colleagues in the FCO and MOD, is working for the creation of accountable national military and police forces subject to the rule of law and under central and civilian control; anti-narcotics activities; and the re-establishment of an appropriate judicial system. The UK has in principle committed $33 million to this process.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of pledges made to fund Afghanistan's reconstruction at the Bonn Conference have been met. [71140]

Clare Short: Pledges for the reconstruction of Afghanistan were made at the Tokyo Conference. Precise data on the disbursement of aid to Afghanistan are not yet available. However, we estimate that donor pledges to Afghanistan amount to a little under $2 billion in 2002, of which about $1.1 billion has been committed and about $0.8 billion disbursed. The pace of further disbursements will now depend on improvements in security and access and on the completion of the National Development Framework and development budget.

Liberia

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking to support civil society groups in Liberia. [71145]

Clare Short: We have no development programme to Liberia. Over the last few years my Department has supported a limited number of projects, most of which have been delivered through civil society organisations. These have included community development projects, and projects to enhance peace and promote reconciliation between ethnic groups. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has also provided support to promote democratic values and reduce tension between ethnic groups.

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries

Phil Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what she estimates the main benefits were for heavily indebted poor countries arising from the recent G8 talks. [70833]

Clare Short: At Kananaskis last month, the G8 reaffirmed their commitment to the full financing of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative, and agreed to provide an additional US$1 billion for the HIPC Trust Fund to help the multilateral development banks meet their share of HIPC costs. The additional money will provide the remaining financing required under the HIPC initiative, and will help to ensure that those countries whose debt position has worsened because of the global economic slowdown and falls in commodity prices will get enough debt relief to enable them to exit the HIPC process with sustainable levels of debt.

Departmental Spending

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will provide a breakdown of how money was spent by her Department in each year since 1998–99 on each programme listed in table 4 of annex 1 to the departmental report 2002 under the headings: (a) bilateral country and regional programmes, (b) middle east and north Africa, (c) south Asia, (d) east Africa and Pacific, (e) Asia regional, (f) Latin America and Caribbean, (g) Europe and Central Asia, (h) overseas territories, (i) conflict and humanitarian affairs, (j) research and economic policy, (k) education, (l) enterprise development, (m) health and population, (n) international trade, (o) private sector policy, (p) rural livelihoods and environmental policy, (q) other non-country/regional specific programmes, (r) regional development banks and (s) the European Community Attribution programme. [71149]

Clare Short: Further information on expenditure against these programmes is given in tables 7–7.5 and 8 of the 2001 edition of "Statistics on International Development", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. The expenditure comprises contractual payments, grants, core contributions and encashments of promissory notes.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will provide a breakdown of how money was spent by her Department in each year since 1998–99 on each programme listed in Table 2 of Annexe 1 of the departmental report 2002. [71150]

Clare Short: Details of the form of "bilateral development assistance" are given in tables 7–7.5 of the 2001 edition of "Statistics on International Development", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. This expenditure comprises contractual payments for the supply of goods and services, grants to recipient country governments and civil society organisations, as well as the provision of technical co-operation and humanitarian assistance.

"Multilateral development assistance", including contributions to the "Global Environment Fund" and the "EC development programme", comprises grants to international organisations as well as drawdowns on promissory notes deposited in accordance with UK agreements. Details of the organisations involved are given in Table 8 of "Statistics on International Development".

Expenditure on "conflict prevention" covers activities funded from the inter-departmental Conflict Prevention Pools established in 2001–02.

"Overseas Superannuation": this expenditure relates to pensions paid to former colonial service and Indian Empire officers and their dependants for which the Government have agreed to assume responsibility under the Aid Programme and the index-linked increases paid on these pensions under the UK Pensions Increase legislation.

About 90 per cent. of the 24,000 pensions paid to former colonial and Indian Empire pensioners are paid direct to bank accounts worldwide, with the remaining 10 per cent. paid direct to pensioners by payable order.

The "Gibraltar Social Insurance Fund" benefits Spanish people who worked in Gibraltar and contributed to the fund. It takes the form of pension payments.

"Administration costs" cover staff costs (salaries) and general administrative overheads such as travel, training and accommodation costs.

Central African Republic

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the impact the use of child labour in the diamond trade of the Central African Republic is having on efforts to educate children in the country; and if she will make a statement. [70871]

Clare Short: None. The Central African Republic is not a country with which we have a close relationship. Our development assistance is provided through multilateral channels.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she is taking to bring good governance to the Central African Republic. [70870]

Clare Short: DFID has no programme in the Central African Republic and contributes through multilateral channels. The European Commission's ninth EDF programme sees institutional capacity building and the promotion of good governance as a priority area.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking to ensure that HIV/AIDS detection facilities are available in the Central African Republic. [70880]

Clare Short: Our assistance to the Central African Republic (CAR) is provided through multilateral channels. We provide support to UNAIDS and the World Health Organisation who are currently assisting the CAR improve HIV/AIDS surveillance and detection facilities through the implementation of their national AIDS strategy. The EC programme in CAR, to which we contribute, includes work on HIV health education.

Food Shortages (Africa)

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much of the money allocated by the Government for the procurement of maize meal in Lesotho has been spent; and if she will make a statement. [70873]

Clare Short: Of the £18.75 million that we allocated to the World Food programme for their emergency operations in Central and southern Africa, £1.5 million was earmarked for their emergency operation in Lesotho. The WFP tell us that our allocation in Lesotho has purchased 2,560 tonnes of split peas, 555 tonnes of vegetable oil and 400 tonnes of beans.

Sierra Leone

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance she has offered to the President of Sierra Leone to ensure the provision of basic services [illegible] the country. [70876]

Clare Short: This year we plan to provide around £40 million of development assistance to Sierra Leone, of which some £10 million is [illegible] the form of direct budgetary support, in part to help meet social sector expenditure. When I met President Kabbah last month, I indicated that the UK was prepared to make [illegible]0-year commitment to maintain a high level of support [illegible] Sierra Leone, so long as the Government remained firmly committed to raising standards of governance. Tackling corruption, thereby ensuring resources (including those going to health and education) were no longer wasted, would be a tangible indicator of this commitment.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what programmes the Government are funding to fight AIDS in Africa; how much the Government are planning to spend on this in the next three financial years; and what other measures the Government plans on this issue. [71012]

Clare Short: DFID currently commits over £180 million to bilateral programmes working to combat HIV/AIDS in Africa. Major DFID HIV prevention and care programmes are currently running in Ghana, Kenya, Malawi, Mozambique, Nigeria, South Africa, Uganda, Zambia and Malawi.

Considerable additional financial support continues to be provided by DFID to institutions such as WHO, UNAIDS, UNICEF, UNFPA, the EC and to NGOs and civil society organisations in a coherent effort to combat this disease and support those already living with it. We have committed over £25 million to International Partnership Against AIDS in Africa which specifically supports action in Ethiopia, Rwanda, Burundi and Ghana.

New initiatives are being planned in a number of countries across Africa. A £20 million HIV/AIDS programme is currently being developed in Zambia aimed at behaviour change and HIV prevention. In South Africa, DFID is planning to invest up to £40 million in a multi-sectoral response to HIV/AIDS programme. In Nigeria, a £25 million HIV/AIDS multi-sectoral programme is currently under design to complement a £52 million national behaviour change programme started earlier this year.

African Union

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support her Department intends to give to the new African Union. [71138]

Clare Short: DFID has worked with the African Union through its transition from the Organisation of African Unity into the new African Union. DFID provides support to the African Union's Conflict Management Centre, to enhance its capacity to prevent, resolve and manage conflict in Africa. Capacity is being built through the funding of staff posts, including four specialists, to increase early warning analysis and to improve recommendations to the secretary general.

In financial terms, DFID expects to provide £480,000 from 2002–03 to 2003–04, through the Africa Conflict Prevention Pool, and provided £530,000 between 1999 and 2001–02.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the African Union. [71137]

Clare Short: I warmly congratulate the African Union on its inauguration, and endorse the message of support sent by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to its first summit. The African Union has great potential to play an integral part in resolving the many problems faced by Africa today, including the need for a resolution of conflicts, better economic management and integration, improved health and education systems.

Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what projects have so far received funding from the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria. [71011]

Clare Short: Since approving its first round of proposals, the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria has been working intensively with recipients to agree financial management and monitoring arrangements. Funding will flow as soon as these arrangements are in place.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the progress made by the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria in fighting AIDS. [71009]

Clare Short: The Global Fund to fight AIDS, TB and Malaria is now legally established as a foundation in Switzerland. WHO is providing administrative support and the World bank is the trustee. The first board meeting of the fund took place in Geneva in late January 2002 during which the legal and framework documents for the purpose, scope and operations of the fund were approved. The second Global Fund Board in April made two key decisions. It selected Richard Feachem as Executive Director, and approved funding for the first tranche of proposals. Of 380 proposals received, 40 programmes in 31 countries were approved, totalling $378 million over two years. A further 18 proposals from 12 countries were approved subject to clarifications, totalling $238 million over two years. Total pledges to the fund now amount to around US $2 billion. The UK has pledged $200 million over five years, and has already distributed its first tranche of $40 million.

Over the coming months, the fund will be clarifying fiduciary and other arrangements for approved first round proposals, with funding flowing as clarifications are received. It is also engaged in improving the application process for the second round. There will be a policy Board in October and a second round of proposals for which the closing date will be around early October and which will be considered at a January Board meeting.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether she intends to continue to fund the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria in the next financial year. [71010]

Clare Short: As I have made clear we have committed £500 million to the Global Fund over the next five years.

Angola

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with the United Nations regarding the protection afforded to internally displaced people in Angola. [71144]

Clare Short: The United Nations estimates that more than four million people have been displaced from their homes in Angola. Three million of these require urgent nutritional and medical assistance. The UK made strong representations to both the United Nations and the Government of Angola to agree a framework for humanitarian assistance and we have made contributions of £3.3 million this year, including £1.65 million to the UN, to meet urgent needs. I have met Ibrahim Gambari, the UN SGSR for Africa three times this year to discuss the situation in Angola.

With a genuine peace agreement now in place, people are starting to return to their homes. It is vital that human rights are respected during this time. This is the responsibility of the Angolan Government though we expect the UN to monitor the process. The UK are assisting with the disarmament, demobilisation, and re-integration of former UNITA combatants. My Department also has an emergency response team assessing the humanitarian situation in Angola at present. We will continue to monitor the situation as access to more remote areas becomes feasible and maintain a dialogue with the UN.

Human Rights

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what priority her Department accords the promotion of human rights in its development policy. [71147]

Clare Short: Details of our commitment to a rights based approach to development are set out in my Department's publication, "Realising Human Rights for Poor People".

Environmental Know How Fund

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Malcolm Bruce) of 10 July 2002, Official Report, column 959W, what proportion of the funds in 2001–02 were supplied to United Kingdom (a) companies, (b) organisations and (c) other bodies; and if she will list them. [71247]

Clare Short: A list of the projects and the companies contracted has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Developing Countries

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking to monitor the effectiveness of voluntary corporate social responsibility strategies of United Kingdom companies which invest in developing countries. [72053]

Clare Short: My Department supports a number of initiatives aimed at monitoring the impact of the corporate social responsible strategies of UK companies on developing countries. For example, in the retail sector, we have supported the work of the Ethical Trading Initiative (ETI) since its establishment in 1998. The ETI is an alliance of 28 UK businesses (with a combined turnover of over £100 billion), NGOs and trade unions that work to improve labour conditions in the supply chains of the company members. The ETI is conducting research to assess the impact of its code of conduct on workers and suppliers, and the business case for adopting such codes.

DFID is also funding research on measuring the impact on poverty of companies' international investments and operations. This will include looking at both the direct impacts, such as welfare provision and training, and the indirect impacts, such as taxation payments to national Governments.

Departmental Press Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many (a) full-time equivalents were employed by her press office and (b) secondees were placed in her press office in the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [70540]

Clare Short: We currently employ four press officers, and this number of posts has remained the same since January 1997 and we have had no secondees in that time.

Information Campaigns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department spent on information literature, advertising and campaign material in financial year 2001–02; if she will list the campaigns that spent over £250,000; and if she will make a statement. [70210]

Clare Short: We have since 1997 published all our major strategy documents, including two White Papers, all country and institutional strategy papers, as well as major consultation papers and speeches. Our publishing output continues to expand.

We do not produce anything which we would regard as campaign material. Our spending on publications over the period in question is as follows:

2001–02: £1,060,000.

We do not have a specific advertising budget. However, the bulk of our paid advertising is in relation to recruitment advertising in newspapers and journals. The cost in 2001 calendar year was £1.208 million.

CDC Capital Partners

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list CDC Capital Partners' investments by (a) sector, (b) size and (c) country since 1997. [67348]

Clare Short: CDC's new investments since the beginning of 1999 are listed in the table, ranked by sector, size and country. Relevant information for 1997 and 1998 can be obtained only at disproportionate cost, owing to a change in CDC's portfolio accounting systems.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Hunting With Dogs

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, if the Church of England has contributed to the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs consultation on hunting with dogs. [68945]

Mr. Bell: The Church Commissioners have made no contribution to the current DEFRA consultation on hunting with dogs, but I understand that other bodies within the Church of England are looking at this issue from an ethical or theological point of view.

Clergy (Terms and Conditions)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, when he expects to make an announcement about terms and conditions of service for the clergy. [70772]

Mr. Bell: The Archbishops' Council, which in its role as Central Stipends Authority is responsible for these matters, publishes details of the stipends paid to clergy in its annual report to the Church of England's General Synod. The report for 2001 was published in January this year; a copy is available in the House of Commons Library.

The Archbishops' Council is in the course of considering the Department of Trade and Industry's discussion document on employment status in relation to statutory employment rights, published earlier this month.

Church Property

Michael Fabricant: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what role (a) English Heritage and (b) the chancellors of each diocese have in approving schemes of work on church property; and if he will make a statement. [70721]

Mr. Bell: In general, work of substance may not be carried out to a parish church or certain other Church of England places of worship without a "faculty" or permission from the Chancellor of the ecclesiastical court of the diocese or, in some cases involving less significant changes, from the archdeacon. (Separate controls apply to cathedrals.) The faculty system is a legal system of controls which has been strengthened by recent legislation; it predates secular listed building controls, is broader in scope and also applies to unlisted buildings. Because it satisfied Government requirements for "ecclesiastical exemption", Church of England churches are not in general subject to listed building control, though they are not exempt from the need for planning permission where that applies.

It is for the court alone to decide whether to grant the faculty or permission, but with limited exceptions the Chancellor or archdeacon must seek the advice of the Diocesan Advisory Committee before doing so. Three members of that committee are appointed in consultation with English Heritage, with the National Amenity Societies and with Local Government associations.

There is also statutory provision in the faculty jurisdiction system for consultation with a range of bodies, including English Heritage, in appropriate cases. Parishes contemplating changes to listed churches are in any case encouraged to seek its informal advice and that of the Amenity Societies as early as possible. English Heritage will need to approve any works for which it is providing grant aid, and must also be consulted where it has in the past made a grant to a particular church.

Church property not used for worship is subject to normal secular controls.

WALES

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many statutory instruments have been (a) introduced, (b) removed and (c) amended by his Department since 1 January; and what the (i) cost and (ii) saving has been in each case. [64627]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Since 1 January my Department has introduced three statutory instruments, revoked none, and amended one. Costs and savings are not readily available.

Building Value

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the buildings owned by his Department and estimate the market value of each of them. [66945]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The National Asset Register, published in July 2001 (Cm5221), lists assets owned by each Department and their valuation.

Sunderland Commission

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with Welsh Assembly Government colleagues concerning the Sunderland Commission. [71770]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have regular discussions with Assembly Ministers about a range of matters affecting Wales.

The Sunderland Commission was established by the Assembly. It is therefore for the Assembly initially to respond to its recommendations.

Assembly Finance Minister, Edwina Hart has announced that there will be a wide consultation, over the summer and early autumn, on all the Commission's recommendations.

Information Campaigns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department spent on information literature, advertising and campaign material in financial year 2001–02; if he will list the campaigns that spent over £250,000; and if he will make a statement. [70208]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 15 April 2002, Official Report, column 752W.

Departmental Press Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) full time equivalents were employed by his press office and (b) secondees were placed in his press office in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [70543]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department is staffed entirely by secondees. Since the establishment of the Wales Office on 1 July 1999 it has employed three press officers.

CABINET OFFICE

IT Procurements

Geraint Davies: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the Government policy is on the use of open source software to enable increased value for money in IT procurements across the public sector. [72633]

Mr. Alexander: This Government are intent on securing the best value for money in its IT procurements by encouraging the development of a flourishing IT industry which supplies both proprietary and open source software solutions to the public sector. Government procurement decisions will be based on the ability of the solutions to deliver effective and economic systems and services.

I am pleased to announce new policy on the use of open source software within UK Government. It explains how we will consider open source software solutions alongside proprietary ones in IT procurements and award contracts on a value for money basis, seeking to avoid lock-in to proprietary IT products and services. In addition, the UK Government will consider obtaining full rights to bespoke software code or customisations of COTS (Commercial Off the Shelf) software it procures, wherever this achieves best value for money. It will also explore further the possibilities of using OSS as the default exploitation route for Government-funded R&D software.

The open source software policy has been formulated for use within UK Government because we seek to embrace the fast moving pace of the software industry and to acknowledge the clear potential for open source software to change the software infrastructure marketplace. It also serves as an appropriate response to the recent European Commission's Action Plan for the initiative eEurope—an information society for all. UK Government, in joining with its European partners to explore the availability of open source software solutions, will seek to realise the significant potential for cost-savings in the future and to achieve an increased flexibility in the development, enhancement and integration of our IT systems.

Centre for Management and Policy Studies

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when he will publish the annual report and accounts for the Centre for Management and Policy Studies. [72617]

Mr. Alexander: I have today placed copies of the second annual report and accounts for the Centre for Management and Policy Studies for the year 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 in the Libraries of the House.

The report and accounts show that financial targets have been met. The quality targets were met, and in some cases, exceeded. The volume targets for participants in training and development were exceeded in the aggregate.

The changes to Cabinet Office announced by Sir Andrew Turnbull, and presently being implemented in advance of his arrival in September, will have a significant effect on CMPS as an organisation.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the outcome is of the review of policy towards executive agencies. [72632]

Mr. Alexander: The Government have today published the report of the review which was jointly sponsored by the Cabinet Office and the Treasury. Pam Alexander led the review.

The review has far-reaching implications for improving the delivery of central Government services. It concludes that the agency model has been a success in improving, and in some cases transforming, services and functions delivered by central Government and has brought customer focus and a performance culture into the civil service. However, it find that agencies have in some cases become detached from Ministers and from Departments' increasing focus on strategic aims; controls over processes have reduced effectiveness and responsiveness without providing a shared strategic direction

The report makes 12 recommendations to achieve and maintain strategic connection and improve service delivery. These include:

departmental leadership which values equally policy and delivery skills and agency management with a clear understanding of ministerial objectives;

simpler governance structures providing strategic direction from Departments and external challenge from non-executive directors on management boards;

alignment of departmental and agency key targets and a cycle of reviews to ensure that structures and processes across Departments support the achievement of key objectives; and maximum use of financial and managerial delegations to support responsive, flexible and effective delivery.

The Cabinet Office and Treasury will be working with Departments to put the review's recommendations into effect over the coming months as part of the wider drive to improve the effectiveness of public services and place a culture of delivery at the heart of Government.

Copies of the review's report and recommendations have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

E-Government

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what research has been carried out to assess the level of (a) awareness in the population analysed by socio-economic group, (b) usage by the population analysed by socio-economic group, (c) repeat usage by the population and (d) satisfaction of users with respect to the website www.ukonline.gov.uk; and what the findings were. [70520]

Mr. Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Leslie) gave to the hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Mr. Moore) on 20 May 2002, Official Report, column 55W.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the budget is for the website www.ukonline.gov.uk in respect of (a) site development and maintenance, (b) marketing and (c) other matters for the financial years (i) 2002–03 and (ii) 2003–04. [70522]

Mr. Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Leslie) gave to the hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Mr. Moore) on 23 May 2002, Official Report, column 484W.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much has been spent on the website www.ukonline.gov.uk for (a) design and build prior to launch, (b) development and maintenance since launch, (c) marketing, (d) other and (e) the project in total in each of the financial years since the inception of the project. [70519]

Mr. Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Leslie), gave the hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Mr. Moore) on 23 May 2002, Official Report, column 484W.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what estimate he has made of the savings which have arisen for each Government Department as a result of the website www.ukonline.gov.uk [70521]

Mr. Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Leslie) gave to the hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Mr. Moore) on 20 May 2002, Official Report, column 54W.

Emergency Planning

Mr. Francois: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans he has to introduce new framework legislation on emergency planning; and if he will make a statement. [71184]

Mr. Alexander: My right hon. Friend Lord Macdonald of Tradeston is chairing a sub-committee of the Civil Contingencies Committee to press forward with work on laying the foundations of a Civil Contingencies Bill. The first meeting of the committee was held on 17 July 2002. A wide range of stakeholders will be involved in the agreed work programme, including those from relevant Government Departments, their agencies and non-departmental public bodies, the devolved Administrations, the local authorities, the emergency services, the private sector and outside organisations.

The Government plan to introduce new legislation as soon as parliamentary time allows.

Public Servant (Definition)

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how the Government define the term "public servant"; if he will provide a list of who is included in this definition; and what the average annual salary is for public servants, broken down by region. [71016]

Mr. Boateng: I have been asked to reply.

For the purposes of the New Earnings Survey (NES) public servants are defined as public sector employees in each of the following areas:

(a) Central Government—Government Departments and establishments, directly employed health staff (excluding trusts) and various government-financed organisations. (The armed forces are not covered by the NES).

(b) Local government—Local government authorities (including education authorities), police service and various other organisations.

(c) Public corporations—Nationalised industries, NHS trusts, and other publicly-constituted trading organisations.

Average annual earnings for the Public Sector in 2001 are as follows:

Gross annual earnings

North East	20,199
North West	21,377
East Midlands	21,705
West Midlands	22,048
South West	21,743
East	22,604
London	26,925
South East	22,658
Wales	21,044
Scotland	21,544
Yorkshire and the Humber	21,620
Public Sector Average (GB)	22,435

Civil Service Pensions

Mr. Pond: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans he has to introduce new pension arrangements for the Civil Service; and if he will make a statement. [72618]

Mr. Alexander: I am today laying before Parliament, under the provisions of the Superannuation Act 1972, three amendment schemes. The first of these amends the rules of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) and introduces new provisions for those joining the pension scheme on or after 1 October 2002. The second amendment scheme makes consequential changes to the Civil Service Compensation Scheme, and the third amendment scheme removes the injury benefit provisions of the PCSPS to a separate scheme.

Pension arrangements for civil servants (and those in employments and offices listed in Schedule I to the Superannuation Act 1972) will change on 1 October 2002. New entrants joining after that date will generally be given the choice of a final salary pension or a stakeholder pension with an employer contribution. The new arrangements are being introduced on a cost-neutral basis for employers.

We recognise that pensions form a significant part of the Civil Service remuneration package, and we want civil servants to be able to choose the pension that suits them best. Today's Civil Service does not offer a job for life and is benefiting from greater interchange with other sectors at all levels within the organisation. Final salary pensions may be good for those who spend a long period with one employer, but those who change jobs frequently during their career may prefer their employer to contribute to a stakeholder pension. By giving our new staff a choice of two good quality pension alternatives we aim not only to support a more diverse Civil Service but also to raise awareness and appreciation of the value of the pension element of the pay package.

The new final salary option will be known as the premium scheme. It will provide a pension based on one-sixtieth of final pensionable earnings for each year of service. Other features of the premium scheme include:

option to exchange part of pension for lump sum on retirement;

ill-health pensions varying in amount depending on the extent of incapacity;

death-in-service lump sum of three times pay;

pensions for surviving spouses of 3/8ths of the member's pension; pension payable to a surviving eligible unmarried partner if the member does not leave a spouse;

pensions for children

Existing members of the PCSPS will have the option of joining the premium scheme or remaining with the current provisions (to be renamed the classic scheme). Members opting for classic will continue to earn a pension based on 1/80th of pay for each year of service plus a retirement lump sum of three times pension. Members opting to join the premium scheme will have their past service reduced—typically to 92 per cent. of its previous amount—to reflect the improved benefit structure. Members may also opt for classic plus; this option effectively provides premium scheme benefits for service from 1 October with service before 1 October continuing to be pensioned broadly on the classic model.

We are moving to the new arrangements on a cost-neutral basis, with the entire cost of benefit improvements being met by increased contributions by members. None of the cost of the benefit improvements will fall on the taxpayer. All premium and classic plus members will pay the new contribution rate of 3.5 per cent. Members opting to remain in the classic scheme will continue to pay contributions of 1.5 per cent. of pay.

The stakeholder pension alternative will be known as the partnership pension account. Employees will choose their pension provider from the following panel:

AMP Corporate Pensions

Scottish Widows

Standard Life

TUC.

Employees opting for a partnership pension account do not need to contribute, but will be encouraged to do so by having their contributions matched up to 3 per cent. of pay. In addition, the employer will pay contributions based on age, varying from 3 per cent. of pay for those under 21, to 12.5 per cent. of pay for those aged 46 and over. Lump sum benefits of up to three times pay on death in service and on ill health retirement will be provided separately, and will be the subject of future schemes under the Superannuation Act.

Civil Service remuneration is set having regard to the need to recruit, retain and motivate staff of the appropriate quality. Full account is taken of the value of pension arrangements, including the cost of index-linking, in setting the balance between the pay and pension elements of the reward package.

The Civil Service unions have been involved throughout the development of the new pension options, both in negotiating the terms and also in appraising their members of the options open to them. The unions' constructive involvement throughout this process stands as a testament to the value of partnership working.

TRANSPORT

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the EC-Bulgaria Joint Transport Committee is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [71830]

Mr. Jamieson: This committee is established under the provisions of Article 13 of the Agreement of 26 July 2000 between the European Community and the Republic of Bulgaria establishing certain conditions for the carriage of goods by road and the promotion of combined transport. The remit of the committee is to ensure the proper implementation of the agreement. I am not aware that it has met in recent times or that there are any plans for it to meet in the future. Representatives of the Scottish Executive have not been—and would not in the future be—members of the committee as the matters for which it has responsibility are reserved.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the EEC-Slovenia Joint Transport Committee is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [71831]

Mr. Jamieson: This committee is established under the provisions of the Agreement between the European Economic Community and the Republic of Slovenia in the field of transport which was published in the Official Journal of the European Communities on 29 July 1993. The remit of the committee is to ensure the proper implementation of the agreement. I am not aware that it has met since the conclusion of the agreement or that there are any plans for it to meet in the future. Representatives of the Scottish Executive have not been—and would not in the future be—members of the committee as the matters for which it has responsibility are reserved.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the EC-Romania Joint Transport Committee is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [71829]

Mr. Jamieson: This committee is established under the provisions of the Agreement between the European Community and Romania establishing certain conditions for the carriage of goods by road and the promotion of combined transport. The remit of the committee is to ensure the proper implementation of the agreement. I am not aware that it has met in recent times or that there are any plans for it to meet in the future. Representatives of the Scottish Executive have not been—and would not in the future be—members of the committee as the matters for which it has responsibility are reserved.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the European Energy and Transport Forum is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [71821]

Mr. Jamieson: I understand the European Energy and Transport Forum will meet for the first time later this year. Members of the Forum were selected by the European Commission following a call for applications published in the Official Journal of the European Communities on 7 June 2002. I do not believe any representative of the Scottish Executive has been appointed as a member of the Forum.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the EC-Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia Joint Transport Committee is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [71828]

Mr. Jamieson: This committee is established under the provisions of Article 22 of the Agreement between the European Community and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia in the field of transport which was published in the Official Journal of the European Communities on 18 December 1997. The remit of the Committee is to ensure the proper implementation of the Agreement. I am not aware that it has met in recent times or that there are any plans for it to meet in the future. Representatives of the Scottish Executive have not been—and would not in the future be—members of the Committee as the matters for which it has responsibility are reserved.

Workplace Smoking

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his plans to implement a code of practice on smoking in the workplace; and what consultation there has been with trade unions, health welfare and medical organisations on this issue. [71177]

Mr. Jamieson: The White Paper on Tobacco, "Smoking Kills", stated that the Health and Safety Commission (HSC) would consult on whether to introduce an Approved Code of Practice (ACoP) on passive smoking in the workplace.

HSC has completed that task and announced, in September 2000, that it favoured the introduction of an ACoP. Representatives from trade unions, health welfare and medical organisations were all involved in the consultation.

The Government are giving careful consideration to the Commission's proposals. As part of this process, the Commission has been asked to consider further both the implications of an ACoP on the hospitality sector and small businesses generally, and the role the Public Places Charter could play.

Residential Property Record

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library his Department's departmental-owned residential property record. [70771]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department does not maintain a central residential property record. Nevertheless, two of the Department's agencies own residential property:

(1) the Highways Agency, as the operator of the strategic road network on behalf of the Secretary of State, keeps a database of residential property acquired for road schemes. This contains information restricted under the Data Protection Act 1998 and cannot be released in its current form; and

(2) the Maritime and Coast Guard Agency owns three residential properties: two are official residences and one is currently on the market for sale.

Travel/Retail Information Report

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place a copy of the final report on research conducted for his predecessor Department by Cap Gemini Ernst and Young on Travel Information and Retailing Policy Information in July 2000. [70737]

Mr. Jamieson: A copy of this report was placed in the House of Commons Library last year. The summary of the report is also available on the DfT website, at http://www.dft.gov.uk/itwp/transdirect/capgem/index.htm

Departmental Press Service

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department intends to establish an e-mail press release service similar to that previously provided by the former Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions. [70657]

Mr. Jamieson: We expect that the Department for Transport will establish a similar service by autumn 2002.

Flight Paths

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes have been made to aircraft flight paths and altitudes over London and the south-east in the past five years. [71234]

Mr. Jamieson: There have been numerous minor changes and adjustments to air traffic routes and procedures over London and the south-east during the past five years. The most significant changes have been:

> the introduction of a second terminal holding pattern, 'ABBOT', and associated reconfiguration of arrival routes for London Stansted airport in April 1999;
> minor changes were made in 2000 and 2001 to the noise preferential routes and standard instrument departure (SID) procedures from London Stansted airport to improve track-keeping and airspace management; and > new SID was introduced in 1998 from London Luton airport to improve traffic flows in the light of the traffic growth at Luton airport.

Airport Construction

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what recent research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) received on the economic consequences of building new (i) airports and (ii) runways; [70866]

(2) what recent research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) received on the economic consequences of building new (i) airports and (ii) runways. [70867]

Mr. Jamieson: The Appraisal Framework for Airports in the South-East and Eastern Regions of England published in November 2000 sets out the approach that the Department is applying in considering options for the development of airport capacity. This includes the economic benefits to passengers, and the air transport industry as well as wider benefits to the economy. In the regional airport studies that the Department has subsequently commissioned, these economic benefits together with the environmental and other impacts of airport development have been assessed.

Ten-Year Plan

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the impact of the increased spending announced in the spending review will be on the 10-year plan, in terms of (a) public investment expenditure, (b) public resource expenditure, (c) total public expenditure and (d) private investment in (i) 2002–03, (ii) 2003–04, (iii) 2004–05, and (iv) 2005–06. [71066]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The funding for transport announced in the spending review maintains the 10-year plan public and private spending total at £181.9 billion, as previously announced. In addition, the Settlement takes full account of the Government's guarantee of full funding for the first 7½ years of the tube modernisation plans at an average of £1 billion per annum.

Journey Times

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer of 2 July 2002, Official Report, column 221W, on journey times, what research reports have been produced by (a) the Highways Agency and (b) the Department as a result of the research and studies to which he refers; and if he will place copies of these reports in the Library. [70734]

Mr. Jamieson: A report is being prepared for the Highways Agency on the research it commissioned to investigate the feasibility of displaying journey times to selected destinations on variable message signs. The report is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

A paper entitled 'Driver Information On Journey Time Variability Using Automatic Number Plate Recognition Data' was presented to the Eleventh International Conference on Road Transport Information and Control in March 2002. A copy of this report will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

As part of the current Departmental research to provide a better understanding of the causes of journey time variability in congested conditions on motorways, three technical papers on this subject are expected to be presented to the European Transport Conference in Cambridge in September 2002. They are: Understanding and Valuing Journey Time Variability; Supply Models For Use In Modelling The Variability Of Journey Times On The Highway Network; Assessing Measures Which Reduce Incident Related Delays And Travel Time Variability, and will be placed in the Libraries of the House when published.

Transport Direct

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on recent changes to Transport Direct. [70738]

Mr. Jamieson: The Transport Direct team is currently in the process of letting a contract for construction of a web portal, which will be the initial means of distributing Transport Direct. The contract will be let in the autumn with the first stage of the portal to be ready in 2003, in line with the targets set out in the 10-year plan.

Transport Direct is also extending the number of real time information systems for travellers. £20 million was recently given to 19 local authorities to improve bus real time information; schemes are to be in place by the end of 2003. Transport Direct is working with the rail industry and Strategic Rail Authority to extend rail real time information. Work is also continuing on developing standards and technical details for the extension of real time information systems.

My Department has recently appointed Nick Illsley as Transport Direct Chief Executive to carry the Transport Direct programme forward.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research has been conducted for his Department on Transport Direct; and if he will make a statement. [70736]

Mr. Jamieson: We are currently undertaking a programme of market research to support Transport Direct. This programme is designed to tell us what specific characteristics and features the service should possess in order to satisfy the requirements of its prospective users; what demand there will be for the service; and what it will be used for. The results of this research will be disseminated in due course.

A review of existing travel information systems, and recommendations for Transport Direct, was conducted last year. The report can be viewed on the Department's website at "http://www.dft.gov.uk/itwp/transdirect/travinf/pdf/travinf.pdf".

Research has also been completed on standards, and standards-like initiatives, likely to be relevant to Transport Direct. The study also considered whether any further standards needed to be developed in order to ensure that Transport Direct is successful. The report can be viewed at: "http://www.dtlr.gov.uk/itwp/transdirect/standards/index.htm"

We are also researching areas related to the overall Transport Direct vision. For example, we will shortly place a contract for market research to inform us as to the future direction on behalf of the traveline service.

A study is under way into the business case for bus real-time information. This work aims to provide a tool for Local Authorities and transport operators which would quantify the benefits of such systems and thus facilitate their development and adoption. We also hope to publish best practice advice.

We also have some minor contracts which include research into putting cycling into journey planners and preparatory work for the business plan. We hope to publish the cycling study on the DfT website very soon.

Transport Projects

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the timescale for achievement of the delivery reform measures to which transport funding increases announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 15 July are linked. [71258]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The White Paper makes clear that action is already under way under the Government's 10-year plan for Transport to improve mechanisms for the delivery of transport improvements.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the criteria to be used in assessing whether the connection between national objectives for transport and local delivery have been strengthened. [71257]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: My Department will monitor the extent to which local transport authorities' local targets reflect the national targets in our 10-year plan and the progress they make in delivering against those targets.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the delivery reform measures to which the transport funding announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 15 July is linked. [71256]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: These reforms are set out in the White Paper on the 2002 Spending Review published by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 15 July.

A404(M)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 16 July 2002, Official Report, column 143W, when work to widen the approach to the M4 from the A404(M) will start; how long the work will take to complete; and if he will place a copy of the planned changes in the Library. [71945]

Mr. Jamieson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Tim Matthews, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Richard Thorndike to Mrs. T. May, dated 22 July 2002:

Tim Matthews has been asked by the Transport Minister, David Jamieson, to reply to your recent question about the proposed work to widen the approach road to the M4 from the A404(M). I am replying since Tim is currently away on Highways Agency business.

This work at M4, junction 8/9, is programmed to start in January 2003 and will take about ten weeks to complete.

In the meantime we will make the necessary arrangements to place plans of the proposed changes in the Library as soon as they have been finalised.

Road User Charging

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the position is of the road user charging research project to be carried out in Leeds; and if he will make a statement. [72629]

Mr. Jamieson: The road user charging research project in Leeds known as DIRECTS (Demonstration of Interoperable Road User End to End Charging and Telematics Systems) is progressing well with the full co-operation and assistance of Leeds city council. DIRECTS is research into the feasibility of an electronic system for charging drivers to use busy roads. It is intended to help local authorities interested in setting up their own local charging scheme; it should also assist the design of the national lorry charging system.

Temporary equipment will be set up on a small network of roads in south-east Leeds and local volunteers will have a small electronic charging unit fitted inside their vehicles to test the system. No-one will be charged for their journeys and the project will not affect other drivers using these roads.

We are now moving towards the first stage of infrastructure installation. The roadside apparatus to support the charging equipment will begin to be installed in September this year, and fitting of in-vehicle units to volunteers' vehicles will follow early next year. Recruitment of volunteers will also begin shortly. Once preparations for the demonstration are complete, it is expected that full trials will start around September 2003 and run for about a year.

Since the project was first planned, the Chancellor announced in the last Budget statement the Government's intention to introduce a distance-based road user charging scheme for lorries from 2005 or 2006. Many features of the DIRECTS research complement this objective.

In keeping with previous undertakings by Ministers, I have today written to all Leeds constituency MPs to explain to them in more detail what progress is being made locally, and copies of the letter have been placed in the House Libraries. I understand the city council is planning its own briefing for Leeds councillors. We will continue to work closely with Leeds city council to ensure that the interests of local people are met as fully as possible for the duration of the project.

Roads

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of (a) the current condition of local roads and (b) the condition of local roads as at July 2000. [71344]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Trends in the defects index of local roads between 1984 and 2001 are shown at Table 3.1 of the "National Road Maintenance Condition Survey: 2001", copies of which are in the Libraries of the House. The index improved between 2000 and 2001. Data on the current condition of local roads are being collected at present and will be published next year.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of the road network in (a) England and (b) Great Britain was at 100 per cent. or greater stress in (i) 1996, (ii) 2000, (iii) 2001 and (iv) 2002 to date. [71340]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: A stress map for the English Trunk Road network was published by the Department for 1996 based on actual traffic counts. It showed 3 per cent. of the network was operating above 100 per cent. stress and 10 per cent. of the network between 80 per cent. and 100 per cent. A map based on estimated 2000 traffic flows was included in the published 10-Year Plan. The Plan reported that 7 per cent. of the network was operating above 100 per cent. stress and 13 per cent. of the network between 80 per cent. and 100 per cent. More recent data are not available.

Data for the whole of the English road Network and for Great Britain are not available.

The 'stress level indicator' is not a precise measure and is intended for illustrative purposes at the National level.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will define the major local road improvements, other than bypasses, as given in para 6.61, page 65, of the 10-Year Plan. [71324]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Our guidance to authorities on local transport plans specifies major local road projects as any local road scheme with a gross capital cost exceeding £5 million. Examples of schemes other than bypasses are urban relief roads, rural widening schemes and new/improved accesses to development sites. It is for local authorities to decide what, if any, major schemes they wish to bid for under the local transport plan process.

Roadworks

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research has been conducted (a) by and (b) for (i) his Department and (ii) the Highways Agency in relation to the (A) M60 J5–8 widening, (B) M25 J12–15 widening, (C) A46 Newark-Lincoln improvement, (D) A43 M40-B4031 dualling, (E) A11 Roudham Heath-Attleborough dualling and (F) A1 Willowburn-Denwick improvement; if he will place copies of related documentation in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [70682]

Mr. Jamieson: As part of the 1997 Roads Review a key objective was to develop a clear and open framework to appraise and inform the prioritization of trunk road proposals. To achieve this the Government developed a new approach to appraisal which is based on the following five criteria:

(i) Environmental Impact

(ii) Safety

(iii) Economy

(iv) Accessibility

(v) Integration.

Under this appraisal system, my Department and the Highways Agency worked in partnership to produce one-page summaries showing the economic, environmental and social impacts of each trunk road scheme under consideration. The results of the Roads Review were published in July 1998 in "A New Deal for Trunk Roads In England". At the same time "A New Deal For Trunk Roads In England: Understanding The New Approach To Appraisal" was published which included one-page summaries for all the schemes considered during the review including those listed in the question. Copies of both these documents were placed in the Library at that time.

The above named schemes were added to the Targeted Programme Of Improvements (TPI) in July 1998. Once in the TPI these schemes would have been subject to environmental, traffic and structural assessments. However due to the large volume of documentation it would be impractical to place copies of these in the Library.

A1 Willowburn—Denwick, A11 Roudham Heath and A43 M40-B4031 Dualling are currently under construction and are all due to open to traffic by the end of this financial year. Construction of the remaining schemes is either under way or will begin in the next year.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research has been conducted for his Department and the Highways Agency on the differential costs between programmed maintenance and ad hoc repairs; and if he will make a statement. [70739]

Mr. Jamieson: The strategy for maintenance, which is based on the principles of minimising whole life cost, has been derived over the years from a number of studies. The effect of ad hoc repairs is always considered within a maintenance scheme against planned maintenance as part of a value management process and thus ensures value for money. The process, which has been developed over time, takes account of historical records of ad hoc repair costs and the effects of delaying planned maintenance for the specific network length under consideration.

Road Accidents

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were (a) killed and (b) seriously injured in road accidents on all roads in each of the last three years. [71502]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The table below provides figures for the number of people (a) killed and (b) seriously injured in road accidents in Great Britain in each of the last three years.

	Killed	Seriously injured
1999	3,423	39,122
2000	3,409	38,155
2001[1]	3,443	37,094

[1] Figures for 2001 are provisional.

Road and Bridge Maintenance

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 15 July 2002, Official Report, column 7W, on road and bridge maintenance, if he will make a statement on the methodology used when calculating the authorities' funding requirements for road and bridge maintenance from 2001 to 2006. [71373]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The Local Transport Plan indicative allocations for highway maintenance announced in November 2000 for 2001–02 and 2002–03 were mainly based on the size and condition of the individual authorities' road networks and the number of their bridges requiring strengthening and structural maintenance. Some large maintenance schemes above £5 million in value were approved individually. Authorities were also told that their maintenance allocations for each of the three years 2003–04, 2004–05, and 2005–06 would be at least 75 per cent. of their allocation in 2002–03.

Consultation on the methodology for the full maintenance allocations in the next three years is currently taking place.

Road Improvements

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the major local road improvements, as given in para 6.61, page 65, of the 10-year plan (a) started and (b) completed since July 2000. [71325]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The latest information that we have available from the local authorities shows:

Work on the following major local road schemes has been started and completed since July 2000:

Burntwood Bypass Phases 1 and 2 (Staffordshire)
A143 Broome/Ellingham Bypass (Norfolk)
A511 Ashby Bypass Stage 2 (Leicestershire).

Work on the following major local road schemes has been completed since July 2000:

A174 Skelton and Brotton Bypass (Redcar and Cleveland)
Avon Ring Road II: B4465 Shortwood—A420 Warmley (South Gloucestershire)
South Thames-side Development Route 4 (Kent)
Dearne Towns Link Road (Barnsley)
A22 Dualling Nightingale Farm (East Sussex)
West Central Route (Newcastle upon Tyne).

Work on the following major local road schemes has been started since July 2000:

Bridgwater Northern Distributor Road (Somerset)
Dawdon to Seaham Town Centre Link Road (Durham)
A131 Great Leighs Bypass (Essex)
A689 Sedgefield to Wynyard Improvement (Durham)
A617 Mansfield Ashfield Regeneration Route (Nottinghamshire)
Wyre Piddle Bypass (Worcestershire)
A53 Hodnet Bypass (Shropshire)
A6002/A6007 Coventry Lane Improvement (Nottinghamshire)
A6042 Manchester/ Salford Inner Relief Road (Manchester/ Salford)
South Stockton Link (Stockton-on-Tees)
Coalfields Link Road Phases 2 and 3 (Barnsley)
A6023 Denaby Main Diversion (Doncaster).

Road Travel

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicle kilometres were travelled on roads in (a) England and (b) Great Britain in 1996. [71331]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The total traffic on the roads in England and Great Britain in 1996 are estimated to be 377.0 and 442.5 billion vehicle kilometres respectively.

Fuel Duty

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the level of fuel duty rebate available to community transport services. [71341]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Eligible community transport services will receive fuel duty rebate at the same level as applies to other eligible bus services. The current rates are as follows:

Pence per litre

Fuel	Rate of rebate
Ultra low sulphur diesel	36.68
Other diesel	36.68
Lead replacement petrol	34.30

Fuel	Pence per litre
	Rate of rebate
4-star petrol	40.16
Unleaded petrol	34.30
Ultra low sulphur petrol	34.30
Gas	[1]9.00

[1] pence per kilo

Strategic Road Network

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what (a) proportion and (b) length of the strategic road network requires maintenance. [71333]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Tim Matthews, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David York to Mrs. T. May, dated 22 July 2002:

Tim Matthews has been asked by the Transport Minister for the Department for Transport to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the proportion and the length of the strategic road network currently requiring maintenance. I am replying since Tim is currently away on Highways Agency business.

The Highways Agency aims to ensure that the network is retained in an optimum, safe condition on a basis that minimises costs over time. To achieve this requires that the proportion of the network requiring maintenance is held between 7% and 8% which equates to between 2,400 and 2,700 lane km.

An assessment of the network was made at the end of March 2002 and this indicated that 7.5% of the network required maintenance.

I hope this is helpful.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the slight casualty rate was on the strategic road network in each year from 1994 to 2002; and what the annual average was for 1994 to 1998. [71503]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The slight casualty rates on the English trunk road network were as follows:

	Per 100 million vehicle kilometres
1994	21.88
1995	21.01
1996	22.35
1997	23.09
1998	22.28
1999	21.40
2000	20.82

The figure for 2001 is not yet available.

The average slight casualty rate for 1994 to 1998 was 22.14 per 100 million vehicle kilometres.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were (a) killed and (b) seriously injured on the strategic road network in each of the last three years. [71501]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The number of people killed and seriously injured on the English trunk road network were as follows:

	Killed	Seriously injured
1998	628	4152
1999	664	4217
2000	599	3950

Note:
Figures for 2001 are not yet available.

Traffic Lights

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a direction under section 30(7) Greater London Authority Act 1999 in relation to the phasing of traffic lights in Greater London. [71366]

Mr. Jamieson: The power in section 30(7) is a power to issue guidance as to the exercise of the general power of the Greater London Authority. It is not a power to direct Transport for London to alter traffic signal phasings.

Drink-Driving

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many serious injuries have resulted from crashes caused by drivers with (a) more than 80 milligrammes alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood in their bloodstream, (b) between 50 and 80 milligrammes alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood in their bloodstream, (c) between 20 and 50 milligrammes alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood in their bloodstream and (d) a trace of alcohol, but less than 20 milligrammes alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood in their bloodstream, in each of the last 10 years; [70959]

(2) how many deaths have resulted from crashes caused by drivers with (a) more than 80 milligrammes alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood in their bloodstream, (b) between 50 and 80 milligrammes alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood in their bloodstream, (c) between 20 and 50 milligrammes alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood in their bloodstream and (d) a trace of alcohol, but less than 20 milligrammes alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood in their bloodstream, in each of the last 10 years; [70958]

(3) how many people were (a) killed, (b) seriously injured and (c) slightly injured on roads in England and Wales by a driver who was over the drink-drive limit in each of the last 10 years. [70955]

Mr. Jamieson: Estimates of the number of casualties resulting from road accidents in Great Britain where at least one driver (or rider of a two-wheeled motor vehicle) was over the drink-drive limit are given in the table.

Estimates of casualties resulting from accidents involving illegal alcohol levels: Great Britain 1991–2000.

	Casualties
Year	Fatal	Serious	Slight	Total
1991	660	3,610	13,610	17,880
1992	660	3,280	12,770	16,710
1993	540	2,660	11,780	14,980
1994	540	2,840	11,780	15,160
1995	540	3,000	12,450	16,000
1996	580	3,010	13,450	17,040

Casualties

Year	Fatal	Serious	Slight	Total
1997	550	2,940	13,310	16,800
1998	460	2,520	12,610	15,590
1999	460	2,470	13,980	16,910
2000[1]	520	2,530	14,980	18,030

[1] Provisional data

National road accident statistics do not identify cases where drivers' blood alcohol concentration (BAC) was below the prescribed limit.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many crashes on roads in England and Wales involving multiple fatalities were caused by a driver who was over the drink-drive limit in each of the last 10 years. [70957]

Mr. Jamieson: The number of accidents in England and Wales involving multiple (2 or more) fatalities where a driver was over the drink-drive limit, are shown in the table:

Fatal accidents involving two or more fatalities on roads in England and Wales where a driver was over the limit[1]: 1991–2000

	England	Wales	All
1991	11	0	11
1992	15	1	16
1993	10	1	11
1994	9	2	11
1995	6	1	7
1996	13	1	14
1997	16	1	17
1998	7	1	8
1999	8	0	8
2000	10	0	10
Total	105	8	113

Bus Services

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 10 July 2002, Official Report, column 976W, on bus services, if he will list those traffic commission areas in which bus compliance officers have surveyed the performance of bus operators in each of the last five years. [71367]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The Vehicle Inspectorate (VI) started its bus monitoring function in 1999–2000. In each of the three years since, VI has undertaken monitoring exercises in each of the eight traffic areas.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of households in rural areas were within 13 minutes walk of an hourly or better bus service for the last (a) quarter and (b) year, for which figures are available. [71342]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The proportion of households in rural areas in England within 13 minutes walk of an hourly or better bus service was 42 per cent. for 1998–99. Rural areas are defined here as settlements of less than 3,000 population.

The source is the National Travel Survey and normally three years of data are aggregated because the small number of rural households in the sample means that estimates for single years may not be reliable. The rural sample numbers were exceptionally low for 2000, casting doubts on the validity of using the data for that year within the indicator, so the average for 1998 and 1999 has been used instead of the average for the three years 1998–2000, as previously published. Figures for the average of 1999 and 2001 will be published when the results for 2001 are released on 25 July. Quarterly figures are not available.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the powers of bus compliance officers with regards to (a) setting operators' punctuality targets and (b) enforcing operators' punctuality targets. [71346]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Bus Compliance Officers function is to monitor the reliability and punctuality of local bus services registered with the Traffic Commissioners, who can impose penalties on operators who fail to comply with the registered particulars of the service. It is for the Traffic Commissioners to determine the punctuality target. Bus Compliance Officers provide the main source of evidence on which the Traffic Commissioners judge whether the appropriate level of punctuality has been achieved on individual services.

Twyford Railway Bridge

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when work on the Twyford railway bridge will be completed. [71483]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I understand from Railtrack that work is expected to be completed in late August.

Train Operating Franchises

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total cost of safety case work undertaken by the Health and Safety Executive in relation to the (a) re-letting and (b) extension of train operating franchises has been since 7 June 2001; and if he will make a statement. [70643]

Mr. Jamieson: Since 7 June 2001, the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has only assessed one re-let franchise safety case, for the Chiltern Railway Company, which was completed on 10 July 2002. However, it is not possible for the HSE to separately identify the costs of the assessment work.

Extensions of existing franchises do not normally result in additional safety case assessment costs.

Potter's Bar Crash

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) contractors and (b) sub-contractors involved in accident investigation into the Potter's Bar crash under the supervision of the Health and Safety Executive. [70652]

Mr. Jamieson: In addition to all the work undertaken by the Health and Safety Executive's (HSE) internal laboratory, the Health and Safety Laboratory (HSL), HSE engaged AEA Technology Rail to assist with the investigation of the derailment and the examination of the points. The investigation is continuing and further contracts may be let in due course.

Railways Vandalism

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance and directions have been given by his Department to the (a) British Transport Police, (b) Health and Safety Executive and (c) railways industry, regarding vandalism on the railways; what plans there are to update such guidance; and if he will make a statement. [70647]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 25 June 2002, Official Report, columns 772–73W.

Strategic Rail Authority

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made as to the effect of changing the guidance issued to the SRA on the SRA's obligations under the funding package to be structured for the purposes of the SRA's accounts in such a way that disbursements under the funding package only constitute liabilities of the SRA for the accounting period in which the obligation to make disbursements arises, as issued on 22 March in the letter to Richard Bowker; and if he will make a statement; [68388]

(2) what assessment he has made as to the effect of changing the guidance issued to the SRA with regards to Railtrack, or any company which acquires its assets, becoming part of the public sector, as issued on 22 March in the letter to Richard Bowker; and if he will make a statement; [68386]

(3) what assessment he has made as to the effect of changing the guidance issued to the SRA with regard to Railtrack, or any company which acquires its assets, being consolidated into the SRA's balance sheet, as issued on 22 March in the letter to Richard Bowker; and if he will make a statement; [68387]

(4) what assessment he has made as to the effect of changing the guidance issued to the SRA with regards to Railtrack, or any company which acquires its assets, becoming an entity under public control, as stated on 22 March in the letter to Richard Bowker; and if he will make a statement; [68385]

(5) with regard to his letter of 22 March to Mr. Richard Bowker concerning the Railtrack successor body, his letter of 21 June to Mr. Nick Newton concerning the Railtrack successor body and his statement to the House of 27 June 2002, Official Report, column 971 on Network Rail, what representations he received from (a) the SRA, (b) Network Rail, (c) the ONS and (d) the NAO regarding the initial guidance that the Government do not wish Railtrack or any company which acquires its assets to (i) be consolidated into the SRA's balance sheet, (ii) become part of the public sector and (iii) become an entity under public sector control; and if he will make a statement. [68619]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 9 July 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the statement about Network Rail made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport on 27 June 2002, Official Report, columns 971–73, and the two associated minutes which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State laid before the House on the same day.

The letter of 22 March 2002 gave the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) certain directions and guidance as to the manner in which the SRA was to negotiate a funding and outputs package with any bidder seeking to become the network operator. Since then, negotiations progressed with Network Rail with the result that the transaction contemplated did not entirely reflect the directions and guidance issued on 22 March.

Consequently, my right hon. Friend wrote on 21 June to replace the guidance and directions issued on 22 March and to give the SRA new directions and guidance as to the manner in which the SRA was to seek to conclude the transaction with the Network Rail Group.

No representations were made on the initial guidance by anyone other than the SRA, as it was a letter to them, which was not published until recently.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his letter of 22 March to Richard Bowker Esq, concerning the Railtrack successor body, his letter of 21 June to Nick Newton Esq, concerning the Railtrack successor body, and his oral statement of 27 June 2002, Official Report, column 971, what representations he received from (a) the Strategic Rail Authority, (b) Network Rail, (c) ONS and (d) the NAO, regarding the initial guidance on the structure and disbursement of the Strategic Rail Authority's obligation under the funding package; and if he will make a statement. [68374]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I have given her today [68388].

Network Rail

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 4 July 2002, Official Report, column 465W, on Railtrack, on what date he expects to authorise the change of control; and if he will make a statement on the conditions that must be satisfied by Network Rail before he authorises the change of control. [71374]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I understand that Network Rail will shortly make an application. I will need to be satisfied that any change of control of Railtrack will not have an adverse effect on the ability of the operating company to continue to discharge its licence obligations.

Central Railway Project

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he received the SRA's latest assessment of the Central Railway Project; and when he expects to publish the Government's response. [71680]

Mr. Jamieson: The SRA is expected to provide a report to Ministers by September 2002. We expect to announce our decision about Central Railway's proposal as soon as possible thereafter, after giving it careful and due consideration.

London Underground

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates he has made as to the change in capacity on London Underground resulting from the PPP proposal; and if he will make a statement. [71387]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Mr. Brake) on 24 June 2002, Official Report, column 660W.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made as to the loss of station capacity resulting from work planned under the proposed PPP; and if he will make a statement. [71497]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Nothing on the scale of the modernisation plans for the Underground has ever been undertaken and some disruption is inevitable while the contractors are maintaining and renewing the entire network. Most of the work will be done at night; the plans have been specifically designed to minimise disruption to passengers.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on what powers (a) he and (b) the London Mayor (i) have and (ii) will have in order to place the Tube Infracos into administration; and under what legislation these powers are in place. [71052]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I have given him today [70813].

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the criteria for assessing journey times on London Underground services for the purposes of judging performance against the PSA targets for transport set out in the 2002 Spending Review. [71618]

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 9 July 2002, Official Report, column 808W, on London Underground, if he will make a statement on the methodology used to determine London Underground's weighted measure. [71482]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Journey times on the Underground are assessed by London Underground using the methodology described in the document "The Journey Time Metric" (published by London Transport in 1999), copies of which I have arranged to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 8 July 2002, Official Report, column 668W, on London Underground, if he will publish (a) the data and (b) the calculations, used in order to produce chart 6j (overcrowding on the London Underground today), on page 67 of the 10-year plan. [71375]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 9 July 2002, Official Report, column 794W.

EU Committees
(Scottish Executive Representation)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the EU Committee on the movement of air or sea passengers' baggage (principles) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [70912]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

This committee has not met in the past five years and has no outstanding items under consideration. No further meetings have been timetabled. One official from HM Customs and Excise attended previous meetings, representing all of the UK.

Chemical/biological Warfare

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will place in the Library copies of guidance provided for (a) the public, (b) local education authorities, (c) local health authorities and (d) other public institutions in the event of deliberate release of (i) chemical and (ii) biological weapons; and where this information is available to the general public. [50856]

Mr. Denham: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health issued restricted guidance to Directors and Regional Directors of Public Health in March 2000. The Cabinet Office issued guidance to local authorities in October 2001 and a copy of that guidance, which is being revised, has been placed in the Library. General advice is available via the website www.ukresilience.info.

DEFENCE

Private Military Companies

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the checks needed to (a) ensure accountability, (b) avoid human rights violations and (c) avoid legal actions by the private military companies; and if he will make a statement. [38796]

Dr. Moonie: The paper "Private Military Companies: Options for Regulation", which was published on 12 February 2002, examines the various activities of private military companies and sets out options for their regulation. It is a consultation paper, and invites comments from all interested parties by mid-August 2002. A full regulatory impact assessment would be drawn up once final decisions on any legislative proposal have been made.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what private military companies have been granted licences to operate from the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [67841]

Dr. Moonie: Private military companies operating from the United Kingdom are not at present subject to a licensing regime in respect of the provision of military services. One of the options set out in the FCO's Green Paper "Private Military Companies: Options for Regulation", published on 12 February 2002, is for the introduction of a licensing regime.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British servicemen have been waiting for more than one month for (a) an NHS operation or consultation and (b) admittance to a waiting list. [64817]

Dr. Moonie: Service patients in the United Kingdom are mainly treated in Defence Secondary Care Agency administered Ministry of Defence Hospital Units (MDHUs) situated in NHS Trusts. Service patients can opt to be treated in other NHS hospitals and are referred to these where there is a need for specialised care not available in the Defence Medical Services or for geographical reasons.

The MOD only maintains central records on the number of Service patients awaiting a first outpatient appointment or admitted patient treatment (inpatients plus daycase patients) at MDHUs. MDHU waiting list information as at 31 March 2002, the last date for which information is available, is provided in the standard NHS reporting format in the following tables. This excludes outpatient information in respect of MDHU Portsmouth due to the validation of information at that time.

			Waiting time
	0–13 weeks	13+ weeks	0–3 months	3+ months	Total waiting
Outpatients
Number of Service patients waiting[1]	1,916	437	—	—	2,353
Admitted patients[2]
Number of Service patients waiting[3]	—	—	1,464	1,029	2,493

[1] Number of patients waiting at four MDHUs (Peterborough, Frimley Park, Derriford and Northallerton).

[2] Inpatients plus daycases.

[3] Number of patients waiting at all five MDHUs (Portsmouth, Peterborough, Frimley Park, Derriford and Northallerton).

This information is provided by MDHU host NHS Trusts. Patients are normally added to the outpatient waiting lists on receipt of a referral from their GP to a consultant. They are normally added to the admitted patient waiting list when the consultant decides that an admission is required.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the overseas trips on departmental business that have been undertaken in each of the last five years by officials in his Department; and what the (a) cost, (b) purpose and (c) result was in each case. [68724]

Dr. Moonie: All overseas travel by officials is undertaken in accordance with the principles set in Chapter 8 of the Civil Service Management Code, and the detailed rules and guidance set out in the Ministry of Defence Civilian Overseas Travel Manual. The detailed information requested about individual trips is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff have contributed to his Department's input to the Spending Review. [68696]

Dr. Moonie: The Spending Review involves a comprehensive assessment of the Department's performance, priorities and resource requirements and a range of staff make a contribution.

British Troops (Accidents and Reparations)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are taken to minimise the possibility of an accidental attack on civilians by British troops on active service; and what his policy is on reparations to families of civilians accidentally killed by troops of the United Kingdom. [67803]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 19 July 2002]: All members of HM forces are carefully briefed on their rules of engagement (ROE) for an operation and on when they may be justified in using force. I am withholding details of the ROE in accordance with Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. Additionally, HM forces take all possible measures in the preparation and conduct of operations to minimise possible loss of civilian life and damage to property.

When compensation claims are submitted, they are considered on the basis of whether or not the Ministry of Defence has a legal liability to pay compensation. Where there is a legal liability to pay compensation we do so.

Service Accommodation

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, (1) pursuant to his answer of 4 July 2002, Official Report, column 525W, on married quarters, if he will make a statement on the safety attribute used by the Defence Housing Executives and if he will list the married quarters that are unsatisfactory using this criterion, indicating for what reasons; [68802]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 4 July 2002, Official Report, column 525W, on married quarters, if he will list the married quarters that fail the safety attribute; and if he will list the Standard 4 married quarters. [68803]

Dr. Moonie: The safety-related criteria used by the Defence Housing Executive (DHE) to measure performance are:

Upper windows—fire compliant
Upper windows—child safe
Safety of low level glazing
Safety gate fixings
Smoke detectors
Lockable bathroom cabinet.

Of the 5,921 service family quarters in Wiltshire, 398 do not fully meet the criteria above for Standard 1 for Condition (S1FC). 253 of these properties have one smoke detector fitted, whereas the criterion requires two. (This figure includes 83 properties which are to be handed back to Annington Homes). The remaining 143 properties do not reach S1FC because they do not fully meet a combination of the other criteria above. The addresses of these properties could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The location and numbers of Wiltshire married quarters which do not meet the smoke detector criterion are as follows:

Location	Number of properties
Bulford	4
Colerne	1
Devizes	[1]31
Larkhill	71
Boscombe Down	11
Tidworth	18
Upavon	31
Wroughton	[1]52

Winterbourne Gunner	4
Total	253

[1] Planned for handback

The following Wiltshire properties are at Standard 4 for Condition for the above criteria.

Location	Number of properties
Devizes	2
Hullavington	2
Larkhill	16
Boscombe Down	1

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total amount spent on renting private accommodation for armed services personnel was (a) in 1999, (b) in 2000, (c) in 2001 and (d) since January 2002; and if he will make a statement. [69546]

Dr. Moonie: The tables show the expenditure on substitute service accommodation in Great Britain, rented by the Ministry of Defence from the private sector, when accommodation according to entitlement and within the travel to work zone could not otherwise be provided for service personnel and their families. The figures are available by financial rather than calendar year.

£ million

Financial year	Rent	Fees	Other[1]	Total
Substitute service single accommodation (SSSA)
1998–99	13.239	0.809	0.191	14.239
1999–2000	18.506	1.004	0.344	19.854
2000–01	19.378	1.001	0.437	20.816

April-June 2002	2.158	0.032	0.014	2.204

[1] TV Licences, dilapidations, administration/check-in fees, inventory fees, etc.

The table excludes utilities, i.e. council tax, water, gas, electricity and telephone line rental, for which information is available by calendar year as follows:

£ million

	SSSA Utilities	SSFA Council tax/water
1999	3.462	1.281
2000	2.626	0.917
2001	3.729	1.109
2002 to July 2002	3.292	0.898

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 July 2002, Official Report, columns 159–60W, on service accommodation, what plans he has to improve the standard of service families' accommodation in Warminster. [71554]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Housing Executive is planning a number of minor works schemes to improve the general surroundings of the service families' accommodation in the Warminster area. These include:

Replacement front doors—166 family quarters

External decorations—8 family quarters

Internal decorations to stairwells—12 blocks of flats.

In addition, the possible upgrading of some 400 family quarters is in the early planning stages.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much (a) single living accommodation and (b) service family accommodation was released to Annington Homes Ltd. in each month of 2001; what grade these were at the time of release; what percentage of the total number of upgraded homes this represents; and if he will make a statement. [70009]

Dr. Moonie: The agreement with Annington Homes Ltd. (AHL) covers service family accommodation only. Under the 1996 sale and leaseback agreement the following vacant service family quarters were handed back to AHL during 2001:

Month	Number
January	41
February	204
March	2,098
August	116
September	1
October	29
December	167
Total	2,656

375 of these properties were at Standard 1 for condition at the time of release. This represented 2 per cent. of the total number of service family properties in GB at Standard 1. Whenever possible, the houses released for disposal are those at lower standards, but the sale agreement requires that properties are released in groups rather than individually. This can result in some higher standard properties being released because of their location. Defence Housing Executive area managers maintain close liaison with local service commanders on the selection of surplus properties for disposal.

Bowman Radio System

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost has been of developing the Bowman tactical radio system; and if he will make a statement. [70057]

Dr. Moonie: The cost of developing the Bowman tactical communication system up to the award of a Supply and Support contract to GD UK Ltd., last September, was £405 million. The Supply and Support contract is worth £1.9 billion. To date, £156 million of this contract has been spent on development.

Afghanistan

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what charges are made for (a) food and (b) accommodation for British armed forces personnel serving in Afghanistan. [69523]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 July 2002]: We do not normally charge personnel on operations for food and accommodation.

Defence Medical Services

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps have been taken to (a) ensure that the Defence Medical Services are able to deal with the problems of service men while still in the armed forces and (b) make the DMS more approachable. [70130]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Medical Services (DMS) provide primary care and range of secondary care services to members of the armed forces in the United Kingdom and overseas. Where specialist services are not provided by the DMS, service personnel are normally referred to the NHS. Service personnel should feel able to contact DMS staff when necessary.

Veteran Rough Sleepers

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are being taken to help the ex-services Mental Welfare Society locate veteran rough sleepers in the UK. [70131]

Dr. Moonie: The St. Botolph's Day Centre, which is funded by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister Homelessness Directorate, provide a Contact and Assessment Team (CAT) worker, who is linked into the Ex-Services Fellowship Centre to specifically assist rough sleepers with an armed forces background. Rough sleepers with an armed forces background who wish to be assisted can be referred to New Belvedere House in Stepney. Once placed in permanent accommodation, the CAT worker will continue to assist them by linking them up with a number of support providing organisations, including charities such as the Ex-Services Mental Welfare Society (Combat Stress), depending on the nature of individual's needs.

Duchess of Kent Psychiatric Hospital, Catterick

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the reasons for the closure of the Duchess of Kent Psychiatric Hospital, Catterick in April 2003; what will happen to the patients there; and if he will review the decision to close the hospital. [70133]

Dr. Moonie: The Medical Quinquennial Review recommended the closure of the Duchess of Kent's Psychiatric Hospital (DKPH). Following advice from a leading independent consultancy in mental health services, it was recommended that defence mental health services should be switched toward care in the single service community, in line with the approach already well established in the NHS. Most service patients requiring mental health care are already treated by the Defence Community Psychiatric Service, where the emphasis is on local, out-patient care. The reduced requirement for in-patient facilities means that DKPH would no longer be required. Closure of the hospital is currently subject to consultation and no final decision has yet been taken. However, we would not close the hospital until absolutely satisfied that high quality replacement facilities were in place and that suitable alternative arrangements had been made for existing patients.

Service Psychiatric Hospitals

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service psychiatric hospitals there are in the UK; and what proposals there are to open more hospitals for service men. [70132]

Dr. Moonie: The Duchess of Kent's Psychiatric Hospital at Catterick is our only military psychiatric hospital. We have no plans to open any additional military hospitals.

Harriers

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the variation in maintenance costs between the engines on the Harrier GR8 and the GR8a. [70161]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 16 July 2002]: There are no variants of the Harrier designated GR8 or GR8a.

Currently the Harrier GR7 fleet is fitted with the Pegasus Mk105 engine. However, in a programme which is due to commence in February 2003 and be completed by the end of 2005, 30 aircraft will be upgraded to GR7a standard by the integration of the Pegasus Mk107 engine.

In addition, all Harrier GR7 and GR7a aircraft will receive avionics and weapons upgrades to provide the aircraft with a much improved capability, in particular, the ability to deliver the new generation of smart weapons that are about to enter service. These aircraft will be designated Harrier GR9 and GR9a.

The information requested for the Pegasus Mk105 and Mk107 engines is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, the Mk107 engine will have lower support costs due to increased reliability and reduced scheduled maintenance requirements, and over the planned in-service life of the Harrier GR7a and GR9a, it is expected that the resulting cost savings will be in the order of £2 million per year.

ECGD Funding

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will publish his review of ECGD funding for defence projects. [70160]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 16 July 2002]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has responsibility for the Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD). There is no review of ECGD support for the defence sector.

Army Website

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what total expenditure has been on the Army website for (a) construction and (b) maintenance; and if he will list total traffic on the home page for each month since 1997. [69672]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 17 July 2002]: Since the creation of the Army website in 1996, approximate total expenditure on construction has been £2.4 million and £230,000 on maintenance.

The Ministry of Defence did not retain information on the total traffic on the home page until November 2001. Figures since then are as follows:

	Total traffic
2001
November	118,913
December	91,749
2002
January	140,272
February	103,401
March	126,845
April	151,310
May	143,987
June	140,551

More in-depth figures on the total website usage for the period shown are available on the internet: http://armydev.dera.gov.uk/stats/index.html.

Royal School of Artillery

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many overseas students were sent to the Royal School of Artillery in each year since 1997 broken down by country of origin. [69669]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 17 July 2002]: The information requested is as follows:

Country	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002[1]

Royal Military Academy

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list his Department's total expenditure relating to Royal Military Academy Sandhurst in each year since 1997. [69649]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 17 July 2002]: The information requested is as follows:

Financial year	£ million
1997–98	23.655
1998–99	24.191
1999–2000	23.961
2000–01	25.510
2001–02	26.961

The figures quoted are cash costs and represent the running costs of the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst excluding salary costs of students.

Colombia

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of Her Majesty's forces are assigned to tasks in Colombia; and from which units these personnel are taken. [70751]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Attaché and Assistant Defence Attaché are the only British military personnel currently in Colombia.

Portsmouth Naval Base

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to dispose of land occupied by the Portsmouth naval base; what the time scale is for the process; how the land will be disposed of; and if he will make a statement. [70759]

Dr. Moonie: The only disposal currently contemplated at the naval base, Portsmouth, is of land adjacent to Unicorn Gate. This is required to facilitate the road improvements associated with the Portsmouth city centre re-development scheme. Discussions are under way between my Department and the developers. It is too early to say what the disposal arrangements will be, and the time scale is dependent upon a satisfactory conclusion to negotiations.

Land Disposal (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what use for land disposed of within the Portsmouth naval base would be acceptable to his Department; and if he will make a statement. [70760]

Dr. Moonie: Any alternative use of land within the naval base would be subject to operational and security considerations, and if a change of use was involved, this would be subject to the normal planning process.

SA80A1/SA80A2

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many injuries have occurred to service men and service women as a result of the SA80A1's reliability problems. [70703]

Dr. Moonie: None.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what faults have been reported with the (a) SA80A2 and (b) SA80A1. [70710]

Dr. Moonie: Approximately 24,000 SA80 A2 rifles have now been deployed to the armed forces and eight Equipment Failure Reports (resulting in an inoperable weapon) have been received from units. These reports includes weapons deployed with service shooting teams and infantry units as well as troops deployed to Afghanistan. Three of these reports relate to the trigger guard, three to magazine related parts, one was a welding failure on the sighting system and one related to stoppages experienced. Those reports that related to damage in transit have been disregarded since they are not an equipment failure.

There have been 1,361 recorded faults (resulting in an inoperable weapon), with the SA80 A1 in the last three years. A breakdown of recorded faults with the SA80 since 1986 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what investigations his Department has made into the reliability and accuracy of the rifle grenade-launching capability of the SA80 A2; and what impact it has had on the accuracy of the rifle's optical sight. [70693]

Dr. Moonie: The SA80 A2 rifle entered service late last year. There have been no indications of reliability or accuracy problems when using the A2 in conjunction with the Rifle Grenade General Service (RGGS). Tests were conducted by QinetiQ prior to the A2's introduction to validate with the modified rifle the results of earlier exhaustive performance trials using the SA80 A1 with the RGGS. Some rifle-launched grenades no longer in use did on occasion cause damage to the A1 and its optical sight, but since its introduction into service in 1996 the RGGS has been found to be safe in this respect. For maximum accuracy it is used with a dedicated prismatic sight.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the (a) SA80A1 and (b) SA80A2 rifles to be admitted to the NATO nominated weapons list. [70702]

Dr. Moonie: The modified SA80 A2 was accepted onto the NATO nominated weapons list in March 2002. We have no intention of seeking the readmittance of the SA80 A1 onto the list as it is being replaced by the modified SA80 A2.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what proportion of the SA80A2 rifles failed to meet the target of 10,000 rounds before failure during testing in Kuwait under hot/dry conditions; [70707]

(2) what proportion of the SA80 (a) A2 and (b) A1 rifles failed to meet the target of 10,000 rounds before failure during testing; [70700]

(3) what proportion of the SA80A1 rifles failed to meet the target of 10,000 rounds before failure during testing under hot/dry conditions. [70706]

Dr. Moonie: Both the SA80A1 and the SA80A2 were tested during trials in 2001 against the Battlefield Mission rather than a 10,000 round target. The 10,000 round figure relates to the manufacturer's expected life of component parts of the weapon. The new Battlefield Mission requires the rifle to fire in a number of different environments over a prolonged period of time. These included cold and dry conditions in Alaska, hot and wet conditions in Brunei, hot and dry conditions in Kuwait and temperate conditions in the United Kingdom.

The SA80A2 averaged 98 per cent. reliability during trials across all climates and during testing in Kuwait achieved 95 per cent. reliability. The target set for SA80A2 is 90 per cent. reliability. The SA80A1 averaged 55 per cent. reliability across the various climates and during testing in Kuwait achieved 6 per cent. reliability.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what inquiries were made by his Department into whether the use of the stabiliser developed by Warminster was considered in SA80 modifications. [70701]

Dr. Moonie: I assume the stabiliser the hon. Member is referring to is the Vortices Activated Muzzle Stabiliser (VAMS), which was designed to improve the accuracy of the Light Support Weapon. Trials were undertaken at Warminster in 1992 using SA80 A1s, but when fitted with the VAMS, the weapon failed to meet accuracy requirements. The VAMS was not therefore procured.

Phoenix UAVs

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if UK Phoenix UAVs were deployed in recent operations in Afghanistan. [70764]

Mr. Ingram: No.

Heavylift Aircraft

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on hiring heavylift aircraft since 1 July 1998 for use in UK defence or aid-related activities. [70782]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 July 2002]: From 1 July 1998 to 4 July 2002, the Ministry of Defence has committed to the charter of civilian heavylift aircraft up to the value of £43.9 million.

HMS Nottingham

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are for the future of HMS Nottingham. [70786]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 July 2002]: Repair options for HMS Nottingham are still being considered.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if warships will be brought out of (a) reserve and (b) extended readiness to replace HMS Nottingham while she is out of service. [70785]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 July 2002]: No warships are in reserve at present. Decisions on whether to change the readiness state of other warships will be taken once we have a clear assessment of the damage to HMS Nottingham.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Royal Navy warship will be deployed to replace the duties undertaken by HMS Nottingham. [70948]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 July 2002]: HMS Nottingham deployed for duties associated with the Five Power Defence Arrangements including Exercise Stardex. She was subsequently assigned to Coalition maritime operations in the Middle East, and was being held at notice for this purpose while deployed to the Asia Pacific region. She was also programmed to undertake a series of port visits in support of our defence diplomacy goals and wider security objectives in the region. It will not be possible to deploy another ship to undertake the full range of these duties. However, HMS York has been nominated as the ship held at readiness in support of the fight against terrorism, and options are being investigated for United Kingdom participation in Ex Stardex.

HMS Southampton

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the repairs to HMS Southampton cost following her accident in the Gulf in 1988; and how long the repairs took to make. [70784]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The repairs to HMS Southampton were combined with the ship's 1989 refit. It is not possible, from existing records, to separate the cost of repairs from those for the refit. However, the overall cost of this package of work including replacement equipment was some £45 million at that time. The duration of the repair and refit was 92 weeks.

Fleet Submarines

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he plans to extend the service life of fleet submarines. [70788]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 July 2002]: Plans to extend the service life of fleet submarines are kept under review as part of the Ministry of Defence's normal planning processes.

C-17 Aircraft

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the RAF's C-17 aircraft have exceeded the flying hours agreed under the terms of their lease; and if he will make a statement; [70783]

(2) what the projected cost is of the lease of C-17 aircraft throughout its entire term. [70780]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 July 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Hereford (Mr. Keetch) on 15 May 2002, Official Report, column 640W.

Since entering service with the RAF the C-17 fleet has now flown just under twice the hours upon which the support was modelled. The additional support costs arising from this level of flying are in the order of £10 million.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the cost of leasing four C-17 aircraft is greater than purchasing individual C-17 aircraft; and if he will make a statement. [70781]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The detailed lease costs and the underlying aircraft price are commercially sensitive and I am withholding this information under Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Type 23 Frigates

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Chilean Government have expressed an interest in existing type 23 frigates or new build vessels; and if he will make a statement. [70789]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 18 July 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 9 July 2002, Official Report, column 852W, to the hon. Member for North Essex (Mr. Jenkin).

Army Cadets

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the future of Army cadets in Bridgwater, Somerset. [71240]

Dr. Moonie: I understand that there has been recent progress in the negotiations with Sedgemoor district council in order to identify a suitable location in which to provide a joint cadet centre for both the Army and Air Cadets in Bridgwater. Until these negotiations are concluded, however, it would not be appropriate for me to comment further. Once they are completed I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

RAF Navigators

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the redeployment of navigators when the Tornado is replaced by the Eurofighter. [71180]

Dr. Moonie: The planned replacement of the Tornado F3 aircraft by Eurofighter will lead to a phased reduction in the requirement for fast jet navigators in the Royal Air Force over the next 10 years. Those F3 navigators who do not leave at an extant exit point during the draw down will be offered employment opportunities on other aircraft types. They will be redeployed as appropriate, taking account of individuals' skill sets, personal aspirations and service needs.

HMS Fearless

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on HMS Fearless; and what plans he has to bring the ship back into service while the launch of HMS Albion is delayed. [71534]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 17 July 2002, Official Report, column 275W, to the hon. Member for North Wiltshire (Mr. Gray), and on 2 July 2002, Official Report, column 234W, to the hon. Member for North Essex (Mr. Jenkin).

Wind Farms

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of the development of large scale wind farms in the North sea on (a) existing radar defence and (b) the UK's ability to co-operate with the USA in respect of the Missile Defence programme; and if he will make a statement. [70045]

Dr. Moonie: All wind farm proposals are examined on a case-by-case basis to establish whether they are likely to have an adverse effect on air defence radar. Rotating turbines can send false returns to radar heads and a study is currently being undertaken in conjunction with the DTI to see what measures, if any, can be taken to mitigate this.

An independent review of the United Kingdom's air defence radar was instituted following the terrorist attacks of 11 September, and this work will inform on-going work on SDR New Chapter.

No assessment has been made of the impact of wind farms on the type of radar currently used for missile early warning, or on those that might be developed for missile tracking, but there is no reason to expect wind farms to affect such radars in view of their different operating characteristics.

Information Campaigns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on information literature, advertising and campaign material in financial year 2001–02; if he will list the campaigns that spent over £250,000; and if he will make a statement. [70205]

Dr. Moonie: The expenditure for information literature, advertising and campaign material is spread among many different budgets and budget holders. The information is not therefore held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. More general information on advertising and publicity is expected to be included in the 2001–02 departmental performance report which, will be published later in the year. Copies will be available in the Library of the House.

Royal Military Music School

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list his Department's total expenditure relating to the Royal Military Music School, Kneller Hall, Twickenham for each year since 1995. [70517]

Dr. Moonie: Costs are not available for the complete period requested. Information available is as follows:

	£ million
1998–99	1.805
1999–2000	2.546
2000–01	2.414
2001–02	2.287

The figures are cash costs and represent the running costs of the Royal Military School of Music, Kneller Hall excluding the salary costs of students.

Overseas Deployments

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many United Kingdom soldiers were deployed overseas on (a) peacekeeping missions and (b) active service operations in each year since 1997; and how many United Kingdom soldiers are expected to return from such missions by 1 September. [72075]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mine Countermeasures Vessels

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many mine countermeasures vessels are operational. [70787]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 July 2002]: Of 22 Royal Navy mine countermeasures vessels, 19 were operational on 16 July 2002. Of the remainder, one is undergoing a refit, one is at Extended Readiness in her base port, and one is undergoing post-build trials prior to entering fleet service.

Ministerial Meetings

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Ministers in his Department have held meetings with Ministers and officials of the Irish Government since 1 June 2000; when and where each meeting took place; which Ministers were involved in each meeting; which Irish Government Departments were involved in each meeting; and which Ministers and officials from the Irish Government attended each meeting. [63069]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 20 June 2002, Official Report, column 533–34W, by the Minister for Europe, my right hon. Friend the Member for Neath (Peter Hain).

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the overseas trips on departmental business that have been undertaken in each of the last five years by officials in his Department; and what the (a) cost, (b) purpose and (c) result was in each case. [68720]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The FCO's expenditure on overseas trips on departmental business was £9 million in 1997–98, £10.3 million in 1998–99, £9.5 million in 1999–2000, £9.7 million in 2000–01 and £10.9 million in 2001–02. This expenditure covered travel, accommodation and subsistence costs. Detailed information about individual trips is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. All such trips are undertaken in support of our foreign policy objectives and the results are collectively reported to Parliament in the FCO's departmental report. All overseas travel by officials in the FCO is undertaken in accordance with the principles set out in chapter 8 of the Civil Service Management Code, and the detailed rules and guidance set out in the FCO's Code of Management.

Botswana

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what scrutiny has taken place of spending on the programme for supporting and improving protected reserves agreed between the European Union and the Botswanian Government; and with what results. [69226]

Mr. MacShane: No money has yet been disbursed under the EU programme. A steering committee will meet once a quarter to monitor expenditure when the programme has begun. The programme will also be subject to a mid-term review after two-and-a-half years and an end of project review after five years.

G8 Summit

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are for developing a market access initiative for all least developed countries at the G8 level. [69472]

Mr. MacShane: The G8 Action Plan for Africa includes commitments on market access for least developed African countries. These reaffirm pledges made at the United Nations' Third Conference for least developed countries in Brussels in May last year, and reiterated in the context of the Doha development agenda of multilateral trade negotiations. We are keen to see action by other G8 countries to open their markets to LDCs, matching that taken by the EU in its February 2001 "Everything but Arms Initiative". Acting on the Kananaskis commitment to African LDCs would be an important step in this direction.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are for taking forward the commitments made at the G8 summit to support African peace keeping capacity building. [69470]

Mr. MacShane: With its African partners, the G8 intends to deliver a joint plan, by 2003, for the development of African capability to undertake peace support operations (PSO), including at the regional level. This will involve improving co-ordination of existing donor peacekeeping training programmes, especially those of the UK, US and France in West Africa and elsewhere. Joint donor missions will be carried out to assess the logistical and training needs of sub-regional organisations like ECOWAS and SADC to improve, where possible, their capacity. Plans are already well advanced for the co-ordination of G8 support to the establishment of the Kofi Annan Peacekeeping Training Centre in Accra, Ghana. Bilaterally, the UK is already expanding the capacity of its PSO training programmes in Ghana, Kenya and South Africa and considering how best to provide regional PSO training support in Southern Africa.

Thai Airways Crash

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library the crash investigation report into Thai Airways flight TG261; and if he will make a statement. [70761]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The crash investigation report into Thai Airways flight TG261 has not yet been finalised but we are expecting this to issue shortly. Once it has been published and we have received a copy I will be happy to place one in the Library.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when (a) he last met and (b) plans next to meet representatives of the Kingdom of Thailand in relation to the British nationals killed in the crash of Thai Airways flight TG261 at Surat Thani in 1998; and if he will make a statement. [70762]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My predecessor, my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Bradshaw), raised the interest of families of British victims in the 1998 Surat Thani crash report with Pracha Guna-Kasem, Chief Adviser to the Thai Foreign Minister Surakiart when he visited Thailand in December 2001. The British Embassy in Bangkok has raised and will continue to raise this matter regularly with the Thai authorities. The most recent contact was on 17 July.

Kenya

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the President of Kenya's proposal to change the law allowing an extension of his presidential term; and if he will make a statement. [69866]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 17 July. 2002]: On 11 July a KANU spokesman announced that the party would wait to see whether the constitutional commissioners could deliver a draft constitutional Bill by September, before taking any decision on an extension of Parliament or the Presidential term.

Turkey

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Turkish Government with regard to the political situation in Turkey; and if he will make a statement. [71033]

Peter Hain: We have regular discussions with the Turkish Government and are following developments in the Turkish political scene with interest.

Mr. Ahmed Omar Saeed Sheikh

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will press the Pakistani authorities to commute the death sentence passed on Mr. Ahmed Omar Saeed Sheikh; and if he will make a statement. [70792]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 18 July 2002]: I spoke to the Pakistani High Commissioner about Mr. Sheikh the day that the sentence was announced. I reminded him of our opposition to the death sentence under all circumstances, and made clear our hope that the Pakistanis would consider commuting the sentence to one of imprisonment.

Gibraltar

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what EU funding, which is not available to the people of Gibraltar, will be made available in the event of an agreement to share the sovereignty of Gibraltar between the United Kingdom and Spain. [71165]

Peter Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Surrey Heath (Mr. Hawkins) on 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 614W.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the next round of talks under the terms of the Brussels Process will take place. [71595]

Peter Hain: We hope to hold further discussions in the autumn.

Middle East

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 16 July 2002, Official Report, column 181W, if he will place in the Library his letter to the Board of Deputies of 20 June; and if he will make a statement. [72048]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: A copy of my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's letter of 20 June to Mrs. Jo Wagerman, President, The Board of Deputies of British Jews, about anti-Semitic articles in the Arab media, has been placed in the Library. The letter sets outs the Government's concern about anti-Semitic incidents and what action the Government have taken to address them.

Overseas Territories

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 16 July 2002, Official Report, column 175W, on Overseas Territories, which seven Overseas Territories have produced and published statistics over the five year period up to and including either 2000 or 2001; and if he will in each case indicate the years in that period that no publication was made in respect of each overseas territory. [71570]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Further to my answer of 16 July 2002, Official Report, column 175W, on Overseas Territories, the following seven Overseas Territories have produced and published statistics annually over the last five year period: Anguilla, British Virgin Islands, Bermuda, Cayman Islands, Falklands Islands, St. Helena, and Turks and Caicos Islands.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 16 July 2002, Official Report, column 175W, on Overseas Territories, if he has assessed the recent publication of a compendium of statistics by Gibraltar to be of a standard and detail satisfactory to his Department. [71572]

Peter Hain: Following his request to the Chief Minister of Gibraltar my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has recently received a copy of the Abstract of Statistics from the Government of Gibraltar. We will be assessing its contents in due course.

Kamp van Zeist

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what the total capital costs were of providing the Kamp van Zeist facilities; and what percentage of those costs were met by (a) the UK Government, (b) the US Government and (c) the Scottish Parliament; [63702]

(2) what total current costs were incurred with respect to the Kamp van Zeist facilities; and what percentage of these costs were met by (a) the UK Government and (b) the Scottish Parliament. [63709]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 25 June 2002]: I have been asked to reply.

The Scottish Executive was responsible for the conduct of the Lockerbie trial and incurred all of the associated capital costs. These capital costs, currently estimated at £11.5 million, were fully reimbursed by the Government. To date, the US Government have contributed some £15 million to the overall costs, both capital and current, of the trial and subsequent appeal.

Total current costs are estimated to be £63.8 million over the financial years 1998–99 through to 2001–02, but final audited figures for 2001–02 have yet to be finalised. It is also likely that there will be some further current costs into the current financial year 2002–03, though the sums involved will be relatively small. The site was returned to the Dutch Government on 2 April 2002. 80 per cent. of the current costs are being funded by the Government and 20 per cent. by the Scottish Executive.

SCOTLAND

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many times special advisers have accompanied Ministers on overseas visits in each of the last five years; which countries were visited; and what the total cost of each individual visit was. [47153]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

Since that date there have been two occasions when a special adviser has accompanied Scotland Office Ministers on overseas visits.

The details of these visits are as follows:

Year	Occasions	Country visited	Cost of visit (£)
2001–02	1	Belgium	545.87
2002–03	1	Spain	728.61

All travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Handbook.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many times Ministers in her Department have travelled abroad at taxpayers' expense since March 2001; what countries they visited; and what the total cost of each visit was. [47112]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister on 11 April 2002, Official Report, column 552W.

Overtime Payments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what her policy is on overtime payments for staff in her Department. [49116]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office policy on overtime follows the principles detailed in Section 9 of the Civil Service Management Code. This sets out terms and conditions relating to hours of work and how staff should be compensated for working outside their normal pattern of attendance.

Staff Pay

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what have been the total salary costs of each of the non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible in each of the last five years. [50306]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. The Department is responsible for one non-departmental public body, the Boundary Commission for Scotland.

Salary costs for the Commission were as follows:

1999–2000	37,018
2000–01	41,885
2001–02	54,163

Prior to 1999, staffing support for the Commission was provided by the former Scottish Office.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much and what proportion of the departmental expenditure limit for 2002–03 had been spent by 31 May; what the figures were for 2001–02; and if she will make a statement. [60999]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 17 June 2002, Official Report, column 130W.

Grants

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which organisations and outside bodies which were in receipt of grant in 1997–98 no longer are; what the annual saving is (a) individually and (b) in aggregate; which organisations and outside bodies which were not in receipt of grant in 1997–98 now are; and what the annual cost (i) individually and (ii) in aggregate is. [62049]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 17 June 2002, Official Report, column 137W.

Public Inquiries

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what her policy is on using 0870 telephone numbers for inquiries by the public to the Department and its agencies. [66198]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department does not use 0870 telephone numbers for inquiries by the public.

Building Values

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the buildings owned by her Department and estimate the market value of each of them. [66950]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, my right hon. Friend the Member for Brent, South (Mr. Boateng) on 3 July 2002, Official Report, column 339W.

Gender Impact Assessments

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the subjects of the gender impact assessments drawn up by her Department since June 1997, indicating in each case whether the outcome has been (a) put out to consultation and (b) published. [66733]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 4 July 2002]: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. Since that date, no gender impact assessments have been drawn up by the Department.

Data Series

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what new data series, separated by (a) gender, (b) race, (c) disability and (d) age have been commissioned by her Department since August 1997. [66735]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 4 July 2002]: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. Since that date no new data series has been commissioned in the Department.

Equal Treatment

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she has established a baseline for policy appraisal against which to measure progress on equal treatment; and what progress has been achieved. [66736]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 4 July 2002]: My Department does not deliver executive services to the public. No baseline for policy appraisal against which to measure progress on equal treatment has been drawn up.

Open Source Software

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what her policy is towards using open source software; and what percentage is used in her Department. [69328]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department does not currently use open source software. The Government will publish its policy for open source software in summer 2002.

Consultation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the public consultations undertaken by her Department since 1997, indicating for each consultation (a) if copies were available on-line, (b) if copies were available in print, (c) the date the time period given for responses opened and (d) the date the time period given for responses closed. [69798]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. Since that date, the Department has undertaken one public consultation exercise, on the size of the Scottish Parliament.

Copies of the consultation paper were available in print and on-line. The consultation was launched on 18 December 2001 and the period given for responses closed on 29 March 2002.

Departmental Report

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the cost was of publishing her Department's and its predecessor's annual report for each of the past five years. [70484]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present from on 1 July 1999. The cost of publishing my Department's annual reports were as follows:

1999–2000: £1,020

2000–01: £3,160

2001–02: £3,869.

The costs of publishing reports of the former Scottish Office are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Press Officers

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) full-time equivalents were employed by her press office and (b) secondees were placed in her press office in the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [70546]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

Since that date the Department has had four full-time press officers. No secondees have been placed in my Department's press office.

Information Campaigns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much her Department spent on information literature, advertising and campaign material in financial year 2001–02; if she will list the campaigns that spent over £250,000; and if she will make a statement. [70207]

Mrs. Liddell: In 2001–02, my Department spent £180,000 on advertising material. Most of this expenditure related to election or electoral registration matters.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL

Overtime Payments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General what her policy is on overtime payments for staff in her Department. [49117]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General how much and what proportion of the departmental expenditure limit for 2002–03 had been spent by 31 May; what the figures were for 2001–02; and if she will make a statement. [60998]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, on 17 June 2002, Official Report, column 130W.

Building Values

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General if she will list the buildings owned by her Department and estimate the market value of each of them. [66951]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, on 3 July 2002, Official Report, column 339W.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Further Education

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the effect the pay and conditions of service of further education lecturers has on her strategy for raising standards in the further education sector. [65076]

Margaret Hodge: As independent organisations it is for further education (FE) colleges to agree the pay and the terms and conditions of their staff within the context of the overall resources available to them.

Extra resources have been made available to FE colleges to support improvements in pay and conditions and to help raise standards in colleges. The total funding for FE has increased by over £1.1 billion between 1997–98 and 2002–03, a 20 per cent. real terms increase. In 2002–03, the Learning and Skills Council has increased colleges' participation funding rates by 2.5 per cent. in cash terms, compared to a 1.5 per cent. increase in 2001–02. We planned to increase total spend on FE by over £300 million in 2003–04. However, the Chancellor's statement of 15 July giving additional resources for education, including a 1 per cent. per annum real terms increase for FE in the unit of core funding, will mean more money in 2003–04 than originally planned, and further real terms increases in future years. We also expect to announce in due course substantial additional resources to take forward elements of the "Success for All" strategy for reforming further education and training.

As part of the overall funding allocation, we are investing more than £300 million in the Teaching Pay Initiative (TPI) to help modernise FE pay arrangements and to recruit, reward and retain teachers and lecturers as part of our drive to improve teaching and learning. We want to see all staff in the sector have a more attractive career structure, increased rewards for their efforts, and support for continuing professional training and development. Developing excellence in teaching and leadership is a key goal in our strategy for reforming the FE sector.

Student Funding

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the unit of funding was for each student in FE and HE in each of the years 1992–93 to 2001–02 as expressed at 2001–02 prices. [65397]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 1 July 2002]: The unit of funding expressed at 2001–02 prices for FE and HE are set out in the table:

	Unit of funding
	FE total funding	Higher education
1992–93	—	6,320
1993–94	3,910	5,970
1994–95	3,810	5,810
1995–96	3,560	5,550
1996–97	3,470	5,190
1997–98	3,390	5,030
1998–99	3,350	5,030
1999–2000	3,600	5,020
2000–01 (provisional)	3,640	4,970
2001–02 (plans)	3,810	5,020

Medical Students

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to the answer of 24 June 2002, Official Report, column 674W, on medical degree places, how many students applied for medical degree courses in each year since 1997. [71159]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The information is shown in the table.

Students applying to pre-clinical medical courses in the UK

Year of entry	Applicants[1]
1997	12,076
1998	11,807
1999	10,972
2000	10,226
2001	10,231

[1] Home and overseas students applying via the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS).

Despite a substantial increase in the number of students studying pre-clinical medicine from 5,020 in 1997 to 5,928 in 2001, the number of applications to places remains just under two to one.

GCSE

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total GCSE points score for (a) all pupils, (b) pupils in the upper quartile and (c) pupils in the lower quartile was in (i) specialist schools designated on or before September 1 1996 (ii) specialist schools designated after September 1996 and (iii) all schools in each of the last five years. [69693]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information is shown in the following table.

Average[1] GCSE/GNVQ point score in academic year

Information Campaigns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much her Department spent on information literature, advertising and campaign material in financial year 2001–02; if she will list the campaigns that spent over £250,000; and if she will make a statement. [70214]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: In 2001–02, the Department spent £11.688 million from its centrally held Advertising and Publicity Budget, which covers information literature, advertising and campaign material. There is additional spend from departmental programme budgets on publicity activity but this could be identified only at disproportionate cost.

It is possible, however, to list advertising campaigns drawn from all departmental budgets. Campaigns where the spend exceeded £250,000 were as follows:

Science Year

New Deal 50+

Child care Recruitment

Foundation Degrees

Adult Basic Skills ("Get On")

Connexions

Fast Track Teaching

Parents' magazine ("Parents + Schools")

Widening Participation in Higher Education (Aimhigher)

Millennium Volunteers

Child care Link

Modern Apprenticeships.

Youth

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the EU committee for the implementation of the Community action programme concerning co-operation policy in the youth field, including European voluntary service and youth exchange within the Community and with third countries (YOUTH) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70897]

Margaret Hodge: The EU Youth Committee normally meets twice a year in June and December. As yet no date has been finalised by the European Commission for the next meeting.

The UK is represented on the committee by one official from the Joint International Unit of the Department for Education and Skills and the Department for Work and Pensions. The Scottish Executive is consulted in advance about the content of the meetings, and makes its views known, in accordance with the Memorandum of Understanding between the UK Government and the Devolved Administrations.

Asylum Seekers

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many asylum-seeking children (a) entered and (b) left school in each Government Office region, broken down by (i) age profile and (ii) the first language spoken, at the latest date for which figures are available. [69971]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Information on the number of children of asylum seekers in schools is not collected centrally.

The Refugee Council has estimated that there are in the region of 80,000 children of asylum seekers and refugees in schools in the United Kingdom.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the overseas trips on departmental business that have been undertaken in each of the last five years by officials in her Department; and what the (a) cost, (b) purpose and (c) result was in each case. [68732]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: All overseas travel by officials in my Department is undertaken in accordance with the principles set out in Chapter 8 of the 'Civil Service Management Code', and the detailed rules and guidance set out in the departmental 'Travel and Transfer Guide'. The detailed information requested about individual trips is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Office

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) post offices and (b) sub-post offices closed in Scotland in each year since 1997, broken down by local authority area. [71126]

Mr. Timms: I am informed by Post Office Ltd. that data on post office closures are not collated on a local authority area basis but will in future be collated on the basis of UK parliamentary constituencies.

I am also informed that data by country on net post office closures are not available before 1998 but that net closures in Scotland by financial year since then were as follows:

	Number of closures
Year to end March 1999	25
Year to end March 2000	27
Year to end March 2001	63
Year to end March 2002	26

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 13 June 2002, Official Report, column 1388W, on the Post Office, if she will make a statement on the level of performance of first class deliveries between Wirral and London in 2001. [69779]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 17 July 2002]: Targets for the Royal Mail's scheduled services and standards are set in the licence issued by the Postal Services Commission (Postcomm) and agreed between Consignia and the Consumer Council for Postal Services (Postwatch). As the level of performance of first class deliveries between Wirral and London is a matter for the company I have asked Consignia chief executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are being proposed for Post Office staff and customers to deal with (a) balance disputes, (b) lost or stolen cards and (c) lost PIN numbers for Post Office card account holders; and if she will make a statement. [70190]

Mr. Timms: These are matters which fall within the day to day responsibility of Post Office Ltd. I have therefore asked the chief executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Genetic Modification

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what responsibilities she holds in respect of genetic modification; how this connects with (a) DEFRA and (b) the Department of Health; and if she will make a statement. [69773]

Ms Hewitt: DEFRA has the lead responsibility for genetic modification (GM) policy, sets the regulations concerning the deliberate release and marketing of genetically modified organisms (GMOs), and funds a research programme to underpin these regulatory activities. Although DTI has no formal responsibility for GM policy, it leads on competitiveness issues and sponsors the biotechnology sector. The Office of Science and Technology (OST) in the DTI supports the Chief Scientific Advisor in his oversight of transdepartmental science and technology. The OST also funds the Research Councils.

The Agriculture and Environment Biotechnology Commission (AEBC), the Government's independent strategic advisory body on biotechnology issues affecting agriculture and the environment, advises my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, the devolved Administrations, and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

The Government Departments, including DEFRA, DTI, Department of Health, and the devolved Administrations and agencies work closely together to ensure a co-ordinated approach on GM. In particular, all three Departments are represented on the Ministerial Sub-Committee on Biotechnology—SCI(BIO)—whose terms of reference are > "to consider issues relating to biotechnology—including those arising from genetic modification, biotechnology in healthcare and genetic issues—and their economic impact; and to report as necessary to the Committee on Science Policy".

Mineworkers' Pension Funds

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she expects to complete her review of the usage of the surpluses of the two mineworkers' pension funds. [71470]

Mr. Wilson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for East Carmarthen and Dinefwr (Adam Price) on 18 July 2002, Official Report, column 442W.

Farm Bill

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she is making to the US Government on the proposed Farm Bill; and if she will make a statement. [67598]

Ms Hewitt: HMG are in continual dialogue with the US Government at all levels concerning the US Farm Bill (the "Farm Security and Rural Investment Act 2002"). We have made clear to the US Government our considerable disappointment with the Farm Bill, especially in the context of the Doha Development Agenda, which committed all WTO members to substantial reductions in trade-distorting domestic support.

The US believes the Farm Bill is compatible with their World Trade Organisation commitments and have stressed their intention to remain fully engaged in the Doha negotiations. I will continue to strongly encourage them to do so and to put forward practical proposals to achieve the Doha commitments in agriculture.

US Steel Tariffs

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the US steel tariffs. [69481]

Ms Hewitt: The US action is unjustified and deeply regrettable. The Government fully support the European Commission's robust response in immediately pursuing WTO action and took a lead in pressing for EU safeguard action to protect the UK and EU steel industry against diversion of trade.

We are also proactively negotiating in support of the efforts of UK companies to secure product exclusions from the US measures.

Child Labour

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals she has to control imports of goods produced by child labour. [69743]

Ms Hewitt: The Government are opposed to the use of trade sanctions to enforce labour standards and believes that the setting and monitoring of labour standards are matters to be dealt with by the International Labour Organisation (ILO).

The Government strongly support the ILO Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work, which reaffirms the commitment of all ILO member states to respect, promote and implement fundamental labour standards, including the abolition of child labour. The UK has ratified ILO Conventions 138 (Minimum Age) and 182 (Worst Forms of Child Labour), and supports the ILO's International Programme on Elimination of Child Labour (IPEC).

Russian Federation (G8 Assistance)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what budget she has allocated for 2002–03 to implement the G8 agreement on assistance to the Russian Federation with nuclear security and decommissioning. [69533]

Mr. Wilson: The Government initiated a £84 million programme to address the nuclear legacy in the Former Soviet Union in April 2001, and the budget for 2002–03 is £27.4 million. The programme is expected to support a wide range of nuclear legacy issues across the Former Soviet Union with much of the work undertaken in Russia associated with the decommissioning of nuclear submarines, plutonium disposition and the development of Non-weapons related employment in closed nuclear cities.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much financial support was granted to the Russian Federation for nuclear security and decommissioning, broken down by title of each individual project supported in each of the last 10 years; and if she will make a statement. [69534]

Mr. Wilson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins) on 8 March 2002, Official Report, column 588W, in which I provided information on Government expenditure on decommissioning of nuclear installations and equipment in the Former Soviet Union.

The UK has provided support to countries of the Former Soviet Union through a Health and Safety Programme and the 'Nuclear Safety Programme' since the mid 1990s. However, there has been only one UK funded Russian Federation project associated with the decommissioning of RBMK reactors. This was in 1997–98 and UK contribution was (£30,000). There is a further £66,000 decommissioning project concerned with reactor sealing at the Beloyarsk nuclear power plant of units but absence of a legal agreement covering liabilities, site access and tax issues which we are negotiating with the Russian Authorities is delaying its start up.

On security, the UK has assisted with the provision of a physical protection system for the icebreaker 'Sevmorput' in the Murmansk Shipping Company's atomic fleet. This was in 2001–02 and total cost to UK was £458K.

The UK (DTI) has also funded a range of activities with the Russian Federation both to help improve understanding of nuclear safeguards generally and also to improve arrangements for nuclear materials accountancy at specific Russian facilities. The programme has included nuclear safeguards and materials accountancy seminars and training courses for Russian regulators and facility operators (approximately £550k since 1993), and co-operative projects to improve nuclear materials accountancy arrangements at the Mayak RT-1 reprocessing plant (approximately £500k since 1994) and the Angarsk enrichment plant (approximately £110k since 1998).

Employment Relations Act

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to review the Employment Relations Act 1999. [71792]

Alan Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 11 July 2002 to my hon. Friend the Member for Gloucester (Mr. Dhanda), which announced a review of the operation of the Employment Relations Act 1999. The terms of reference of the review and a schedule describing the Act have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

National Business Debtline

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many businesses have received advice from the National Business Debtline; if the pilot project will be extended beyond three years; and if she will make a statement. [70201]

Nigel Griffiths: At the end of business on Friday 12 July 2002 the Business Debtline had answered calls from 11,008 different businesses since the pilot started. Approximately 19–20 per cent. of the callers ring on more than one occasion and this is not reflected in the 11,008 calls referred to above.

The project will be evaluated in the coming months and a decision will be made in the light of the results of the evaluation and in conjunction with the banks, who are our partners in this, as to whether it will be extended beyond three years.

Information Campaigns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the costs were of the survey, in October 2001, to measure the success of the advertising campaign in the autumn regarding the Business Link brand. [70199]

Nigel Griffiths: Pre and post campaign tracking research for the autumn 2001 advertising campaign cost £61,270. This cost excludes VAT.

The tracking research measured a number of factors before and after the campaign to assess the impact of the advertising activity. These included: awareness of Business Link; claimed source of awareness; recognition of the national Business Link advertising; and usage of Business Link.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the costs were of the advertising campaign in autumn 2001 to promote the Business Link brand. [70198]

Nigel Griffiths: The cost of the autumn 2001 advertising campaign was £2.3 million.

This cost excludes VAT. This total cost also includes the cost of all research undertaken for the campaign.

This campaign consisted of TV, national press and online advertising, and direct mail.

Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much debt is guaranteed by the Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme; and if she will make a statement. [70200]

Nigel Griffiths: During the financial year ending 31 March 2002 the Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme guaranteed loans to the value of £255 million.

Since the Scheme started in June 1981, over £3 billion of loans have been guaranteed.

Business University

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made on plans to create a business university for business support. [69679]

Ms Hewitt: The Business Link 'U' has been established for the Small Business Service (SBS), Business Link Operators (BLO) and partners, fulfilling the 2001 Small Business Manifesto commitment to "Create a Business University for Business Support". The 'U' is the world's first virtual corporate university for business development professionals.

Progress so far includes:

management structures are in place, including the appointment of a 'U' Governing Board, Principal and Director;

five initial faculties have been set up (core, customer facing, leadership, marketing and business development);

learning needs analyses have been conducted for business advisers;

'Subject Area Expert' teams have been identified from within the SBS/BLO network and training will commence in September.

Venture Capital

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations she has received regarding the encouragement of venture capital in the UK. [71023]

Nigel Griffiths: We have received no recent representations regarding the encouragement of venture capital. However, the Government fully recognise the importance of the venture capital industry to the UK economy and, since coming to office, has taken a number of measures aimed at creating an economic environment in which it can flourish. We have also been working closely with venture capital firms on programmes such as Regional Venture Capital Funds, the UK High Technology Fund and the Community Development Venture Fund. This has involved regular contacts with representatives of the venture capital industry at both ministerial and official level.

Export Credits Guarantee

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of export credit guarantees in 2001 was for environmental technology or services exports. [69413]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 15 July 2002]: For the financial year 2000–01, 1.2 per cent. of ECGD business issued/underwritten during the year was in respect of environmental technology projects or investments. This figure rose to 7.2 per cent. in 2001–02, a five-fold increase on the previous year.

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made towards establishing a trading fund for the Export Credits Guarantee Department. [72213]

Ms Hewitt: Earlier this year on 7 February 2002, Official Report, column 1074W, I told the House that ECGD would give priority to its business and systems in order to make itself ready for establishment as a capitalised Trading Fund, my preferred option for its future operation. Work has now progressed sufficiently for me to confirm that ECGD will become a Trading Fund.

In making this commitment, I am conscious of the need for ECGD to complement market provision of export insurance and guarantees. As a result, ECGD should do more to stimulate the private market and develop new ways of working with them to benefit the UK economy by supporting UK exporters and investors in overseas markets.

ECGD will have greater operational autonomy as a Trading Fund. This will offer an improved service to customers, who have expressed concern during the programme of work, about ECGD's ability to provide adequate levels of support to exporters. Customers can expect greater clarity and certainty as to the levels of ECGD's support. I have also asked ECGD to improve its customer care for new customers and make it easier for them to access its support.

Research jointly commissioned by ECGD and HM Treasury from National Economic Research Associates (NERA) to quantify the net benefits to the UK economy of ECGD's operations will be published in due course.

My right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury—who has been closely involved with this whole process—and I have jointly commissioned ECGD and the Treasury to develop multilateral strategies to secure more robust financial disciplines in respect of Government supported export credit agencies.

Work will now continue to prepare ECGD for Trading Fund status. I will review the position—including the need to hold a further consultation—and will announce a timetable in the autumn.

Industrial Growth

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which industrial sectors within the UK she estimates have the greatest growth potential. [63804]

Ms Hewitt: The Department does not make predictions about which UK sectors have the greatest growth potential. We look at a range of factors that impact on productivity and competitiveness across the UK economy.

Export Licences

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list those countries which have during the last 12 months imported defence equipment from the USA which incorporates equipment exported from the UK to the USA following the granting of an export licence by her Department. [69110]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 11 July 2002]: The Department of Trade and Industry's Export Control Organisation does not hold records on actual exports of defence equipment from the USA to a third country.

All relevant export licence applications, including where it is understood that the items are to be incorporated into products for onward export, are rigorously assessed on a case by case basis against the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria, in the light of the circumstances prevailing at the time. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to my hon. Friend the Member for Sherwood (Mr. Tipping) on 8 July 2002, Official Report, columns 650–52W.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will determine export licence application 33863 in respect of (a) an order for CHAFF and (b) a repeat order for defensive infra-red flares. [70794]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Licences to export arms and other items whose export is controlled for strategic reasons are issued by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry acting through the Export Control Organisation.

A decision has not yet been reached on export licence application 33863, but will be taken as quickly as possible consistent with the need to give full consideration to the issues involved.

E-Commerce

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps she is taking to encourage the private sector to invest and participate in the consumer market for e-commerce services; and if she will make a statement; [71599]

(2) what steps she is taking to encourage the private sector e-commerce and software industries to serve the public; and if she will make a statement. [71598]

Mr. Timms: The Government recognise the importance and the potential of ICT industries which increasingly underpin much of what is happening elsewhere in the economy. There are many initiatives under way, often in partnership with industry, that aim to encourage growth and awareness of e-commerce and the ICT industries, including UK online for business, the Information Age Partnership and e-Shopping.

Open Source Software

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her policy is towards using open source software; and what percentage is used in her Department. [69329]

Ms Hewitt: I support the use of open source software where it would provide long-term benefits to the Department.

To date, there is minimal use of open source software in the Department's core IT services, but UNITAS regularly review whether its application would benefit the Department and if this is found to be the case, its introduction would be supported.

The Office of Government Commerce and the Office of the eEnvoy have published a draft policy on the use of open source software which was made available for consultation from December 2001 until March 2002. The draft policy is available for viewing on the OeE Govtalk website reference http://www.govtalk.gov.uk/rfc/rfc_document.asp?docnum=429 and it is planned to publish the policy in summer 2002. The DTI's use of open source software will follow the Government Policy when published.

Computer Hacking

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many cases of computer hacking her Department has recorded in 2002; and on how many occasions in 2002 her Department's computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers operating (a) within and (b) outside her Department. [69454]

Ms Hewitt: During 2002, there have been no reported or detected occasions that my Department's computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers, either from within or outside.

Policy Review of Fusion

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Government will publish the findings of the Policy Review of Fusion. [68858]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The findings of the Policy Review of Fusion were incorporated into the report on the Quinquennial Review of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority, published on 28 November 2001, and as such are already in the public domain.

BNFL

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the viability of BNFL's business plan of 2000. [66100]

Mr. Wilson: The Department and its advisers review BNFL's Corporate Plan annually as part of the strategic oversight of the company. The 2000 plan was subject to a review as part of that process.

Uranium Mining

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations she has received from (a) UK non-governmental organisations, (b) non-UK non-governmental organisations and (c) other Governments regarding (i) uranium mines, (ii) uranium milling plants, and (iii) uranium tailing waste disposal facilities from which the United Kingdom has obtained its mined uranium. [69442]

Mr. Wilson: None.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent information she has received and what measures she has in place to monitor the health and safety of workers and environmental standards at (a) uranium mines, (b) uranium milling plants and (c) uranium tailing waste disposal facilities from which the United Kingdom has obtained its mined uranium. [69452]

Mr. Wilson: None. You should take up any issue about the environment with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, and any issues on health and safety of workers with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

Nuclear Power

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the Government's policy regarding unfulfilled overseas nuclear fuel contracts; and what the expected cost overruns are in respect of these contracts. [66101]

Mr. Wilson: I am assuming the question relates to existing contracts between BNFL and overseas electricity utilities for reprocessing spent nuclear fuel rather than to contracts for the supply of fresh fuel. The Government's position is that these contracts are binding, are supported by intergovernmental agreements and should be honoured. Details of contract prices, operating costs and throughput schedules are a commercial matter for BNFL and its customers.

Sellafield

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations her Department has received regarding (a) current leakage levels of technetium-99 into groundwater at Sellafield and (b) the point source origin of such leakage. [69505]

Mr. Wilson: None. However, I have replied to two previous questions on this matter tabled by the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Carmichael) on 13 May 2002, Official Report, column 80 and my hon. Friend the Member for Blaenau Gwent (Llew Smith) on 10 June 2002, Official Report, column 562.

Nuclear Reactor Safety

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations her Department has received concerning nuclear reactor safety regulations reform; and if she will make a statement. [69444]

Mr. Wilson: In the course of its regular contacts with companies in the nuclear industry, my Department has received representations in recent months on aspects of the nuclear safety regulatory system. Where appropriate, I have taken these into account in the White Paper 'Managing the Nuclear Legacy' published on 4 July, which also made reference to the joint review being undertaken on nuclear regulation by the Government's advisory committees, the Nuclear Safety Advisory Committee and the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee. I look forward to receiving comments on the White Paper, including its consideration of regulatory issues, by the closing date for consultation, 18 October.

Nuclear Industry

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) at what intervals reviews are conducted of the level of nuclear industry liability in respect of a nuclear accident; and when the next review is planned to take place; [71477]

(2) what measures are used in setting the nuclear industry's level of liability in respect of a nuclear accident; and what account is taken of inflation. [71476]

Mr. Wilson: With regard to liability of the UK nuclear industry in the event of a nuclear accident, the UK is a contracting party to the Paris and Brussels conventions on third party liability in the field of nuclear energy. One of the underlying principles of the Paris convention is that all liability arising from a nuclear accident is channelled to the operator of the nuclear installation on a no fault basis. Present UK legislation requires operators to cover their liability by insurance, (the Nuclear Installations Act 1965) and operator's liability is currently limited to a maximum £140 million per accident.

Liability amounts are reviewed by the UK along with our international partners and were last increased in 1990. The Paris and Brussels conventions are currently in the process of revision with a view to substantially increase the operator's liability to £430 million per accident.

On entry into force, the revised Paris and Brussels conventions will provide for a review of liability amounts every five years.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria are applied in varying the salary of the BNFL chairman. [71512]

Mr. Wilson: The starting fee of £150,000 per annum for the chairman of BNFL was set in October 1999 for a period of three years. The increase, effective from 1 October 2002—equivalent to just over 3 per cent. per annum—was considered to be an appropriate increase in recognition of the service provided by Mr. Collum since he became chairman. This is close to the average level of increase awarded to BNFL staff in each of those three years.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals her Department has received regarding the extension between refuelling periods for nuclear reactors. [71546]

Mr. Wilson: None.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations her Department has received regarding the continued operation of BNFL magnox stations. [71532]

Mr. Wilson: BNFL informed the Department of its intention to bring forward the closure dates of the Calder Hall and Chapelcross stations on 22 May 2002.

The Government launched a consultation on energy policy on 14 May with a view to publishing a White Paper around the turn of the year. The role of nuclear is one of the key issues raised in the document. We shall be posting the replies to the consultation on the DTI's website.

Nuclear Waste

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations her Department has received concerning the adequacy of security provision in the event of (a) an accident and (b) a terrorist attack involving the transportation of nuclear waste in (i) an urban and (ii) a rural environment. [69137]

Mr. Wilson: The Department has received a large volume of representations from hon. Members, their constituents and others over safety and security in the civil nuclear industry, including the transport of nuclear material in all environments, in the period since the attacks in the United States on 11 September 2001.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many tonnes of nuclear waste was imported and reprocessed in the UK in each year since 1997; and what the projected amount is in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004. [69037]

Mr. Wilson: The United Kingdom does not allow the import of "nuclear waste". Spent nuclear fuel belonging to overseas owners is imported for reprocessing in the UK. Details of fuel deliveries and the programming of reprocessing fuel owned by individual customers are operational and commercial matters for BNFL and its customers. It can be noted, however, that BNFL published in 1993 a document setting out the economic and commercial justification for THORP. This included details of the amounts of fuel contracted for reprocessing during the baseload period of THORP's operation. From this it can be seen that the total amount of overseas owned fuel to be reprocessed during that period is 4,547 tonnes.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much nuclear waste was (a) generated and (b) reprocessed within the UK in each year since 1997. [69034]

Mr. Wilson: Radioactive waste is defined as

"any material which contains or is contaminated by radionuclides and for which no use is foreseen".

Such waste is conditioned for long-term storage. Information on the amount of radioactive waste that is held in the UK and also on predicted future arisings of such waste is published every three years by DEFRA and NIREX Ltd. in the National Radioactive Waste Inventory. The most recent inventory was published in 1999. A copy is in the Libraries of the House. An updated edition of the inventory is due for publication later this year. Reprocessing is an activity carried out in order to recover reusable materials from spent nuclear fuel and to separate out the waste contained in the spent fuel. Radioactive waste is not reprocessed. Details of annual throughput at the reprocessing plants at Sellafield are an operational and commercial matter for BNFL.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many tonnes of nuclear waste were transported by rail in the UK in each year since 1997; and what was (a) the source and (b) the destination of the waste. [69135]

Mr. Wilson: I am assuming the question relates to movements by rail of spent nuclear fuel discharged from UK nuclear power stations. Spent nuclear fuel from the UK's Magnox and Advanced Gas Cooled Reactor power stations is routinely transported by rail to the Sellafield site in Cumbria for reprocessing. The power stations that are the source of the spent fuel are situated throughout Great Britain.

The total volume of spent fuel that is transported in any given year would depend entirely on operational factors. Such transports are undertaken by Direct Rail Services (DRS), BNFL's rail freight subsidiary. DRS does not collate information on the total tonnage of fuel that is transported each year. To try to obtain the information requested from the records held at the power stations and Sellafield would involve disproportionate time and cost.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps her Department has taken to (a) review and (b) increase security measures for (i) nuclear facilities and (ii) transportation of nuclear materials including (A) MOX plutonium and (B) nuclear waste following the terrorist attacks on 11 September 2001. [69138]

Mr. Wilson: The DTI's Office for Civil Nuclear Security (OCNS), the security regulator, sets stringent standards for security at nuclear sites and for the security of nuclear material during transportation. Security precautions are kept under regular review and have been reviewed in the light of the terrorist attacks in the USA on 11 September 2001. Security has been enhanced since the events of 11 September. It is not Government policy to disclose details of these security arrangements.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations her Department has received concerning the length of time a train carrying nuclear waste may safely be left stationary and the (a) environmental and (b) health implications if this time scale is exceeded. [69041]

Mr. Wilson: None.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what security measures are employed, and at what cost, during the transportation of nuclear waste within the UK. [69133]

Mr. Wilson: Security measures for nuclear material during transportation are regulated by the DTI's Office for Civil Nuclear Security (OCNS), the security regulator. It is not Government policy to disclose details of security measures taken in connection with nuclear material. The costs of security measures are met by the operators.

Ofgem

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under what statutory powers Ofgem operates. [72561]

Mr. Wilson: Ofgem derives its powers from the Gas Act 1986; Electricity Act 1989; Gas Act 1995; Utilities Act 2000; Fair Trading Act 1973; Restrictive Trade Practices Act 1976; and the Competition Act 1998.

It also has powers under the Stop Now Orders (EC Directives) Regulations 2001 and the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999.

Downstream Oil Industry Forum

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the terms of reference are of the Downstream Oil Industry Forum; who the members of the forum are; when the first meeting of the forum will be; who will chair the forum; and if she will make a statement. [70326]

Mr. Wilson: I have invited the main trade associations in the oil distribution and marketing sector (Association of United Kingdom Oil Independents (AUKOI), Federation of Petroleum Suppliers Ltd. (FPS), Petrol Retailers Association (PRA), UK Petroleum Industry Association (UKPIA)), and some of their members to join me for a discussion on 24 July 2002.

This will be an informal discussion under my chairmanship and there are no formal terms of reference. Discussion will focus on the following:

(a) The distribution infrastructure (including its longer-term maintenance, use and implications for security of supply).

(b) Service to motorists in rural areas.

Carbon Dioxide (Underground Sequestration)

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the sites under consideration for underground sequestration of carbon dioxide. [71524]

Mr. Wilson: While no decision has yet been made with regard to specific sites as planning is currently only at the initial stages, those currently under consideration all lie in the UK offshore economic zone.

Wind Farms

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the United Kingdom's electrical power came from wind power in the last year for which figures are available; and what is being done to increase the amount of wind farms. [70802]

Mr. Wilson: In 2001, the last year for which figures are available, electricity generation from wind power in the United Kingdom was 965 GWh. This was 0.3 per cent. of total UK electricity generation for that year.

Wind energy, along with other forms of renewable energy, stands to benefit substantially from the introduction of the Renewables Obligation from 1 April this year. This places an obligation on electricity suppliers to supply a specified proportion of their electricity from renewable sources. The level of the Obligation is set to rise each year reaching a target of 10 per cent. by 2010, by which time its value could be up to £1 billion per year. The Obligation has been set up for a 25 year period (2002–27), providing the right climate for expansion of wind energy and renewable energy generally.

Wind energy, along with other renewables, also benefits from exemption from the Climate Change Levy.

The Government have assigned £74 million over the next three years for capital grants for offshore wind energy projects, where initial capital costs are greater, and the technology is less well established, than is the case for onshore projects. 19 schemes for the development of offshore wind farms have so far been granted leases of areas of the sea bed by the Crown Estate.

We are encouraging a positive approach to new renewable energy proposals, including new wind farm proposals, through regional renewable energy plans and targets.

National Wind Power's Windworks scheme offers farmers and landowners an opportunity to share in the profits of small-scale wind energy projects developed on their land.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many proposals to develop (a) onshore and (b) offshore wind farms her Department has received in 2002. [71583]

Mr. Wilson: So far in 2002 the Department has received applications for three offshore wind farms (North Hoyle 90 MW, Rhyl Flats 100 MW, Barrow 108 MW) but none for onshore wind farm proposals.

Renewable Energy

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her Department's renewable energy supply target is for 2020. [71529]

Mr. Wilson: The Government launched a consultation on energy policy on 14 May with a view to publishing a White Paper around the turn of the year. This consultation covers the issue of a renewable energy supply target to 2020, following a recommendation to Government by the Performance and Innovation Unit that this target should be 20 per cent.

The Government's views will be made known in the White Paper.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which factors have added uncertainty to her predicted future generating costs of power from (a) wind power and (b) photovoltaic cells. [64343]

Mr. Wilson: Estimates of the future costs of generating electricity from wind and photovoltaic cells are set out in:

> chapter 6 and annex 6 of "The Energy Review", which was produced by the Cabinet Office's Performance and Innovation Unit (http://www.piu.gov.uk/2002/energy/report/index.htm); and > chapter 5 and annex C of the Inter-Departmental Analysts Group's report, "Long-Term Reductions in Greenhouse Emissions in the UK" (http://www2.dti.gov.uk/energy/greenhousegas/index.htm).

Both reports were published in February 2002 and copies of them are available in the Libraries of the House.

The above publications discuss factors that contribute to uncertainty surrounding future generating costs of different forms of renewable energy. I am not aware of any significant developments since these reports were published that would affect these factors in a material way.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations she has received regarding the intermittency of renewable energy. [71579]

Mr. Wilson: Problems experienced by smaller intermittent generators were raised in the context of the consultation exercise on New Electricity Trading Arrangements (NETA) and smaller generators. A conclusions document was issued in April entitled: "Government Response to the Consultation on NETA and Smaller Generators of 1 November 2001", a copy of which is in the Libraries of the House.

A number of proposals that smaller intermittent generators suggested to assist them, such as the removal of barriers to consolidation and the reduction of gate closure to one hour, have already been implemented.

Other issues, such as the cost-reflectivity of the balancing mechanism under NETA, will be examined in Ofgem's review of the first year of operation of NETA. The review is expected shortly and a copy will be placed in the Library. The Government will consider in the light of this review whether further changes are required to NETA.

Company Information

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the information that companies are required to provide her Department, indicating where these items are subsequently published. [69401]

Ms Hewitt: Companies registered under the Companies Act are required to deliver certain statutory information to Companies House. This includes their annual financial accounts, details of their directors and shareholders as well as other notifications of changes or events within the company. Under the provisions of the Insolvency Act, they must also deliver details of any insolvency proceedings.

All information delivered to Companies House is made available for public inspection, except in the case of the residential address of directors/secretaries who are beneficiaries of a Confidentiality Order who would be at serious risk of violence or intimidation if their address was made public.

Ministerial Salaries

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the annual cost was of ministerial salaries in her Department in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 2001–02. [60941]

Ms Hewitt: The levels of ministerial salaries are recommended by the Senior Salaries Review Body. From May 1997, in this Department there was one Cabinet Minister at an annual salary of £43,991; three Ministers of State at a total annual salary cost of £114,088; and two Parliamentary Under-Secretaries of State at a total annual salary cost of £47,246. From June 2001, there was one Cabinet Minister at an annual salary of £68,157; three Ministers of State at a total annual salary cost of £106,068; and two Parliamentary Under-Secretaries of State at a total annual salary cost of £53,670.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff have contributed to her Department's input to the Spending Review. [68682]

Ms Hewitt: The Spending Review involved a comprehensive assessment of the Department's performance, priorities and resource requirements and a range of staff made a contribution.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much and what proportion of the departmental expenditure limit for 2002–03 had been spent by 31 May; what the figures were for 2001–02; and if she will make a statement. [61015]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 17 June 2002, Official Report, column 130W.

Departmental Report

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost was of publishing her Department's annual report for each of the past five years. [70485]

Ms Hewitt: The costs incurred by the Department for design and artwork of the last five Expenditure Plans Reports are as follows:

	Cost
2002	32,161
2001	35,006
2000	32,727
1999	38,125
1998	34,962

These figures also include the costs incurred in placing electronic versions of the reports on the Departmental website.

Printing costs are met by The Stationery Office, who recoup these costs through sales.

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost was of the Department's 2001 staff Christmas Party; and how many people attended. [61650]

Ms Hewitt: Christmas parties are held on an individual directorate basis and at no direct cost to the public purse.

Secondees

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost was of secondees from her Department to British embassies and consulates overseas in the last 12 months. [67784]

Ms Hewitt: DTI does not second staff to British embassies and consulates overseas. DTI staff taking up postings overseas go on loan to the FCO at no cost to DTI. One position overseas is currently funded by DTI and in the last 12 months the total cost to the Department has been circa £100,000. DTI does, however, fund short-term training attachments to overseas posts for DTI staff under the "Overseas Attachment Training Scheme". This provides for up to 12 staff each year to work in a commercial section overseas for six months. The total cost to the Department in the last 12 months was approximately £400,000.

Stationery

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 13 June 2002, Official Report, column 1376–77W, on stationery, when the next tender process is due to take place; and where it will be advertised. [64341]

Ms Hewitt: The existing stationery contract expires on 31 May 2003. Currently we are exploring options that include using existing Government stationery contracts or conducting our own procurement exercise. In the event of undertaking our own procurement an advert will be placed via OJEC.

Building Values

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the buildings owned by her Department and estimate the market value of each of them. [66955]

Ms Hewitt: The National Asset Register, published in July 2001 (Cm5221), lists assets owned by each Department and their valuation.

Buildings Insurance

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost of buildings insurance to her Department was (a) before and (b) after 11 September 2001. [66937]

Ms Hewitt: Departments are required to comply with the Government's general policy on insurance, which is set out in Government Accounting, Chapter 30, para 30.2.5, which notes that the Government do not need to purchase insurance to protect the viability of its business, and should consider insurance only where the value of claims met would exceed the cost of insurance premiums. Commercial insurance of a building is acceptable in cases where (a) insurance is a condition of a lease (b) the lessor will not accept a Government indemnity (c) incurring the total cost of the accommodation in question, including the cost of the insurance, is more cost-effective than other accommodation options [Government Accounting, para 30.2.11a]. Therefore, my Department does not normally insure the buildings it occupies. However, in some instances our landlords do insure their buildings and we make annual payments of around £100,000 to cover this. These payments have not risen since 11 September 2001.

RDA (Newspapers and Magazines)

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much money each RDA spent on newspapers and magazines over the last two years. [69397]

Ms Hewitt: The RDAs are not required to report their spend to this level of detail, which could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Each RDA reports a single figure for total spending on administration. Individual RDAs are free to decide the level of detail in their own internal accounting subject to the requirements of Government Accounting and other restrictions.

Public Inquiries

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 11 July 2002, Official Report, column 1092W, if she will make a statement on the nature of the business requirements referred to; and how many 0870 numbers are used. [71129]

Ms Hewitt: My Department uses 0870 numbers for the United Kingdom Information Society technology helpline (UKISHELP) and the Publications Orderline. The Publications Orderline uses three 0870 numbers (general orderline, fax and Minicom).

The use of 0870 numbers conforms with the Office of e-Envoy's Guidelines for UK Government Call Centres and offers a number that is chargeable at the same rate from any fixed telephone regardless of the location of the caller within the UK.

The call centres for both UKISHELP and the Publications Orderline are provided by contractors and an 0870 number has the advantage of providing a geographically independent portable number owned by my Department, so that in the event of a new contractor being appointed the number can be seamlessly transferred without any inconvenience to enquirers.

Written Consultations

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether her Department has a designated consultation co-ordinator in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70996]

Ms Hewitt: The Department's designated consultation co-ordinator is Philip Martin of the Better Regulation Team. He can be contacted by telephone on 020 7215 6206, by fax on 020 7215 0480 and by e-mail at Philip.Martin@dti.gsi.gov.uk

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in what format her Department has published the results of its 2001 written consultations. [70992]

Ms Hewitt: The Department is committed to the Cabinet Office Code Of Practice on Written Consultation. The Code of Practice requires that decisions in the light of consultation should be made public promptly with a summary of views of expressed, and clear reasons for rejecting options that were not adopted. As far as practicable, this information should be made available to those who responded, including on the Departmental website.

Information on the format of results in each consultation exercise is not held centrally.

Consultation

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which consultation documents published by her Department in 2001 were not made available as paper copies. [70995]

Ms Hewitt: All Departmental consultation documents are made available as paper copies.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many consultation documents published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form her Department has monitored and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70993]

Ms Hewitt: All departmental consultation exercises are subject to the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations which came into force on 1 January 2001. The Cabinet Office Code and internal guidance are available to all staff when preparing consultation documents.

Area-based Initiatives

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list for each area-based initiative for which her Department is responsible the amount originally budgeted for in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02, stating in each year what funds budgeted for were not spent and if they were carried forward. [71460]

Alan Johnson: The Department is not responsible for any area-based initiatives, as listed by the Office of Deputy Prime Minister Regional Co-ordination Unit.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Financial Services Sector

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Minister for Women what the take-up has been of equal pay questionnaires by women within the financial services sector. [70617]

Ms Hewitt: The Employment Act 2002 provides the power to introduce the equal pay questionnaire through regulations. We will be consulting interested parties on the design and content of the form later this year.

The questionnaire will make it easier for individuals to request key information from their employers about whether they are suffering pay discrimination.

There has as yet been no take up of the questionnaire because it is not yet available to the public.

Returning to Work

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister for Women what recent bilateral discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on access to training for women returners to work. [63081]

Ms Hewitt: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills and I are both committed to expanding opportunities for women returners. My officials from the Women and Equality Unit consulted with officials in the Department for Education and Skills on the unit's recent successful programme of work taster days for women returners. This programme was aimed at women over 40 who had been on extended career breaks or may have never worked and needed help acquiring skills and information to return to paid employment.

The Government, through their range of new deal programmes and employment service programmes, offer back to work help for women returners. Almost 2.4 million women aged 50 to state pension age are in work and 46 per cent. of women aged 50 and above are learners in formal, informal or workplace settings.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Noise

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidelines he has sent to local authorities on the procedures for notifying those against whom complaints have been made about excessive noise prior to an investigation being made; and if he will make a statement. [70008]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

There is no formal procedure for notifying those against whom complaints have been made about excessive noise prior to an investigation being made. However, the types of noise complaints that local authorities are called upon to investigate vary considerably and not all will be considered by the investigating officer to constitute a statutory nuisance. It is common for complaints to receive at least some investigation before the person or business against whom the complaint is made is approached or advised of its receipt. In some instances this may be because the officer handling the complaint decides to try and witness the noise before determining whether or not it merits further investigation as a potential or actual statutory nuisance. In other circumstances it might actually frustrate the investigation of the noise if the person causing it is alerted in advance.

Some individuals take exception to being approached by a local authority without any effort having been made to establish the credibility of the complaint made against them, others may be upset that they have not been contacted immediately. It is not practicable to set out procedures that will satisfy all situations and it is often best that the most appropriate response to a particular complaint is judged by the case officer in the light of his or her knowledge and experience.

An example of the procedures adopted by local authorities is contained within the "Nuisance Guidance Note" published by Ellesmere Port and Neston Borough Council on their web site at http://www.ellesmereport-neston.gov.uk/. This sets out their particular procedures with regard to noise nuisance and envisages cases where the complainant may not wish monitoring visits to start until after a letter has been sent to the person complained about. Otherwise it seems monitoring is carried out before or at the same time as a letter is sent.

In 1997 the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health (CIEH) produced a noise management guide titled "Guidance on the Creation and Maintenance of Effective Noise Management Policies and Practice for Local Authorities and their Officers". This provides guidance to local authorities on best practice and procedures to be adopted when dealing with noise complaints. To reflect the changes in the noise environment within the UK and the availability of new techniques, CIEH and DEFRA have agreed to jointly revise the document over the next nine months. When this becomes available we will circulate it to all local authorities in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland and place copies in the House Libraries.

The CIEH guidance is referred to in the Department of the Environment Circular 8/97 dealing with the Noise Act 1996. The Circular provides advice on the investigation of noise complaints but makes it clear that, in the context of that Act,

> "the purpose of the initial investigation is to decide whether or not the noise complained of, exceeds, or might exceed, the permitted level . . .".

The Cabinet Office promotes the adoption and use of the Enforcement Concordat by central and local government organisations with an enforcement function (details are available on their web site). To date 96 per cent. of all such organisations have adopted the Enforcement Concordat. Under the heading "Principles of Good Enforcement: Procedures" is included the following:

> "Before formal enforcement action is taken, officers will provide an opportunity to discuss the circumstances of the case and, if possible, resolve points of difference, unless immediate action is required (for example, in the interests of health and safety or environmental protection or to prevent evidence being destroyed).
> Where immediate action is considered necessary, an explanation of why such action was required will be given at the time and confirmed in writing in most cases within five working days and, in all cases, within 10 working days."

In certain circumstances an investigation might necessitate the use of covert surveillance methods, as defined in the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 (RIPA). The Home Office Code of Practice on Covert Surveillance provides guidance to public authorities in such cases.

Complaints about excessive noise in the workplace that might be harmful to the hearing of employees in premises that are regulated by local authorities normally would be taken up immediately with the employer.

Crime Reduction Directors

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been allocated to each of the 10 regional crime reduction directors. [69816]

Mr. Denham: I have been asked to reply.

The information is as follows:

£000

Region	2001–02 Expenditure	2002–03 Budget
East	13,569	10,472
East Midlands	15,938	13,277
London	31,911	37,863
North East	11,063	10,081
North West	24,496	27,729
South East	18,409	21,487
South West	12,826	17,102
Wales	8,080	10,162
West Midlands	18,297	18,504
Yorkshire and Humberside	19,346	23,593
Total	173,935	190,270

Funding covers measures and interventions under a range of programmes: the Crime Reduction Programme, Safer Communities Initiative, Communities Against Drugs, Partnership Development Fund (interim allocation for 2002–03), Security for Small Retailers in Deprived Areas.

Crime Reduction Directors also work with their colleagues in the Government offices for the regions and the National Assembly for Wales to ensure that crime reduction is reflected in the delivery of other Departments' programmes. Total funds spent on combating crime in the regions go wider than those administered through Regional Crime Directors.

Retail Crime

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what proportion of each Government office in the regions' annual spending for 2001–02 was allocated to combating retail crime. [69810]

(2) how much was spent on retail crime partnerships in each statutory crime and disorder partnership in the financial year 2001–02. [69811]

Mr. Denham: I have been asked to reply.

The following table sets out the amounts spent by regional crime reduction directors on specific business, (including retail) crime reduction initiatives in 2001–02 and shows these as a proportion of their total spending on crime reduction initiatives. These figures do not include funding spent on non-specific schemes, such as town centre closed circuit television, which will usually benefit businesses in the areas where they operate and which will often have been identified as a priority in consultation with the business community.

The Home Office does not record the amounts spent on retail crime partnerships in each of the 376 statutory crime and disorder partnerships.

Region	Spend on business crime, including retail crime, projects in 2001–02 (£)	Column 2 as a proportion of annual spending of regional crime reduction directors in 2001–02 (percentage)
Eastern	132,262	1.0
East Midlands	221,064	1.4
London	336,225	1.1
North East	262,718	2.4
North West	952,162	3.9
South East	251,500	1.4
South West	94,549	0.7
Wales	132,262	1.6
West Midlands	469,199	2.6
Yorkshire and Humber	325,128	1.7

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates

Keith Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many magistrates have resigned from the bench since 1 May 1997 other than for reasons of age. [66338]

Yvette Cooper: Between 1 January 1997 and 30 June 2002 6,659 magistrates resigned for reasons other than age.

Consultation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will list the public consultations undertaken by her Department since 1997, indicating for each consultation (a) if copies were available online, (b) if copies were available in print, (c) the date the time period given for responses opened and (d) the date the time period given for responses closed. [69792]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultation applies to all formal national public consultation documents issued by Departments from 1 January 2001 and the information requested is not available before that date. All public consultation papers since January 2001 have been available online and in print. Since 2001, the details are as follows:

Name of consultation paper	Opening date	Closing date
Representative Claims—proposed new procedures	1 February 2001	1 May 2001
Community Legal Service—Financial Conditions for Funding by the Legal Services Commission	12 March 2001	1 May 2001
Pre-Action Protocol for Judicial Review	15 March 2001	7 June 2001
E-conveyancing—A draft order under section 8 of the Electronic Communications Act 2000	19 March 2001	25 June 2001
Distress for Rent	8 May 2001	3 August 2001
Report of the Review Group on the Royal Peculiars	18 July 2001	1 October 2001
Enforcement Review Green Paper	19 July 2001	12 October 2001
The Administrative Court: Proposed changes to Primary Legislation following Sir Jeffrey Bowman's Review of the Crown Office List	31 July 2001	23 October 2001
Payments in to Court in Satisfaction of Claims	16 August 2001	12 November 2001
Report of the Review of Tribunals by Sir Andrew Leggatt	16 August 2001	30 November 2001
General Pre-Action Protocol	12 October 2001	31 January 2002
Payments to Witnesses	5 March 2002	31 May 2002

Name of consultation paper	Opening date	Closing date
Damages for Future Loss: Giving the Courts the Power to Order Periodical Payments for Future Loss and Care Costs in Personal Injury Cases	13 March 2002	7 June 2002
Freezing Injunctions and Search Orders in Civil Proceedings	21 March 2002	12 June 2002
Promoting Inter-Agency Working in the Family Justice System	27 March 2002	5 July 2002
Making Decisions: Helping people who have difficulty deciding for themselves	10 April 2002	9 July 2002
Selection Procedures for the Circuit Bench and Recordership	8 April 2002	5 July 2002

Departmental Reports

Mr. Beith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the cost was of publishing his Department's annual report for each of the past five years. [70482]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The costs which fell directly on the Lord Chancellor's Department of publishing its Departmental Reports for each of the past five years are: £13,527.07 (1997–98), £8,715.85 (1998–99), £14,614.65 (1999–2000) and £12,109.00 (2000–01). The final invoice for 2001–02 has not yet been received. Other costs of printing and publication are met directly by the publisher, The Stationary Office Limited (TSO), and do not fall to Government.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the review process for a freedom of information complaint. [70887]

Yvette Cooper: The right of access to information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 will come into force on 1 January 2005. Until that date, requests for Government information will be dealt with in accordance with the non-statutory Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

It is for individual bodies to make their own arrangements for the procedure used to review cases internally where information has been refused and the applicant has made a complaint. However, the Guidance on Interpretation of the Code, published by the Cabinet Office, makes it clear that:

> "[Internal Review] should in all cases be a single stage process. The aim should be to ensure that the applicant has been fairly treated under the provisions of the Code, that any exemptions have been properly applied and that charges are reasonably and consistently applied. It is good practice to allow for such review to be conducted by someone not involved in the original decision".

Details of the various internal review procedures which have been adopted by Departments and most agencies or bodies which fall within the scope of the Code of Practice are set out in the annual monitoring reports on the Code. Copies of these reports are available in the House Library. In my Department reviews are carried out by the Head of the appropriate Division and the decision approved by the Permanent Secretary. The target time for responses is 20 working days.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what legislation governs individuals' freedom to request information from the Government. [70888]

Yvette Cooper: This Government introduced the Freedom of Information Act which gives individuals a statutory right to Government information. The Act will be fully implemented by 1 January 2005, 11 months before the deadline set out in the Act itself. Until that date, requests for information are handled in accordance with the non-statutory Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Rape

Vera Baird: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to the answer of 9 July 2002, Official Report, column 832W, on rape, if he will place in the Library the content of the Serious Sexual Offences seminar to which he referred. [70890]

Yvette Cooper: Judicial training is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board (JSB) which is an independent non-departmental public body. It is chaired by Lord Justice Waller.

The content of the Serious Sexual Offences seminars held on 2–3 July 2001 and 26–27 November 2001 is described in the annual report of the Judicial Studies Board for 2001–02, a copy of which is in the Library.

Vera Baird: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, whether the Serious Sexual Offences seminar is attended by judges (a) before and (b) after they are authorised to hear rape trials. [70679]

Yvette Cooper: Judicial training is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board (JSB), which is an independent non-departmental public body. It is chaired by Lord Justice Waller.

All Circuit Judges and Recorders are required, by the Lord Chief Justice, to attend a JSB Serious Sexual Offences seminar before they are authorised to hear rape trials. Thereafter, both Circuit Judges and Recorders authorised to hear these cases attend Serious Sexual Offences seminars every three years.

Vera Baird: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, who teaches the Serious Sexual Offences seminars to judges authorised to hear rape cases. [70685]

Yvette Cooper: Judicial training is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board (JSB), which is an independent non-departmental public body. It is chaired by Lord Justice Waller.

The Serious Sexual Offences seminar is chaired by a High Court Judge. The most recent seminar, 8–9 July 2002, was chaired by Mr. Justice Pitchers. The Seminar Director is Judge John Sessions.

Contributors on the most recent seminar were Professor Di Birch, Mrs. Maggie Dodds, Ms Ruth Mann, and Mr. Justice Crane. Details of previous seminars are set out in the annual reports of the Board, copies of which are in the Library.

Vera Baird: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what steps he will take to ensure improved education for judges into the gender issues in rape trials. [70686]

Yvette Cooper: Judicial training is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board (JSB), which is an independent non-departmental public body. It is chaired by Lord Justice Waller.

The subject of education for judges in gender issues, including education for judges in rape trials, is kept under constant review by the Equal Treatment Advisory Committee of the Judicial Studies Board. Gender issues are also covered in Chapter 13 of the JSB's Equal Treatment Bench Book, a copy of which is given to every judge on appointment.

Vera Baird: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) by when the Judicial Studies Board will have considered the comments made on rape trials by the HMIC/CPSI Thematic report; [70683]

(2) what plans there are for the Judicial Studies Board to report back to her on its consideration of the HMIC/CPSI Thematic report; [70684]

(3) what reports she has received from the Judicial Studies Board in connection with the comments made on rape trials by the HMIC/CPSI Thematic report; [70687]

(4) to whom in her Department, and when, the Judicial Studies Board will report on its consideration of the HMIC/CPSI Thematic report. [70688]

Yvette Cooper: Judicial training is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board (JSB), which is an independent non-departmental public body. It is chaired by Lord Justice Waller.

The HMIC/CPSI Thematic report has been referred to the Criminal Committee of the JSB which will consider its response and the manner and form in which this should be communicated to the Lord Chancellor.

New Cities

Bob Spink: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what criteria she uses to determine city status for local authorities; [70815]

(2) how many new cities she expects to create in the next three years. [70816]

Ms Rosie Winterton: City status is not a right that can be claimed by the meeting of specific criteria, but an honour granted by Her Majesty the Queen under the Royal Prerogative, on the advice of Ministers. Important Royal anniversaries (such as The Queen's Golden Jubilee) are the usual occasions for awards of city status to be made. Awards were made, exceptionally, to mark the Millennium. Her Majesty has not yet expressed a wish to create any more new cities and no awards are foreseen in the near future.

Departmental Press Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) full-time equivalents were employed by The Lord Chancellor's press office and (b) secondees were placed in his press office in the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [70539]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of people who were employed in press or publicity work (excluding internal communications, website developers and administrative support) was as follows:

	Number
1997	5
1998	5
1999	5
2000	9
2001	9
2002[1]	12

[1] July

The increase in press and publicity staff in 2000 reflects new work connected with the Community Legal Service and the Court Service. The increase in 2002 reflects new responsibilities transferred to LCDHQ from the Home Office, Cabinet Office and DTLR.

There have been two secondees working in The Lord Chancellor's Press Office during this period. The first was seconded to work on the launch of the Community Legal Service in April 2000 and is not included in the figure for that year. The second secondee is included in the figure for 2002.

Information Campaigns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much his Department spent on information literature, advertising and campaign material in financial year 2001–02; if he will list the campaigns that spent over £250,000; and if he will make a statement. [70211]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have listed the required information for the financial year 2001–02. My Departments did not conduct any campaigns costing over £250,000 during that period.

LCDHQ:

£34,002—Information Literature

Court Service:

£212,720—Information Literature

HM Land Registry:

£140,000—Information Literature

Public Record Office:

£33,400—Information Literature; £5,250 Advertising; £28,500 Campaign Material.

Public Guardianship Office:

£68,761—Information Literature

Northern Ireland Court Service:

£27,885—Information Literature.

Public Record Office

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the nature and status of the Public Record Office projects which were to have been funded by revenue from the 1901 census on-line. [70852]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The PRO did not take account of net income from the 1901 Census online service when assessing funding requirements for its other online projects. However, if there were to be any net income from the service, this would be used to fund the future digitisation of earlier census records.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what proportion of the testing programme for the 1901 census website has been completed; [70854]

(2) whether a million users per hour test has been run on the 1901 census website; and if she will make a statement; [70857]

(3) when she expects the testing programme on the 1901 census website to be completed. [70858]

Ms Rosie Winterton: QinetiQ Ltd, which is the contractor responsible for setting up the 1901 census online website and providing the online service, has been making technical improvements to it.

QinetiQ is currently testing the site and the Public Record Office is also carrying out its own independent test programme. By the very nature of testing, solutions to particular issues often require a more general retesting, to verify that there are no adverse effects on the system as a whole. It is therefore not feasible to quantify what proportion of the testing programme has been completed at any particular time. The Public Record Office's own independent test company has undertaken a test to simulate the experience of one million user per hour accessing the system. These results will be analysed along with the other test results as soon as they are available. The final testing is now under way and it is anticipated that this will be completed by the end of July.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what changes QinetiQ has made to the 1901 census website; [70856]

(2) when QinetiQ started to make changes to the capacity of the 1901 census website; [70859]

(3) if she will make a statement on the ability of QinetiQ to put right the problems preventing public access to the 1901 census website. [71267]

Ms Rosie Winterton: QinetiQ Ltd, who are responsible for the technical aspects of the service, have made the following technical improvements to the site:

increased ISP bandwidth;

dedicated firewalls within the ISP, both to protect the 1901 census online site and also to avoid impact to other sites; improved load balancer configuration to divert overload;

additional database server engine and the necessary configuration to enable operation with multiple database servers.

QinetiQ has been working on the above enhancements to the site in order to improve its resilience and this should increase its ability to provide a good experience for more users. It will also enable a decision to be made as to whether the system is sufficiently robust to provide general online access. The final testing is under way and it is anticipated that this will be completed by the end of July.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) if she will make the agendas and the minutes of the Public Record Office Online Services Advisory Panel available (a) in the Library and (b) on her Department's website; [70853]

(2) what date has been set for the next meeting of the Public Record Office Online Services Advisory Panel; what the present membership of the panel is; and if she will make a statement. [70855]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The minutes of the Public Record Office (PRO) Online Services Advisory Panel are available from the PRO website: http://www.pro.gov.uk/census/advisory.htm

These are usually published within one month of the last meeting.

The terms of reference of the advisory panel, listing the organisations from which the panel membership is drawn, can be found at this site. The agendas and current membership of the advisory panel are apparent from the published minutes. The next meeting of the panel will take place on 5 September 2002.

Arrangements are being made to place copies of the advisory panel's minutes and other papers in the Library.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) if she will make a statement on progress with the Public Record Office's plans to digitise the 1881 and 1891 censuses; [70947]

(2) if she will make it her policy to exclude QinetiQ from handling the project to digitise the 1881 and 1891 censuses. [70860]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Making the 1881 and 1891 censuses available in electronic form is a high priority for the Public Record Office because census records are very heavily used by family historians, who constitute its largest single user group. Any organisation can seek a non-exclusive licence to use digital images of material contained in public records on a commercial basis. Such licensing contracts do not constitute any form of partnership between that organisation and the Public Record Office. MyFamily.com has already applied for, and received, a licence to digitise the census returns from 1841 to 1891 and make this material available on the internet. Other organisations have sought non-exclusive licences to make CDs of the images of these censuses and some for the 1891 census are already on the market. It is open to QinetiQ Ltd to apply for, and to be granted, a licence in a similar manner.

PRIME MINISTER

Recycling

Sue Doughty: To ask the Prime Minister what proportion of (a) paper and (b) other goods purchased by his Office was recycled paper in each year since 1997; what the annual total cost of these purchases was; what plans there are to increase these proportions; and if he will make a statement. [65762]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 19 July 2002.

Galileo

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received from the US Government regarding the proposed Galileo satellite navigation system. [70698]

The Prime Minister: I have received no representations from the US Government regarding the proposed Galileo satellite navigation system.

Refrigerants

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Prime Minister whether the proposed refurbishment of numbers 10 and 11 Downing street will include the (a) extension and (b) alteration of air-conditioning facilities; and if he will make a statement on compliance with the Government's policy on the use of HFC refrigerants. [71355]

The Prime Minister: There is no planned work on the air-conditioning system.

Senior Civil Servants

Mr. Trend: To ask the Prime Minister what action he takes in ensuring that senior civil servants maintain proper standards of conduct while carrying out their duties. [71495]

The Prime Minister: The standards of conduct required by civil servants are set out in the Civil Service Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Catherine Meyer

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has made to the German Chancellor concerning the case of Catherine Meyer. [71588]

The Prime Minister: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) is in regular contact with Lady Meyer. Her case has been actively pursued by both FCO Ministers and officials with their German counterparts. The FCO continues to offer Lady Meyer whatever consular support and assistance it properly can.

Government's Annual Report

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Prime Minister if he will resume publication of the Government's Annual report. [71719]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 12 July 2001, Official Report, column 638W.

GP Practices

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his oral answer of 3 July 2002, Official Report, column 219, what evidence he has evaluated that a move away from single-handed general practitioner practices improves the quality of care that people receive. [71888]

The Prime Minister: There is research suggesting a positive association between practice size on the one hand, and effective clinical governance and chronic disease management on the other. However, it is also the case that many single-handed practices provide high quality care.

Downing Street (Expenditure)

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will set out the methods by which expenditure on the fabric of (a) 10 Downing street and (b) 11 Downing street is (i) formally agreed and (ii) made publicly available. [71794]

The Prime Minister: Expenditure incurred in respect of No. 10 Downing street offices plus the flat at 11 Downing street is included within the overall Cabinet Office budget. Annual budgets, within the departmental limits approved by Parliament, are agreed by the Cabinet Office Permanent Secretary as the Accounting Officer. Actual expenditure against these budgets is recorded in the Cabinet Office resource accounts.

Expenditure incurred in respect of No. 11 Downing street offices plus the flat at 10 Downing street is included within the overall HM Treasury budget. Actual expenditure against these budgets is recorded in HM Treasury's resource accounts.

Accounts for both Departments are published annually and presented to Parliament in accordance with the Government Resources and Accounts Act 2000.

Johannesburg Summit

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make an assessment of the total amount of carbon emissions that will be accounted for by the attendance of the British Government delegation at the earth summit in Johannesburg. [71775]

The Prime Minister: No decision has yet been taken on the size and composition of the final UK Government delegation for the World summit on sustainable development. The official delegation will include Ministers, MPs, businessmen, representatives from non-governmental organisations and officials. The Government, of course, want to offset the carbon emissions from the delegations's attendance.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister if he will set out the UK Government's priorities for his attendance at the World sustainability summit in Johannesburg in September; and if he will make a statement. [71776]

The Prime Minister: The World summit on sustainable development is important both for the planet and people's future prosperity. We strongly support the priority areas of poverty eradication and the sectoral themes of water, energy, health, agriculture and biodiversity identified by the UN Secretary-General. The developed world must also take concrete steps towards sustainable development by actions to improve our own use of resources. We are also committed to sustainable development in developing countries as witnessed by the increasing proportion of the UK's gross national income devoted to international aid which will rise to 0.4 per cent. by 2005–06, and through taking forward the important commitments of trade and development made at Doha.

Departmental Press Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Prime Minister how many (a) full time equivalents were employed by his press office and (b) secondees were placed in his press office in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [70545]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) on 22 November 2001, Official Report, column 469W and the hon. Member for Chelmsford, West (Mr. Burns) on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W.

In October 2001, my Press Office introduced a short-term secondment programme for press officers from other Government Departments to widen their experience. Eight press officers have taken part in the programme.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Prime Minister if he will instruct the Secretary of State for Health to reply to the letter to him dated 25 April from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Miss Irene Boyd. [72136]

The Prime Minister: I understand that my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Health has replied to my right hon. Friend's letter.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefits Claimants

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in what format the information provided to benefits claimants regarding their choice of means to access their entitlement will be given; and if he will make a statement. [70530]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Weston-super-Mare (Brian Cotter) on 11 June 2002, Official Report, column 874w.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much it will cost a benefits claimant to collect their entitlement in cash from a post office using (a) a Post Office card account, (b) a basic or no frills bank account and (c) an ordinary bank or building society account; and if he will make a statement. [70529]

Malcolm Wicks: People using univeral banking services—access to the banks' basic bank accounts at post office branches and the card account at the Post Office—will be able to access their money free of charge from the Post Office.

The Post Office also has network banking arrangements with a number of banks which allow customers to access current accounts at post office branches. The banks involved do not normally charge their customers for making withdrawals from their accounts.

Customers who have current accounts with banks outside the network banking arrangements can cash a cheque at the Post Office, but will be charged for doing so.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research has been compiled on the cost savings relating to the changeover of benefit payments from payment book to ACT; and if he will make a statement on the results. [70191]

Malcolm Wicks: The move to payment directly into bank and building society accounts assures a safe, convenient, more modern and efficient way of paying benefits and pensions and will bring very substantial savings. Against this, we will incur some additional costs, including those to Post Office Ltd. for the provision of the new card account at the Post Office. The precise costs will depend on the number of card accounts.

Our costings in this area have been based on a number of sources, including the administrative costs of current methods of payment and losses from instrument of payment fraud.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has made for emergency benefit payments if the system for providing benefit claims collapses; and if he will make a statement. [70531]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has contingency arrangements in place to maintain continuity of benefit payment in the event of benefit system failure. The specific contingency response would be determined by the type and extent of the failure presented.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when and what information will be given to benefit claimants regarding their choice of means to gain access to their entitlement; and whether the information given will be impartial. [70605]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department is currently planning an information campaign to give customers the information they need about the move to paying directly into bank/building society accounts. The campaign will aim to present information on the changes in a straightforward way that helps our customers make the best choices for their circumstances. This will build on the research we have already undertaken to get a first hand understanding of customer needs. Customers will be contacted directly when it is their turn to change.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he plans to place an explanatory leaflet in post offices before the introduction of the universal bank, explaining to customers the different options that will be open to them for claiming their benefits once the universal bank is established. [71787]

Malcolm Wicks: the Department is currently planning a campaign to give customers the factual information they need to make an informed choice. We are working closely with the Post Office and others to ensure that this information can be provided in a consistent way across a range of sources. One possible option is to provide material at post offices but no final decision has yet been taken.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has for enabling the temporary collection of benefit payments by persons other than the benefit recipient; and if he will make a statement. [70532]

Malcolm Wicks: Already payments for over 40 per cent. of customers are paid directly into bank and building society accounts. They have a number of options for when they are unable to get to the bank or the post office, and these will continue.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) Benefits Agency staff, (b) Jobcentre Plus staff and (c) council officers have been (i) disciplined, (ii) suspended, (iii) dismissed, (iv) prosecuted and (v) convicted for matters relating to benefit fraud in each of the last five years; and how much benefit was defrauded in each case. [71779]

Malcolm Wicks: We treat any suspicion of involvement in benefit fraud by the Department's staff very seriously and all cases are thoroughly investigated and appropriate action taken where necessary.

The Department does not hold information in respect of council officers.

The information available on individual cases is in the table.

Notes:

1. Details of prosecution cases for 1997–98 are provided but information on cases not referred for prosecution is not readily available.
2. The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001. Prior to this incidents of suspected benefit fraud within the former Employment Service (ES) were investigated by the Benefit Fraud Investigation Service (BFIS) and included within the overall fraud returns. They are not identifiable separately.
3. All the information for 1997–98, 1998–99, 1999–2000, 2000–01 covers BA staff only. The figures for 2001–02 are inclusive of BA and ES staff. (Relevant information from ES for April to June 2001 was included in the 2001–02 DWP Treasury report).
4. The outcomes are recorded according to definitions provided by HMT for the annual Treasury report.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the average cost to a local authority of a prosecution for suspected benefit fraud in the last year for which figures are available. [71780]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the cost to a local authority of a prosecution for suspected benefit fraud is not collected by the Department, so it is not possible to provide an estimate of the average cost.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the baseline figure is for assessing progress in meeting his target of reducing fraud and error in housing benefit by 25 per cent. by 2006, detailed on page 119 of the 2002 Spending Review. [71781]

Malcolm Wicks: The housing benefit review which is under way will enable us to establish a baseline level of fraud and error for the financial year 2002–03. The results of this review should be available in autumn 2003.

Automated Credit Transfer

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if benefit claimants who receive payments by order book and who already have a bank account will have the option under automated credit transfer of opening (a) a basic bank account accessible through a post office and (b) a post office card account. [71786]

Malcolm Wicks: Yes. They will also have the option of using their existing account. Customers will be provided with the information to help them make the best choice for their circumstances.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made on the implementation of a national call centre to deal with emergency payments following the introduction of ACT; and if he will make a statement. [70188]

Malcolm Wicks: There are no plans for the implementation of a national call centre to deal with emergency payments.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the Government propose to start the advertising campaign to promote the new ACT procedures due to come into operation in April 2003; how much is to be allocated for this campaign; and if he will make a statement. [70523]

Malcolm Wicks: The campaign aims to give customers the factual information they need about the choices they have as we reform the way we pay benefits and pensions. This will begin in October 2002 when we will start to issue mailings to customers as the first stage of an information campaign we are currently developing.

This will be followed by the wider information campaign using a range of media from early next year. As this campaign is currently being developed the final budget has yet to be decided.

Benefit Payment Methods

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) which Minister in his Department is responsible for monitoring the risk presented by the modernisation of payments; [70421]

(2) at what level in the risk ranking and evaluation of process stage 2 of the DWP Risk Management Framework, the controllability of the risk concerning the modernisation of payments and controlling the potential for escalation is considered to be; [70419]

(3) whether the modernisation of payments is considered a risk managed at strategic level; [70420]

(4) if, in the risk ranking and evaluation of process stage 2 of the DWP Risk Management Framework, the modernisation of payments risk is considered a red, amber or green risk; [70418]

(5) what assessment has been made of the risk presented by the modernisation of payments in process stage 1 of the DWP Risk Management Framework were the assumption to turn out wrong; [70425]

(6) to whom the modernisation of benefits payments is risk-assigned; [70424]

(7) what action is being taken to mitigate the risk presented by the modernisation of benefits payments by his Department; [70422]

(8) at what level the stability of the assumption that universal banking services will be established on time has been identified in process stage 1 of the DWP Risk Management Framework. [70417]

Malcolm Wicks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is responsible for dealing with all of the Department's Public Service Agreement targets.

All DWP projects, including modernisation of payments, are subjected to a gateway process staged review and approval by the director of project management throughout their lifecycle. They are subjected to structured independent peer reviews and undertake a formal risk assessment using the Department's assumption based risk identification methodology.

Risk identification is carried out at a very senior level and this provides an outward facing strategic approach to risk presence.

A similar approach is being taken with the cross-Government universal banking programme.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of benefit recipients receive payments via bank or building society accounts or girocheque broken down by benefit type. [70414]

Malcolm Wicks: Over 40 per cent. of payments for benefit claimants are already paid directly into their bank or building society. This provides a more modern, secure and efficient way of making payments. The table provides details broken down by benefits as at March 2002.

Girocheques are not a normal method of payment option for any benefit other than JSA. The estimated number of JSA customers paid by girocheque is 77 per cent.

Benefit	Percentage paid direct into bank or building society
Retirement pension, widows benefit and bereavement benefit	40
Child benefit	45
Incapacity benefit	25
Income support (estimated)	18
Disability living allowance	34
Invalid care allowance	16
War pensions	53
Attendance allowance	21
Industrial injury, death and disability benefit	22
Jobseeker's allowance	23

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 26 June 2002, Official Report, column 1058W, to the hon. Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Turner), on benefits (payment methods), in what order customers of particular benefits will be transferred to payment via automated credit transfer. [70413]

Malcolm Wicks: We will adopt a phased approach to transfer customers to payment into bank or building society accounts.

Social Security Fraud Act

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment the Government have made of the impact of the Social Security Fraud Act 2001 on (a) the public and (b) the private rented sector; and if he will make a statement; [69490]

(2) what assessment has been made of the impact of the Social Security Fraud Act 2001 on public housing waiting lists; and if he will make a statement; [69489]

(3) what discussions the Government have had with the Scottish Executive regarding the impact of the Social Security Fraud Act 2001 on (a) the public and (b) the private housing sectors in Scotland; what action is planned to address resulting issues; and if he will make a statement. [69488]

Malcolm Wicks: The Social Security Fraud Act 2001 provides powers for a range of measures to strengthen our fight against benefit fraud, including information gathering, the exchange of information overseas and disqualifying from benefit people convicted of two or more benefit fraud offences within a three-year period. We have not received any report that these provisions are having any impact on the public housing waiting list or the public and private rented housing sector.

Green Minister

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions who his Department's Green Minister is; when they (a) have attended and (b) plan to attend meetings of the Green Ministers' Committee; what the outcomes of meetings were for his Department's activities; and if he will make a statement. [65980]

Maria Eagle: Our Green Minister is my noble Friend the Baroness Hollis of Heigham and she was appointed to the ENV (G) Committee in July 2001.

Following the general election in June 2001, the previously informal Green Ministers Committee was upgraded to a Cabinet Sub-Committee of ENV and it is established practice under exemption two of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet Committees.

In October 2001 DWP published its first annual, free standing Sustainable Development report which details progress across all DWP activities. This is available in the Library and on the internet at www.dwp.gov.uk. The second report will be published in the coming autumn.

Disability Advice Officers

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many disability advice officers are employed by (a) the Benefits Agency and (b) the Employment Service; and how many of them are able to use sign language. [65524]

Maria Eagle: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive, Leigh Lewis. I have asked him to reply to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Alan Campbell, dated June 2002:

As Jobcentre Plus is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the number of disability advice officers and their ability to use sign language. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Since 1 April 2002 the functions formally performed by the Employment Service and those parts of the Benefits Agency relating to people of working age have been brought together in a new agency, Jobcentre Plus. There are currently within the agency approximately 650 Disability Employment Advisers. No figures are held on how many of those advisers are able to use sign language, but all Jobcentre Plus offices have access to sign language interpreters when required.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobcentres (New Forest)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement about proposals to close jobcentres in the New Forest district. [61921]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 17 June 2002]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive, Leigh Lewis. He will reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Desmond Swayne, dated June 2002:

As Jobcentre Plus is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the implementation of Jobcentre Plus in the New Forest area. This falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Plans are currently being drawn up to implement the new integrated Jobcentre Plus service in Hampshire. As part of this exercise feasibility studies are underway to examine the options for the future delivery of services within the New Forest area. One such option is to acquire new premises in one location in place of the existing Jobcentres in Ringwood, Lymington and Hythe. However, no final decisions have yet been taken.

I hope this is helpful.

Lone Parents

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many lone parents were on Income Support in the Portsmouth, South constituency in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [65375]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is in the table. While these estimates suggest a slight increase in the number of lone parents in Portsmouth, South receiving Income Support, they have been drawn from a 5 per cent. sample of Income Support recipients and are subject to a degree of sampling variation.

Estimate of lone parents in the Portsmouth, South parliamentary constituency receiving Income Support

	Number
1999–2000	1,600
2000–01	1,700
2001–02	1,800

Notes:

1. Figures are based on an average of 5 per cent. samples taken four times in each year. They are subject to a degree of sampling variation.,
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest 100.
3. Lone parents are defined as single people with dependants and who do not receive a pensioner or a disability premium.

Departmental Offices (Gosport)

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether replacement offices for the present Gosport jobcentre and the Gosport Social Security office will be located within Gosport. [61883]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 17 June 2002]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive, Leigh Lewis. He will reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Peter Viggers, dated June 2002:

As Jobcentre Plus is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the implementation of Jobcentre Plus in Gosport. This falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Plans are currently being drawn up to implement the new integrated Jobcentre Plus service in Hampshire. As part of this exercise feasibility studies are underway to examine the options for the future delivery of services within Gosport. One such option is the acquisition of new premises within the town from which the full Jobcentre Plus service can be delivered. However, no final decisions have yet been taken.

I hope this is helpful.

Care Home Claimants

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the number of children leaving local authority care homes that go on to claim social security benefits in the last year for which figures are available; and what recent research his Department has published into the number of children leaving local authority care homes that go on to claim social security benefits. [68986]

Maria Eagle: Under the Children (Leaving Care) Act 2000, local authorities have a duty to assess and meet the needs of young people aged 16 and 17 who they continue to look after or who have left care. Income-related benefits are therefore not available to these young people. However, other benefits intended to meet a person's special needs, such as non-contributory Incapacity Benefit, may be available. Once they reach 18, care leavers are eligible to claim benefits in the normal way, and in general, the local authority no longer has the major responsibility for their welfare.

The Department holds no data, nor have we published any recent research, on the number of children leaving local authority care homes who go on to claim social security benefits.

Following the introduction of the Children (Leaving Care) Act 2000, the Department of Health has commissioned the University of York to conduct an evaluation of the costs and outcomes of young people leaving care. The evaluation report is due early in 2004.

Consultation Documents

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his Department has a designated consultation co-ordinator in accordance with the Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultations. [69831]

Malcolm Wicks: Yes.

Disability Living Allowance

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many recipients of Disability Living Allowance there are aged under 16 years broken down by local authority in Scotland; [69540]

(2) how many recipients of awards of Disability Living Allowance are also in receipt of Child Benefit, broken down by local authority in Scotland. [69541]

Maria Eagle: The available information, which refers to 30 November 2001, is in the table. Figures for the numbers of people in Scotland who receive both Disability Living Allowance and Child Benefit exclude cases where different members of a family receive the Disability Living Allowance and Child Benefit.

Post Office Banking Facilities

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans the Government have to persuade banks which have not already done so to offer cheque clearing facilities at post offices without charges; and if he will make a statement. [70555]

Mr. Timms: I have been asked to reply.

These are matters which fall within the day-to-day responsibility of Post Office Ltd. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Benefit Sanctions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many claimants had benefits sanctioned for failure to comply with a community service order in the last 12 months; what the sanction was; and over how long it operated, broken down by sex of claimant; [66729]

(2) what data he has collated on fixed period sanctions to the income-related Jobseeker's Allowance for each year since the sanctions were first applied, subdivided according to whether claimants have without good cause (a) failed to carry out a reasonable jobseeker's directive, (b) failed to apply for a compulsory training scheme or employment programme where this has been notified to them, (c) given up a place on, or failed to attend, a compulsory training scheme or employment programme, (d) neglected to avail themselves of a reasonable opportunity of a place on a training scheme or employment programme and (e) lost a place on a compulsory training scheme or employment programme because of misconduct; and if he will break down these figures according to whether (i) two or (ii) four weeks' sanction was applied; [66721]

(3) against how many claimants sanctions have been taken since the introduction of the Jobseeker's Allowance; how many cases were because (a) they lost their job through misconduct, (b) left their job voluntarily without just cause, (c) failed to apply or to accept a job notified by the Employment Service without just cause, (d) neglected to avail themselves of a reasonable opportunity of a job without good cause and (e) other causes; and if he will break this data down by whether the claimants were (i) men and (ii) women and by the age of the claimants, noting for each category the average length during which the sanction applied; [66723]

(4) how many claimants committing fraud have lost benefit on their second offence over the last 12 months; and if he will list the size of the benefit lost and the duration during which the sanction has been or is being applied, broken down by sex; [66722]

(5) against how many people aged 18 to 24 on the New Deal a (a) two week, (b) four week, (c) 26 week and (d) 52 week sanction has been applied, broken down by (i) the reason for the sanction being applied and (ii) sex of the claimants. [66724]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 4 July 2002]: We have taken powers in the Social Security Fraud Act 2001 to strengthen benefit fraud investigation and punish persistent offenders more severely. The provision to sanction people convicted of two separate benefit fraud offences in a three year period came into force on 1 April 2002, and can be applied only to people who commit two separate benefit offences after that date. It is therefore too early for this new sanction to have been applied in practice.

The new community sentence and benefits measures are being piloted in four probation service areas from 15 October 2001. We are giving a clear message to offenders that their rights to benefits must be matched by the responsibility to comply with their community sentence orders. Sanctions are applied when people receiving a relevant benefit are found by a court to be in breach of their orders. The sanction lasts for a maximum period of four weeks.

The available information is in the tables.

Benefit sanctions for failure to comply with a community service order by gender

Percentage

	Female	Male
JSA (100 sanction)	10	69
IS (40 sanction)	21	27
IS (20 sanction)	1	2

Notes:

1. All figures are unrounded.
2. Figures include a small number of people who have been sanctioned more than once.
3. Data are from clerical returns received at the DWP Information Centre between 15 October 2001 and 28 June 2002, and relate to the period 15 October 2001 to 7 June 2002.
4. There are four probation service pilot areas: Derbyshire, Hertfordshire, Teesside and West Midlands.
5. IS recipients have their benefit entitlement reduced, depending on the circumstances of the individual or family unit, by either 40 per cent. or 20 per cent. of the single person's personal allowance. Those in receipt of JSA incur the withdrawal of the whole of their benefit but may apply for a hardship payment.

Correspondence

David Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the CSA will reply to the letter of 28 May from the hon. Member for Walsall, North regarding a constituent, ref. 1040714323. [69258]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 12 July 2002]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. David Winnick, dated 22 July 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will provide a substantive reply from myself to your letter of 28th May regarding constituent ref. 1040714323.

I apologise for the long delay in replying to this letter. My reply was sent on 10 July.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 19 April 2002, Official Report, column 1215W, on the Child Support Agency, what estimates he has made of the costs of new IT for the Child Support Agency in the period 2001 to 2004. [54515]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 23 May 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You ask pursuant to his Answer of 19th April Official Report column 1215W on the Child Support Agency what estimates he has made of the costs of new IT for the Child Support Agency in the period 2001 to 04.

I am sorry that I cannot provide the costs of the new IT for the Child Support Agency for the period 2001 to 2004 as it is commercially confidential.

I can say that the planned total cost of the project to implement Child Support Reform over the 10 year period of the business case was £651million.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have had their driving licence withdrawn for failure to pay arrears to the Child Support Agency. [67315]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Mr. Doug Smith to Ms Gisela Stuart, dated July 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You ask how many people have had their driving licence withdrawn for failure to pay arrears to the Child Support Agency.

In the period from April 2001 to 12 June 2002 one non-resident parent has had his driving licence withdrawn and in a further three cases the disqualification has been suspended giving the non-resident parent a further, and final, opportunity to pay outstanding amounts.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made in the implementation of new computer systems in the Child Support Agency. [68088]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Michael Weir, dated July 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You ask what progress has been made in the implementation of new computer systems in the Child Support Agency.

The testing of the new IT system to support Child Support Reform is progressing well. There is no firm date for the completion of testing and associated work. When this work is complete I will advise the Secretary of State accordingly.

I hope this is helpful.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when quarterly statistical information on the performance of the Child Support Agency was last placed in the Library; and whether he plans to place such information on the performance of the Agency in the Library on a regular basis. [67234]

Malcolm Wicks: The "Quarterly Summary Statistics for the Child Support Agency—February 2002" was placed in the Library on 13 June 2002.

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases have been referred to the special payments department by the CSA over the past three years; and if he will make a statement. [63419]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Bill O'Brien, dated 18 July 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You ask how many cases have been referred to the Special Payments Department by the Child Support Agency over the past three years; and if the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions will make a statement.

Each year the Child Support Agency receives over 300,000 new applications. It has a caseload of 1.1 million cases. Against that background it has referred 31,232 cases to its Special Payments Team for consideration of re-dress or a consolatory payment following a complaint.

I hope this is helpful.

TREASURY

Sickness Absence (Public Sector)

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has succeeded in delivering on the Government's plans in Cm 4011 to reduce public sector sickness absence by 20 per cent. between 1998 and 2001; and if he will make a statement. [66282]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 4 July 2002]: These targets were recommended in the Cabinet Office report on the management of attendance in the public sector, ("Working Well Together").

It is not possible to say at this time whether the target has been met. Management data for the civil service and a number of other public sector employment groups are published in financial years format and will not be available before the autumn.

Network Rail

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library copies of the documents which have been studied by the Office for National Statistics in deciding on the classification of Network Rail. [70511]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 16 July 2002]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 22 July 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking if copies of all the documents which have been studied by the Office for National Statistics in deciding on the classification of Network Rail could be placed in the Library. (70511).

In deciding on the sector classification of Network Rail, the main documents that the ONS used were: international statistical manuals—The European System of Accounts (1955) and The System of National Accounts (1993), copies of which are available from the Library. The ONS also studied many legal documents, provided on a commercial and confidence basis. These documents are exempt from disclosure under section 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Office for National Statistics

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 8 July 2002, on the ONS, if he will place in the Library the recommendations that ONS made on each classification considered since 1 January; and if he will make a statement. [70752]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 22 July 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question pursuant to the answer given on 8th July on the ONS, concerning what the recommendations the national statistics made on each classification considered since 1st January and if these recommendations could be placed in the Library. (70752)

We have already announced that in due course we will put all key national accounts classification decisions in the public domain. We are working towards full implementation of this policy. Four important decisions are already on the National Statistics website with supporting explanations.

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the ONS annual report and accounts for 2001–02 to be published. [72628]

Ruth Kelly: The Office for National Statistics annual report and accounts is being laid before the House today.

ZANU-PF

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many United Kingdom bank accounts have been frozen as a result of the EU selective sanctions against leading members of ZANU-PF; and what the value is of the money in those accounts. [71452]

Ruth Kelly: European Council Regulation 310/2002 places limits on the extent to which details regarding individual accounts and amounts frozen can be disclosed. However, a total of £76,000 in accounts belonging to two individuals listed in the regulation has been frozen.

Shooting Rights

Mr. Breed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what figures he collates relating to VAT raised from the sale of shooting rights; and if he will place them in the Library. [71941]

John Healey: VAT is charged on shooting rights sold in the course of business unless they form part of a VAT exempt freehold sale of the land over which they may be exercised. No information is collected about the amount of VAT raised from shooting rights.

Information Campaigns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department spent on information literature, advertising and campaign material in financial year 2001–02; if he will list the campaigns that spent over £250,000; and if he will make a statement. [70213]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Press Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) full-time equivalents were employed by his press office and (b) secondees were placed in his press office in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [70538]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) on 5 December 2001, Official Report, column 328W.

As to secondees, records are not maintained.

Double Taxation Convention

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the draft Order in Council and schedule containing the new Double Taxation Convention between the United Kingdom and the United States of America will be submitted to the House for ratification; and if he will make a statement. [72630]

Dawn Primarolo: The text of the Convention together with an amending Protocol has been published today as a schedule to a draft Order in Council and laid before the House. The Protocol amending the Double Taxation Convention was signed on behalf of the two governments on 19 July 2002. The text is available on the Inland Revenue's website.

Community Budget

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will be publishing the statement on the 2002 Community Budget. [72631]

Ruth Kelly: I have today laid before Parliament the Statement on the 2002 Community Budget, entitled "European Community Finances". This White Paper is the 22nd in the series. As in the past, it covers annual budgetary matters and includes details of recent developments in European Community financial management and in countering fraud against the Community Budget. It also describes the Community Budget for 2002 as adopted by the European Parliament, and details the United Kingdom's gross and net contributions to the Community Budget for calendar years 1996 to 2002 and financial years 1996–97 to 2001–02.

I have placed copies of the White Paper in both Libraries of the House.

Care Homes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of the decision of the London VAT tribunal in the Kingscrest case on the implementation of free nursing care and the affordability of fee levels; [71678]

(2) if he will amend VAT regulations relating to the VAT status of care homes. [71508]

John Healey: In March the High Court judgment in the Kingscrest Associates Ltd. and Montecello Ltd. case threatened to limit the VAT exemption for residential care. We immediately acted to put this exemption beyond question through the Value Added Tax (Health and Welfare) Order (Statutory Instrument 762/2002).

The decision of the VAT and Duties Tribunal in this case, and the later High Court judgment, do not impact upon any provision of nursing care.

Game Bird Farms

Mr. Breed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many game farms were registered for game bird rearing in the UK; and how many initiatives there were to identify the valuation relating to game bird farms in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [71942]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency (VOA) is responsible for the valuation of business property for rating purposes. One of the difficulties for valuation officers (VOs) in identifying game farms is the fact that most of them are in remote rural areas and operate on land which was, quite properly, exempt from rating as agricultural land.

Game farms are not exempt from rating, but VOs have difficulty in keeping their records up to date to show when land that was exempt is no longer in agricultural use and should be assessed as a game farm. Billing authorities are responsible for notifying the VOA when such changes take place, but this does not always happen.

In May 2000 the Game Farmers Association provided information to the VOA that there were about 400 game farms in the United Kingdom. This includes Scotland and Northern Ireland, for which the VOA has no responsibility.

The VOA also received representations from a number of bodies including Wales Opponents of Pheasant Shooting and Animal Aid, requesting confirmation that specified game farms are assessed for rating.

In addition, the VOA has been requested by the Game Farmers Association to ensure that their membership and others in the industry are all treated fairly in relation to rating.

The VOA has responded to these approaches by checking its records to identify which of these game farms are already assessed and which require to be assessed for rating purposes. A total of 40 additional game farms were included in rating lists as a result of this initiative.

The VOA does not hold details of the number of game farms registered for game bird rearing.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many properties which were identified as operating as a game farm had not been assessed for non-domestic rates; and what proportion of those properties were (a) allowed to remain open and (b) closed down, in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [71943]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency (VOA) in England and Wales has assessed a total of 85 game farms for rating purposes.

It is not known how many game farms not in assessment that should properly be assessed.

The VOA takes action to assess game farms as soon as they are brought to their attention.

The VOA has no statistical information as to the proportion of game farms that have remained open or have closed down in each of the last 10 years.

Airport Construction

Tom Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) received on the economic consequences of building new (i) airports and (ii) runways. [70868]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer the Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Department for Transport is giving him today at column 733w.

Public Service Monitoring

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 2 July 2002, on public service monitoring, which targets are considered value for money targets for each Government Department; and if he will make a statement. [70753]

Mr. Boateng: The value for money targets are clearly identified in "Public Service Agreements 2001–04" (Cm 4808).

Financial Advisers (VAT)

Ian Lucas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimates he has made of the amount of VAT (a) due on commission payments to independent financial advisers and (b) on commission payments to independent financial advisers collected in the latest year for which figures are available; [71310]

(2) if he will ensure that HM Customs and Excise communicate to independent financial advisers the fact that sales commission attracts VAT. [71309]

John Healey: Customs and Excise has set out the VAT treatment of the services provided by independent financial advisers in the VAT public notice 701/49, "Finance and securities", published in March 2002. They will be issuing more detailed information specifically for such advisers shortly. Where VAT is due on an adviser's services, it will be at a rate of 17.5 per cent. There are no estimates available for VAT collected on such charges.

Public Service Agreements

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the 2000 Spending Review PSAs as referred to in paragraph 1.15 of Public Service Agreements 2003–06, Cm 5571, before 24 July; and if he will make a statement. [71302]

Mr. Gordon Brown: As indicated in public service agreements 2003–06, the Treasury has today published details on its website of how all the headline 2000 spending review PSA targets translate into the new PSAs. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Street Crime

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 634, on street crime, what resources are available to the Metropolitan Police, what information he has received regarding those of the New York Police Department; and if he will make a statement. [44397]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 22 July 2002]: The net budget requirement for the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS) in 2001/2 was £1,980 million which has risen to £2,038 million in 2002–3. At the end of September, 2001, there were 25,374 police officers in the MPS, a rise of 679 from September 2000. At the same time, there were 10,240 civilian staff (93 more than the previous year) and 669 traffic wardens (60 fewer than the previous year).

In February I met Mr. Rudolph Giuliani, the former Mayor of New York City and Mr. Bill Bratten, the former Commissioner of the New York Police Department to discuss issues of policing, including police resources. I understand that estimates show that in 2000 there were 29,123 police officers and 11,582 civilian staff in London (which comprises the MPS, City of London Police and British Transport Police) compared with 38,779 police officers and 16,629 civilians in New York City.

The Government is pursuing a major initiative to tackle street crime in the ten forces with the highest levels, which includes the MPS. We have drawn together resources, expertise, and initiatives, from Government, the police and other relevant agencies, to help free our streets from robbery and drug driven violence.

Mobile Phone Theft and Crime Figures

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proportion of offences of (a) theft and (b) robbery relating to mobile phones in the last three years have involved both offenders and victims who are school-age children; [40008]

(2) how many offences of (a) theft and (b) robbery relating to mobile phones were (i) reported and (ii) recorded by the police in the last two years where those offences took place on school premises. [40006]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 5 March 2002]: The requested information is not routinely collected centrally.

A research study, 'Mobile phone theft' (by Victoria Harrington and Pat Mayhew, Home Office research study 235), included provisional results of a survey of 15,000 11–15 year olds which estimated that 12 per cent. of those questioned had been a victim of phone theft at least once in the last year. However, this survey was conducted in deprived areas.

A MORI survey in early 2001 of 5,000 11–16 year olds, also quoted in the research study, estimated that 5 per cent. had been a victim of mobile phone theft at least once in the last year. The sample used was regarded as being more representative.

The research study separately estimated that, overall, in police areas where the research took place, 48 per cent. of all victims of phone robbery, and 63 per cent. of those accused of the offence, were under 18.

We are working with the police and the mobile phone industry to reduce mobile phone robbery, undertaking public awareness campaigns and joint tracking exercises. Our discussions with operators have recently borne fruit. By the summer all five of the main operators will be able to bar stolen handsets by reference to the unique IMEI number which identifies the handset. All of the operators are also working together to develop a shared database of stolen phones, which will allow them to disable stolen phones if there is an attempt to use them on a different network. We believe that this is a very important step forward, as it should remove one of the major incentives for robbery.

Operators have also agreed to improve security as they invest in new systems. We are pressing the handset manufacturers for similar commitments. A start has been made, but more needs to be done before Britain's mobile phone system can lead the world in security. The mobile phone industry needs to show more interest in the security of phones they are selling to British consumers and, as the motor industry has done, do more to prevent their customers from becoming the victims of crime.

Crime Reduction

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what capital resources are made available for initiatives to change the physical arrangement of an area to reduce crime in residential neighbourhoods in England. [63148]

Mr. Denham: Several crime reduction initiatives provide the opportunity for funding for such projects.

Under the crime reduction programme CCTV initiative up to £80–85 million will be spent in 2002–03 on 279 CCTV schemes in residential areas. Funding for a number of these schemes also includes provision for improved street lighting.

Under the communities against drugs initiative the £50 million funding for 2001–02 (crime and disorder reduction partnerships' baseline allocation) comprised 32 per cent. for capital expenditure. Some partnerships' use of the funding includes regeneration works.

Under the safer communities initiative £20 million funding is available in 2002–03. There is no specific capital element but funding can be used to purchase capital items. Partnerships' plans are still being developed.

There is also funding from the capital modernisation fund to assist small retailers in deprived areas to improve the security of their businesses—£3 million in 2001–02, £6 million in 2002–03 and £6 million in 2003–04. While this funding is not specifically directed towards residential neighbourhoods, environmental improvements such as better lighting and landscaping of shopping parades may well impact on crimes affecting residential neighbourhoods as well as those impacting on small retailers, since many small shops and parades of shops are located within, or close to, residential areas.

Approximately a fifth (£380 million) of the £1.9 billion allocated over ten years to the new deal for communities areas and a fifth (£180 million) of the £900 million allocated over three years to the 88 neighbourhood renewal areas will go towards tackling crime. Money allocated to an area is spent according to priorities agreed by the area and its local strategic partnership. Central records of this spending are not kept and so it is not possible to set out how much is spent specifically on initiatives to change the physical arrangement of an area.

In addition, the cross-cutting review on improving the public space, announced in July 2001 by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, has been exploring how Government policies, funding and targets could produce improvements in the safety and attractiveness of the public space—the local environment where people lead their lives. The lead Minister Lord Falconer presented the review's final report to the Chief Secretary to the Treasury in April, in order to inform spending review decisions.

Speeding (Surrey)

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motorists have been caught speeding by police cameras in Surrey in each of the last five years. [66492]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 2 July 2002]: Data supplied directly from the police showing the number of prosecutions and fixed penalties notices issued for speeding offences as a result of the use of cameras are given in the table.

Prosecutions and fixed penalties for speeding offences detected by camera within the Surrey police force area, 1996–2000

Police Reform Bill

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the timetable is for the implementation of section 31A, part 4 of the Police Reform Bill. [70363]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 16 July 2002]: The legislation to which I assume the hon. Member refers is section 31A of the Transport and Works Act 1992, which is to be inserted by clause 59 of the Police Reform Bill.

The provision is parallel to the new section 7A of the Road Traffic Act 1988 to be inserted by clause 57 of the Bill. Both make provision for blood specimens to be taken without consent where, after an accident, a person cannot for medical reasons give valid consent.

It is customary for provisions within a Bill to be brought into effect no sooner than three months after Royal Assent. Subject to that, we intend that these measures should be brought into effect at the earliest possible moment. We have already entered into discussions with the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) on the issue of appropriate guidance to the police and shall be liaising with the Department of Health, the British Medical Association and the Association of Police Surgeons in order to ensure that the new procedures run smoothly.

Capita

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the (a) central and (b) local government contracts with Capita whose performance was reviewed by his Department prior to awarding that company the Criminal Records Bureau contract. [69275]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 16 July 2002]: As part of the agency benchmarking exercise, the Criminal Records Bureau procurement team obtained references from the Driving Standards Agency, the Teachers Pensions Agency, operated by Capita Group plc for the Department for Employment and Skills at Darlington and the British Broadcasting Corporation's (BBC) contact centre in Belfast.

Drug Testing

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the impact of the use of urine samples for detection of illegal drugs on the types of drugs used by prisoners; and what plans he has to change his policy of mandatory drug-testing. [70359]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 16 July 2002]: There is no substantive research evidence that the use of urine samples for detection of illegal drugs permanently affects the types of drugs used by prisoners. However, in light of anecdotal evidence that prisoners may be switching from cannabis to heroin in order to avoid detection (because the latter can be detected in the body for a shorter period), research has been commissioned from the Institute of Psychiatry and the Office for National Statistics which is due to report in December 2002. The implications of this research will be considered carefully.

Prison Suicides

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many suicides of (a) women and (b) men occurred in prison in England in the (i) last six years and (ii) most recent year for which figures are available. [70609]

Hilary Benn: The information requested is given in the table.

Number of self-inflicted deaths for males and females in prisons in England and Wales, 1996 to 2002[1]

	Male	Female	Total
1996	62	2	64
1997	65	3	68
1998	80	3	83
1999	86	5	91

2001	67	6	73
2002[2]	44	3	47
Total	853	39	892

[1] To 15 July 2002

[2] To date

The Prison Service employs the term "self-inflicted death" (which includes all those deaths where it appears that the person may have acted specifically to take his/her own life) rather than suicide.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 26 February 2002, Official Report, column 1239W, on prison hospital suicides, if he will make a statement on the timetable for the Prison Service review of the suicide prevention strategy; and what progress has been made. [68261]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 5 July 2002]: The Prison Service suicide prevention strategy was reviewed in 2000 and my right hon. Friend the Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw), the then Home Secretary, announced the launch of the new three-year suicide and self-harm strategy in February 2001. Work on the development of the new strategy started in April 2001 and will run to March 2004.

One of the projects currently being developed as part of the new strategy is the Care of Prisoners project. This project includes a review of procedures for prisoners at risk of suicide and self-harm (the F2052SH system) referred to in the answer to my right hon. Friend's question of 26 February. A new process for managing at risk prisoners is being developed and will be piloted in the autumn.

Police Stations

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many functioning police stations there were, broken down by (a) police force and (b) local authority area, in each year since 1997. [42371]

Mr. Denham: Chief constables have provided information on the number of police stations functioning in the years since 1997. This is given in the table. Police and local authority areas now coincide.

Comprehensive information is available for the three years to March 2000, March 2001 and March 2002, but in some cases forces were unable to provide data for earlier years. This is reflected in the table.

[1] The apparent loss of 12 stations by the Metropolitan police service between March 2000 and March 2001 reflects transfers to boundary forces in April 2000; Essex (2), Herts (4) and Surrey (6).

[2] Individual force figures are given where available. Some forces are unable to provide numbers for years before March 2000.

Police Numbers (London)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many extra police officers have been drafted into London after the events of 11 September. [28935]

Mr. Denham: The Commissioner of Police for the Metropolis informs me that no officers were drafted into London from other forces following the events of September 11. However, officers from all London boroughs were deployed to meet security needs. Crime statistics published on 12 July (Home Office Statistical Bulletin 07/02) showed that, in the period following this redeployment of officers, there were falls in recorded burglary in Westminster and rises in outer London boroughs. A less marked effect was seen in relation to levels of vehicle crime, but there was no noticeable impact on robbery in Westminster during the same period. Operational deployment is a matter for the Commissioner.

Jurors

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent research he has commissioned on (a) improper influence of jurors and (b) intimidation of jurors. [67653]

Hilary Benn: No recent research has been commissioned on the improper influence and intimidation of jurors. The Home Office has commissioned more general research into juries and jurors' experiences and perceptions of the criminal justice system. A report is scheduled for publication later this year.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been made in south Tyneside. [3070]

Mr. Denham: Antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) are community-based civil orders, which can be applied for by the police or local authority, in consultation with each other against an individual or several individuals whose behaviour is antisocial. Applications are to the magistrates court acting in its civil capacity.

ASBOs were introduced from 1 April 1999. The data given in the table cover the period up to the end of December 2001 (latest available).

We are currently considering whether any further checks are needed to ensure the accuracy of the number of ASBOs reported.

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he plans to publish a report on the use and effectiveness of ASBOs; [37773]

(2) what evaluation of ASBOs he has carried out; and what evaluation of ASBOs he has published. [37802]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 27 February 2002]: A commitment was made to Parliament during the passage of the Crime and Disorder Bill to review the antisocial behaviour order (ASBO) after two years. A review, covering their use and effectiveness, has been undertaken and will be published shortly.

Work Permits

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether Work Permits (UK) has approved permit applications on the grounds of shortage occupations criteria when the specific skills possessed have been described as IT skills; [71545]

(2) what steps are being taken to ensure that work permits applied for under shortage occupations criteria are only granted in circumstances where the skill required is classified as a shortage occupation skill; [71541]

(3) how many work permit applications have been (a) granted and (b) refused by Work Permits (UK) on the grounds of shortage occupations criteria in each month since June 2001; [71542]

(4) what process of investigation is undertaken by Work Permits (UK) into work permit applications that are submitted on the grounds of shortage occupations criteria; [71544]

(5) how many documented cases his Department has received from the Professional Contractors Group relating to employers in the technology sector importing labour from abroad in an effort to reduce employment costs; and what steps are being taken by his Department to ensure that the work permit system is not abused in this way. [71543]

Beverley Hughes: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave him on 15 July 2002, Official Report, columns 107W.

Informal Warnings

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent informal warnings are used against people under suspicion of committing an offence. [71209]

Hilary Benn: This information is not collected.

Life Sentences

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women are serving a life sentence in prisons in England and Wales. [70278]

Hilary Benn: On 31 May 2002 (the latest available data) there were 5,128 people serving life sentences in prisons in England and Wales. Of these 4,965 were male, and 163 were female.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women in prisons in England and Wales are serving a life sentence for sexual offences. [70279]

Hilary Benn: Data show that on the 31 May 2002 (the latest available data) there were 539 people serving life sentences in prisons in England and Wales for sexual offences. All of these were male.

Police Vice Units

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police authorities in the United Kingdom have a vice unit. [70284]

Mr. Denham: There are four police forces in England and Wales who have dedicated vice units: Metropolitan, Nottinghamshire and West Midlands police forces and Hampshire constabulary. In the remaining forces issues such as prostitution and pornography are investigated in a variety of ways most often at the level of basic command units (BCU) who would have discretion to form vice units locally. To contact all the BCUs in England and Wales to find out if they have a vice unit would incur disproportionate cost.

Female Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women serving a prison sentence have their children with them in prison; and how many children are living with their mother in prisons in England and Wales. [70277]

Hilary Benn: There are currently four units for women serving a custodial sentence to have their children with them while in prison. The prisons are Askham Grange, Holloway, New Hall and Styal and provide 68 places. On Monday, 15 July 2002, there were a total of 56 children living with their mother in prisons in England and Wales.

Prison Inmates

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) male and (b) female prison inmates under the age of 21 years were serving a prison sentence in England and Wales on 1 July. [70276]

Hilary Benn: On 31 May 2002 (the latest available data), there were 8,827 sentenced young offenders in prisons in England and Wales. Of these 8,358 were male, and 469 were female.

People Trafficking

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what policies there are to assist people who have been trafficked into the UK; what financial support is given by the Government to promote such policies; and if he will make a statement. [70287]

Beverley Hughes: As set out in chapter 5 of the White Paper "Secure Borders, Safe Haven: Integration with Diversity in Modern Britain", in co-operation with the voluntary sector the Government are looking at how to offer the victims of trafficking particular support so that they can escape their circumstances and, in certain cases, help law enforcement against organised criminals. Where victims are willing to come forward to the authorities, we are considering special arrangements for their protection. We will also consider whether it would be appropriate to allow them to remain here.

Where they are to return home, we are looking at how to assist them to do so, providing them with initial counselling, ensuring that they have suitable accommodation to return to, and providing help to enable them to reintegrate into their own community and find employment.

We are developing a best practice toolkit on trafficking, which will be a guide for immigration officers, police and others potentially dealing with trafficking. In particular, it will raise awareness of the difference between trafficking and smuggling, and help those concerned to treat trafficking victims fairly.

The Government are also working with the voluntary sector to identify the cost implications on the provision of support to the victims of trafficking. The Department for International Development and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are running a number of prevention projects aimed primarily at raising awareness and educating potential victims (mostly women and children) of the dangers of being trafficked. We have given £3 million for the International Labour Organisation's International Programme on the Elimination of Child Labour (IPEC) programme in the Greater Mekong region (parts of Cambodia, China, Laos, Thailand and Vietnam). This involves a number of inter-linked interventions to raise awareness, prevent trafficking and to support community reintegration for victims of trafficking.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of trafficking of people for the purpose of sexual activities have been investigated by police authorities in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years. [70286]

Hilary Benn: As there is at present no specific offence of trafficking, the police and other law enforcement agencies are not able to say how many such cases have been investigated in the last five years.

Reflex, the multi-agency response to organised immigration crime, is currently supporting a number of investigations into trafficking. Reflex is also engaged in Bosnia supporting anti-trafficking operations there and, with the Romanians, developing a team to target traffickers.

We have included a new offence of trafficking for prostitution in the current Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Bill, as a stop-gap measure pending introduction of offences covering trafficking for sexual and labour exploitation when parliamentary time permits.

Prison Governors

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many number one governors in prisons in England and Wales are women; and in which prisons they are in place. [70221]

Hilary Benn: As at 16 July 2002 there are 27 number one governors (or directors, the private prison sector equivalent) who are women. Their locations are as follows.

Location
- Albany
- Brockhill
- Buckley Hall
- Bullingdon
- Cookham Wood
- Dover
- Elmley
- Everthorpe
- Guys Marsh
- Highpoint North
- Hindley
- Huntercombe
- Lancaster
- Leeds
- Littlehey
- Maidstone
- Morton Hall
- New Hall
- Onley
- Ranby
- Rye Hill
- Stafford
- Stoke Heath
- Styal
- Swansea
- Thorn Cross
- Weare.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women from an ethnic minority background hold the rank of prison governor in prisons in England and Wales. [70127]

Hilary Benn: Three men and one woman Senior Operational Manager (Governor Grade) are recorded as being from an ethnic minority as at 13 July 2002.

Care Home Staff

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many letters his Department has received from (a) care home owners and (b) hon. Members with regard to delays in the vetting of care home staff applications by the Criminal Records Bureau. [71105]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The information sought by the hon. Member on this sector is not available in the format requested.

Information is currently not recorded by sector, either business or voluntary.

Deputy Chief Constable of Sussex

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the early retirement of the Deputy Chief Constable of Sussex. [22781]

Mr. Denham: We have set out our position on ill health retirement and disciplinary procedures in the White Paper. We have recognised that the current procedure can be damaging to public confidence. Police authorities should consider whether it would be right to exercise its discretion not to retire the officer where public interest in completing the proceedings in a misconduct case outweighs the medical condition. The White Paper says that > "the Government believes that it is wholly unacceptable for sickness or medical retirement to be used as a means of avoiding discipline".

Rape

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what he plans to do in response to the recommendations of the Joint Inspectorate Domestic report on rape; and if he will make a statement. [71057]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 18 July 2002]: An inter-agency working group, led by the Home Office and with representation from the police, Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) and Court Service, was formed in response to the Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary/ Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate report into the investigation and prosecution of cases involving allegations of rape. The group is producing a detailed action plan for implementing the report's findings. It will detail measures across the whole of the criminal justice system, from police recording procedures and investigation, through review and decision making by the Crown Prosecution Service, to the trial itself and post-trial support for the victim. The action plan is being published today. I will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library.

Police Pay

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has recently had with the Police Federation with regard to changing the pay and terms and conditions of police officers. [52319]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 26 April 2002]: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary held his most recent meeting with representatives of the Police Federation for England and Wales on 8 July. At that meeting, he discussed with them the implementation of the package of reforms to police pay and conditions of service that was agreed on 9 May by all parties in the Police Negotiating Board (PNB), including the Federation.

Drug Rehabilitation Programmes

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been in drug rehabilitation programmes in the Portsmouth, South constituency in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [64587]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Information requested on the number of people who have been in drug rehabilitation programmes in the Portsmouth, South constituency is not available. Figures are collected by the Portsmouth Drug Action Team (DAT), which covers a much wider area than Portsmouth, South.

The total number of people who have been in drug rehabilitation programmes over the last three years has increased significantly. In 1999–2000 the number of people accessing these services was 283. This number rose in the next two years to 307 in 2000–01 and 417 in 2001–102.

Retail Crime

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of money drawn from the Criminal Justice Reserve will be allocated to retail crime reduction. [54470]

Mr. Denham: No money from the Criminal Justice System Reserve has been allocated to retail crime reduction. However, £15 million has been allocated under the Capital Modernisation Fund to assist small retailers in deprived areas and funding for retail crime reduction measures can also be allocated through various other schemes such as the Targeted Policing an Safer Communities initiatives.

Derek Jack Tully

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason, in relation to the case of Derek Jack Tully, the Parole Board has imposed the parole condition of non-marital residence against the expressed wish of his wife; and if he will call for a report from the Probation Service on why they attempted a late evening supervision in his daughter's home; on how many occasions they tried to arrange two supervisions on the same day; and if he will make a statement. [70093]

Hilary Benn: The inclusion of additional licence conditions in the parole licence of prisoners serving a sentence of four years or more is a matter for the Parole Board. The Parole Board is an independent body; and therefore, it is not appropriate to comment upon its decisions in individual cases. I have referred the hon. Member's inquiry to the Chairman of the Board, requesting that he reply direct.

Furthermore, it is not normal practice to comment on an individual case supervised by the Probation Service. I have asked the National Director for the National Probation Service to request a report of the circumstances from the Chief Officer for the Essex area and will write to the hon. Member when this has been received.

Prisons

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visits from local probation officers prisoners in category B prisons are expected to receive in advance of release; and how many were received per prisoner released from each category B prison in the last year for which information is available. [67193]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 5 July 2002]: Figures on the information requested are not collected centrally. There is no requirement for the home supervising (local) probation officer to carry out a minimum number of visits to a prisoner in a category B prison who will be subject to supervision on release. Probation officers are expected to use their judgment to ensure that there is sufficient contact at a pre-release stage to enable the successful resettlement of the offender and the preparation of a supervision plan.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons he has visited; and when these visits took place. [67928]

Hilary Benn: Since becoming Home Secretary in June 2001, my right hon. Friend has visited two prisons; Leeds on 8 August 2001 and Belmarsh on 24 January 2002. Further visits will take place in due course.

Policing (Christmas)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were required to be on duty on Christmas day, as a percentage of the normal staffing levels. [30937]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not held centrally. Constables and sergeants who are required to do duty on Christmas day may elect to receive either a payment at double time or time off in lieu equal to twice the time they were required to do duty. In addition, where they receive less than eight days' notice of having to work on Christmas day, they also receive a day off in lieu.

Consultation

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what format his Department has published the results of its 2001 written consultations. [70503]

Hilary Benn: The majority of the results of public consultation documents issued by my Department in 2001 have been published in both printed and electronic form.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether consultation documents published by his Department in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70502]

Hilary Benn: The seven consultation criteria were published in one of the consultation documents issued by the Home Department in 2001.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has a designated consultation co-ordinator in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70501]

Hilary Benn: Yes.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many consultation documents published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form his Department has monitored and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70504]

Hilary Benn: All the consultation documents published by my Department in 2001 were available in both written and electronic form. 13 published consultation documents were monitored and evaluated in accordance with the Code of Practice on Written Consultations.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints his Department has received about its 2001 consultations in (a) electronic and (b) printed form. [70505]

Hilary Benn: The Home Department received two complaints about consultation exercises published in 2001. The first concerned the consultation exercise on 'justification for the use of X/Gamma radiation scanners by the Immigration Service for detecting people seeking to enter the United Kingdom illegally in vehicles and/or freight, by clandestine means' and was received in printed format. The second concerned the 'consultation paper on revising the definition of categories of deaths of members of the public during or following police contact' and was in electronic format.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which consultation documents published by his Department in 2001 were not made available as paper copies. [70506]

Hilary Benn: All the public consultation documents published by the Home Department in 2001 were available in printed form.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long his Department allowed for consultation on each consultation document it published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form. [70500]

Hilary Benn: I have listed details of the length of consultation period allowed for those public consultation exercises published by the Home Department in 2001. The length of the consultation period was the same for documents in printed and electronic form.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the public consultations undertaken by his Department since 1997, indicating for each consultation (a) if copies were available online, (b) if copies were available in print, (c) the date the time period given for responses opened and (d) the date the time period given for responses closed. [69805]

Mr. Blunkett: The Home Department holds central records on issued consultations from 1997 for the Home Office, its non-departmental public bodies and agencies. Current consultation papers can be found on the website on http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/atoz/consult_papers.htm. Archived consultation papers can be found on http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/atoz/consuarchive.htm.

Providing all the details requested would involve disproportionate cost. However, the online archive does contain details of the consultation period for most of the consultation documents listed.

Listed in the table are the details available for 2001–02 Home Office consultation exercises.

Police Houses

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for each English police authority, how many specialist police houses have been sold in the past three years. [36620]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 22 July 2002]: The only information available relates to the sale of police dwellings. The number of dwellings sold in the past three years by English police authorities is detailed in the table.

In its report entitled "Action stations—Improving the Management of the Police Estate" (published March 1999), the Audit Commission recommended that police forces identify and dispose of buildings that were unsuitable or had maintenance liabilities which were beyond the forces' means. further it recommended that the remaining residential estate was rationalised. In some cases, for example, it may be appropriate to sell off some vacant accommodation in order to refurbish and bring back into use other accommodation.

In those areas where high housing costs are hindering recruitment and retention of police officers, allocations from the starter home initiative (SHI) will help about 1,100 police staff to buy first homes over the three years to March 2004. (In London about 550 police staff are expected to benefit from the first round allocations announced in September 2001).

We have also recently agreed with the Department of Health that the role of the national health service housing co-ordinator will be extended to cover the police service and a secondee from the police service is due to join the co-ordinator's team shortly.

Cyber-terrorism

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the cyber-terrorism threat to the energy industry; and what assessment has been made of NISCC cyber-terrorism counter measures since January. [69639]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 17 July 2002]: No representations from the energy industry have been received to the date concerning the threat from cyber-terrorism, but the National Infra Structure Security Co-ordination Centre (NISCC) keeps its assessment of the threat of electronic attack to the United Kingdom's critical national infrastructure, which includes the energy industry, under constant review.

Murder and Manslaughter Statistics

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people, convicted of (a) murder and (b) manslaughter who have been released from prison or other custodial institutions, have recommitted (i) murder and (ii) manslaughter following their release in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [65203]

Hilary Benn: For the period 1992 to 2001, those people known to have recommitted homicide following release for their first offence are given in the table. The figures exclude persons who may have been convicted outside England and Wales (for whom there is incomplete information).

Computer Hacking

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of computer hacking UNIRAS has recorded in 2002; and on how many occasions in 2002 his Department's computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers operating (a) within and (b) outside his Department. [69640]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 17 July 2002]: Between 1 January and 12 July 2002 the Unified Instant Reporting and Alert Scheme (UNIRAS) received 21 reports of hacking incidents. No cases of computer hacking have been detected in the Home Office this year.

Road Traffic Penalties

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department plans to publish its response to the road traffic penalties consultation; and if he will make a statement. [70975]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: We are currently in the final stages of producing the Government's response to the consultation exercise on road traffic penalties. We hope to have this published before the summer recess.

London Probation Service

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is towards the requirement for preparation of pre-sentence reports by the London Probation Service; and if he will make a statement. [68878]

Hilary Benn: The courts have a statutory duty and right to commission pre-sentence reports where they think it appropriate to do so and the area Probation Service has a statutory duty to provide them. A pre-sentence report may take the shorter form of a Specific Sentence Report where there is reason to believe that the offender presents a lower risk or the court has a specific sentence in mind. National Standards for the supervision of offenders in the community 2000 require pre-sentence reports to be prepared within a maximum of 15 working days of the court's request. This applies in London as elsewhere in England and Wales.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) budget and (b) spending has been of the London Probation Service since 1994; and if he will make a statement. [69427]

Hilary Benn: The budget for the London Probation Service from 1994–95 is set out in the table. This is based on the original main service grant allocation issued by the Home Office. The actual spending is not available as the former Inner-London Probation Service was part of the Metropolitan Police District and has not submitted grant claim forms to the Home Office.

£ million

Financial year	Budget
1994–95	72.0
1995–96	72.1
1996–97	78.9
1997–98	77.8
1998–99	77.1
1999–2000	80.4
2000–01	84.7
2001–02	88.0
2002–03	92.8

Notes:

1. The sum of £2.7 million in 2001–02 and £3.7 million in 2002–03 were subsequently transferred to the Department of Health for expenditure relating to Drug Treatment and Testing Orders.
2. The budgets for 2001–02 and 2002–03 exclude any provision for the Family Court Welfare Service which was transferred to the Lord Chancellor's Department from April 2001. It is estimated that such expenditure was about 7 per cent. of the budget in 2000–01.
3. The budgets for 2001–02 and 2002–03 include small amounts for small capital works and the capital charges on freehold buildings. The 2002–03 budget also includes small amounts for depreciation of fixed assets and non-reclaimable VAT.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the ratio is of staff to clients operated by the London Probation Service. [69432]

Hilary Benn: The number of clients (offenders) assigned to the staff in the London probation area is currently 32,000. Given that part time staff are on average 0.5 of the overall staffing structure, this gives full time equivalent staffing of 2,402 (including administrative and headquarters staff) giving a client/staff ratio of 13.3:1.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) sex offenders, (b) drug abusers, (c) domestic violence offenders and (d) mentally ill persons are being dealt with by the London Probation Service. [69431]

Hilary Benn: At the end of December 2000, 1,500 offenders sentenced for indictable sexual offences and 5,400 offenders sentenced for indictable drugs offences were being supervised by the London probation area. Information on domestic violence offenders and mentally ill offenders is not available.

Prison and Probation Service Investigations

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason the target to close 70 per cent. of prison and probation service investigations within 12 weeks was not met. [68783]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 11 July 2002]: The target to which the hon. Member refers is set by the Ombudsman for Prisons and Probation. The Ombudsman sets a target of issuing a final report of his investigations within 12 weeks. In his annual report for 2000–01, published on 27 June, the Ombudsman reports a decline in performance in meeting this target in the case of complaints from prisoners, from 73 per cent. of cases dealt with in 1999–2000 to 63 per cent. of cases dealt with in 2000–01. As explained in his report, the drop in performance was largely brought about by a 53 per cent. increase in the number of eligible complaints, an increase which he attributes to a speeding up of the Prison Service complaints system so that more prisoners are prepared to complete the complaints process before going to the Ombudsman direct. Most complaints and appeals are now answered by the Prison Service within six weeks. The Ombudsman can only investigate once the internal complaints process has been completed.

The Ombudsman was awarded additional resources to cope with the backlog in 2001–02 and it has now substantially decreased.

The Ombudsman's remit did not extend to complaints relating to the National Probation Service until September 2001, and they are not covered in his annual report. All these complaints are being completed by his office on time.

Probation Service

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the financial position of Bull/Integris was taken into account before the standard technical environment for the Probation Service contract was let on 1 January. [65420]

Hilary Benn: The National Probation Directorate commissioned the Office of Government Commerce (OGC) to assess the financial position of Groupe Bull and its subsidiary Bull Information Systems (including the business division Integris) prior to the shortlisting of service providers for the STEPS contracts.

After shortlisting and prior to award of the STEPS contracts, the National Probation Directorate commissioned a firm of forensic accountants to evaluate the financial risks regarding the sale of Integris by Bull Information Systems to Steria.

On-going financial checks will be carried out on Integris (now renamed as Steria following the change of ownership) throughout the life of the STEPS contracts.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many computer terminals are operational within the National Probation Service in England and Wales. [65422]

Hilary Benn: There are currently 17,357 terminals in use in the National Probation Service.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the maintenance charges are for the probation STEPS contract during normal working hours; what the charge is (a) between 6.00 pm and 10.00 pm for an office and an area, (b) for a Saturday and a Sunday event, (c) in relation to an office relocation and (d) for the installation of a computer or printer; and whether the contract with Integris for these matters represents value for money. [65421]

Hilary Benn: It is normal in contracts such as these for the information requested to be covered by commercial confidentiality clauses. However, recent press reports on this subject have been so inaccurate and misleading that both the supplier and the National Probation Directorate felt it appropriate to correct some specific points.

The Standard Technical Environment for the Probation Service (STEPS) contract provides the foundation for the development of IT in the Probation Service. Earlier this year it became one of the first contracts to pass through the Office of Government Commerce (OGC) Gateway process, set up to scrutinise Government contracts for value and purpose.

The core support hours for the contract are Monday to Friday from 8.00 am to 6.00 pm. The 'maintenance charges' to extend these hours to provide full service cover for a whole office between 6.00 and 10.00 pm on a weeknight would be £2,661. On a Saturday the cost to support the entire network of 15,000 desktops across England and Wales would be £8,704. On a Sunday, the same cost would be £11,600. To deliver this service the supplier has to provide people on call around the country, responding to incidents and resolving problems. These costs would only be paid should this work be needed. To date, in the lifetime of this contract, it has not been. The cost to move a workstation would be £192. The contract represents good value for money.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason the target for the proportion of cases under Probation Service supervision where the service responds to a breach of conditions by taking action in accordance with the national standards has not been met. [68785]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 11 July 2002]: Probation Service national standards provide clear guidelines on what the Probation Service is expected to deliver in respect of enforcement of breach action. Performance is closely monitored and there is clear evidence of an improvement increases of breach action from 51 per cent. of cases in 1998 to 70 per cent. in September 2000 (the last date for validated returns). This is against a target of 90 per cent. This improvement has been achieved at the same time as the standard against which performance was measured was significantly toughened during the period.

The enforcement target is one of a package of targets for which there is a direct cash-related link to performance. That link supports the work which is being undertaken by the Probation Service to improve performance in this area through the review of enforcement procedures.

Child Protection (Sport)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what meetings he has had with Ministers in other Departments with regard to (a) child protection in sport and (b) inter-agency working on child protection in sport; [69127]

(2) what measures he has put in place to facilitate other Departments' involvement in implementing the Criminal Records Bureau disclosure information checks with regard to child protection in sport. [69124]

Hilary Benn: Although the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) has been set up as an executive agency of the Home Office, its work supports the policy objectives of several Departments including the Department for Culture, Media and Sport's (DCMS) objectives of improving child protection in sport. Employers and other organisations taking forward the policies on child protection of DCMS and other Departments are already making substantial use of the CRB service.

No ministerial meetings have been arranged specifically on these subjects. But sport was represented on the CRB's customer forum which advised on the implementation of the bureau. Officials have also had a number of ad hoc meetings with representatives of sports organisations with regard to checks for child protection purposes, as they have with other Departments and with a range of other organisations about checks for this and other purposes.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the status is of (a) referees and umpires, (b) referees' assistants, (c) match officials and (d) others who receive remuneration for their involvement in the context of the Criminal Records Bureau disclosure information checks; [69129]

(2) what his definition is of a volunteer for whom Criminal Records Bureau disclosure information checks are necessary. [69128]

Hilary Benn: We announced in February of last year that standard and enhanced disclosures will be issued free of charge in the case of volunteers. The Police Act 1997 (Criminal Records) Regulations 2002 define a volunteer as a person engaged in an activity which involves spending time, unpaid (except for travel and other approved out-of-pocket expenses), doing something which aims to benefit some third party other than or in addition to a close relative. Those persons in the categories mentioned who met the criteria for these levels of Disclosure which are set out in the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 (Exceptions) Order 1975 and section 115 of the Police Act 1997 and whose remuneration amounted only to travel and other approved out-of-pocket expenses would, of course, be entitled to a free Disclosure.

0870 Telephone Numbers

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 9 July 2002, Official Report, column 896W, if he will list the services accessed by the public for which 0870 numbers are used; and what factors are considered in reaching a decision. [71130]

Hilary Benn: The Home Office and its agencies use a total of 11 0870 numbers:

Immigration and Nationality Directorate: 0870 606 7766

United Kingdom Passport Service (Main): 0870 521 0410

United Kingdom Passport Service (Textphone): 0870 240 8090

United Kingdom Passport Service (High Street Partners): 0870 243 4477

United Kingdom Passport Service (Complaints): 0870 241 1902

Criminal Records Bureau (Main): 0870 909 0811

Criminal Records Bureau (Registration line): 0870 909 0822

Criminal Records Bureau (Disclosure application line): 0870 909 0844

Criminal Records Bureau (Minicom line): 0870 909 0344

Prison Service: 0870 000 1397

Main Home Office public inquiry line: 0870 000 1585.

Decisions in all cases were taken on the basis of estimates of the cost to the Department, the cost to the customer, the likely volume of calls that might be generated if 0800, 0845 or 0870 numbers were used, and the impact that volume of calls might have on the levels of service provided.

Additionally, for the Immigration and Nationality Enquiry Bureau number, the use of an 0870 number was agreed on the grounds that the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) would reinvest any money earned back into improving the telephone bureau operation and thereby customer service. This has been done and £0.75 million was invested this spring in the purchase of a new switchboard with increased functionality.

Metropolitan Police Trainees

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many trainee Metropolitan Police officers have had their 18 weeks' training extended to allow them to repeat written and practical assessments in each year since 1997; how much this has cost; and if he will make a statement. [58559]

Mr. Denham: The Commissioner of Police the Metropolis Police has provided the information in the following table:

Year ended	Number of officers who have had their training extended	Representing percentage of overall number of officers trained
31 December 1997	[1]—	n/a
31 December 1998	33	2.6
31 December 1999	39	3.2
31 December 2000	76	7
31 December 2001	310	14

[1] Figures not available

There are two reasons for the increase in the number of officers who have had their training extended in the years ending December 2000 and 2001. There has been a significant increase in the numbers of new recruits to the Metropolitan Police Service, and the training school now places more emphasis on helping those officers who do not achieve the required standard within 18 weeks to achieve the appropriate level of competence by extending the basic training period. This is more efficient and cost effective than the previous approach, where it was more generally the case that the force would dispense with the services of officers failing to meet the required standard by the end of the 18-week foundation training course.

The costs are not available.

Police (Negotiations)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the timing of the publication of the conciliation details following negotiations with the Police Federation, on his Department's website; and what negotiations he has had with the Police Negotiating Board as a result. [54886]

Mr. Denham: On 24 October 2001, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary asked the Police Negotiating Board (PNB) to explore and agree a package to modernise police pay and conditions of service. On 27 December 2001, the PNB reached agreement in principle, subject to ratification by all parties following consultation with their members. On 25 February, PNB failed to ratify the agreement reached on 27 December 2001. As required by the PNB Constitution, a period of conciliation followed. On 26 April, the conciliators for the official and staff sides of the PNB agreed on a recommendation for settlement. The details of the recommended conciliated settlement were placed on the Home Office website on the same day.

Under the PNB Constitution, the conciliated settlement recommended by the conciliators for both sides has to be ratified by the full PNB. PNB meetings took place on 1 and 9 May. At the meeting on 9 May, the recommended conciliated settlement was ratified.

Prisoners (Feltham)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many qualified teachers are employed at Feltham Young Offenders Institute on (a) full-time permanent contracts, (b) part-time permanent contracts, (c) full-time temporary contracts, (d) part-time temporary contracts and (e) agency basis; and if he will make a statement. [67310]

Hilary Benn: At Feltham, there are currently 14 teachers, including the head and deputies, on full-time permanent contracts. There are 30 teachers on part-time permanent contracts and two on full time temporary contracts.

There are no teachers at Feltham on part-time temporary contracts, nor are any employed on an agency basis.

Domestic Violence

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many cases involving domestic violence have been brought to court in each of the past five years; [59855]

(2) how many men have been convicted of offences connected with domestic violence in each of the past five years. [59851]

Mr. Denham: Offences involving domestic violence are not identifiable on the Home Office Court Proceedings database as no specific statute covers such offences.

Prosecutions brought might range from common assault to homicide depending on the level of violence, and as the circumstances of the offences for which prosecutions are brought are not collected centrally, offences involving domestic violence cannot be distinguished from other offences within these categories.

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what consultation he intends to undertake in respect of guidance to police authorities on dealing with perpetrators of domestic violence within their ranks; [60449]

(2) when he intends to publish guidance to police authorities on dealing with perpetrators of domestic violence within their ranks. [60452]

Mr. Denham: Work is in progress, in consultation with the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO), to produce guidance to police authorities on dealing with perpetrators of domestic violence within police ranks. A target date will be set for issuing the guidance once the new ACPO lead takes up his post and consultation will take place with relevant bodies once the guidance is drafted. In addition to this, work is being undertaken on ensuring that police discipline procedures complement any guidance to be issued. Some police forces already have procedures in place to ensure they respond effectively to any indication that police staff may be perpetrating domestic violence and evidence of good practice may be incorporated into the guidance where appropriate.

Press Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) full time equivalents were employed by his press office and (b) secondees were placed in his press office in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [70541]

Mr. Blunkett: I would refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Turner) on 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 397W which detailed the number of press officers employed during the years 1997 to 2002.

Records of secondees to the press office are not routinely kept as often they are at nil cost to the Department and may only be for periods of six weeks. The press office has had over the period of time in question a number of fast stream policy officials and immigration officers on attachments to the press office, usually for periods of around six months.

Police Numbers (North-West)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time police officers there were in 1997 and each subsequent year in (a) Preston, (b) Blackburn, (c) the north west of England and (d) England; and how many there were in Lancashire in (i) 1998, (ii) 1999, and (iii) 2000. [40682]

Mr. Denham: Information on police numbers for each force in each year since 1997 for the north-west region is set out in the table.

North West region

Force	1997[1]	1998[1]	1999[1]	2000[1]	2001[1]
Lancashire	3,247	3,257	3,245	3,179	3,255

Greater Manchester	6,922	6,949	6,810	6,795	6,909
Merseyside	4,230	4,216	4,211	4,085	4,081
Total	17,588	17,216	17,463	17,154	17,296
England	118,459	118,139	117,195	115,324	116,549

[1] As at 31 March.

Note:

Figures are for full-time equivalent strength.

I understand from the Chief Constable that Preston is part of Central (D) Division of Lancashire Constabulary and that Blackburn is part of Eastern (E) Division. It is not possible to separate police strength for Blackburn and Preston from divisional strength. Information for the strength of these divisions has been provided by the Chief Constable.

D and E Divisions police strength

Police and Crime Reduction Funds

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the proposed transfer of money from police and crime reduction funds to research and statistics current spending and on the (a) research and (b) evaluative projects which this funding is intended to support. [22135]

Mr. Denham: The transfer of £9.8 million from policing and crime reduction to research and statistics was a technical adjustment to place the funding in the budget of the Home Office Directorate that would be taking forward this previously agreed work. The £9.8 million breaks down as:

£7.4 million to fund external evaluation of crime reduction initiatives; and

£2.4 million to develop the evidence base for sentencing and enforcement practices.

The £7.4 million provision will cover evaluation of the following initiatives:

Reducing burglary;

Targeted policing;

Treatment of offenders;

Drug arrest referrals;

School intervention;

Domestic violence;

Sentencing;

"Tackling Prostitution—What Works?";

Closed circuit television (CCTV); and a range of initiatives centred on design against crime.

Police Targets

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate, for each police force in England, the number of policing plan targets (a) set and (b) achieved for (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) 2001–02; and if he will make a statement. [66885]

Mr. Denham: [holding answer 8 July 2002]: The Government require police authorities to set targets in respect of Best Value indicators for domestic burglary, vehicle crime and, in five metropolitan areas, robbery. These five areas are: Merseyside; Greater Manchester; West Midlands; West Yorkshire; and the Metropolitan police. The information requested is not available for the years 1999–2000 and 2000–01. The information requested for 2001–02 is shown in the table. Targets for all other indicators may be set locally by the police authority following consultation with their communities. Performance data are published annually in police authorities' Best Value Performance Plans.

[1] Have set targets for 2004–05.

Pre-Sentence Reports

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason the target for the percentage of pre-sentence reports done within the 15-day national standard has not been met. [68786]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 11 July 2002]: Probation service national standards set out what the probation service is expected to deliver in respect of providing pre-sentence reports to the court. Performance is closely monitored and there is clear evidence of improvement in magistrates courts from 54.6 per cent. in 1996–97 to 79.5 per cent. in 2001–02. This is against a target of 90 per cent. The probation service is working with the courts to improve further performance in this area.

Race Hate Literature

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to improve liaison between the police and the CPS regarding the prosecution of those responsible for race hate literature; and if he will make a statement. [36870]

Mr. Denham: Following discussions in the Lawrence Inquiry Steering Group meeting in October 2001, the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) has issued further guidance to staff. All cases, whether submitted for preliminary advice or as files for prosecution under Part III of the Public Order Act 1986, will be considered by a small team of lawyers within the Casework Directorate at CPS headquarters, in order to ensure that best practice is followed and that there is consistency in decision making. Local Chief Crown Prosecutors will ensure that Chief Constables are aware of this situation and of the ability of the CPS Casework Directorate to provide advice at any stage of an investigation.

The Crown Prosecution Service and the Association of Chief Police Officers will discuss other possible measures, in particular a mechanism for pooling experience concerning cases of successful prosecution, at their next bilateral meeting.

In addition, the Government have introduced, in the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001, changes to the law on incitement to racial hatred which expand the coverage of the offences to include hatred against groups abroad and which increase the maximum penalty for these offences from two to seven years' imprisonment.

Darren Cowdrey

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what investigations have taken place into the injuries suffered by Darren Cowdrey, prisoner HJ 5552, in Wandsworth prison. [68934]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 11 July 2002]: The police have investigated the incident to which the hon. Member refers. They are satisfied that no crime was committed. A member of Prison Service Construction Unit also visited Wandsworth to look at health and safety aspects of the incident.

Kainos Rehabilitation Units

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Kainos rehabilitation units have been closed; if he will list the closure dates of such units; and if he will make a statement. [69482]

Hilary Benn: The Kainos Community programmes at Highpoint South and North prisons closed by mutual agreement on 31 January 2002 and 30 April 2002 respectively.

The Prison Service is considering a proposal from Kainos Community to continue to run modified versions of the existing programmes at Swaleside and the Verne prisons, on a self funding basis.

Wandsworth Prison

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use is made of (a) safety nets and (b) CCTV to reduce prisoner harm and self-harm in Wandsworth Prison. [68935]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 11 July 2002]: Wandsworth prison has safety nets on every wing which, in addition to its other safety purposes, prevents prisoners from falling from the landings to the ground floor. Closed Circuit television (CCTV) is present in some areas of the prison, but not in the residential areas. In those areas of the prison where CCTV is present, it might contribute to the prevention of self-harm but this is not its primary purpose.

Voluntary Constables

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average number of voluntary constables was in each of the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [60716]

Mr. Denham: The numbers of special constables in England and Wales from 1991 to 2001 are given in the table. From 1990 to 1995, statistics on the strength of the special constabulary in England and Wales were collected by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary. These were compiled at the end of the calendar year until 1993, and then for the financial year 1994–95. Since 1995, these statistics have been collected by the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate. They are compiled at the end of March and September each year.

Figures to march 1995 supplied by HMIC, figures from September 1995 supplied by Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate

Special Constables are a key element of our police reform agenda. We are working on a package of measures designed to help reverse the decline in numbers by improving the way they are recruited, managed and deployed. We are particularly keen to improve liaison with employers—after all, Specials bring a wealth of training and experience in to their wider workplace. We are also publishing guidance on good practice by the end of this year. And we have set aside £300,000 to help "specials champions" drive forward initiatives to improve the recruitment and retention of specials.

Prisoners (Literacy and Numeracy)

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prisoners discharged from their sentence were at level 1 or below for literacy and numeracy skills in each year since 1998 to the latest available date. [69300]

Hilary Benn: The figures published by the Prison Service are as follows:

	Percentage discharged at level 1 or below for Numeracy	Literacy
2000–01	67.6	76.5
2001–02	65.7	77.6

No comparable data were collected before 2000–01. From 2000–01, delivery targets for literacy and numeracy in prisons have been for the number of basic skills qualifications achieved annually by prisoners. In 2000–01, prisoners achieved 12,500 basic skills qualifications at level 2, rising to nearly 16,000 in 2001–02. Targets for this year and next have been widened to cover the achievement of basic skills qualifications at all levels. This will help establishments to be more responsive to the range of prisoners' basic skills needs.

The Government expects prisoners to achieve 28,800 basic skills qualifications in 2002–03 rising to 32,000 in 2003–04. By helping to equip prisoners with the skills they need to resettle effectively back into the community on release, these achievements will contribute to reduced rates of re-offending and to making communities safer.

Investigatory Branch CIB 3

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints of breaches of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 by the investigatory branch CIB 3 have been received in the last four years. [69331]

Mr. Denham: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that the Metropolitan Police Service complaints and discipline system indicates that there have been six allegations of breaches of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 by officers from the Anti-Corruption Unit of the Metropolitan Police Service's Directorate of Professional Standards (formerly CIB3) in the last four years.

Police Standards

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the functions and compatibility of the Standards Unit and HMIC. [61180]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 13 June 2002]: Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) and the Standards Unit have separate and complementary roles. They work together to identify where forces and basic command unit's (BCUs) need support to improve their performance. HMIC will continue to report on performance across the whole service, alerting the Police Standards Unit (PSUs) where it believes its support is needed to improve performance: PSU by contrast will focus on particular areas where BCUs and forces need help to improve performance.

In doing this, PSU will draw on advice from HMIC, monthly crime data by BCU and the Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP) (and other sources where available). Its early work includes developing analysis and assessment frameworks to make best use of police performance data and quality assurance processes to ensure the accuracy and reliability of this data.

The Standards Unit will begin a programme of targeting support for forces and BCUs in the autumn. It will also provide funding to help the best BCUs to innovate and develop best practice.

Police Recruitment

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to encourage former officers to rejoin the police service; and if applications from such people will be treated in the same way as those from (a) new recruits and (b) officers seeking a transfer from another force. [45874]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Home Office issues guidelines on recruitment which do not distinguish between new applicants and those seeking to rejoin the police service. Once appointed, depending on individual circumstances, officers rejoining may not be required to complete the full period of probation or to undertake the initial training programme.

The Home Office does not issue guidance to forces about applications from transferees.

The range of measures we have taken to improve recruitment and retention generally, and the reform we are implementing may encourage former offices to consider rejoining.

Crime Reduction Fund

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each initiative in each year since the start of the Crime Reduction Fund, indicating (a) the amount budgeted for each initiative and in total in each year to date and (b) the total expended for each initiative and in total in each year of the initiative to date; and if he will make a statement. [37672]

[1] The voted provision for 1999–2000 and 2000–01—as published in the Home Office annual report for 2000—was £60 million and £160 million respectively. The budgeted provision figures for these years in the table above differ from those in that report because they reflect updated profiles of planned expenditure. The figures for 200–102 take into account the effects of the SR 2000 Settlement.

[2] Shows the amounts required to roll out the remaining projects under these initiatives. Some of this expenditure will be incurred in 2002–03.

[3] Balance of funding transferred to DfEE for completion of programme.

[4] Funding reallocated to other projects.

[5] P[illegible]n comes from the Capital Modernisation Fund. Includes £4.6 million for CCTV in police vehicles.

[6] The [illegible]al figure excludes central and regional programme support costs, which are not allocated to particular initiatives.

Heathrow (Security)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis concerning thefts and robberies at Heathrow; and if he will make a statement. [46203]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 25 March 2002]: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis meet regularly to discuss issues relevant at the time, including the Metropolitan police's response to high profile incidents. The Government are considering what further measures are necessary to improve airport security.

Operation Rose

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with respect to Operation Rose in Northumbria, how many individuals were (a) suspected of child abuse and (b) arrested in connection with charges of child abuse; of the people arrested, how many were subsequently released; how many of the suspects were charged; of the people charged, how many people had the charges against them dropped before going to court; how many individuals were taken to court who pleaded not guilty to the allegations made against them; how many people were taken to court who pleaded guilty to the allegations made against them; how many cases were discontinued and what were the reasons for discontinuance; how many complaints were received and how many suspects and complainants were identified; of the cases sent to the CPS, how many were (i) accepted, (ii) referred for further information and (iii) rejected; what the total cost associated with Operation Rose was, including direct costs of salaries and expenses of officers involved; what defence costs were awarded against the Crown; and who or which organisation has reviewed the way in which Operation Rose was conducted. [49833]

Mr. Denham: 197 individuals were regarded by the police as possible suspects in the course of Operation Rose, of whom 60 were arrested in connection with charges of child abuse. 28 of these 60 were subsequently released and 32 charged. A further 26 cases were sent to the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) for review, but no charges were laid in any of these cases. The CPS reviewed each case before charges were brought, with the result that no case in which charges had been brought was discontinued. 31 of those charged pleaded not guilty to the allegations made against them, and one pleaded guilty. Five of these 31 were convicted. In total 530 complaints were received in the course of the operation; all complainants were identified.

The total cost associated with Operation Rose, including direct costs of salaries and expenses of officers involved, amounted to £5 million. No defence costs were awarded against the Crown—costs were awarded out of central funds. All the agencies involved in Operation Rose—police, CPS, social services and health—have since reviewed the processes involved in the investigation.

Police Pay

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will define working at the sharp end, as quoted in the Home Office police briefing, January 2001. [48289]

Mr Denham: The briefing note stated that "we want to bring in a new scheme to target extra rewards at those working at the sharp end of public service, doing the most difficult and demanding jobs". On 9 May, the Police Negotiating Board (PNB) agreed a package of reforms to police pay and conditions of service, including such a scheme.

Under the special priority payment scheme, it will be for chief officers and police authorities to draw up local schemes, taking account of national criteria and any guidance issued by the Home Secretary. They will also have to consult local staff associations.

Posts may qualify for payment where they:

Carry a significantly higher responsibility level than the norm for the rank; or

Present particular difficulties in recruitment and retention; or

Have specially demanding working conditions or working environments.

Officers in qualifying posts will receive a one-off payment at the end of the year of not less than £500 and not more than £3,000 normally, although exceptionally payments of up to £5,000 may be made.

In the first year of the scheme's operation (2003), forces will have to spend a minimum of 1 per cent. of the force's annual basic paybill for all ranks up to and including chief superintendent, rising to 1.5 per cent. in the second year and 2 per cent. in the third year.

Immigration

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy where family ties are claimed to the UK in third country cases. [72780]

Beverley Hughes: The policy on the exercise of discretion in safe third country cases where family ties to the United Kingdom are claimed is that potential third country cases would normally have their asylum claims considered substantively in this country where:

(a) an applicant's spouse is in the United Kingdom;

(b) the applicant is an unmarried minor and a parent is in the United Kingdom;

(c) the applicant has an unmarried minor child in the United Kingdom.

The policy in (a) would not be applied in cases where a marriage was contracted after the applicant's arrival in the United Kingdom. In all cases "in the United Kingdom" is to be taken as meaning with leave to enter or remain or on temporary admission to this country as an asylum seeker prior to an initial decision on their application.

Discretion may be exercised according to the merits of the case where:

(d) a married minor was involved but the criteria in (b) or (c) above were otherwise fulfilled. (We would be less likely to consider cases under (c) than (b) under these circumstances).

(e) the applicant was an elderly or otherwise dependent parent;

(f) the family link was not one which would normally be considered but there was clear evidence that the applicant was wholly or mainly dependent on the relative in the United Kingdom and that there was an absence of similar support elsewhere.

I would expect cases falling into this latter category to be rare.

Factors which might influence the exercise of discretion in these cases, such as language, cultural links or the number of family members in the United Kingdom may have a bearing, but there would need to be a compelling combination of such factors to ensure the exercise of discretion in favour of an applicant.

Cases citing family ties which would not normally be considered and which did not display any of the features, which engaged the exercise of discretion, would not normally be considered substantively. This means that a brother, who was not dependent on his sibling(s), would not normally have his case considered here, no matter how strong his cultural or linguistic links with the United Kingdom.

The intention of the policy is to re-unite members of an existing family unit who, through circumstances outside their control, had become fragmented. However, I emphasise that where the relationship did not exist prior to the person's arrival to the United Kingdom, the policy would only be applied in the most exceptionally compelling cases.

I am satisfied that this policy complies with the United Kingdom's obligations as regards the European Convention on Human Rights and that it is consistent with our obligations under the Dublin Convention, as set out in Article 1 of Decision 1–2000 of the Committee set up by Article 18 of the Dublin Convention concerning the transfer of responsibility for family members in accordance with Article 3(4) and Article 9 of the Convention.

Public Protection

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the first multi-agency public protection annual report; and if he will make a statement on the publication of local area reports. [72778]

Hilary Benn: I am today publishing the first Multi-Agency Public Protection Annual Report (MAPPA) annual report, a copy of which is being placed in the Library. Local police and probation areas will from tomorrow begin to publish their own reports, and these will provide the public with information on the number of offenders covered by the arrangements.

The work done in the past year by the Multi Agency Public Protection Panel in managing risk has contributed to a higher level of public protection from potentially dangerous offenders in the community.

Our aim is that the MAPPA process should be transparent and that members of the public should be able to see what is being done on its behalf. That is why the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 requires each area to publish a report detailing the work it has done in the past year. That is also why I announced last month that members of the public were being invited to apply to sit on the boards overseeing these arrangements in five pilot areas.

In seeing the information which these reports now make available for the first time, I hope the public will be reassured by the work being done on their behalf.

Nuclear Installations (Policing)

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the cost of policing nuclear sites from terrorist attacks for the years (a) 1999, (b) 2000, (c) 2001 and (d) 2002. [70891]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority Constabulary's annual reports provide overall outturn for financial years 1999–2000 and 2000–01 which were £20.6 million and £21.2 million respectively. The annual report for 2001–02 has not yet been published. The figures are not broken down since the Constabulary's responsibilities include protecting material and sites from theft and sabotage.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the costs of his proposals to create a civil nuclear constabulary. [70892]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

As affirmed in the White Paper "Managing the Nuclear Legacy" the Government intend to separate the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority Constabulary from the UKAEA and reconstitute it as a stand-alone force, overseen by a statutory Police Authority, in order to make it independent of the nuclear industry and provide improved governance arrangements. The constabulary's role, which has remained broadly unchanged since its inception in 1954, is to protect specified nuclear sites and escort sensitive nuclear material in transit. It is not envisaged that reconstitution will affect its size, role or the locations where it serves.

Estimates of the costs associated with setting up and operating the constabulary as a standalone force are included in the report of the quinquennial review of the UKAEA which was placed in the Libraries of the House in November 2001. The estimated costs comprise (at 2000–01 levels):

Additional running costs—£170,000 per annum.

One-off costs on separation from UKAEA, including new hardware/software for finance/payroll management, legal and financial advice (including setting up a transfer scheme), project management support, transitional recruitment and training costs and rebadging—£1,120,000.

Retail Crime

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 May 2002, Official Report, column 605W, on retail crime, if he will list for each regional crime reduction director the amount spent on business crime reduction in 2001–02. [69807]

Mr. Denham: The following table sets out the amounts spent by regional crime reduction directors on business, (including retail) crime reduction initiatives in 2001–02 and shows these as a proportion of their total spending on crime reduction initiatives. These figures do not include funding spent on non-specific schemes, such as town centre close circuit television, which will usually benefit businesses in the areas where they operate and which will often have been identified as a priority in consultation with the business community.

The Home Office does not record the amounts spent on retail crime partnerships in each of the 376 statutory crime and disorder partnerships.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 May 2002, Official Report, column 605W, to the hon. Member for Brighton, Pavilion (Mr. Lepper), on retail crime, if he will list for each regional crime reduction director the annual budget for crime reduction in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [69808]

Mr. Denham: The information is as follows:

£000

Region	2001–02 (Expenditure)	2002–03 (Budget)
East	13,569	10,472
East Midlands	15,938	13,277
London	31,911	37,863
North East	11,063	10,081

West Midlands	18,297	18,504
Yorkshire and Humberside	19,346	23,593
Total	173,935	190,270

Funding covers measures and interventions under a range of programmes; the Crime Reduction Programme, Safer Communities Initiative, Communities Against Drugs, Partnership Development Fund (interim allocation for 2002–03), Security for Small Retailers in Deprived Areas.

Crime Reduction Directors also work with their Colleagues in the Government Offices for the Regions and the National Assembly for Wales to ensure that crime reduction is reflected in the delivery of other Departments' programmes. Total funds spent on combating crime in the regions go wider than those administered through Regional Crime Directors.

Medical Confidentiality

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what priority is given to protecting medical confidentiality in combating abusive sexual relations. [69758]

Mr. Lammy: I have been asked to reply.

The circumstances in which confidential information about individuals can be disclosed are governed by the common law duty of confidence. This legal obligation in no way constrains health professionals and others who hold confidential information from disclosing such information appropriately where children are at risk.

The Department issued guidance entitled "The Protection and Use of Patient Information" to the national health service in March 1996. This explains that patient information should only be released on a need to know basis if it is required by statute or the courts, is supported by the consent of the individual, or if it is judged that there is a strong public interest justification in disclosure which overrides the duty of confidence to the patient. For example, in circumstances where failure to do so may expose the patient or others to a risk of death or serious harm or the information is needed to prevent serious crime. Disclosure of information in the public interest is a matter of professional judgment and must be decided on a case by case basis by the health professional responsible for the patient's care.

In child protection cases, the overriding principle is to secure the best interests of the child. Therefore, if a health professional has knowledge of abuse or neglect they may disclose relevant information to an appropriate person or authority where disclosure is felt to be in the medical interests of the child patient.

HEALTH

Contraception

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many courses of contraception and contraceptive devices have been prescribed (a) to persons over 16 and (b) to persons of each age group under 16 in each year since 1990. [44285]

Ms Blears: Tables showing first contacts with women at family planning clinics by primary method of birth control are as follows. It should be noted that family planning clinics account for only about one fifth of prescriptions for contraceptives to women of all ages; over two-thirds of contraceptive prescriptions in England are provided by general practitioners.

It should also be noted that these figures count only once those women who have attended family planning clinics more than once in a 12 month period.

NHS Trust Staff

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what positions the (a) Chief Executive and (b) Director of Performance Management at the South Warwickshire General Hospitals NHS Trust, criticised at the time of the publication of the Audit Commission report into inappropriate adjustments of waiting lists, now hold in the NHS; [56925]

(2) what positions the (a) Chief Executive and (b) Deputy Chief Executive at Plymouth Hospitals NHS Trust, criticised at the time of the publication of the Audit Commission report into inappropriate adjustments of waiting lists, now hold in the NHS; [56922]

(3) what positions the (a) Chief Executive and (b) General Manager in Surgery and Specialist Services at Redbridge Health Care NHS Trust, criticised at the time of the publication of the Audit Commission report into inappropriate adjustments of waiting lists, now hold in the NHS; [56923]

(4) what positions the (a) Chief Executive and (b) Assistant Director of Operations (Surgery) at the Stoke Mandeville Hospital NHS Trust criticised at the time of the publication of the Audit Commission report into inappropriate adjustments of waiting lists now hold in the NHS; [56926]

(5) what positions the (a) Admissions Department Manager, (b) two directors of operations and (c) Chief Executive, criticised at the time of the Trust inquiry into waiting list maladministration at the Barts and the London NHS Trust, now hold in the NHS; [56929]

(6) what position the Chief Executive at the Surrey and Sussex Healthcare NHS Trust criticised at the time of publication of the Audit Commission report into inappropriate adjustments of waiting lists now holds in the NHS; [56927]

(7) what positions the (a) Chief Executive and (b) Director of Operations at the Salford Royal Hospitals NHS Trust, criticised at the time of the publication of the Audit Commission report into inappropriate adjustments of waiting lists, now hold in the NHS; [56924]

(8) what positions the (a) Chief Executive and (b) the Chief Operating Officer at Guy's and St. Thomas' NHS Trust, criticised in the Audit Commission report into inappropriate adjustments in waiting lists, now hold in the NHS. [56930]

Mr. Hutton: Part 2 paragraph 12 of the Open Government Code of Practice prohibits the disclosure of personal information about any person which would constitute or could facilitate an unwarranted invasion of privacy.

Of the 17 postholders referred to in the hon. Member's parliamentary questions:

three are working in national health service trusts

two are working in primary care trusts

four are working in health authorities and the remainder are not known to be working in the NHS.

Regional Organisations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which of the agencies and NDPBs sponsored by his Department have a regional organisation; and if he will list the counties and unitary authorities in each region in (a) 1997 and (b) 2002. [58943]

Mr. Lammy: The information is provided in the table which is in the Library. Of the Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies, only the National Health Service Estates Agency had a regional structure in 1997. Currently only the National Care Standards Commission, which was established in 2002, has a regional structure.

Hospital Discharges

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 24 June 2002, Official Report, column 740W, on hospital discharges, (1) where and when the target for a reduction in the number of people experiencing delayed discharge by 20 per cent. between March 2002 and March 2003 was published; [65186]

(2) what his target is for the reduction in the number of bed days lost through people experiencing delayed discharge from hospital. [65185]

Jacqui Smith: The 20 per cent. target figure was published in the Department's "Priorities and Planning Framework 2002–03" in December 2001, which is available on the Department's website. There is no target for bed days lost. We expect that there will be an increase in the number of available bed days as a consequence of the reduction in numbers of patients delayed, in line with that seen over the last two quarters of 2001–02.

Carers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when his Department last reviewed guidance on hospital discharge with respect to carers' needs; and what arrangements are in place to monitor compliance with the guidance; [65104]

(2) if he will undertake an evaluation of the appropriateness of support offered to carers as part of strategies to reduce the number of delayed discharges from hospital. [65103]

Jacqui Smith: Carer support and strength of caring arrangements are two of the areas assessed when putting together a care plan for the patient leaving hospital. The written care plan which the patient is given includes the support carers are willing and able to offer.

The Hospital Discharge Workbook, issued in 1994, gives guidance to the national health service, social services and other agencies on hospital discharge procedures. The Workbook emphasises that the patient and carer should be made fully aware of arrangements for discharge and understand fully what is going to happen. The chief executive of the hospital trust is responsible for ensuring that discharges take place appropriately. We are revising the workbook and will incorporate the needs of carers.

Psycho-surgery

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has undertaken into psycho-surgery in the last five years. [67610]

Jacqui Smith: The main Government agency for research into the causes of and treatments for disease is the Medical Research Council (MRC), which is funded via the Department of Trade and Industry. The MRC has not supported any research in this area in the last five years. The MRC always welcomes high quality applications for support into any aspect of human health and these are judged in open competition with other demands on funding. Awards are made according to their scientific quality and importance to human health.

The Department directly funds research into policy and the delivery of effective practice in health and social care, and provides national health service support funding for research commissioned by the research councils and charities in the NHS. The Department has not supported any work in this area in the last five years.

Management of much of the research supported by NHS research and development funding is devolved and expenditure at project level is not held centrally by the Department. Details of research projects funded by, or of interest to, the national health service are available on the National Research Register at www.doh.gov.uk/research/nrr.htm

Consultant Psychiatrists

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the vacancy rate was for consultant psychiatrists in (a) England and (b) each region in each of the last six years. [67710]

Mr. Hutton: The number of consultants in post in the psychiatry group has increased from 2,808 in September 1999 to 3,030 in March 2002. This is an increase of 8 per cent.

The national health service vacancy survey has only been conducted in March each year since 1999. The survey collects information on the number of posts which trusts are actively trying to fill which have been vacant for three months or more.

There are six specialities within the psychiatry group. In 2001, the vacancy survey focused on specialties that were considered particularly problematic. For this reason, only four of the six specialties were collected.

Increased vacancies are to be expected at a time when we are trying to dramatically increase the size of the workforce. New investment enables NHS trusts to create new posts; however, there can be a delay in providing sufficient staff for all the posts.

Available information is shown in the tables.

Overseas Treatment

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases have been referred from the health authorities in Kent for operations abroad in the last 12 months; and of those completed (a) what proportion showed serious post-operative complications and (b) what the cost was in each case. [68859]

Mr. Hutton: Earlier this year East Kent Health Authority referred 96 patients to La Louvière Polyclinique in Lille as part of the pilot scheme to refer national health service patients overseas for routine elective surgery.

Information about post-operative complication rates arising after surgery is not collected centrally from the NHS. NHS organisations may collect and analyse this kind of information, among other indicators of quality, as part of their local clinical governance arrangements designed to assure and continuously improve the quality of care for all NHS patients. The NHS is responsible for ensuring that NHS patients receive high clinical standards of care wherever they are treated.

As is standard practice with contracts between the NHS and independent health care providers, the prices for particular procedures are confidential. The total cost of treatment and travel for the East Kent patients treated during the pilot was approximately £576,000.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the total cost to date has been of treating NHS patients abroad under contract; [68036]

(2) what assessment he has made of the complication rates arising from (a) treatment carried out abroad under the NHS and (b) NHS treatment in the UK since NHS treatment abroad began. [68035]

Mr. Hutton: The total cost of treatment and travel for the patients treated between January and April 2002 during the pilot scheme in south east England to refer national health service patients overseas for routine elective surgery was approximately £1.1 million.

Information about "complication rates" arising after surgery is not collected centrally from the NHS. NHS organisations may collect and analyse this kind of information, among other indicators of quality, as part of their local clinical governance arrangements designed to assure and continuously improve the quality of care for all NHS patients. The NHS is responsible for ensuring that NHS patients receive high clinical standards of care wherever they are treated.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with the Health Ministers of the devolved Administrations on the use of PFI and PPP in the health service. [68073]

Mr. Hutton: No discussions have been held with Health Ministers of the devolved Administrations on the use of private finance initiative and public private partnership in the health service.

Care Homes

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many elderly care homes were (a) publicly and (b) privately funded in the last five years, broken down by region. [68526]

Jacqui Smith: Local authority staffed care homes are entirely funded by local authority social services while independent care homes are partially funded by social services through fees towards supported residents. Table 1 shows the number of residential local authority staffed homes and Table 2 the number of independent residential and nursing care homes for older people by national health service region from 1997 to 2001 at 31 March each year.

London Health Authorities

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much was allocated to assist the provision of community mental health services by London health authorities in (a) 2000, (b) 2001 and (c) 2002; [69961]

(2) how much was allocated to London health authorities to assist the provision of interpreting and translation services in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001; [69960]

(3) how much was allocated to assist the provision of services for rough sleepers by the London health authorities in (a) 2000, (b) 2001 and (c) 2002. [69962]

Mr. Hutton: The national weighted capitation formula, which sets target fair shares for health authorities, includes adjustments for rough sleepers, interpreting and translation services and community mental health services.

However, no specific sums are identified separately in allocations.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) under what circumstances the moment (a) when an employee is confirmed in post, (b) when a provisional offer of a job is given and (c) any offer of employment is given will be the trigger for a registered person to seek a Criminal Records Bureau disclosure; and if he will make a statement. [70313]

(2) how often registered persons will be required to review Criminal Records Bureau disclosures in respect of employees and other affected persons in connection with the Care Home Regulations; and if he will make a statement; [70320]

(3) what investigations his Department made regarding the capacity of the Criminal Records Bureau to process requests for disclosure before he made his regulations for care home standards. [70312]

Jacqui Smith: The Care Homes Regulations require Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) checks to be satisfactorily completed before a person can be permanently employed in a care home. The national care standards commission will need to satisfy itself that appropriate checks have been completed, in order to protect the care home's residents. Subject to this, it is for individual care home owners to decide when to apply for criminal record checks in respect of any person they plan to employ.

There is no statutory requirement to review CRB checks once obtained. However, under the previous regulatory arrangements it was standard practice for further police checks to be undertaken after a three year period in respect of owners, managers and staff in children's homes.

While drafting the Care Homes Regulations 2001, the department kept in contact with the Home Office about the establishment of the CRB. The department was satisfied that the CRB would be able to meet the demands for disclosures. The CRB has experienced early operating difficulties which have lead to delays in responding to applications for Disclosure, measures are being taken to overcome these. We are determined that the CRB will be in a position as soon as possible to meet the high standards of service that it has made clear it will deliver to its customers. The short-term implications for particular service areas using the CRB service are being closely monitored.

Recruitment

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who has responsibility for (a) co-ordinating the international recruitment efforts throughout England's eight regions, (b) ensuring consistent standards and cost-effective best practice in employment, (c) developing agreements between Governments, (d) ensuring international co-operation and the recruitment and exchange of health care professionals and (e) ensuring that developing countries are protected from targeted recruitment. [71505]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service employment branch of the human resources directorate at the department has responsibility for the policies on international recruitment, including issuing guidance to the NHS and establishing government to government agreements.

Workforce development confederations work with the NHS to ensure that recruitment is carried out in line with the Code of Practice for international recruitment and in a cost effective manner.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to his answer of 4 February 2002, Official Report, column 781W, on international recruitment, how many international nurse recruitment agencies (a) have failed to adhere to the code of practice and (b) NHS organisations have been instructed not to deal with; [71573]

(2) when the final list of nursing agencies which comply to the code of practice on ethical nursing recruitment will be posted on his website. [71506]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has written to 45 agencies inviting them to provide references from national health service employers to confirm that they are complying to the principles of the Code of Practice.

The list of agencies who have submitted references will be placed on the website on 1 August.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many international recruitment co-ordinators there are in each NHS region; and what their budget is for (a) 2000–01, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04. [71507]

Mr. Hutton: Work force development confederations employ individuals to lead on international recruitment. Some work force development confederations have pooled resources to appoint co-ordinators across boundaries. The table shows the number of co-ordinators in each directorate of health and social care.

	Number of co-ordinators
South	6
Midlands and Eastern	5
North	5
London	3

The first regional international recruitment co-ordinators took up post late in 2000–01. £6 million was available to them for recruitment, retention and return. In 2002–03, £1 million to date has been devolved to the national health service for international recruitment. Funding for 2003–04 has yet to be agreed.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the performance of the Director for International Recruitment in 2001–02. [71574]

Mr. Hutton: In accordance with the human resources policy of the Department, all staff working for the Department are appraised but the content and outcomes of the appraisal are confidential.

NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency

Mr. Tony Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency will publish their annual report and accounts. [72227]

Mr. Lammy: The NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency's annual report and accounts has been published today and copies have been placed in the Library.

Mental Health

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those mental health trusts which have (a) expanded and (b) reduced the numbers of physiotherapists in the last 12 months. [70389]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the number of physiotherapists employed by the national health service is collected by the Department's non-medical work force census.

In 2001, 14 new mental health trusts were established. These new trusts are the result of restructuring parts of 30 other organisations where mental health services were provided in 2000. In some cases, the organisation that existed in 2000 has gone, split partly into a new mental health trust and partly into another acute trust. In other cases, the 2000 organisation still exists, but without its mental health services division.

As a result of these changes, it is not possible to compare the latest available figures with those from previous reporting years.

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding the role of physiotherapy in the treatment and rehabilitation of mental health patients; and if he will make a statement. [70394]

Jacqui Smith: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received six parliamentary questions from the hon. Member and one letter from Catherine Pope, chair of the Society of Chartered Physiotherapists. I can confirm that the national service framework for mental health emphasises the importance of a multi-disciplinary approach to care and treatment, and that there is good evidence that regular physical activity reduces the risk of depression and has positive benefits for mental health. This is important for people with severe mental illness who may be at particular risk of physical ill health. However, decisions about the configuration of services are a local matter, in the context of national guidance, following "Shifting the Balance of Power".

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many physiotherapists are employed in mental health trusts in each strategic health authority. [70395]

Mr. Hutton: The table shows the number of physiotherapists employed in mental health trusts listed by strategic health authority. It should be noted that physiotherapists are also employed in mental health units of other national health service trusts.

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions the Mental Health Care Group Workforce team has had regarding the role of physiotherapy in the treatment of mental health patients and disseminating best practice. [70391]

Jacqui Smith: The mental health care group workforce team is looking at issues relating to the patient pathway through mental health services. As yet, no specific discussions have been held concerning the role of physiotherapists. However, issues relating to specific staff groups will be addressed in due course.

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the planned closure of the specialist mental health physiotherapy team at Oxleas NHS Trust accords with the Government's national health service framework for mental health. [70387]

Jacqui Smith: Decisions about the configuration of services to meet the needs of people with mental health problems are a local matter, in the context of national guidance. The national service framework (NSF) for mental health emphasises the importance of a multi-disciplinary approach to care and treatment. It also emphasises the importance of attention to physical health and the value of exercise. However, the NSF is not prescriptive about the numbers of different professionals needed. Instead, it emphasises the outcomes to be achieved, and the importance of evidence-based practise. I understand that services are being planned in order to ensure that mental health service users who require physiotherapy continue to receive this both now and in the future.

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the evidence base for the value of physiotherapy in the treatment of mental health patients. [70392]

Jacqui Smith: Physiotherapists are experts in movement and mobility. They are trained to use their skills to promote good health, prevent disability and treat people who may have any of a wide range of health problems, including mental health. In order to use and apply the physiotherapeutic skill base with mental health patients, it is necessary for professionals to have a good understanding of mental illness and the health effects from mental illness, in this case particularly physical presentations as part of their condition.

The physical needs of people with mental health problems are recognised in the mental health national service framework (NSF). Following publication of the NSF in 1999, the Chartered Society of Physiotherapy commissioned an evidence-based bulletin of the role of physiotherapy in mental health.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether PFI contracts for mental health service schemes valued over £1 million have been signed since 13 February. [68060]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 9 July 2002]: Cornwall Health National Health Service Trust reached financial close on 30 April 2002 for a mental health facility.

Gulf War Syndrome

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients claim to have Gulf War Syndrome; and what funds are available in 2002–03 for research into its cause and cure. [67805]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 16 July 2002]: I have been asked to reply.

The Ministry of Defence does not recognise "Gulf War Syndrome" as a medical condition. It accepts that some veterans of the 1990–91 Gulf Conflict have become ill and that many believe this ill health is unusual and related to their Gulf experience. A large number of multi-system, multi-organ, non-specific, medically unexplained symptoms have been reported by some Gulf veterans as well as recognised medical conditions. The overwhelming consensus of the scientific and medical community is that there is insufficient evidence to enable this ill-health to be characterised as a unique illness, condition or 'syndrome'.

Nevertheless, a paper published in the British Medical Journal dated 1 September 2001 entitled: "Prevalence of Gulf war veterans who believe they have Gulf war syndrome: questionnaire study" suggested that approximately 17 per cent. (9,000) of United Kingdom Gulf veterans believed they have "Gulf War Syndrome".

During financial year 2002–03, the MOD expects to spend approximately £1 million (including VAT) on Gulf veterans' illnesses research projects. This figure does not include current and planned MOD research into DU munitions.

Correspondence

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the correspondence from the right hon. Member for Berwick upon Tweed dated 11 February and 18 April, with regard to the implications of the Data Protection Act 1998 for hospital chaplaincy work. [65094]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 3 July 2002]: A reply was sent on 19 July.

Sausage Casings

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Food Standards Agency complied with its obligation to consult those directly affected in the case of its proposed ban on sheep intestine on its decision. [68500]

Ms Blears [holding answer 9 July 2002]: As no new legislation was being put forward the Food Standards Agency were under no statutory obligation to consult interested parties on the recommendations of the core stakeholder group. The agency did, however, consult over 1,000 interested parties in May of this year. The consultation gave the opportunity for a wide range of interested parties to comment on what was, in effect, a report considering the agency's possible policy options.

As it is the agency's stated aim to conduct its business in an open and transparent way it decided to obtain the views of those most likely to be directly affected at the earliest opportunity, even though they were not proposing new legislation.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

India

14. Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the High Commissioner for India to discuss the security situation there. [69590]

Mr. Straw: I last met the High Commissioner on 30 June.

I visited India and Pakistan on 18–20 July. After my meetings I said that we welcomed the steps taken by Pakistan to stop cross-border infiltration and Indian de-escalatory measures, but we remained deeply concerned about the military mobilisation on both sides of the border. I stressed the need for a permanent end to cross-border infiltration and the importance of the forthcoming Jammu & Kashmir elections being free, fair and inclusive. We will continue to work with our international partners to encourage India and Pakistan to find ways to return to productive dialogue on all the outstanding issues between them, including Kashmir.

The House should also know that I published revised travel advice yesterday which, because of the reduced tension between India and Pakistan, no longer advises British citizens to avoid travelling to India or those already in India to consider leaving. I have modified the travel advice for Pakistan, but this has to take account of the continuing internal terrorist threat.

Middle East

19. Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role the Government are playing in securing peace in the middle east. [69595]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Her Majesty's Government remains closely engaged in efforts to end the violence and resume a political process leading to a final settlement. We are supervising the detention of six Palestinian detainees in Jericho, and stand ready to assist with Palestinian reform in whatever way we can. I discussed the issue with Palestinian and Israeli leaders when I visited the region between 1 and 3 July.

25. Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of the present situation in the middle east peace process. [69601]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government are committed to a negotiated and comprehensive settlement between Israel and her Arab neighbours along the lines set out in the declaration made by European leaders at Seville on 21 June. We welcome the Statement of the Quartet (US, EU, UN and Russia), which reaffirmed the goal of a final Israeli-Palestinian settlement within three years. It stated that progress in the political, security, economic, humanitarian, and institution-building fields must proceed together. All parties have a role to play. The Palestinians must conduct security, political and economic reform, with an action plan agreed by the Quartet leading to a Palestinian state committed to combating terror. Israel must take immediate and concrete steps to support the emergence of a viable Palestinian state, including easing restrictions, releasing tax revenues, and freezing settlement activity consistent with the Mitchell Committee's recommendations. The UK will continue to offer political and practical assistance wherever possible.

28. Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he is undertaking with Arab Governments to secure their help in the middle east peace process. [69606]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We welcomed the Arab peace initiative, adopted by Arab states in Beirut on 28 March. We welcome the role played by key Arab states in supporting the Quartet's Action Plan for Reform of the Palestinian Authority and Resumption of a Political Process. We regularly discuss the way forward with Arab leaders. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister recently met President Mubarak, King Abdullah, Prime Minister Hariri and Foreign Minister Maher. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is also in frequent contact with Arab leaders. We met Palestinian Minister for Planning and International Cooperation, Nabil Sha'ath, on 25 June. I met President Arafat and other Palestinian leaders when I visited the Palestinian Authority between 2 and 3 July.

35. Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role the Government are playing in securing peace in the middle east. [69613]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Her Majesty's Government remain closely engaged in efforts to end the violence and resume a political process leading to a final settlement. We are supervising the detention of six Palestinian detainees in Jericho, and stand ready to assist with Palestinian reform in whatever way we can. I discussed the issue with Palestinian and Israeli leaders when I visited the region between 1 and 3 July.

EU Enlargement

20. Joyce Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his EU counterparts on progress being made towards the enlargement of the EU. [69596]

Peter Hain: The Foreign Secretary and I have had regular discussions with all our EU counterparts to keep progress on enlargement on track.

EU Overseas Aid

21. Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his EU counterparts about the policy underlying the distribution of the EU overseas aid package. [69597]

Peter Hain: EU Foreign Ministers discussed the overseas aid package at the General Affairs Council on 18 February. We agreed on the need to make the EU's external actions, including its aid programmes, more targeted, effective and responsive.

UN Peacekeeping Operations

22. Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future of United Nations peacekeeping operations. [69598]

Mr. MacShane: The UN's involvement in peacekeeping and crisis management continues to be significant. There are 15 peacekeeping operations world wide, involving 45,145 troops, military observers and civilian police from 83 countries. Many of these operations are now in support of solutions to complex intra-state conflicts and tensions; many involve countries close to, or at risk of, collapse.

EU Presidency

23. James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Greek Government about their priorities for the EU presidency. [69599]

Peter Hain: We are in regular touch with our Greek partners. I am visiting Athens tomorrow. Their presidency priorities include enlargement, immigration, and economic reform.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Greek Government about their forthcoming EU presidency and EU enlargement. [69577]

Peter Hain: We are in regular touch with our Greek partners. I am visiting Athens tomorrow. Their presidency priorities include enlargement, immigration and economic reform.

Missile Defence

24. Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the US administration regarding UK participation in the US missile defence programme. [69600]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK and the US administration have discussed over time issues relating to missile defence.

These include the threats posed by the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles, and the role that missile defence could play in countering these threats. However, it remains the case that the US has not yet decided how it wishes to proceed with missile defence and has made no request for the use of facilities in the UK.

Chechnya

26. Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussion he has had with the Russian Government on Chechnya. [69603]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary last raised the situation in Chechnya in June, when he discussed the human rights situation in the republic with the Russian Foreign Minister.

Zimbabwe

27. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the economic situation in Zimbabwe. [69604]

Mr. MacShane: What is happening in Zimbabwe is a man-made tragedy. The country is running out of food and its economy is imploding. Ultimately, Zimbabwe's only way back to sustainable development is through respect for the rule of law, a return to democratic principles and sensible economic policies.

European Union (Aspirant Countries)

29. Mr. Mike Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with leaders of countries seeking to join the EU; and if he will make a statement. [69607]

Peter Hain: The Foreign Secretary and I have had regular discussions with all our EU counterparts to keep progress on enlargement on track.

Sudan

30. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what areas of the Sudan are out-of-bounds to humanitarian organisations; and if he will make a statement. [69608]

Mr. MacShane: Humanitarian access is difficult to many areas of Sudan where conflict exists. The Government of Sudan and the SPLM have committed themselves to facilitating humanitarian access to all regions of Sudan and there is no formal ban on access to any area.

International Criminal Court

31. John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he is having with his counterparts in the USA about the International Criminal Court. [69609]

Mr. MacShane: We are in regular contact with the US Administration in respect of this issue. Officials have made several approaches, both bilaterally and in conjunction with EU partners, encouraging the US to ratify the Rome Statute. And we have repeatedly made clear that, while we understand US concerns that the Court might bring malicious or politically-motivated charges against US personnel, we do not share them. The Statute of the Court contains safeguards against this. Most recently, and in connection with the renewal of the UN Security Council mandate in respect of peacekeepers in Bosnia (UNMIBH), my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has had a number of conversations with his US counterpart. The outcome was Resolution 1422, unanimously adopted on 12 July 2002, which respects the Statute of the Court and allows the US to continue to participate in UN peacekeeping operations.

Gibraltar

32. Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will cease further talks with Spain about the future of Gibraltar. [69610]

Peter Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made in the House by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 12 July 2002, Official Report, column 1165.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what way the infrastructure of Gibraltar would improve under the proposed sharing of sovereignty of Gibraltar between Britain and Spain. [71166]

Peter Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made in the House by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 12 July 2002, Official Report, column 1166.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what conditions were set by the Government of Gibraltar in order for the Chief Minister of Gibraltar to participate in the talks. [71164]

Peter Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Coventry, South (Mr. Cunningham) on 27 February 2002, Official Report, column 1307W.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people in Gibraltar have indicated to him they would wish to take Spanish nationality. [71596]

Peter Hain: As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary said in the House on 12 July 2002, Official Report, column 1166, we are in broad agreement with Spain on many of the principles that should underpin a lasting settlement to the Gibraltar dispute, including that Gibraltarians should retain the right to British nationality and gain in addition the right to Spanish nationality as well if they so choose.

Organisation of African Unity

33. Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent talks between Rwanda and the Democratic Republic of Congo at the OAU summit in South Africa. [69611]

Mr. MacShane: The conflict in the Great Lakes region must be resolved through negotiations between the parties. We therefore welcome the recent talks in Durban between the Presidents of Rwanda and the DRC. We are encouraged by the decision to hold follow-up talks between senior officials on 18 July in South Africa. We welcome the role that the Government of South Africa, and in particular, President Mbeki, continue to play in trying to help resolve this long-standing conflict.

Cyprus

34. Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of Cyprus towards accession to the European Union. [69612]

Peter Hain: Cyprus has made good progress in its EU accession negotiations, having opened 30 of the 31 negotiating chapters and provisionally closed 28. At Seville, the European Council set out its intention of concluding negotiations with Cyprus along with nine other countries by the end of this year, provided progress is maintained, and also reiterated that the Helsinki conclusions formed the basis of the EU's position in respect of the accession of Cyprus.

Developing Countries

36. Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the European Union's role with respect to supporting trade with, and increasing aid to, developing countries. [69614]

Peter Hain: We continue to push hard for an EU market more open to developing countries, especially the poorest, and for EU member states to join us in hugely increasing their aid budgets.

Official Photographers

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions during the last 12 months an official photographer has accompanied (a) him and (b) other Ministers in his Department on official visits (i) overseas and (ii) within the UK; what (A) travel expenses, (B) costs of equipment and processing, (C) staff payment and (D) other costs were incurred on each occasion; what publications official photographs have appeared in during the last 12 months and what terms and conditions were attached to the publication of such photographs; and whether photographs taken on official visits are available for use in non-governmental literature. [62832]

Mr. MacShane: The FCO does not employ an official photographer. However, photographs, from a variety of sources, including those taken by Ministers and members of staff of the FCO's work are posted on the FCO website or are used in publications.

Asylum Seekers

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many asylum seekers have entered a United Kingdom overseas mission in China in each year since 1997; what their nationality was; how many were granted asylum; and if he will make a statement. [62909]

Mr. MacShane: We have not received any applications for asylum in any of our missions in China since 1997.

Open Source Software

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is towards using open source software; and what percentage is used in his Department. [69317]

Mr. MacShane: The FCO awards software contracts on a value for money basis and is prepared to consider open source software solutions alongside proprietary ones in IT procurements. We have no figures available on FCO usage of open source software.

The FCO's use of OSS will follow the Government policy once it is published this summer. The draft policy can be viewed at: http://www.govtalk.gov.uk/rfc/rfc_document.asp?docnum=429.

Consultation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the public consultations undertaken by his Department since 1997, indicating for each consultation (a) if copies were available online, (b) if copies were available in print, (c) the date the time period given for responses opened and (d) the date the time period given for responses closed. [69806]

Mr. MacShane: A list of consultations undertaken by the FCO since 1997 is as follows:

Panel 2000 (future role of the FCO)

(a) yes

(b) yes

(c) 10 September 1998

(d) 15 November 1998

(d) 12 August 2002

Strengthening the biological and toxin weapons convention

(a) yes

(b) yes

(c) 29 April 2002

(d) 13 September 2002.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how long his Department allowed for consultation of each consultation document it published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form; [70453]

(2) whether consultation documents published by his Department in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations; [70454]

(3) in what format his Department has published the results of its 2001 written consultations; [70455]

(4) how many consultation documents published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form his Department has monitored and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations; [70456]

(5) how many complaints his Department has received about its 2001 consultations in (a) electronic and (b) printed form; [70457]

(6) which consultation documents published by his Department in 2001 were not made available as paper copies. [70458]

Mr. MacShane: The FCO produced no consultation documents in 2001.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department has a designated consultation co-ordinator in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70459]

Mr. MacShane: Yes.

Sierra Leone

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the potential for the continued fighting in Liberia to threaten the stability of Sierra Leone. [70878]

Mr. MacShane: UNAMSIL and the Government of Sierra Leone have taken measures to minimise the impact of the conflict in Liberia on the emerging peace in Sierra Leone. The UK supports regional and international efforts to bring the conflict in Liberia to an end to halt the worsening humanitarian situation in the sub-region. A considerable number of innocent civilians have been displaced in Liberia, and others have sought refuge in Sierra Leone. We continue to monitor the situation closely.

Macedonia

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 10 July, Official Report, column 1017W, what conditions in Macedonia have to be met. [71131]

Mr. MacShane: With regard to the UK ratification of the SAA, we have made it clear to the Macedonian Government that we expect to see the continuing implementation of the August 13 agreement, including free and democratic parliamentary elections, rights for all ethnic groups and rule of law.

Nepal

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether military assistance to be provided to Nepal by the UK will include training and capacity building initiatives for its security forces. [71353]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Nepali government has our full support, and we are committed to providing continuity development, political and miliary assistance to help them overcome this crisis.

We intend to implement a number of training programmes designed specifically for the Nepalese security forces. The Nepalese police will receive assistance to help them modernise and enhance their professionalism. We intend to do this through UK and local technical assistance and aim to help local communities by increasing their access to open and accountable policing.

We will also provide training for the Royal Nepalese Army in peace support operations and human rights awareness programmes. This should increase the protection of human rights by way of improved awareness of humanitarian laws and the better reporting of human rights violations.

Catherine Meyer Case

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Lord Chancellor concerning the Catherine Meyer case. [71591]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Lord Chancellor's Department is the lead Department on Hague Convention cases. In 1995 Lady Meyer ceased to pursue court proceeding under the Hague Convention for the return of her children. At that point the Lord Chancellor's Department ceased to be involved in her case. However, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Lord Chancellor's Department have offered a joint meeting to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Keith Vaz) to discuss Lady Meyer's case and the operation of the Hague Convention.

Entry Clearance

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will meet hon. Members to discuss entry clearance issues relating to his travel advice before 24 July. [71590]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I shall be meeting hon. Members on Wednesday 24 July from 3.30 pm to 4.30 pm in Committee Room 18.

Iraq

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether sanctions on Iraq cover fibre optic cables. [71751]

Mr. MacShane: Yes. The Goods Review List (GRL) introduced by UN Security Council resolution 1409 (2002) lists all dual-use and military goods whose export to Iraq under the UN Oil for Food programme is subject to review by the UN Sanctions Committee. The list, which is publicly accessible on the UN website at www.un.org/Departments/oip/index.html, includes fibre optic cables. All other exports under the Oil for Food programme not included on the GRL are approved automatically by the UN Secretariat.

Information Campaigns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department spent on information literature, advertising and campaign material in financial year 2001–02; if he will list the campaigns that spent over £250,000; and if he will make a statement. [70206]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 22 July 2002]: In financial year 2001–02 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office spent £1,448,314 on information literature and £6,434 on advertising. The figure for information literature includes expenditure on consular publicity campaigns, such as "Know Before You Go", which is run jointly with the travel industry to help ensure that travellers are well prepared for conditions abroad. Expenditure on advertising for recruitment is excluded, as identifying this expenditure would entail disproportionate effort and cost.

British Council (Indemnity Undertakings)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many indemnity undertakings were given by his Department in respect of loss or damage to works of art loaned to the British Council for exhibition overseas for the 12-month period ended March 2002; and what the value was of contingent liabilities in respect of such undertakings which remained outstanding at that date. [72877]

Mr. MacShane: The British Council, although not a Government Department, receives a substantial grant-in-aid from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The Council regularly organises or sponsors exhibitions overseas of works of art loaned from national galleries and private collections in the United Kingdom. It provides certain assurances or guarantees in respect of loss or damage while these works are on loan.

In the 12-month period ended 31 March 2002 the British Council provided such assurances to four national lenders and undertakings to 193 private lenders. The value of the contingent liabilities that remained outstanding as at 31 March 2002 in respect of private lenders was £4,358,822. No contingent liabilities remained outstanding at this date in respect of national lenders.

Sino-British Declaration

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will publish the next report to Parliament on Hong Kong and the Sino-British Joint Declaration. [72878]

Mr. MacShane: The eleventh report in this series, covering the period January-June 2002, was published today and copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House. A copy of the report is also available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website, www.fco.gov.uk. The report includes a foreword by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary. I commend the report to the House.

Westminster Foundation for Democracy

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the annual report of the Westminster Foundation for Democracy will be available. [72879]

Peter Hain: I have arranged for copies of the Westminster Foundation for Democracy's annual report to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The Foundation has continued its crucial work in building and developing democracy overseas during the last 12 months. The Foundation received a grant-in-aid of £4.156 million from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and further £390,056 of funds earmarked for specific purposes. In addition it received funds from the European Union, the United Nations Development Programme and the Department for International Development.

Most of the Foundation's activities were in its priority areas of central and eastern Europe, the former Soviet Union and Anglophone Africa. The Foundation initiated an important technical assistance programme in Sierra Leone, promoting the development of political parties in the principles of peaceful and responsible conduct in political life. The significant contribution that the Foundation has made to the development of democracy in the Balkans was strongly endorsed by an independent evaluation of its Bosnia programme.

Cayman Islands (Human Rights)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the compatibility of legislation passed in the Cayman Islands with the UK Human Rights Act 1998 and with the European convention on human rights 1972; and what decisions he has made as to whether such legislation is ultra vires with Orders in Council made by the Secretary of State under UK Acts of Parliament. [72161]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Cayman Islands' legislation is scrutinised by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to ensure its constitutionality and its compatibility with the Islands' obligations arising under the European convention on human rights and other international agreements. The UK Human Rights Act 1998 does not extend to the Cayman Islands and is therefore not directly considered.

No Cayman Islands' legislation has been disallowed in recent years because it was found to be ultra vires with an Order in Council made under a UK Act of Parliament.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what independent reviews of human rights issues obtained in the Cayman Islands have been commissioned by his Department; and if he will place a copy of the reports on such reviews in the Library. [72160]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: An independent review of human rights in the Cayman Islands has been commissioned and is being undertaken by a UK consultancy. Once the report is available and has been released in the Caymans, a copy will be placed in the Library.

Diplomatic Service

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many new entrants to the diplomatic service in 2001 were (a) educated at independent school, (b) educated at public school, (c) educated at state school and (d) describe themselves as disabled; and for each category, whether they were (i) policy entrants or (ii) operational entrants. [72052]

Mr. Mike O'Brien:

(a) and (b) are counted together as the Foreign and Commonwealth Office only differentiates between independent and state schools. 28 new entrants were educated at independent schools. 14 were policy and 14 were operational entrants.

(c) 48 new entrants were educated at state schools. 16 were policy and 32 were operational entrants.

(d) Two new entrants described themselves as having a disability. One policy and one operational entrant.

These figures are published in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's 2002 departmental report.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many ambassadors and high commissioners are (a) from an ethnic minority background and (b) describe themselves as disabled. [72051]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As at 1 July 2002 there were three members of the Senior Management Structure (SMS) who had declared themselves to be from an ethnic minority background. None of them is currently serving as either an ambassador or as a high commissioner.

Seven members of the SMS had declared themselves to have a disability. Two of these are currently serving as either an ambassador or a high commissioner.

Departmental Report

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost was of publishing his Department's annual report for each of the past five years. [70478]

Mr. MacShane: The table shows the costs incurred by the FCO in publishing our annual departmental report; the figures do not include staff time which could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The table reflects only those costs that fall directly to the FCO, any other printing and publication costs are met directly by the publisher, The Stationery Office Ltd. (TSO), and do not fall to Government.

PRIME MINISTER

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Prime Minister how many complaints have been made by civil servants to the (a) Secretary of the Cabinet and (b) First Civil Service Commissioner regarding the actions of departmental special advisers since May 1997. [71721]

The Prime Minister: None.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Prime Minister if he will instruct the Chancellor of the Exchequer to reply to the letter to him dated 23 May from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. J. Greenhalgh. [72137]

The Prime Minister: I understand that my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary has replied to the right hon. Member's letter.

Renewable Energy

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals in support of increasing the use of renewable energy he intends to present to the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg; and what recent representations he has received in support of renewable energy. [72297]

The Prime Minister: The UK supports agreement at the World Summit on Sustainable Development on a range of measures to support the increased use of renewable energy, including removing harmful subsidies for the use of fossil fuels, setting a global target for the use of renewable energy, and enhanced international co-operation on research and development and market reform. The Government are investing over £260 million in the development of renewable power over three years, in addition to the work of the Carbon Trust and others active in this field. As a result of the spending review the DTI will be announcing further investment in renewable technologies.

I have received over 400 campaign cards from members of the public supporting a campaign by Greenpeace and the Body Shop to provide renewable energy to the two billion people currently without access to energy.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Open Source Software

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her policy is towards using open source software; and what percentage is used in her Department. [69304]

Clare Short: Use of open source software within DFID is currently under review. At present no open source software is in operational use.

CPI Consultancies

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will provide a breakdown of her Department's expenditure since 1998–99 on CPI consultancies referred to on page 105 of the 2002 departmental report. [67513]

Clare Short: This expenditure was incurred on price investigations for contracts funded by DFID, primarily arising out of continuing commitments under the aid and trade provision. A breakdown of these figures could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much funding her Department has given for HIV/AIDS projects in each country in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [67867]

Clare Short: The information requested is set out in the table. Please note these figures do not include expenditure on regional programmes or non-region specific work on programmes and research from the UK.

[1] Provisional

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what impact assessments have been made of the projects funded by her Department which seek to tackle the spread of HIV/AIDS in developing countries. [68323]

Clare Short: My Department's bilateral programmes are routinely monitored and evaluated as a matter of course. Impact assessments have been conducted on a range of our HIV/AIDS-related work, including condom social marketing programmes, palliative care for people living with HIV/AIDS, and support for adolescent sexual and reproductive health education.

Yugoslavia

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made in de-mining in the former Yugoslavia. [68223]

Clare Short: It has proved difficult to obtain the full details requested from all parts of the FRY. I will write with the details and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Education for All

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the UK Government have taken in support of the World Bank's Action Plan to Accelerate Progress Towards Education for All; what input the UK delegation had in the discussions on the Education for All initiative at the recent G8 summit in Kananaskis; and how much financial assistance the UK Government plan to provide to the World bank's proposed fast-tracked countries within the Education for All initiative. [68121]

Clare Short: The Government are strongly committed to the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) on education and are working to mobilise the international community in support of them. The World Bank has a critical role in supporting countries as they seek to give priority to education, and primary education in particular, within the overall context of their poverty reduction strategies. We have been working with the bank to develop its new Action Plan for Accelerating Progress Towards Education for All.

We believe the World Bank action plan's fast-track initiative provides an opportunity to try to ensure that no country genuinely committed to economic development, poverty reduction and good governance is denied the chance to achieve universal primary education through lack of resources. The Government were successful in calling for the fast-track initiative to include Nigeria and Ethiopia, where over 14 million children are out of school. If offers 18 poor countries the chance to qualify for additional financing for primary education if they can demonstrate that their Government is fully committed and has effective policies in place. A further five countries can apply for assistance in building capacity, filling gaps in data and developing effective policies for primary education.

At the Kananaskis summit, where G8 leaders considered the education needs of developing countries, the UK endorsed the action plan as an important opportunity to fast-track progress towards Education for All. G8 leaders approved the G8 Education Task Force report, which makes clear the need for increased support for basic education from the G8 countries and the importance of the bank's fast-track initiative in mobilising financial resources. Under its Africa Action Plan, the G8 agreed to increase significantly the support provided bilaterally to basic education for countries in Africa with a strong policy and financial commitment to the sector.

The Government are committed to further increasing our support for basic education, particularly in Africa. We will continue to work with the World bank to support their fast track proposals. Further discussions will be held in Washington on 17 July. This meeting, together with the outcome of the spending review to be announced shortly by the Chancellor, will help determine the level of the Government's additional financial support for basic education in the proposed fast-track countries.

Calgary G8 Meeting

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people attended the G8 meeting in Calgary from her Department; and what the total cost of the visit was. [68392]

Clare Short [holding answer 10 July 2002]: No officials from the Department for International Development attended the G8 summit meeting in Canada.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking towards tackling hunger in Zimbabwe. [69011]

Clare Short: I have now allocated £32 million to help meet food and health needs in Zimbabwe in the current humanitarian situation.

DFID has provided £4 million since September 2001 for a supplementary feeding programme implemented by NGOs, targeting 400,000 people (mainly children) in the worst hit areas of Zimbabwe. At the beginning of January 2002, we made a contribution of £6 million to the UN's Humanitarian Assistance and Recovery Programme; £3.5 million for WFP feeding programmes and £2.5 million for essential drugs and health supplies through the WHO.

In response to the recent reassessment of needs by the World Food Programme and their new regional appeal, I have allocated a further £22 million for Zimbabwe, of which £7 million will be provided through the WFP appeal; £10 million will be channelled through non-governmental organisations to extend direct feeding programmes; and £5 million will be spent again through NGOs on agricultural recovery. We are monitoring NGO and WFP feeding programmes closely to ensure that they are targeted on a needs basis, and that complaints about political bias are tackled effectively.

Faith Communities

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list projects involving faith communities which are supported by her Department. [71850]

Clare Short: A full account of projects supported through my Department with faith communities is not held centrally. To provide full details would involve disproportionate cost.

Through DFID country programmes we are supporting initiatives through faith based groups in the provision of services (health, micro credit); in peace-building processes; relief, rehabilitation and disaster preparedness; and in election monitoring and voter education.

We are also providing £7.8 million during 2002–03 to faith based organisations in the UK (Christian Aid, CAFOD and CIIR) through Partnership Programme Agreements. One of the aims of the Christian Aid and CAFOD agreements is to strengthen a global alliance of Christian Churches and other faith groups to eradicate poverty.

In developing faith-specific literature to promote awareness of the Millennium Development Goals and development issues, a series of booklets have been co-produced with a number of faith based groups: Christian (Protestant and Catholic), Jewish, Islamic and Sikh.

We are also supporting 26 projects with UK faith based organisations in a variety of sectors through the Civil Society Challenge Fund—total value £1.5 million in 2002–03. Details are as follows:

Uganda

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions she has had with the Government of Sudan regarding the Lords Resistance Army in Northern Uganda. [71370]

Clare Short [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I discussed the activities of the Lords Resistance Army (LRA) with the Government of Sudan during my visit to Sudan in January. I have also discussed the LRA with the Ugandans on a number of occasions. Our embassies in Khartoum and Kampala have had regular discussions with the Sudanese and the Ugandans about the LRA in northern Uganda.

International Development Association

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much the Government will contribute to the 13th Replenishment of the International Development Association. [73105]

Clare Short: I have decided that the UK will contribute £900 million to the three-year, 13th Replenishment of IDA (IDA-13)—the concessional lending arm of the World bank. This represents a 10.1 per cent. share of IDA-13 donor resources, up from £511 million (7.3 per cent. share) at the last replenishment. The increase reflects the high importance the British Government attaches to IDA, which is one of the most effective channels for reducing poverty in the poorest countries.

The UK will also contribute up to an additional £100 million during the course of IDA-13 towards the cost of compensating IDA for the future loss in loan re-flows resulting from the provision of 18–21 per cent. of IDA-13 resources on grant terms. This contribution is conditional on donors agreeing an appropriate system for funding the enlarged grant provision at the IDA-13 Mid-Term Review in 2003.

Microcredit Summit

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which Ministers will represent the Government at the Microcredit summit plus five meeting in New York in November; and if she will make a statement. [71389]

Clare Short: I plan to attend the annual CGAP meeting in September in Morocco to join discussions on how to improve donor effectiveness in micro-finance, but I do not plan to attend the Microcredit summit as well.

DFID will be represented at the summit at official level. We have invited funding applications to enable would-be participants from developing countries to attend the event.

Afghanistan

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the level of forced labour and forced militarisation of refugees in refugee camps in Afghanistan. [71142]

Clare Short: We are aware of reports of forcible recruitment of young men, militia domination of camps for internally displaced people (IDPs) and sexual violence. United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNCHR), in close co-ordination with the Afghan Transitional Administration (ATA), are currently investigating the reported security incidents and discussing what measures might be put in place to prevent further repetition.

Parliamentary Answers

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether it is her policy to ensure that documents referred to in parliamentary answers are available via her Department's website. [72273]

Clare Short: Where documents published by DFID are referred to in parliamentary answers, it is normal policy to have those documents available in print and in electronic form from the date of publication.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development for how long she retains documents referred to in parliamentary answers on her Department's website. [72269]

Clare Short: Where documents published by DFID are referred to in parliamentary answers, it is normal policy to keep those documents available in print and in electronic form from the date of publication until they are superseded by a subsequent edition or, in the case of consultation documents, by the final version of the document.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the (a) dates, (b) location and (c) sources were of attributable (i) articles, interviews or contributions for the media, books or other journals and (ii) speeches or presentations made in the public domain, by departmental special advisers since March 2001; who in her Department authorised the activity; and on what date this activity was recorded with the departmental Head of Information. [72249]

Clare Short: No such attributable activities were undertaken by departmental special advisers.

Liberia

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the levels of political violence in Liberia; and what discussions she has had with the British High Commission in Liberia regarding political violence. [71146]

Mr. Straw: I have been asked to reply.

We are very concerned at the escalation in fighting in Liberia and have called on all warring parties to declare a ceasefire and enter meaningful dialogue. We are also concerned that President Taylor has used the fighting to justify increased repression, including the imposition of a state of emergency. United National sanctions against Liberia have been effective in disrupting President Taylor's links with the RUF and made it harder for him to obtain weapons. We have urged all countries in the region to implement the sanctions vigorously.

There is no permanent British representation in Liberia. We monitor the situation closely from our embassy in Abidjan, and hope shortly to have an officer based in the American embassy in Monrovia, reporting to our embassy in Abidjan.

DEFENCE

Salisbury Plain

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procedures are in place to inform National Air Traffic Services of (a) military flying exercises and (b) artillery firing exercises in the vicinity of Salisbury Plain. [65196]

Mr. Ingram: The procedures for informing National Air Traffic Services Ltd. of all military flying and artillery firing exercises are laid down in the Aeronautical Information Publication. I have placed copies of the most relevant extracts from this document in the Library of the House.

Overseas Deployments

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK regular forces have been committed overseas in each month since 1 January. [69768]

Dr. Moonie: The table shows the average number and percentage of trained service personnel deployed on military tasks overseas in the first six months of 2002. This includes personnel deployed on operations (e.g. in Afghanistan) and ongoing commitments (e.g. in Cyprus).

	Number	Percentage
4th quarter 2001–02[1]
Navy (including Marines)	5,270	14.1
Army	9,843	9.7
Air Force	4,574	9.3
1st quarter 2002–03[2]
Navy (including Marines)	5,211	13.9
Army	9,992	9.9
Air Force	4,314	8.8

[1] January–March 2002

[2] April–June 2002

In addition to the above, we estimate that around 5–6 per cent. of trained service personnel are either preparing for, or recovering from, deployment on military tasks overseas.

Royal Hospital, Haslar

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the cost to the defence budget of (a) opening a diagnostic and treatment centre at Haslar and (b) closing it in 2007. [69265]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 15 July 2002]: The Ministry of Defence has not incurred any additional costs following the decision to allow the NHS to develop a Diagnostic and Treatment Centre (DTC) on the Royal hospital Haslar site. The NHS would incur any costs associated with the closure of the DTC.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the annual running cost of the Royal hospital, Haslar was in the last year for which figures are available. [69263]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 15 July 2002]: The total operating cost of the Royal hospital, Haslar, including the financial arrangements for Ministry of Defence hospital unit, Portsmouth, for the financial year ending 31 March 2002, was £47.145 million.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what value the Royal hospital, Haslar is assessed. [69262]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 15 July 2002]: As at 31 March 2002 the Defence Secondary Care Agency valued the Royal hospital, Haslar land and buildings at £34.555 million.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the financial arrangements are between the Ministry of Defence and the national health service relating to the Royal hospital, Haslar. [69264]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 15 July 2002]: Following the inception of Ministry of Defence hospital unit (MDHU) Portsmouth on 1 April 2001, Portsmouth Hospitals Trust (PHT) assumed responsibility for the delivery of the majority of the clinical services on the Haslar site. Under the financial and contractual arrangements between the MOD and PHT, the Trust is responsible for ensuring sufficient staffing levels for the clinical services it manages on the Haslar site. The Trust has separate financial arrangements with the MOD concerning the employment of military medical and clinical staff and for the provision of treatment for service personnel, both at the RHH and across PHT. These arrangements are broadly similar to those in place in other MDHUs.

The Royal hospital, Haslar (RHH) is an MOD managed site. The estate and infrastructure is funded by the MOD. PHT pay the cost of any alterations to meet NHS requirements on the site. The financial arrangements also include payments by PHT for the use of RHH infrastructure and support services in MOD-retained Departments.

Queen Alexandra Hospital, Cosham

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what messing, accommodation and recreational facilities will be available for service personnel to be based at Queen Alexandra hospital, Cosham if the proposed expansion through a private finance initiative takes place. [69267]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 15 July 2002]: The Queen Alexandra hospital private finance initiative will include all Ministry of Defence clinical and administrative requirements but not single living accommodation, messing or recreational facilities. A study to determine options for the provision of these services is being carried out.

Aircraft Carriers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what dockyard work will need to be carried out to accommodate the two new aircraft carriers; when that work is expected to commence; and if he will make a statement. [70757]

Dr. Moonie: The extent and timing of any modifications at Portsmouth will depend on developments in the carrier programme and the dimensions of the final design that is taken forward. In the light of these, consideration will be given to mitigating any access constraints together with some enhancements to shore support facilities, taking account of environmental issues. It is not yet possible to be firm on the timetable for this potential work.

Consultation

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints his Department has received about its 2001 consultations in electronic or printed form. [70987]

Dr. Moonie: 12. Of these, 11 were received in writing and one by electronic means.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which consultation documents published by his Department in 2001 were not made available as paper copies. [70988]

Dr. Moonie: All of the Ministry of Defence's consultations issued in 2001 were either made available as paper copies or were available in paper copy on request.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long his Department allowed for consultation on each consultation document it published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form. [70983]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence published seven consultations in 2001. The amount of time given for responses did not differ according to the format of the consultation. Times allowed for response, either in writing or electronically, were:

The Future of the Defence Diversification Agency: six weeks;

The Military Maritime Graves and the Protection of Military Remains Act 1986: three months;

Proposed Introduction of the Voluntary Screening Programme Following Health Concerns in Respect of Depleted Uranium: four weeks;

Armed Forces Pension Scheme Review: five months;

Joint Compensation Review: five months;

2nd Consultative Document on the Introduction of a Voluntary Screening Programme for Depleted Uranium: 12 weeks;

MOD Police Quinquennial Review: six months.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether consultation documents published by his Department in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultations. [70984]

Dr. Moonie: All of the consultation documents published by the Department in 2001 were published electronically, and the Ministry of Defence Consultation webpage includes links to the Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultations, which contains the consultation criteria.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what format his Department has published the results of its 2001 written consultations. [70985]

Dr. Moonie: Of the seven consultations published in 2001, two have not yet reported. Of the remainder, results for one were published on the Consultation webpage of the Ministry of Defence website and in printed format, and two were published on the Consultation webpage of the MOD website but would have been made available in printed format if requested. The results of the last two will be published shortly.

European Technology Acquisition Programme

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which elements of (a) watchkeeper and (b) the Future Offensive Air Strategy the Government intend to procure through the European technology acquisition programme. [70628]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 17 July 2002]: The European technology acquisition programme (ETAP) is a collaborative technology development programme related to combat air systems. Its aim is to sustain and develop generic European capabilities over the next two decades. Although United Kingdom decisions on which technologies to pursue under ETAP will take account of our Future Offensive Air System project, it is not aimed at a specific equipment, nor is it intended as a means of procuring equipment.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 4 December 2001, Official Report, column 221W, on ETAP, when he expects the ETAP joint study assessing the military capabilities the six nations' armed forces will need around 2020 to report. [70668]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 17 July 2002]: The study report was produced on time and presented to the European technology acquisition programme (ETAP) steering committee on 3 July 2002. The report will provide a focus for future ETAP research and technology programmes.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the criteria to be used in deciding which British procurement decisions to pursue through the European technology acquisition programme. [70629]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 17 July 2002]: The European technology acquisition programme (ETAP) is about collaborative technology development related to combat air systems rather than procurement of specific equipments. United Kingdom decisions on technology development within ETAP will reflect the key capabilities required of the UK's future offensive air system. If one or more of our ETAP partners identify the same technology area as a priority, we will jointly decide whether a collaborative ETAP technology demonstration programme with European industry represents best value for money.

Systems Technology

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mechanisms are in place to ensure that in its procurement of systems technology the UK does not become beholden to one company with the intellectual property. [70766]

Dr. Moonie: When the Ministry of Defence funds development of equipment, it does so using intellectual property conditions which will allow for competition for further supplies of that equipment or its spare parts. Apart from an undertaking that the original developer will be invited to tender for such further supplies or its spare parts, there is no obligation on MOD to limit further contracts to the original developer.

Most systems coming into defence service now, however, comprise an amalgam of commercially developed items and items for which the MOD has funded both the development costs and integration into the final system. Where commercial items are to be incorporated into a defence system, it is MOD's practice to ensure appropriate arrangements are in place to ensure continued availability of vital items on a fair and reasonable basis.

In addition to the arrangements made through individual contracts, statutory arrangements exist under the Patent Act 1977 to enable Government use of patents for defence purposes in some circumstances on payment of compensation.

Military Training (Quantocks)

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training was carried out on the Quantocks in 2001; and by whom. [71295]

Dr. Moonie: No military training was conducted on the Quantocks between February and July 2001 owing to the outbreak of food and mouth disease. Our records show the following training took place later in the year: a fieldcraft and map reading exercise undertaken by the King's College Combined Cadets Force; a Duke of Edinburgh's Award by Somerset Army Cadet Force; and a Royal Marines load-carrying exercise along roads and bridle paths.

HMS Albion

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when HMS Albion will enter service. [71535]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 10 June 2002, Official Report, column 736W, to the hon. Member for North Essex (Mr. Jenkin). I will write to the hon. Member once HMS Albion's in service date has been confirmed.

Service Accommodation

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many married families are awaiting the allocation of appropriate housing in Colchester; [71473]

(2) how many married quarters there are in Colchester, broken down by standard of condition; [71475]

(3) what plans he has to improve the standard of service families' accommodation in Colchester. [71474]

Dr. Moonie: There is no waiting list for the 1,207 service families' quarters in Colchester. Their standard for condition is shown in the table.

Standard	Numbers
Standard 1	400
Standard 2	750
Standard 3	57
Standard 4	—
Total	1,207

Around 95 per cent. of the properties are at Standard 1 or Standard 2 for condition. Having completed two phases of a long term programme of upgrade to service housing in Colchester, further phases are planned provisionally for financial years 2003–04 and 2004–05, which will raise over 600 more properties to Standard 1 for condition.

Enhanced Capability Grenade

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the enhanced capability grenade programme; what its size will be; and what weight of explosive will be carried by the new weapon. [71635]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The enhanced performance grenade entered service in July 2001. It is 9.5 cm high, including the fuse assembly, and 6 cm wide. It weights 465 grams, of which the explosives account for 155 grams.

Weapons Systems

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Spike missile systems, manufactured by Rafael of Israel, have been purchased by the Defence Procurement Agency; [71636]

(2) when he will make his decision on the Light Forces Anti-Tank Guided Weapon System requirements for a replacement for the Milan missile; [71637]

(3) when the Light Forces Anti-Tank Guided Weapon System will enter service; [71638]

(4) what trials of the Spike missile system have been held by the Defence Procurement Agency. [71639]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The Ministry of Defence is considering the Spike and Javelin systems for the requirement in question. The Defence Procurement Agency acquired small quantities of components of both systems for the purpose of conducting comparative assessment trials. We plan to select the preferred weapon around the turn of the year and to introduce it into service in 2005.

Military Exercises

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the military exercises held in the Llandovery area on 17 June. [71764]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to my letter of 5 July (D/US of S/LM 3032/02/C) which explained that the exercise was conducted by the Queen's Dragoon Guards (QDG), who were practising wide-ranging deployments, manoeuvres and communications over long distances—skills essential for their operational training. This exercise was originally scheduled for Salisbury Plain Training Area (SPTA), but the location was changed at less than one month's notice due to urgent operational training requirements of a higher priority unit. The QDG are themselves a high readiness unit and their training was considered of sufficient importance to relocate to another area rather than to delay until SPTA became available.

Waste

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of programmes designed to reduce waste and encourage re-use and recycling in each of the dual services in each year since 1997. [71663]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence does not currently collect data on the cost of programmes designed to reduce waste and encourage re-use and recycling. However, data collection on all environmental issues, including waste, should be greatly enhanced once implementation of the Department's corporate environmental management system has been completed in 2003–04.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what quantities of waste have been diverted from landfill by the environmental policies pursued by his Department in the past five years. [71667]

Dr. Moonie: While it is Ministry of Defence policy to divert waste away from landfill by encouraging recycling and minimisation schemes, waste management is handled in practice at a local level by a number of different professional waste contractors.

As these contractors are employed on an individual basis by various budget holders across the Department, information on the quantities of waste diverted from landfill is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Modernisation

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures are being undertaken to ensure that Britain's military forces undergo modernisation and have the latest technology available. [72540]

Mr. Hoon: The Strategic Defence Review (SDR) set in hand a programme of equipment modernisation to ensure that our forces are fully able to meet future challenges. Those conclusions remain valid. But operations in Afghanistan, and work on the SDR New Chapter, have recently demonstrated that our forces will require the controlled, precise and rapid delivery of military effect—particularly through what is called 'network-centric capability', bringing together sensors and strike assets. The increase in the defence budget as a result of SR2002 will enable us to make investment necessary to acquire these sorts of capabilities.

General Service Medal

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the award of a general service medal to those who served in the armed forces in the Suez canal zone from 1951 to 1954. [72881]

Dr. Moonie: The Government consider it important to respect the principle that where there is a clear, demonstrable decision taken within five years of a campaign that a general service medal should not be awarded, that decision should not be reopened.

The evidence relating to consideration of a general service medal for the Suez canal zone is, however, less clear-cut. A number of representations have been made by the veterans of that campaign with which the Government have considerable sympathy.

In view of these exceptional circumstances, the Government are setting up a small sub-committee of HD Committee under the chairmanship of General Lord Guthrie of Craigiebank to report on the case for an exceptional award of a general service medal for the Suez canal zone without creating wider precedent or breaching long-standing principles which underpin the making of such awards.

Defence Housing Executive

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Defence Housing Executive for the financial year 2002–03. [72882]

Dr. Moonie: The following key targets have been set for the Defence Housing Executive for 2002–03.

Key Target 1

To house at least 72 per cent. of families in accommodation that matches their entitlement by posting date or on return to GB from overseas, and at least 93 per cent. within 28 days of their required date; and to give notice of address within 14 days of receipt of an application for accommodation.[1]

Key Target 2

Less than 5 per cent. of occupants should experience significant defects within 14 days of moving in.

Key Target 3

To complete the upgrade of 1,200 properties by 31 March 2003 as part of the programme to upgrade all core stock required for the longer term.

Key Target 4

To complete:

at least 95 per cent. of emergency repairs within 24 hours of notification;

at least 90 per cent. of urgent repairs within five working days of notification;

at least 95 per cent. of routine repairs within two months of notification.

Key Target 5

To reduce the management margin progressively towards 10 per cent. by November 2005, to better balance supply and demand while delivering other key targets. (The DHE's interim target for 31 March 2003 is to have a management margin of 12.1 per cent.).

Key Target 6

To develop a method for indexing the level of satisfaction of SFA occupants.[2]

[1] The revised notice of address procedure will be introduced in December 2002. Therefore, benchmarking will take place over the last half of FY 2002–03 in order to determine the performance targets for subsequent years.

[2] Benchmarking will take place during 2002–03 in order for DHE to be in a position by April 2003 to define precise targets for subsequent years.

Regarding key target 3 on the upgrade programme, as a result of good progress made to date, over 19,000 properties managed by DHE are now at standard one for condition, and some 90 per cent. of families are housed in properties at Standard one or two. The upgrade programme will continue to progress, with demanding targets set for DHE each year until the programme is completed against the services' long-term core requirements for family housing.

Copies of DHE's corporate plan will be placed in the Library of the House.

Gulf War

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the latest figures are for deaths of (a) Gulf veterans and (b) among the control group; and if he will make a statement. [72883]

Dr. Moonie: The latest data, as at 30 June 2002, are shown in Table 1. Because of concern among some Gulf veterans over deaths caused by cancer, Table 2 provides a detailed breakdown of deaths from cancer (malignant neoplasm) by anatomical site.

We are currently discussing with the university of Manchester proposals for a detailed comparative study of the incidence of cancers among Gulf veterans and the Era comparison group and underlying factors, and hope to place a contract shortly. We also plan to commission a study of a cohort of Bosnia veterans on whom data are already available.

We are also discussing with the university of Manchester a detailed study of the factors underlying the figures for road traffic accident deaths, and hope to place a contract in the near future.

In addition, we have asked the Medical Research Council (MRC) to undertake an independent review of the research work that has been carried out into Gulf veterans' illnesses and advise on appropriate areas for future research. The MRC's conclusions will be published.

Defence Aviation Repair Agency

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Defence Aviation Repair Agency for financial year 2002–03. [72884]

Dr. Moonie: Key Performance Indicators have been set for the Chief Executive of the Defence Aviation Repair Agency (DARA) for financial year 2002–03 as follows:

DARA key performance indicators for financial year 2002–03

Title	Details	Target
KPI 1—Financial performance 1	The measurement of DARA's ROCE	To achieve a minimum average ROCE of 6 per cent. over the first three years of trading—subject to the maintenance of current MOD customer planning assumptions, the availability of sufficient funding and the understanding that directed sub-contract work will count towards the obligation.
KPI 2—Financial performance 2	The measurement of value of contracts won.	To achieve order intake to the value of at least £60 million.
KPI-3—Quality	The measurement of attributable major customer concerns received from DARA's customers	To have no more attributable major customer concerns than the baseline set on DARA's performance of financial year 2001–02
KPI4—Efficiency	The measurement of the reduction in unit production price of a representative basket of DARA outputs	To achieve a reduction in the unit production price of 4 per cent. in real terms, of the basket of products (weighted by value of annual task quantity), baselined from financial year 2001–02—subject to the maintenance of current MOD customer planning assumptions, the availability of sufficient funding and the understanding that directed sub-contract work will count towards the obligation.

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the public-private partnership for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. [72885]

Dr. Moonie: On 1 July 2001 the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency was successfully divided into QinetiQ plc, currently a wholly Government-owned company, and the Defence Science and Technology Laboratory, which remains part of the Ministry of Defence.

On 6 March 2002, I informed the House that we had decided to sell a substantial stake in QinetiQ to a strategic partner who would help to develop the company in preparation for a future flotation on the stockmarket. Our decision followed a detailed analysis of market conditions, which led us to conclude that this approach offered best value for the taxpayer, and would meet our objectives for a successful public private partnership.

Immediately following this announcement we initiated an open competition and carried out a pre-qualification process to identify potential partners. Almost 40 expressions of interest were received, and at the end of April 2002 12 organisations were selected to receive an Information Memorandum describing the company. Following an evaluation in late May 2002 of indicative offers from bidders, several companies were then provided with access to more detailed information on QinetiQ and invited to submit final binding bids. In order to maximise competition we do not propose to reveal how many companies were selected to participate in this stage, or their identities.

We have received a number of responses within the last few days from the shortlisted bidders, and these are now being comprehensively evaluated by officials and specialist advisers. The results of the selection process are not yet available but we remain on track to identify the preferred bidder within the next few weeks, and complete the initial sale later this year.

QinetiQ

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, in respect of his departmental minute concerning the Ministry of Defence's agreement with QinetiQ on the allocation of pre-vesting liabilities dated 8 July, he will withhold final approval of the proposed indemnity for inherited environmental liabilities to be provided for QinetiQ until such time as a detailed financial appraisal of the prospective size of the liabilities is provided to Parliament for debate. [72296]

Dr. Moonie: No. It is important to understand that the vast majority of environmental liabilities on freehold sites have transferred to QinetiQ. The small number of liabilities inherited by QinetiQ to which the departmental minute refers is being retained in Government as detailed analysis has shown that this represents best value for money in the light of reasonable commercial insurance not being available. The very low level of past claims and specialist analysis suggest actual risk associated with these specific liabilities is extremely small.

Lancer Reconnaissance System

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Lancer reconnaissance integrated technology system is expected to replace the reconnaissance vehicles in service in the UK military; and if he will make a statement. [70056]

Dr. Moonie: The Lancer integrated demonstrator vehicle was one of two developed under the assessment phase of the joint UK/US Tracer programme. This vehicle is undergoing a series of user trials to demonstrate the technical maturity and military utility of a number of key armoured vehicle technologies.

Although the participating nations decided, jointly, to terminate the Tracer programme at the end of the assessment phase, we expect to be able to apply some of the key technologies to future equipment programmes, in particular the Future Rapid Effects System (FRES) programme, which is due to enter service around the end of the decade.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Staff Training

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General how much the Department has spent on staff training and development in each of the last five years. [61051]

The Solicitor-General: The amount spent by each of the Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible in each of the last five years is set out below.

Crown Prosecution Service

1997–98: £1,234,217
1998–99: £1,339,271
1999–2000: £2,069,216
2000–01: £2,700,903
2001–02: £5,620,922

Serious Fraud Office

1996–97: £127,051
1997–98: £134,692
1998–99: £124,949
1999–2000: £180,936
2000–01: £237,996

Treasury Solicitor's Department

Figures for the last four years are:

1998–99: £213,460
1999–2000: £230,690
2000–01: £337,900
2001–02: £402,080

Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers

1998–99: £13,820
1999–2000: £8,800
2000–01: £11,750
2001–02: £10,500

HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate

Information is only available for the year 2001–02 as before 1 April 2001 the inspectorate was part of the Crown Prosecution Service and training costs form part of the figures provided by the CPTs. The sum expended on training in 2001–02 was £26,600.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Radioactive Discharges

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to publish the UK strategy for radioactive discharges. [73103]

Mr. Meacher: The strategy is currently being printed and will be published very shortly. Copies will be placed in the Library. The document will also be available on the DEFRA website.

The strategy demonstrates how the UK will achieve substantial reductions in radioactive discharges in the period to 2020, to implement agreements reached at the 1998 ministerial meeting and subsequent meetings of the OSPAR Commission.

Radioactive discharges in the UK have already been reduced to around 1 per cent. of peak levels in the 1970s. This strategy represents the next chapter of what has been an increasingly effective policy to minimise such discharges and shows that the Government are determined to maintain the downward pressure and achieve the objective of the OSPAR radioactive substances strategy.

Rural Payments Agency

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what targets she has set the Rural Payments Agency for 2002–03. [72961]

Margaret Beckett: I have set the Rural Payments Agency the following performance targets for 2002–03:

Efficiency Performance

1. To successfully negotiate Office of Government Commerce (OGC) Gateway 3 by 31 December 2002.
2. To ensure the main programme contract is ready to let by 31 December 2002, once Gateway 3 is achieved.

Financial Performance

3. To operate within the 2002–03 resource budget allocations as agreed with DEFRA.
4. To ensure that disallowance within the control of RPA due to non-compliance with EU requirement remains below 2 per cent. of the value of CAP payments made by the Agency.
5. To account accurately and to deadline for EAGGF funds.

Business Continuity and Service Delivery

6. To process and pay at least 96.14 per cent. of valid IACS claims by value within the EU deadline.
7. To process and pay at least 85 per cent. of valid non-IACS claims by volume within ministerial deadlines and all claims within the set EU deadlines or in their absence 60 days.
8. To process at least 98.5 per cent. of all valid claims correctly.

Service Quality and Delivery

9. To publish customer service standards that meet Charter Mark guidelines by 30 June 2002.
10. To use the customer survey to establish a baseline for customer satisfaction and agree and undertake improvement activities by 31 December 2002.

11. To use the EFQM Excellence Model in all RPA business units to assess current enablers' ability to deliver required targets and outcomes, agreeing change action plans by 31 March 2003.

Reform Initiatives

12. To use the staff survey to establish a baseline for staff satisfaction by 31 December 2002 and agree and undertake improvement activities by 31 March 2003.
13. To complete roll out of diversity training across RPA by 31 March 2003.
14. To reduce sick absence to no more than 7.9 days per staff year by 31 March 2003.

Central Science Laboratory

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will publish the 2001–02 annual report for the Central Science Laboratory. [72958]

Mr. Morley: The 2001–02 annual report and accounts for the Central Science Laboratory were laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Enriched Cages

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the public consultation on a possible ban on enriched cages in England will begin. [72959]

Mr. Morley: The public consultation will start on 24 July and last for three months.

Common Land

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she intends to announce the outcome of the review of common land policy and legislation, following the consultation exercise that took place in 2000. [72957]

Alun Michael: We have today published a "Common Land Policy Statement" jointly with the National Assembly for Wales. This, together with the "Report on Consultation Responses", is available in the Library of the House, on the DEFRA website, and from the National Assembly for Wales.

The policy statement contains a comprehensive package of proposals relating to the registration and protection of common land and village greens. It also outlines our objectives for improving the agricultural management of common land and announces our intention to set up as soon as possible a working party of stakeholders to make recommendations on how these objectives can best be met.

In the rural White Paper, issued in November 2000, the Government gave a commitment to legislate as soon as parliamentary time allows. We hope to be able to do so in the 2004–05 session.

Veterinary Medicines Directorate

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will publish the 2001–02 annual report for the Veterinary Medicines Directorate. [72962]

Mr. Morley: The 2001–02 annual report and accounts for the Veterinary Medicines Directorate were laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Veterinary Laboratories Agency

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will publish the 2001–02 annual report for the Veterinary Laboratories Agency. [72956]

Mr. Morley: The 2001–02 annual report and accounts for the Veterinary Laboratories Agency were laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Water Industry

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the consultation paper on competition in the water industry will be published. [72960]

Mr. Meacher: I announced to the House on 19 March 2002, the Government's proposals for increasing competition in the water industry in England and Wales, Official Report, column 265W. I promised to publish a consultation paper with further details of our proposals later in the year.

I can now confirm that the consultation paper on competition in the water industry will be published in the next few weeks.

Public Relations Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was spent by (a) her Department and (b) bodies for which it is responsible on external public relations consultants in each of the last four years. [27387]

Mr. Morley: As DEFRA was created in June 2001, retrospective information prior to that date does not exist for the Department. Information on such expenditure by DEFRA's agencies and non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally and to provide it would incur disproportionate costs.

There have been three DEFRA managed campaigns where PR consultants were employed . The costs of their services over the past financial year were as follows:

'Are you Doing your Bit?' campaign—£12,000

UK's Emissions Trading Scheme campaign—£95,000

'Your Countryside, You're Welcome' campaign—£210,000.

The delay in supplying this answer to the hon. Gentleman is regretted.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 21 May 2002, Official Report, column 200, what recent discussions she has had with her French counterpart on reform of the CAP. [63532]

Mr. Morley: All member states set out their initial responses to the European Commission's proposals for the next stage of CAP reform at the EU Agriculture Council on 15 July. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be discussing these proposals with all of her EU agriculture colleagues over the coming months.

Ministerial Speeches

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will list the speeches which (a) she and (b) other Ministers from her Department have made to external organisations and businesses since 7 June 2001, in each case saying where the speech is publicly available; if she will place copies of speeches not available in the Library; and if she will make a statement; [56552]

(2) when she will answer the question of the hon. Member for Gordon, reference 56552, on departmental speeches. [64736]

Mr. Morley: All DEFRA Ministers make a number of speeches every week and so it would be only at disproportionate cost that a fully comprehensive list could be assembled. However, a list has been placed in the Library of the House which shows the principal keynote speeches made by DEFRA Ministers since 7 June 2001. Some of these are available on the DEFRA website (as are other, more minor speeches) and, where possible, the others are available upon request although generally not in an 'as delivered' format.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representation the Scottish Executive will have on delegations to meetings with the European Commission to discuss their proposals for reform of the CAP. [70436]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 July 2002]: In accordance with the Concordat on Co-ordination of European Policy Issues (Part IIB of Cm 4444) and a bilateral concordat, the role of Ministers and officials of the devolved Administrations in the CAP reform negotiations will be to support and advance the single UK negotiating line which they will have played a part in developing. How that role is best fulfilled will be a matter for discussion with the devolved Administrations, but it is expected that Scottish Executive representatives will form part of the UK delegation for appropriate EU meetings.

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's response is to the European Commission's proposals for the reform of the CAP, as referred to in the mid-term review. [69602]

Kali Mountford: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the EU Commission's proposals to reform the CAP. [69605]

Mr. Morley: The Government welcome publication of the European Commission's proposals for reform of the CAP which will form a good basis for discussion. We believe that the general thrust of the proposals for further market reform, decoupling of direct payments from production, and reinforcement of the rural development regulation is the right one, although in a number of key areas the Government consider that the proposals do not go far enough and do not adequately respond to the challenges ahead.

Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on what progress she expects on the reform of the common agricultural policy; and what timetable she expects will be agreed for its reform. [71723]

Mr. Morley: On 10 July the European Commission published a communication to the European Council and European Parliament on reform of the common agricultural policy. Having been discussed at the Agriculture Council on 15 July, we expect it to be discussed again at future Councils during the Danish presidency. We are still at a very early stage in these complex negotiations, and it is difficult to predict when agreement will be reached. However, it is expected that the Commission will not table legislative proposals until late October at the earliest. The Commission has proposed that any reform agreed will apply from 1 January 2004.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact on the incomes of hill farmers in (a) Scotland, (b) Wales and (c) England of the proposed changes in the common agricultural policy announced by the European Commission; what representations she made to the European Commission relating to the CAP prior to their recommendations; what recent discussions she has had with the Scottish Executives on reform of the common agricultural policy; and what meetings she has arranged with the European Commission to discuss their proposals for reform of the CAP. [70373]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 July 2002]: An assessment has yet to be made of the impact on the incomes of hill farmers in England of the changes outlined in the Commission's CAP reform communication. It would be for the devolved Administrations to make such an assessment for farmers in Scotland and Wales. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, met Commissioner Fischler before publication of the Commission's communication to discuss related issues, and she has met him again since publication to discuss the specific proposals. CAP reform has been a recurring agenda item for the regular meetings my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, has with Ministers from the devolved Administrations prior to EU Agriculture Council meetings. The most recent such meeting took place in Brussels on 15 July, focusing on the Commission's communication. No further meetings have been arranged with the EU Commission at this stage.

Farming Research

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 20 June 2002, Official Report, column 472W, on farming research, how many projects, by category, were funded in each year since 1991–92. [64851]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 27 June 2002]: Many hundreds of new research projects are initiated every year. I regret that a breakdown of these projects in the form requested could be supplied only at disproportionate cost. However, details of current DEFRA funded projects can be found on the Department's website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/research/projects. Information on all rural livelihoods, natural resources and environment projects funded by the Department for International Development since 1992 can be found on the Natural Resources Information System (NARSIS) searchable on-line database www.narsis.org.

Feed Additives

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the use of feed additives for animals reared for country sports; and if she will make a statement. [67251]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 July 2002]: Any additive used in animal feed for food producing animals (including birds reared to be shot for the table) must be authorised centrally by the European Commission under EU law. Under these arrangements each product is considered on its own merits.

No general assessment has been made of the use of feed additives for animals reared for country sports. We are aware that dimetridazole (DMZ) is used by game bird producers as a veterinary medicinal product in feed. DMZ was also authorised as a feed additive for use in turkeys and quail but this authorisation was withdrawn by the European Commission after a six month selling off period on 15 May 2002 because the manufacturer did not provide sufficient data to support the product under a review of all feed additive authorisations.

The legality of the UK's authorisation of DMZ as the active ingredient in three veterinary medicinal products for game birds has been challenged by the European Commission. We are seeking early discussions with the European Commission on this issue. In the meantime the marketing authorisations for these three veterinary medicines remain valid.

Fisheries

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is the UK Government's policy that the principle of relative stability underpinning the CFP is non-negotiable. [67318]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 July 2002]: The Government have stated on many occasions that we consider relative stability to be an integral part of the common fisheries policy (CFP), and we have no intention of moving from that position. We shall argue for this, and our other objectives, to be achieved during this year's review of the CFP.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers' markets have not re-opened since the foot and mouth crisis last year; where these markets are; and what information she has collated on the reasons why they have not re-opened. [70269]

Mr. Morley: The re-opening of livestock markets has been monitored since the introduction of the interim livestock movement rules on 11 February this year.

A livestock market has been taken to be a market opening on a non-seasonal basis, selling livestock species susceptible to foot and mouth disease and which had been operating as a livestock market prior to last year's outbreak.

As of 1 July 2002, of the 171 livestock markets to which the above definition applied:

130 (76 per cent.) had re-opened;

29 (17 per cent.) had indicated they hoped to re-open;

12 (7 per cent.) had indicated they had no plans to re-open.

Of those markets with no plans to re-open, the reasons for not re-opening were understood to be:

Seven (58 per cent.) due to the livestock movement and biosecurity rules;

Three (25 per cent.) due to commercial reasons not connected with the interim rules;

Two (17 per cent.) reasons unclear (reasons are being sought).

These 12 markets are set out in the table:

Market	County	Reason
Aylsham	Norfolk	Interim rules
Llanfair Caereinion	Powys	Interim rules
Gowerton	Swansea	Interim rules
Broughton	Cumbria	Unclear
Pembroke	Pembrokeshire	Unclear
Gloucester	Gloucestershire	Commercial
Knaresborough	North Yorkshire	Interim rules
Ripon	North Yorkshire	Commercial
Grantham	Lincolnshire	Interim rules
Newport (Isle of Wight)	Isle of Wight	Interim rules
Rye	Sussex	Interim rules
Leominster	Herefordshire	Commercial

These data have been collected from DEFRA Animal Health Offices and are kept under review.

Illegal Meat Imports

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if her Department has plans to form a partnership with countries in central and west Africa to tackle the trade in illegal meat imports. [70304]

Mr. Morley: The Department has already established links with countries in central and west Africa through the establishment of the CITES Bushmeat Working Group and via the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's UK diplomatic missions in Harare, Accra, Abuja, Cairo, Pretoria, Kampala, Abidjan, Maseru, Dakar, Luanda, Nairobi, Kigali, Mbabane and Tunis. We believe the latter approach, in particular, to be important in raising the profile of UK restrictions and rules for personal imports of meat and other food items.

Egg Industry

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has made to the EU in respect of the Doha Development Agenda negotiations in order to prevent loss of competitiveness in the UK egg industry from (a) increased domestic regulatory costs and (b) reducing barriers to trade. [70335]

Mr. Morley: Reducing barriers to trade is fundamental to Government policy. However, I am concerned that there should be no competitive disadvantage as a result of higher EU regulatory costs than those faced by third country competitors. We have played an active part in formulating EU policy in this area and these concerns are fully reflected in the context of specific proposals on animal welfare that the European Commission has submitted in the Doha Development Agenda.

State Veterinary Service

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to increase the numbers of vets employed by the State Veterinary Service. [70265]

Mr. Morley: The State Veterinary Service has recently received additional funding in 2002–03 which will allow the lifting of a moratorium on the recruitment of veterinary staff in the current financial year. We will be reviewing how best to take forward the recruitment of replacement and additional staff in the context of this year's revised budget and anticipated budgets for future years in the light of the SR2002 settlement.

Due consideration will also be given to any relevant recommendations made by the Lessons Learned and Royal Society inquiries.

Department-sponsored Organisations

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs further to her answer of 8 July 2002, Official Report, column 685W, on department-sponsored organisations, what plans she has to ensure that organisations sponsored by her Department are given their budgets prior to the beginning of the financial year. [70294]

Mr. Morley: The Spending Review 2002 settlement will provide the opportunity to allocate indicative budgets for 2003–04 to 2005–06. This also provides the opportunity to give an indication of the anticipated level of support over the period. Following the creation of DEFRA, we are further examining how the budget planning process can be enhanced, and the timetable we are working to should finalise allocation decisions prior to the start of the financial year.

Animal Welfare

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research she has commissioned and what assessment she has made of evidence on how high standards of farm animal welfare can be incorporated in an economically viable manner in her strategy for the future of farming. [70611]

Mr. Morley: Developing and maintaining high standards of farm animal welfare are at the heart of Government policy. Comprehensive legislation and species-specific welfare codes will form the basis to any new sustainable strategy for food and farming.

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs where health certification was carried out in respect of the five consignments of live sheep exported from Dover to continental Europe on 15 July, how many of the sheep were rejected as unfit for the intended journey; where those sheep were taken; what final destination address was given on the route plan for each of the consignments; and what responsibility she had to check whether the arrangement foreseen in the route plan to rest, feed and water the animals, and the requirements of European Community law, were adhered to once the animals left the United Kingdom. [71540]

Mr. Morley: Health certification was carried out at four approved assembly centres in North Wales. At the time of inspection for certification, three sheep were rejected as unfit for their intended journey and eight sheep were rejected on animal health grounds. The sheep were transported from the assembly centres to Dover and then via Holland to EU approved slaughterhouses, four in France and one in Italy. All route plans are checked before they are stamped to ensure that the proposed journey complies with requirements for rest, feed and water. Completed route plans must be returned within 15 days of the end of the journey showing details of the actual journey and any deviations from the planned journey. Returned route plans are checked and any queries followed up.

Livestock Movements

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to review the 20-day standstill rules on animal movement; and if she will make a statement. [70113]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 July 2002]: No decisions about the future of the 20-day standstill will be taken before the consideration of the report of the Lessons Learned inquiry.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the EU Joint Meetings of Management and/or Regulatory Committees in the field of agriculture-trade mechanisms is next due to meet; whether experts nominated by the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [64898]

Mr. Morley: The next meeting of the DG Agri Trade Mechanisms Management Committee is scheduled for 17 September 2002. The Committee oversees a number of import and export CAP market support and control measures. These measures are administered for the UK by the Rural Payments Agency (RPA), an executive agency of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. In view of the RPA's UK wide remit representatives from SERAD do not routinely attend. However arrangements are in place in order to ensure that meeting agendas are notified to SERAD with an invitation to comment on any issues of interest.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Madagascar) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70586]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Madagascar. The European Commission negotiates directly with Madagascar on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these Working Groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Angola) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70594]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Angola. The European Commission negotiates directly with Angola on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these Working Groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Comoros) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70592]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Comoros. The European Commission negotiates directly with Comoros on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these Working Groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Gambia) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70936]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Gambia. The European Commission negotiates directly with Gambia on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Equatorial Guinea) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70935]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Equatorial Guinea. The European Commission negotiates directly with Equatorial Guinea on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Russia) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70931]

Mr. Morley: A meeting to discuss the possibility of a new fisheries agreement between the EU and Russia will take place on 24 and 25 July 2002. The European Commission will represent member states in the negotiations. Officials in my Department have consulted with SEERAD colleagues and are aware of the interests of Scottish fishermen in any opportunities afforded under any agreement with Russia. UK representation for EU co-ordination for this and other meetings varies according to the agenda for the meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Lithuania) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70585]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Lithuania. The European Commission negotiates directly with Lithuania on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Poland) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70584]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Poland. The European Commission negotiates directly with Poland on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Greenland) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70590]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Greenland. The European Commission negotiates directly with Greenland on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Estonia) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70937]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Estonia. The European Commission negotiates directly with Estonia on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Sáo Tomé and Principe) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70932]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Sáo Tomé and Principe. The European Commission negotiates directly with Sáo Tomé and Principe on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Guinea Bissau) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70934]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Guinea Bissau. The European Commission negotiates directly with Guinea Bissau on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Morocco) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70933]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU Morocco. The European Commission negotiates directly with Morocco on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Cape Verde) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70580]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Cape Verde. The European Commission negotiates directly with Cape Verde on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Côte d'Ivoire) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70579]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Côte d'Ivoire. The European Commission negotiates directly with Côte d'Ivoire on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Mauritius) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70588]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Mauritius. The European Commission negotiates directly with Mauritius on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Seychelles) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70582]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Seychelles. The European Commission negotiates directly with Seychelles on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Latvia) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70587]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Latvia. The European Commission negotiates directly with Latvia on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Senegal) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70583]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Senegal. The European Commission negotiates directly with Senegal on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Argentina) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70593]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Argentina. The European Commission negotiates directly with Argentina on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Joint Committee (EEC-Guinea) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70591]

Mr. Morley: There is no scheduled date yet available for the next meeting between the EU and Guinea. The European Commission negotiates directly with Guinea on fishery matters on behalf of the EU. However, fishery issues with third countries are discussed at European Council Working Groups on Fisheries. UK representation at European Council Working Group on Fisheries varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include members of the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of specific interest. The Scottish Executive regularly attends these working groups.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the EU Advisory Committee on Community Policy regarding Forestry and Forest-based Industries is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70578]

Mr. Morley: The EU Advisory Committee on Community Policy regarding Forestry and Forest-based Industries meets as and when business arises. The date of its next meeting has not been fixed as yet. The UK is represented by an official from the Forestry Commission, which reports to forestry Ministers in England, Scotland and Wales.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the EU Standing Committee on Propagating Material and Plants of fruit Genera and Species is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70569]

Mr. Morley: The European Commission has indicated that the EU Standing Committee on Propagating Material and Plants of Fruit Genera and Species is likely to next meet sometime this autumn, although a date for the meeting has yet to be announced. UK representation varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include officials from the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of sufficient interest.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the EU Standing Committee on Plant Health is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70571]

Mr. Morley: The next meeting of the EU Standing Committee on Plant Health is provisionally on 26–27 September 2002. UK representation varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include officials from the Scottish Executive, other devolved Administrations and the Forestry Commission, where there are items of sufficient interest.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the EU Standing Committee on Propagating Material and Ornamental Plants is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70568]

Mr. Morley: The European Commission has indicated that the EU Standing Committee on Propagating Material and Ornamental Plants is likely to next meet sometime this autumn, although a date for the meeting has yet to be announced. UK representation varies according to the agenda for each meeting and may include officials from the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations where there are items of sufficient interest.

New Rural Businesses

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost has been in each of the past five years of programmes designed to start new businesses in rural communities. [71134]

Alun Michael: One aim of the England Rural Development Programme is to encourage new business activity which benefits rural economies and communities. This may be helped through the expansion of existing business activity, new business activity within an existing business, or activity in a new and separate business in a rural area. There is no separate funding programme which solely targets new businesses only.

Within the ERDP, the Rural Enterprise Scheme supports both farmers diversifying via new and expanded business activity, and non-farmers with projects in the rural tourism and food marketing sectors. Similarly, the Processing and Marketing Grant supports both new and expanded business activity in the processing of primary foods. Equivalent measures also exist in objective one areas. We do not have separate figures for assistance to new business start-ups and it would depend how 'new businesses' were to be defined. For example, if a farm business diversifies into running a children's nursery or selling clothes over the internet, it might either still be a single diversified farm business or the nursery and clothing sales might be considered new businesses.

Government Funding

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding the Government provide for the (a) Wellcome Trust Sanger Institute and (b) Veterinary Laboratories Agency; and if this sum will be increased in 2003. [71018]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA has no research contracts with the Wellcome Trust Sanger Institute directly. At present, there is no commitment of funds to them for this year or the future.

The accounts for VLA show an income of £74,082,000 from DEFRA for the financial year 2001–02. VLA received a further £4,820,000 from other Government sources (e.g. FSA) giving a total income from Government of £78,902,000. These are figures from the VLA annual accounts which are due to be laid in Parliament on 23 July.

At this stage of the financial year, VLA's anticipated budgets show £78 million receivable from DEFRA and £5 million from other Government sources, giving a total forecast income for 2002–03 from Government of £83 million (an anticipated increase of approximately 5.2 per cent. over 2001–02).

Abattoirs

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) cattle and (b) sheep were transported from (i) England to Scottish abattoirs and (ii) Scotland to English abattoirs in each of the last five years; and how many (A) cattle and (B) sheep were transported from (1) the Irish Republic to abattoirs in Northern Ireland and (2) Northern Ireland to abattoirs in the Irish Republic in each of the last five years. [70374]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 July 2002]: The full range of statistics requested is not available. However, data from the Cattle Tracing Scheme indicates that:

(a) 56.0 thousand cattle in 2000 and 17.3 thousand cattle in 2001, born in England or Wales and not previously on Scottish agricultural holdings, were slaughtered in Scottish abattoirs; and

(b) 36.7 thousand cattle born in Scotland were slaughtered in English or Welsh abattoirs in 2001—these may include cattle retained on farm in England or Wales for a period of time and not represent those transported directly to an abattoir.

Control measures taken during the outbreak of foot and mouth disease last year will have impacted on animal movements. No data are available for movement of sheep between England and Scotland.

Data provided by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development, Northern Ireland, show that:

(c) In 2001, 25.1 thousand cattle were imported from the Republic of Ireland for slaughter in abattoirs in Northern Ireland. Data for the last five calendar years are shown in the table:

	Thousand
1997	[1]7.0
1998	1.4
1999	7.0
2000	14.4
2001	25.1

[1] Excluding the 1,200 cattle slaughtered under the Calf Processing Aid Scheme.

No cattle born in Northern Ireland were slaughtered in abattoirs in the Republic of Ireland during this period because exports of live cattle were banned as part of BSE control measures.

(d) In 2001, 22.8 thousand sheep were imported from the Republic of Ireland for slaughter in abattoirs in Northern Ireland. Data for the last five calendar years are shown in the table:

	Thousand
1997	108.8
1998	93.7
1999	127.2
2000	169.4
2001	22.8

Recorded sheep exports from Northern Ireland to the Republic of Ireland are available only since the outbreak of foot and mouth disease. The figures available are:

	Thousand
2001 (from March)	161.1
2002 (to 6 July)	79.4

Nuclear Waste (Sellafield)

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many shipments of nuclear waste are expected to be made by sea to Sellafield within the next two years. [70369]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 17 July 2002]: None. The Government's policy is that radioactive waste should not be imported to (or exported from) the UK, except for the recovery of reusable materials, or, in certain circumstances, for treatment that will make its subsequent storage or disposal more manageable. In accordance with International Atomic Energy Agency and Euratom definitions, spent fuel is not categorised as waste while the option of reprocessing it remains open and a future use for the fuel can be foreseen.

Bovine TB

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the ISG's preliminary analysis of the risk factors associated with cattle TB. [71029]

Mr. Morley: The ISG's preliminary analysis of data from the 'TB99' epidemiological survey is included in its third report which is available on DEFRA's website at: www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/point5/p5prog

We have accepted the main conclusion that a full analysis of data is not possible at present. The preliminary comparative analyses that have been undertaken do, however, indicate the value of the TB99 questionnaire and the soundness of its design based on ISG advice. The completion of TB99 questionnaires has been delayed by the foot and mouth disease outbreak and the subsequent deployment of veterinary resources to address the backlog of cattle TB testing. However, negotiations are under way to employ contractors to help catch up in this important area of the cattle TB research programme.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average time has been between when cattle are being compulsorily slaughtered under TB control measures and the receipt of compensation payments by the farmer over the last 12 months for which figures are available. [71019]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is not readily available for the GB as a whole and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

The Government believe that compensation for animals slaughtered should be paid promptly. We are aware of payment delays in some areas due to the pressure of work generated by increased bovine TB testing.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what strategy options have been considered regarding the economic difficulties and movement restrictions regarding bovine TB; and when a decision will be made on these options. [71031]

Mr. Morley: My officials met industry representatives on 27 June to discuss a range of options for softening the economic impact on farmers of movement restrictions applied to herds as a result of TB breakdowns.

Our priority is to ensure that disease control will not be compromised by any new measures applied, therefore, objective risk assessments of the proposals made by industry representatives are being commissioned. No decisions can be made until the risk assessments and full cost benefit analyses have been completed. Officials plan to meet with industry representatives again on this matter in September.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many false positives for bovine TB have been recorded in the current year; and how many false positives there were (a) as a percentage of positive tests and (b) as a percentage of all the tests. [71025]

Mr. Morley: No test for the diagnosis of bovine TB is 100 per cent. specific.

In the UK, the diagnosis of bovine TB in live cattle relies on the single intradermal comparative test which involves the use of both avian and bovine tuberculins. This test is designed to exclude animals which react to other, often non-pathogenic bacteria, which would otherwise interfere with the test and produce 'false positive' reactions.

Reactors to the skin test, including animals which give an inconclusive reaction after two retests, are slaughtered and examined post-mortem. Infection is confirmed by either the presence of typical, visible lesions or by the laboratory culture of the organism. In the year 2000, of approximately 7,000 reactors slaughtered, post-mortem examination failed to confirm infection in about 45 per cent. of cases. Infection is confirmed in around 60 to 65 per cent. of herds with one or more reactors.

However, these post-mortem examinations are also less than 100 per cent. sensitive, so failure to detect visible lesions or failure to culture the organism does not confirm the absence of infection. It is not therefore possible to determine how many animals which reacted to the skin test are 'false positives'.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what delays there are in compensation payments for cattle compulsorily slaughtered under TB control; and what extra compensation has been paid for the delays. [71020]

Mr. Morley: The Government recognise that compensation for animals slaughtered should be paid promptly. We are aware of some delays in payment in some areas due to the priority given by Animal Health Offices to clearing the backlog of TB testing after the foot and mouth disease outbreak. No extra compensation payments have been made in these cases.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what compensation is provided for cattle that falsely test positive for bovine TB. [71014]

Mr. Morley: It is Government policy to pay 100 per cent. of market value, with no upper limit, for cattle that are compulsorily slaughtered under TB control measures.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent research she has commissioned on a bovine TB vaccine that is better than 60 per cent. effective; and if she will make a statement on progress. [71294]

Mr. Morley: The Department has commissioned an extensive programme of research on the vaccination of animals against bovine TB following recommendations made in the Krebs report. Currently we have four projects which are directly related to generating and testing new vaccine candidates and these involve collaboration between Government agencies, institutes and universities both in the UK and internationally. There are also several allied projects to the vaccine programme which include using information from sequencing the M. bovis genome, studying the immune response and pathogenesis of TB, and developing improved diagnostic tests. However, success in developing a bovine TB vaccine that is better than 60 per cent. effective cannot be guaranteed.

The independent Scientific Group on cattle TB is at present carrying out a scoping study into the feasibility of vaccination and is due to report at the end of the year.

Flooding

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will ensure that special precautions are taken to protect the people of Canvey Island at the time of the high tide expected in October. [71455]

Mr. Morley: Responsibility for flood forecasting and warning falls to the Environment Agency (EA) who have well-established arrangements with the Meteorological Office for securing accurate and timely weather forecasts. The emergency response to flooding falls primarily to local authorities, working with the emergency services and in close consultation and liaison with the EA.

In recent years flood warning has been improved, emergency plans checked and amended and liaison arrangements between the EA, local authorities and emergency services improved.

Canvey Island is protected by flood defences to a standard which is among the highest in the country. These defences protect against all but the most extreme conditions (those with a probability of occurrence of 0.001 or less in any one year). No special measures are therefore considered to be necessary to provide further protection during October above those already in place.

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance his Department gives to local authorities regarding the granting of planning permission on (a) flood plains and (b) areas considered at risk from flooding. [70411]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions published planning Policy Guidance Note (PPG) 25 Development and flood risk for Transport Local Government and the Regions in July 2001. PPG 25 advises on the consideration of flooding issues that is needed at all stages of the planning system. In particular, it establishes a risk-based sequential test that gives priority to lower-risk areas and advises that built development on the functional flood plain should be wholly exceptional.

Canoeists

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the new chairs of the regional fisheries, ecology and recreation advisory committees for the (a) Southern, (b) South West, (c) North West and (d) Thames region, on increasing access to water in their region for canoeists. [71586]

Alun Michael: No such discussions have taken place. The new appointees do not take up their posts until 1 October 2002.

French Beef Ban

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has made to (a) the European Commission and (b) her French counterpart on the French ban on the import of UK beef since the expiry of the 15 day period imposed by the European Court for the lifting of the ban. [70673]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The Secretary of State made representations to the French Agriculture Minister on 15 July during the Agriculture

Council. The European Commission decided on 17 July to refer France to the European Court of Justice for a second time in order to enforce the judgment given by the Court on 13 December 2001 that the ban should be lifted. The Commission also requested the Court to impose a substantial daily fine on France of 158,250 euro per day for failure to comply with the judgment.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what input the Government have into the process to be followed by the European Court following the refusal of the French Government to lift the ban on the import of UK beef within the 15 day time limit set down by the European Court. [70633]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The European Commission decided on 17 July to refer France to the European Court of Justice for a second time in order to enforce the judgment given by the Court on 13 December 2001 that the ban should be lifted. Member states may apply to the Court to intervene in the case.

Pet Passports

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement about extending the overseas travel arrangements for pets to the USA and Canada; and when she expects to implement the policy. [70798]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I announced on 1 July that the Government intend to extend the Pet Travel Scheme to pets entering the UK from the USA and Canada, subject to satisfactory conclusions from further work to assess the risk of importing rabies. I expect this work to be completed in the autumn.

Agricultural Wages Board

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consultations her Department has had with the NFU over the 2002 wages award recommended by the Agricultural Wages Board. [71190]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The president of the National Farmers Union (NFU) wrote on 10 July to Lord Whitty, the Under-Secretary, expressing concern about the decisions made by the Agricultural Wages Board at is meeting on 3–4 July.

In subsequent discussions with the president of the NFU, Lord Whitty has made it clear that the Agricultural Wages Board is an independent body and it is not for Ministers to interfere in the processes of the Board.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consultations her Department has had with the Agricultural Wages Board about the 2002 wages award. [71188]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The Department has had no consultations with the Agricultural Wages Board about the 2002 wages award. The Agricultural Wages Board is an independent organisation and it would not be appropriate for Ministers to intervene or seek to influence Board decisions.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the cost to the horticultural industry of the 2002 wages award recommended by the Agricultural Wages Board. [71186]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The Department provides statistical information to the Agricultural Wages Board in advance of its negotiations each year. This includes a ready reckoner showing the cost of a 1 per cent. and a £1 per week increase in pay rates for the agricultural industry as a whole.

The proposals made by the Board for 2002 involve a number of changes to the wage structure contained in the Agricultural Wages Order. As a result, the ready reckoner cannot be relied on to provide a reliable estimate of the cost of the proposed 2002 award. However, DEFRA officials are working with the Board to cost its proposals and will share this information with the industry as soon as it is available.

Carbaryl

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if her Department will reconsider its decision to ban the use of Carbaryl (Thinsec). [71187]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The loss of Carbaryl (Thinsec) stems from a commercial decision by the approval holder not to support the compound in the UK review of anticholinesterase pesticides. I see no reason, in the absence of modern safety data, why any pesticide product containing Carbaryl should be allowed back on to the market.

French Lamb Ban

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with (a) the Scottish NFU and (b) NFU Wales on the potential effects of the ban on the export of lamb as proposed by the French Government. [71676]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 22 July 2002]: The Government are very well aware of concerns about the potentially serious effects of proposed French measures on sheep SRM in relation to the Scottish and Welsh sheep industries. Not least as a result of representations from the NFU, the MLC and from officials in the devolved Administrations who have been assiduous in representing the concerns of their stakeholders.

Both Ministers and officials are continuing to emphasise to the French authorities the very considera[illegible] importance of complying with EU rules on sheep S[illegible] We are also in touch with the European Commi[illegible] about this issue.

The Government will continue to argue strongly for the cancellation of the French proposals banning spinal cords of animals aged between six and 12 months, which provide no significant consumer protection benefit and are widely regarded as a disproportionate measure. Any further restrictions on sheep SRM must be agreed at Community level, not imposed unilaterally by member states. That is the way to maintain consumer confidence across Europe. It also ensures a level playing field for all member states regarding trade.

Nonetheless, there is encouragement in France's recent decision to postpone these measures for six months. This shows that our arguments are having an effect.

Consultation

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how long the Department allowed for consultation on each consultation document it published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form. [70087]

Mr. Morley: The Department issued 55 consultation documents in 2001 published both in electronic and printed form. 20 out of these had periods given for responses of less than 12 weeks.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in what format her Department has published the results of its 2001 written consultations. [69847]

Mr. Morley: The Departmental Guidance Notes for Written Consultations provides that at the end of all consultation exercises, sponsoring divisions should place all documents in the Department's main library where it is made accessible to members of the public on request.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which consultation documents published by her Department in 2001 were not made available as paper copies. [69827]

Mr. Morley: All consultation documents published by the Department in 2001 were made available as paper copies.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many complaints her Department has received about its 2001 consultations by (a) electronic and (b) printed means. [69826]

Mr. Morley: The Department has received nine complaints about its 2001 consultations by electronic means and in addition a further six were received by telephone. No other complaints were received.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department for has a designated consultation co-ordinator in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [69828]

Mr. Morley: The Department's designated consultation co-ordinator is Bronwen Jones. Her contact details are:

Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs
Room 534, Nobel House
17 Smith Square
London
SW1P 3JR
Bronwen Jones: 020 7238 5457
email: "bronwen.jones@defra.gsi.gov.uk"

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether consultation documents published by her Department in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70088]

Mr. Morley: The departmental guidance notes for written consultations provides that consultation documents should include a summary of the criteria set out in the Code of Practice on Written Consultations. Compliance with this criteria is not monitored so information is not available.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the public consultations undertaken by her Department since 1997, indicating for each consultation (a) if copies were available on-line, (b) if copies were available in print, (c) the date the time period given for responses opened and (d) the date the time period given for responses closed. [69804]

Mr. Morley: The Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultation applies to all formal national public consultation documents issued by Departments from 1 January 2001. The information requested for consultations undertaken before that date is not available. All consultation documents issued by the Department since 1 January 2001 were made available in print and on-line.

The table shown sets out the consultations undertaken by the Department since 1 January 2001 indicating the date it was issued and the deadline for responses.

Landfill

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with (a) the European Commission, (b) the Environment Agency, (c) local authorities, (d) industry and (e) others on building developments on former landfill sites; and if she will make a statement. [65961]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

I have had no such recent discussions on the subject of building on former landfill sites but officials are in regular contact with these organisations.

The Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions published planning guidance that included building on former landfill sites in Planning Policy Guidance Note (PPG) 14 "Development on unstable land" Annex 2 "Subsidence and planning" and in the Consultation document on draft planning technical advice on land affected by contamination in February 2002.

In addition, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently revising Part C "Site preparation and resistance to moisture" of the Building Regulations 2000, which includes the precautions to be taken to avoid danger to health and safety caused by substances found on or in the ground to be covered by the building.

Public Finance Initiative

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) guidance (i) has been given and (ii) is planned from her Department to local authorities and (b) legislation (1) is in place and (2) is planned regarding the environmental implications of developments through the Public Finance Initiative; and if she will make a statement. [65601]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

Local government PFI projects seeking central government support are required to indicate how they promote sustainable development, by demonstrating an integrated approach to the social, environmental and economic well-being of the area served, now and for future generations. They should also reflect the objectives of any Local Agenda 21 strategy for the area. Advice on enhancing environmental benefits is available in the context of design quality in the OGC guidance "How to achieve Design Quality in PFI Projects" and the 4ps "Achieving Quality in Local Authority PFI Building Projects" and authorities are expected to take account of this. This department plans to issue guidance on 'Green Public Private Partnerships' shortly. No legislation specifically concerning PFI is in place or planned.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

National Association of Citizen's Advice Bureaux

Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the recent quinquennial review of the National Association of Citizen's Advice Bureaux. [72972]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The review, which started in January 2002, was recently completed and the subsequent report produced by our consultants was extremely positive about both NACAB and the CAB Service. The report concluded that NACAB is an organisation that represents significant value for money, has made real improvements in its governance and organisation since the last review and is making a very useful contribution in terms of the modernisation and e-Government agendas.

The review demonstrates that, in all areas, both NACAB and the CAB Service make a significant and positive contribution, to individuals and Government at both a local and national level, are performing well and the report gives some useful examples of this.

I am arranging for a comprehensive summary of the report, its findings and recommendations to be made available on the DTI website. Copies of the full report will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Radioactive Metals (Civil Stocks)

Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will publish figures for the United Kingdom's stocks of civil plutonium and uranium as at 31 December 2001. [72966]

Nigel Griffiths: I have today placed in the Libraries of the House figures for the United Kingdom's national holdings of civil plutonium and uranium as at 31 December 2001. In accordance with our commitment under the "Guidelines for the Management of Plutonium", I have today also sent the figures to the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency, who will be circulating them to member states in due course.

Science, Engineering and Technology

Albert Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her plans are for the future of science, engineering and technology in the United Kingdom. [72212]

Ms Hewitt: The Government is today publishing "Investing in Innovation: a strategy for science, engineering and technology". This document sets out the Government's strategy for science, underpinned by the substantial new investment in science announced on 15 July by my right hon. Friend the Member for Dunfermline, East (Mr. Brown).

It sets out what the Government proposes to do, in partnership with other stakeholders, to ensure the long-term sustainability of our university research base. It provides details of how the Government intends to implement the recommendations of the Roberts Review. It makes clear the Government's commitment to continuing to expand our research base by strengthening existing research programmes through the Research Councils and allowing for research into exciting and promising new areas of science.

The document shows how Government will further encourage collaboration between universities and the business sector through increased investment in knowledge transfer activities, and in particular, through an expansion of the Higher Education Innovation Fund. It also sets out how the DTI will increase the diffusion of advances in science and technology in the economy.

Finally, it shows what steps the Government will take to improve the quality of the science done by Government Departments, and commissioned from others.

Copies of the document have been placed in the Libraries of the House and may be viewed at http://www.ost.gov.uk/whatsnew.htm.

Nuclear Energy

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations her Department has received regarding the economic competitiveness of nuclear energy. [69445]

Mr. Wilson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to his question on 17 July 2002, Official Report, column 346W.

Energy Policy

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures her Department will implement to solicit public involvement in the development of energy policy; and if she will make a statement. [71522]

Mr. Wilson: The Government launched a consultation on energy policy on 14 May with a view to publishing a White Paper around the turn of the year. The consultation paper has been sent to a wide range of stakeholders and is also available on the Department's website. A series of conferences and seminars associated with the consultation paper are being conducted.

In addition, we are undertaking an innovative programme of events to engage members of the general public, including a stand at the Tomorrow's World Live Roadshows where the public can feed in their views on energy policy via a questionnaire which is also on the Department's website. We are also using focus groups and interactive workshops as a way to explore public views and understanding in more depth.

Renewable Energy

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her Department's methods are for assessing price imbalance exposure of (a) CHP and (b) renewable energy generators. [71581]

Mr. Wilson: The DTI does not make formal or detailed assessments of CHP and renewable generators' exposure to the imbalance prices that exist as part of the New Electricity Trading Arrangements (NETA). This is a commercial matter for generators.

On 4 April 2002 the Government published its response to the consultation on NETA and smaller generators of 1 November 2001 http://www2.dti.gov.uk/energy/domesticmarkets/electricitytrading/netaresp.pdf. This identified the following actions that would be taken:

(i) work with OFGEM to look at whether so-called "embedded benefits" could or should be made directly available to smaller generators;

(ii) address some of the administrative burdens faced by smaller generators;

(iii) ask OFGEM to ensure that imbalance prices are genuinely cost-reflective; and

(iv) allow all generators to notify their predicted output closer to "real time".

The Government continues to monitor the situation closely.

Sub-post Offices

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many sub-post offices were closed due to a lack of suitable sub postmasters at the latest available date. [70875]

Mr. Timms: Sub-postmaster vacancies are an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. and I have asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate her Department has made of the number of sub-post offices that are expected to close in the next year in (a) the UK and (b) Scotland. [72011]

Mr. Timms: The programme to restructure the urban post office network has not yet started and I am advised by Post Office Ltd. that, until it does, there are no specific plans for post office closures in the UK or in Scotland. When the programme starts it will be taken forward in consultation with individual sub-postmasters, the community, local stakeholders and Postwatch. Under the Code of Practice, Post Office Ltd. is required to consult Postwatch on individual changes and is briefing it on the process envisaged for reaching decisions.

The objective of the urban network restructuring programme is to provide modernised and improved facilities which meet customers' needs and expectations and are in the right location for the local community.

Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she had made of the effect of the closure of sub-post offices on the provision of universal banking in (a) the UK and (b) Scotland. [72020]

Mr. Timms: The Performance and Innovation Unit recommended a programme of modernisation and restructuring designed to ensure that urban sub-post offices can operate as viable businesses for their owners and offer improved services from the right locations to serve their communities. The programme to restructure the urban post office network will be taken forward in consultation with individual sub-postmasters.

In some urban areas, there are too many post offices in very close proximity to each other for them all to be viable, regardless of the provision of universal banking services at the Post Office, Universal Banking Services are due to be introduced in 2003 when migration of benefit payments to automated credit transfer (ACT) is scheduled to begin.

The Government are committed to ensuring that on migration to ACT, those people who wish to do so will be able to continue to get their benefits in cash at post offices, in full without charge.

Information Campaigns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much her Department spent on information literature, advertising and campaign material in financial year 2001–02; if she will list the campaigns that spent over £250,000; and if she will make a statement. [70216]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 22 July 2002]: The cost of external publications as notified to my Department's Publications Unit and advertising expenditure through COI in 2001–02 was £4,553,677 and £6,630,590 respectively. Expenditure on campaign material is not held centrally.

The following advertising campaigns cost more than £250,000 in 2001–02:

UK Online for Business	2,509,823
Business Link Awareness	2,450,781
Quality Mark Scheme	908,179
National Minimum Wage	324,906
Home Safety	299,558

Diesel Directive

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effects on UK diesel engine marinising companies and on UK agents for EU manufacturers of recreational craft engines of (a) the proposed EU Directive Com (2000) 639 and (b) an amendment exempting producers of less than 5000 engines per annum from compliance for five years after the directive comes into effect. [71643]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: A Regulatory Impact Assessment submitted to the European Scrutiny Committee on 5 July 2001 provided an assessment of the effect of COM (2000)639 on affected parties including engine marinisers. No specific assessment has been made in respect of UK agents for EU manufacturers of recreational craft. Also no assessment has been made of the effect such an amendment would have on either of the two groups. COM (2000)639 has been under discussion within the Council and European Parliament for some time and the Council reached a Common Position, the text of which was published on 22 April 2002. The European Parliament made no such amendment during the first reading and it is unlikely that such an amendment would be considered at this late stage if it was not already proposed during the first reading. However, it is my understanding that a Council Working Group will meet some time in September to consider any second reading amendments. Once all these amendments have been forwarded to the Council, we will with our partners take a view on the whole package of amendments. Following that, and before the European Parliament second reading takes place, the UK Government will as usual issue briefing to UK MEPs which will make our position clear. In addition, the UK Parliamentary Scrutiny Committees will be kept informed.

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make it her policy to support an amendment exempting diesel marinisers producing less than 5000 engines per annum from compliance with Com (2000) 639 for five years after it comes into force. [71642]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: COM (2000)639 relating to exhaust gas and noise emissions from recreational craft has been under discussion within the Council and European Parliament for some time and the Council reached a Common Position, the text of which was published on 22 April 2002. The European Parliament made no such amendment during the first reading and it is unlikely that such an amendment would be considered at this late stage if it was not already proposed during the first reading. However, it is my understanding that a Council Working Group will meet some time in September to consider any second reading amendments. Once all these amendments have been forwarded to the Council, we will with our partners take a view on the whole package of amendments. Following that, and before the European Parliament second reading takes place, the UK Government will as usual issue briefing to UK MEPs which will make our position clear. In addition, the UK Parliamentary Scrutiny Committees will be kept informed.

Air and Noise Pollution

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effects of Com (2000) 639 on air and noise pollution. [71641]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: No specific assessment has been made. COM (2000) 639 indicated that there would be a slight decrease in overall pollution as a result of implementation. However, this measure is proposed under Article 95 of the Treaty and is mainly concerned with the reduction of technical barriers to trade within the EU. It was on this basis that the UK supported the proposal while noting that in the long term there was likely to be some improvement in air quality and reduction in noise levels.

Developing Countries

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to encourage developing countries (a) to conduct an impact assessment before deciding whether to liberalise service sectors and (b) to consult civil society and carry out an assessment before the March 2003 deadline for offers. [70939]

Ms Hewitt: The United Kingdom is fully committed to helping developing countries to carry out impact assessments on the liberalisation requests they are receiving. The Department for International Development is providing funding to both the World bank and UNCTAD to support projects aimed at helping to build the capacity of developing countries to carry out such assessments and to participate effectively in the GATS negotiations. We are also working with the key international agencies to make the most appropriate and effective use of the funding that has been made available to help with the assessment question.

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 8 July 2002, Official Report, column 672W, what evidence she draws on to suggest that liberalisation of business, financial, telecommunications and transport services are most likely to contribute to development in developing countries. [70938]

Ms Hewitt: There are a number of studies on the actual or potential impact of liberalisation of services on developing countries. The World Bank's report "Global Economic Prospects and the Developing Countries 2002" gives a useful overview of the available evidence.

Post Office

Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will publish the report evaluating the results of the pilot of the Your Guide service. [72968]

Mr. Timms: The report evaluating the results of the Your Guide service has been published today. Copies are now available in the Libraries of the House.

Manufacturing (Productivity and Competitiveness)

Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when her Department will respond to the Trade and Industry Select Committee inquiry into the productivity and competiveness of manufacturing. [72971]

Ms Hewitt: I am delighted to report that my Department is today publishing a Command Paper in response to the report by the Trade and Industry Select Committee's report into the productivity and competitiveness of UK manufacturing.

I warmly welcome the Committee's report, which has made a valuable contribution to the ongoing debate about the future of UK manufacturing. There is much in the Committee's excellent analysis with which the Government agrees, not least the importance of manufacturing to the UK economy.

Manufacturing matters hugely. It produces a fifth of our national income, directly employs almost four million people and millions more in dependent businesses; and it supports many good jobs in some of the poorer regions of Britain. Manufacturing accounts for 60 per cent. of our exports and 80 per cent. of commercial research and development, so it is a driver of innovation and technology uptake. It is a key to future prosperity, our economy and the society in which we live.

There are great opportunities for British manufacturers. The UK has real strengths to build on. We have many world-class companies. We have a stable macro-economic environment, a first class science base and membership of the EU giving access to the world's largest single market. But we recognise that we also have significant weaknesses; lower levels of skills, investment, R&D and innovation. Companies that rely mainly on labour intensive products and processes will find it ever more difficult to compete unless they evolve to meet the challenges. Companies must increase the value they add through innovative management, products and processes to succeed in the longer term.

In particular, if UK manufacturers could match the productivity performance of France, Germany and the US, all else remaining equal, we would be £70 billion better off. Returns on investments would be higher, jobs better paid and companies more competitive. That is why the Department of Trade and Industry has put manufacturing at the heart of its agenda—a fact reflected in the Command Paper—and we have set challenging targets on productivity and are taking significant action across a wide front to deliver on them in the longer term.

I welcome the Committee's call to give a greater focus across the DTI on the importance of the manufacturing industry and its needs, and to work with other Government departments in pushing forward the manufacturing agenda. Much progress has been made since the Committee began its inquiry and published its conclusions. A significant amount of what Government—and particularly DTI—does, supports manufacturing and has done for many years. But I have also instigated a step change by increasing both departmental and ministerial resources focused on manufacturing. The role of the Minister of State for Employment Relations, Industry and the Regions has been strengthened—effectively creating a Minister with responsibility for manufacturing. The Department also has a strengthened structure with a new Manufacturing Policy Team and a new Director General for Innovation, when appointed, will play an important role as Chief Adviser on Manufacturing, reinforcing the importance of innovation as a key driver of manufacturing productivity. These changes are already meeting the Committee's recommendation that DTI should have a stronger and more strategic focus, commensurate with the importance of manufacturing.

The Government also published, on 16 May, its Manufacturing Strategy; the first comprehensive and cohesive framework for manufacturing set out by any UK Government for over 30 years.

A key role highlighted in the strategy will be to ensure that DTI champions more effectively the importance and needs of manufacturing and provides a vigorous lead on manufacturing issues. We are working to strengthen communication and co-operation between Whitehall departments and the regions to help UK manufacturers build on the opportunities of renewed world growth. Much progress is already being made here: at Ministerial level, a close working partnership with DTI, DfES, Department of Work and Pensions (DWP) and the Treasury has already been established on training and skills issues. This is already yielding benefits, including a better skills policy balance between the supply side—what schools and colleges provide—and the demand side—what employers need from their work forces. We have also seen a joined-up UK approach to strengthening demand side leadership by employers through the creation of new Sector Skills Councils and better co-ordination of regional delivery through initiatives such as the DTI Manufacturing Advisory Service already being delivered in most regions by their designated regional centres for manufacturing excellence (RCMEs).

I am confident that, as outlined in the Command Paper, the combination of a clear and coherent manufacturing strategy with enhanced and better focused Departmental resources in DTI provides a fresh basis for a stronger, better co-ordinated approach and more effective action to contribute to a successful UK manufacturing sector.

Employment Businesses Regulations

Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will finalise the draft Conduct of Employment Agencies and Employment Businesses Regulations. [72973]

Alan Johnson: I have today published a consultation document on certain aspects of the draft regulations. After the end of the consultation period on 1 November 2002, I intend to lay the draft regulations, subject to any final amendments, with a view to bringing them into force in the first half of 2003. Copies of the consultation document have been sent to those who responded to the previous consultation and I have also placed copies of the document in the Libraries of the House and on the DTI website.

The Government's response to the recent fixed-term public consultation on the draft Fixed-term Employees' (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2002 was also published today. We intend the fixed-term regulations to come into force on 1 October 2002.

Broadband

Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements she intends to make for the licensing of broadband fixed wireless access at 3.4 GHz. [72970]

Mr. Timms: Following extensive consultation with interested parties, I intend to award licences by auction later this year for the provision of public fixed wireless access at 3.4 GHz. There will be seven metropolitan and seven provincial licences for England, Scotland and Wales and a single licence for Northern Ireland. Each licence will have a forward and return channel both of 20 MHz. There will be no roll-out obligations included in the licences and the proposed service restrictions have been removed. Licences will be for a term of up to 15 years.

Regulations providing for the running of the auction have been made and will be laid before the House this week. I will issue a notice under the regulations that will set out the procedures to be followed during the auction. Once the regulations have come into force, I expect to invite applications for licences in September so that the auction may begin by early October.

Coal Authority

Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Coal Authority's report and accounts for 2001–02 will be laid before Parliament. [72967]

Mr. Wilson: I have today laid a copy before each House of Parliament.

Consultation

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether consultation documents published by her Department in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70991]

Ms Hewitt: Consultation documents published by the Department are required to comply with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. Internal DTI guidance also enforces the compliance requirements in the code.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints her Department has received about its 2001 consultations in electronic or printed form. [70994]

Ms Hewitt: The Department received 11 complaints in 2001 regarding its compliance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations.

Other complaints regarding consultation exercises are not held centrally.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how long her Department allowed for consultation on each consultation document it published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form. [70990]

Ms Hewitt: Criterion 5 of the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultation requires that 12 weeks should be the standard minimum period for a consultation. If the period is less than 12 weeks, the document should state Ministers' reasons for departing from the code, and what special measures—for example advance notice of at least the broad issues covered—have been taken to ensure that consultation is nevertheless as effective as possible.

The Department is committed to the code and makes every effort possible to ensure that its consultation exercises comply with criterion 5. Data on the Department's performance in complying with the code is currently being compiled. I will write to the hon. Member with the requested information as soon as possible and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Hydrogen Fuel Cell Technology

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment her Department has made of the time horizons for the likely impact of hydrogen fuel cell technology on road vehicles; [72194]

(2) what contracts her Department has awarded to (a) TNO (Netherlands), (b) IAV (Germany), (c) AVL (Austria), (d) FEV (Germany) and (e) IKA (Germany); [72193]

(3) what funding her Department is providing for development of hydrogen fuel cell technology. [72208]

Mr. Wilson: In support of the objective to promote productivity and competitiveness, the DTI part funds collaborative R&D in the Foresight Vehicle programme to help accelerate the transfer of technology from the science base and promote its subsequent exploitation by industry. Foresight Vehicle is open to all UK-based companies and universities to submit proposals which if successful may receive grant funding. The programme does not commission research and therefore does not invite tenders from any company either in the UK or elsewhere in Europe. No DTI contracts have been awarded to TNO, IAV, AVL, FEV or IKA. Foresight Vehicle, as the national automotive R&D programme, issues calls for proposals based on rigorous technology road mapping conducted in partnership with industry. The latest technology road map, which has a 20 year time horizon, is in preparation and takes account of various options for powering future vehicles, including hydrogen fuel cells. The road map, which we hope to publish in the autumn, identifies enabling technologies and stages in the development of hydrogen fuel cells that are seen as prerequisites for the successful introduction of fuel cell road vehicles. The DTI is also a partner in the "Powering Future Vehicles" strategy and I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

The Department of Trade and Industry has been supporting work on fuel cells and hydrogen under the DTI Advanced Fuel Cells Programme since 1992. The total DTI spend is £12.2 million, and the current expenditure approximately £2 million pa. The programme supports work related to both stationary power generation and transport applications for fuel cells. It is estimated that approximately £6 million of the expenditure to date has been on transport-related fuel cell work.

The Engineering and Physical Science Research Council (EPSRC) also supports fundamental research in universities on topics that relate to fuel cell/hydrogen research. Funding in these areas amounts to £15.7 million in the period 1992–93 to 2002–03.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the EU Accounting Directives Contact Committee is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [70901]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The EU Accounting Directives Contact Committee is next due to meet on 10 and 11 October 2002. Company accounting is not a devolved issue and therefore members of the Scottish Executive are not members of the Committee.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the EU Advisory Committee on opening up public contracts is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [71822]

Ms Hewitt: The Advisory Committee on opening up public contracts is next due to meet on 8 November 2002. The Committee is composed of independent experts appointed by the European Commission after consultation with business and industry. There are no Government officials on the Committee.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the EU Committee for the adaptation to technical progress of directives on the removal of technical barriers to trade in the sector of electromedical equipment used in human or veterinary medicine is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if she will make a statement. [66421]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

I am not aware that the Committee has ever met, or of any plans for it to meet.

Solar Power

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what plans she has to expand her Department's support of photo-voltaic solar power; [72818]

(2) if her Department will continue to provide support for the installation of photo-voltaic solar panels in the UK. [72817]

Mr. Wilson: The Government's aim is to work with industry and others to achieve a UK solar photovoltaic demonstration programme in line with those of our major competitors.

I announced the first phase of this major Photovoltaics Demonstration Programme (PV MDP) on 26 March. The £20 million made available under the first phase is expected to increase tenfold the number of domestic PV installations in the UK by 2005.

Decisions on the next phase will be taken in the light of experience gained with the first phase.

Town Planners

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many registered (a) town planners and (b) landscape designers work in each Regional Development Agency. [71871]

Alan Johnson: There are 34 registered town planners working in the Regional Development Agencies at present. This figure is broken down as follows.

Regional development agency	Number of town planners
Advantage West Midlands	12
East of England Development Agency	3
East Midlands Development Agency	5
North West Development Agency	3
One NorthEast	0
South East of England Development Agency	5
South West of England Development Agency	5
Yorkshire Forward	1

There are no landscape designers working in the agencies.

Universal Bank

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the timescale for the development of the universal bank; and whether it will be fully operational by 2003. [70845]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 18 July 2002]: Detailed work is being carried out on implementing universal banking services for delivery in advance of the migration of benefit payment to automated credit transfer from April 2003.

Ex-miners (Compensation Claims)

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many claims by (a) ex-miners and (b) widows of families of ex-miners suffering from vibration white finger, chronic bronchitis and emphysema have been processed; and how many still await to be processed, broken down by nation and region of the UK. [69574]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 16 July 2002]: The figures are as follows. They are constantly changing due to the fact that claims continue to be received at the rate of 800 per week for vibration white finger (VWF) and respiratory disease respectively. Claims received very recently are therefore included in the total of "outstanding claims".

Full and final settlements and outstanding claims by region as at 11 July 2002 for VWF

Employment Tribunals

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the length of time it takes to convene an employment tribunal. [71793]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 22 July 2002]: Cases are dealt with on an individual basis by the judiciary of the Employment Tribunals and it is not possible to state how long a case will wait before being heard. In 2001–02, 69 per cent. of single Employment Tribunal cases reached a first hearing within 26 weeks of receipt.

0870 Telephone Numbers

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her policy is on using 0870 telephone numbers for inquiries by the public to the Department and its agencies. [66190]

Ms Hewitt [pursuant to my reply, 11 July 2002, c. 1092W]: I can now provide the individual Chief Executive replies.

Letter from Julia Fraser to Mr. John Randall, dated July 2002:

Radiocommunications Agency does not use any 0870 telephone numbers for enquiries from the public to the Agency.

We do, however, have an 0845 local-call rate telephone number, advertised as the number to call for members of the public wanting to report radio or TV interference, which connects to our main telephone enquiry point.

Letter from Desmond Flynn to Mr. John Randall, dated July 2002:

I am Chief Executive of The Insolvency Service and have been asked by the Secretary of State to reply to your question (2001/5280) on our policy on using 0870 telephone numbers.

The Insolvency Service is an Executive Agency of the DTI and operates from 33 nationwide locations. Each office has a local telephone number, rather than a central 0870 number, which together with an extensive catalogue of information booklets comprises our primary information-giving service.

Additionally The Service operates a central enquiry line from London with calls charged at the national rate.

Letter from Roger Heathcote to Mr. John Randall, dated July 2002:

You tabled a Parliamentary Question on 1 July 2002 to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry concerning the policy on using 0870 numbers for enquires by the public to the department and its agencies. I have been asked to reply in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS) which is an executive agency of the DTI.

The ETS does not use any 0870 numbers and has no policy on their usage.

Our public enquiry line and its companion minicom line are operated on 0845 numbers. Calls to these two lines are charged at the local rate regardless of where in the United Kingdom from the call originates.

Letter from Dr. J. W. Llewellyn to Mr. John Randall, dated July 2002:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) to your question regarding the policy on using 0870 telephone numbers for enquiries by the public to the Department and its Agencies.

The national Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) does not employ any 0870 numbers.

Letter from Claire Clancy to Mr. John Randall, dated July 2002:

I am responding on behalf of Companies House Executive Agency to your Parliamentary Question on the Department of Trade and Industry's policy on the use of 0870 telephone numbers for public enquiries.

Companies House uses an 0870 telephone number for our national public enquiry call centre. The decision to employ this type of number is consistent with the guidance set down by the Office of e-Envoy, which states that the choice of a national rate, local rate, freefone or premium rate number should be determined by individual business requirements. As a Trading fund the Agency has to cover the cost of providing services and to avoid cross subsidy. These factors led to the decision to use an 0870 number.

Letter from Caren Fullerton to Mr. John Randall, dated July 2002:

I am replying on behalf of the Patent Office to your Parliamentary question, tabled on 1 July 2002, relating to the use of 0870 telephone numbers for enquiries by the public.

The Patent Office does not use 0870 telephone numbers. It provides 0845 numbers to be used for enquiries by the general public, who are charged local call rates for their telephone calls. This policy, determined by the business requirements of the Patent Office, conforms with the e-Envoy-s Guidelines for UK Government Call Centres.

Letter from Martin Wyn Griffith to Mr. John Randall, dated July 2002:

To ask the SoS what her policy is on using 0870 telephone numbers for enquiries by the public to the Department and its Agencies.

In response to the above Parliamentary Question, please note that:

The Small Business Service's Small Firms Finance team contracts with EC Logistics who distribute Late Payment Guidance and other publications for the SBS via an "0870" number; and

The SBS' Business Services directorate uses an "0870" number for the following purposes:

The "CONNECT" hotline

a) for Business Advisors—

to enable direct contact for Business Advisors to the CONNECT team for booking equipment/technician for shows; for ordering CD-ROMS, technical advice, requests for presentation and clip finding service; and for general advice and requests for literature.

b) for small business customers—

for advice on how they can access the CONNECT series via their local Business Link

The Benchmark Index hotline

a) for Business Advisors—

to enable direct contact with the Benchmark Index team for technical queries; for advice on questionnaires;

for advice on the make up of data sets; and requests for literature and other general support.

And b) for our small business customers—sign-posting them to their nearest Business Link operator for access to the Benchmark Index and general help and information.

The Small Business Service uses these 0870 numbers in accordance with DTI central guidelines.

I hope this is helpful.

Deregulation Task Force

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how often the Deregulation Task Force has met in the last 12 months; what recommendations they have made; how many recommendations have been implemented; what savings businesses have made as a result; and if she will make a statement. [72156]

Mr. Alexander: I have been asked to reply.

The Better Regulation Task Force meets every month but August. Since July 2001, the Task Force has produced six reports, on regulatory issues concerning: Local Shops, Economic Regulators; Housing Benefit; Employment Regulations; Local delivery of Central Policy; and Higher Education. These reports together made 54 recommendations. The Government have, to date, responded to three of these reports and has rejected only one recommendation. The Task Force is an advisory body and cannot itself directly reduce costs on business.

Nuclear Industry

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will exempt the nuclear energy industry from the climate change levy. [71549]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The climate change levy is designed to encourage energy efficiency across the business and public sectors and to increase the use of sustainable forms of energy. The Government have no plans to exempt nuclear energy from the levy.

Committee Mandates

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the mandate of the Committee for the Adaptation to Technical Progress of the Directive on the Removal of Technical Barriers to Trade in Electromedical Equipment used in Human or Veterinary Medicine is; how many times it has met over the last 12 months; what the UK representation on it is; what the annual cost of its work is to public funds; if she will list the items currently under its consideration; if she will take steps to increase its accountability and transparency to Parliament; and if she will make a statement. [55212]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The Committee for the Adaptation to Technical Progress of the Directives for Removing Technical Barriers to Trade in Electromedical Equipment used in Human or Veterinary Medicine was established under Council Directive 84/539/EEC on the approximation of laws of the member states relating to Electromedical Equipment used in Human or Veterinary Medicine to give an opinion on:

> any amendments to Annex 1 of the Directive made necessary by the adaptation to technical progress of the harmonised standards by the relevant standards organisation, > any amendments to Annex 1 which are desirable because of adaptation to technical progress where the relevant standards of the organisation has not made the corresponding amendments to the harmonised standard.

We are not aware that the Committee has ever met.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Police Ombudsman

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to lay before each House the first annual report of the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland. [72872]

Jane Kennedy: Copies of the Police Ombudsman's first annual report, covering the period from November 2000 when the office was created to March 2002, have today been placed in the Library. It is a general report on the discharge of the Ombudsman's function during this period which is submitted to me for laying before Parliament in accordance with Section 61 of the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998.

TREASURY

Regional Funding

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 9 July 2002, Official Report, column 862W, on regional funding, if his staff are working on potential changes to the way the departmental expenditure level is allocated to the devolved regions. [72605]

Mr. Boateng: No. The Government's funding policies for the devolved administrations were set out in the updated Statement of Funding Policy published by the Treasury on 15 July.

Withholding Tax

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Swiss Government about the reclaiming of the withholding tax on dividends by UK residents; and if he will make a statement. [72473]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government has held no such discussions with the Swiss Government.

UK Debt Management Office

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the UK Debt Management Office's annual report and accounts. [72873]

Ruth Kelly: The DMO's annual report and administrative accounts for 2001–02 are being laid before the House of Commons and published today. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Reports

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the 2002 departmental reports were published. [72876]

Mr. Boateng: The publication dates of the 2002 departmental reports are as follows.

Criminal Finances

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further measures he proposes to take on disclosure of beneficial ownership of companies in attacking criminal finances. [73099]

Ruth Kelly: In response to a recommendation in the report "Recovering the Proceeds of Crime", the Government are today publishing a Consultation Document on the findings of a Regulatory Impact Assessment. This assessment examines ways in which greater disclosure of beneficial ownership of companies could assist law enforcement in tackling serious organised crime and funding of terrorism. The assessment identifies a range of benefits and gauges the potential additional burdens on companies; it concludes that advantages could be derived from enhanced disclosure while imposing limited additional costs on industry. The Government wish to consider the proposals further and welcome responses to the Consultation Document from those with interests in this area.

Publication of the assessment marks the Government's continuing determination that the UK should remain at the forefront of the international fight against organised crime and terrorist funding. At the same time, the Government wish to ensure that UK companies are not subject to disproportionate new burdens and will carefully consider the impact of potential changes in the field of company law.

Copies of the Consultation Document and Regulatory Impact Assessment have been placed in the Library of the House.

Double Taxation Protocol

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to submit to the House the double taxation protocol that the Government recently concluded with Lithuania; and if he will make a statement. [73101]

Dawn Primarolo: The Protocol with Lithuania was signed on 21 May 2002. The text of the Protocol with Lithuania has been published today as a schedule to a draft Order in Council and laid before the House. After signature the text was deposited in the Library of the House and made available on the Inland Revenue's website.

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the new double taxation convention with South Africa. [72875]

Dawn Primarolo: The double taxation convention was signed on behalf of the two governments on 4 July. The text has been deposited in the Library of the House and made available on the Inland Revenue's website. It will be scheduled to a draft Order in Council and laid for consideration by the House at the earliest convenient opportunity.

Tax Benefit Reference Manual

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the next edition of the Tax Benefit Reference Manual will be published. [72874]

Dawn Primarolo: Copies of the 2002–03 edition of the Tax Benefit Reference Manual are today being deposited in the Library of the House.

Pool Re Scheme

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how negotiations are progressing with industry on changes to the Pool Re scheme to take account of changes in the terrorism insurance and reinsurance markets since 1993 and in particular since 11 September 2001. [73100]

Ruth Kelly: Today I am announcing changes to the Pool Re scheme which will enable insurers to offer terrorism insurance across a wider range of risks. The outcome is part of a package of reforms which have been agreed by a government-industry working group set up to look at changes to Pool Re needed after 11 September.

The working group has reached agreement on the main changes to the scheme. The changes include extension of Pool Re cover from "fire and explosion" only, to an "all risks basis", to ensure that a terrorist attack involving, for example contamination, impact by aircraft, or flood damage could be covered by the scheme. This increased cover will be available in the next few weeks and will be reflected in higher premiums for the period covered. There will be an option to backdate to 1 January 2002. The existing exclusion for nuclear risks will also be removed as soon as practicable, and by 1 January 2003 at the latest.

Other changes to the scheme include changes to the financing of Pool Re to encourage competition, and changes to make governance arrangements more transparent in the public interest. These will take effect from 1 January 2003.

The details will need to be finalised over the coming months. Further information about these changes are published on the Treasury's website and in an explanatory statement in the House Library.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the EU Contact Committee—European economic interest grouping is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [70905]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

I am not aware of any plans for a meeting.

The Committee consists of representatives of the Member States and the EU Commission. The Scottish Executive is not separately represented on the Committee.

E-commerce

Mr. Bell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Treasury is taking to introduce public-private partnerships into the e-commerce sector; and if he will make a statement. [71600]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 18 July 2002]: I have been asked to reply.

The Government has no specific policy to bring public-private partnerships into the e-commerce sector. All Departments when assessing the funding options for a project will consider the possibility of a PFI. However, the final decision will always be based upon which option offers the best value for money for the taxpayer.

TRANSPORT

Departmental Contracts

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contracts his Department has recently awarded to (a) TNO (Netherlands), (b) IAV (Germany), (c) AVL (Austria), (d) FEV (Germany) and (e) IKA (Germany). [72200]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department has no contracts with those companies.

Cranford Agreement

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 26 November 2001, Official Report, column 616W, if he will place a copy of the Cranford Agreement in the Library; when he expects to have completed the review of it; if he will list the parties involved in the Cranford Agreement; and if he will make a statement on the status of the agreement. [72431]

Mr. Jamieson: The arrangement normally referred to as the Cranford Agreement is believed to date from 31 July 1952. It would appear that it was an undertaking given by a senior airport official during a local public meeting of the Cranford Residents and District Amenities Association, which was attended on that occasion by the Minister of Civil Aviation ("Mr. Lenox-Boyd"). If there was a written record, it appears not to have survived. The evidence given by the former DETR to the Terminal 5 Inquiry in July 1997 includes a fuller account and history of the undertaking and I have placed an extract from that evidence in the Library. Our aim is to complete the technical review stage this year. I will then issue a consultation paper.

Press Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) full time equivalents were employed by his press office and (b) secondees were placed in his press office in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [70535]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 22 July 2002]: Detailed information on the numbers of permanent press officers employed in departmental press offices during the financial years 1997–98 were provided in a memorandum dated 16 June 1998 to the select Committee on Public Administration and published in its report on The Government Information and Communication Service (HC 770) in July 1998. Copies are in the Libraries of the House.

The number of full time equivalent press officers employed in the relevant departmental press office on 1 January for subsequent years were:

Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions (Central)

Year	Numbers
1999	34.3
2000	40.8
2001	38.0

Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (Central)

Year	Numbers
2002	27.8

Secondees to the press office during the full calendar years for which information is available were:

1999	0
2000	1
2001	5

Ministerial Speeches

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the speeches made by Ministers with responsibility for transport issues to external organisations between 1 January and 31 May. [71449]

Mr. Jamieson: Ministers responsible for transport issues have undertaken a very wide range of speaking engagements between 1 January and 31 May 2002. A record of all speeches is not held centrally. Archived DTLR speech material can be viewed at www.dtlr.gov.uk/about/ministers/speeches/index.htm

Departmental Reorganisation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes there have been in the total wage expenditure budget since the departmental reorganisation in June; and if he will make a statement. [70712]

Mr. Jamieson: There have been no changes in the total pay budget associated with the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions' total administration resources. The division of these resources between the two new departments—the Department for Transport and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister—is currently being finalised. However, no additional resources are being made available from the Exchequer as a result of the departmental reorganisation.

European and International Business

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what work is being undertaken in his Department by the division responsible for European and International Business; and if he will make a statement. [70655]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 18 July 2002, Official Report, columns 455–56W.

Travel Times

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the differences between travel times road users would achieve in free-flowing conditions and the travel times they actually achieve, in average time lost per kilometre driven (a) on inter-urban trunk roads, (b) on roads in large urban areas, (c) in other urban areas, (d) in London, (e) in all other areas and (f) on all roads in each of the last three years. [71316]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: We hope to publish a year 2000 baseline figure for congestion.

Transport Benchmarks

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the benchmark is for (a) accessibility, (b) punctuality, (c) reliability and (d) use of local public transport against which the PSA targets for transport contained in the 2002 Spending Review are set. [71620]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The underlying target of increasing the use of local public transport (bus and light rail) by more than 12 per cent. by 2010 will be measured against the baseline figure of 3,881 million passenger journeys by light rail and local bus services in England in 2000–01.

We are considering the most appropriate means of measuring improvements to accessibility, punctuality and reliability in relation to this target.

Fuel Reduction Technology

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his Department's policy is on providing collaboration funding for development of fuel reduction technology with British companies; and whether it is the policy of his Department to seek tenders for other European companies before awarding such funding. [72317]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department's New Vehicle Technology Fund supports the development of clean and low-carbon vehicles and technologies The Fund invites proposals and provides funding towards the costs of successful projects.

Invitations and funding are not restricted to British companies and applications currently being assessed involve a range of British, European and international collaborators.

Alternatively Fuelled Vehicles

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of road journeys in the UK were made by vehicles powered by biodiesel and alternatively fuelled vehicles in 2001. [72820]

Mr. Jamieson: It is not possible to provide figures in the form requested; traffic data collected by the Department for Transport (DfT) is collected according to vehicle type not propulsion type. Calculating the proportion of journeys for cars powered by alternative fuels such as biodiesel is extremely difficult as they are almost always capable of running on pure conventional fuels.

The DfT publishes figures for the total number of vehicles registered according to propulsion type based on DVLA records. As table 1 shows, in 2001, of a total of 29,747,100 vehicles licensed in the UK, 46,700 were alternatively powered, representing 0.16 per cent. of total registrations. This figures does not include vehicles capable of being solely or partially powered by biofuels for the reason outlined earlier.

Table 1. Breakdown of vehicles licensed in the UK in 2001 according to propulsion type

Thousand

	Number
Petrol	23,219.0
Diesel	6,481.5
Petrol/gas	24.0
Gas/gas Bifuel/Gas-diesel	6.0
Electric and hybrid electric	15.1
Steam/fuel cells	1.6
All	29,747.1

Further information is available from the DfT's traffic statistics website at: http://www.transtat.dft.gov.uk.

But this understates the number of alternatively-fuelled vehicles because not all conversions to alternative fuelling are notified to DVLA. There are currently estimated to be over 100,000 alternatively fuelled vehicles in the UK, the vast majority of which are LPG cars.

Vehicle Inspectorate

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for the future of the Traffic Area Network and the Vehicle Inspectorate. [72955]

Mr. Jamieson: Following an internal departmental review, I intend to establish a new executive agency (name to be determined) on 1 April 2003 to bring together the work of the Traffic Area Network and the Vehicle Inspectorate. The new agency will play a key role in promoting safe, fair and environmentally responsible road haulage and bus industries. It will also provide support for Traffic Commissioners in their role of regulating the road haulage and bus industries.

The agency will be one of four executive agencies which make up the Driver, Vehicle and Operator (DVO) group of agencies within my Department. The other agencies are the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA), the Driving Standards Agency (DSA) and the Vehicle Certification Agency (VCA). The creation of this new agency within the DVO group will allow a more joined up and customer-focused approach to the services provided to road transport industry, and better targeted enforcement to the benefit of road safety. Traffic Commissioners will be wholly independent of the new agency in the same way that they are independent of TAN and VI now.

The new agency is a positive, practical demonstration of the Government's commitment to promoting road safety and delivery of modern customer services.

Hydrogen Fuel

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the time horizons for the likely impact of hydrogen fuel cell technology on road vehicles. [72201]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government in December published and invited comment on its proposed "Powering Future Vehicles" strategy for promoting the development, introduction and take-up of new low-carbon vehicles and fuels, including hydrogen fuel cell technology. Following wide consultation, the strategy will be finalised and issued shortly. I shall send the hon. Member a copy of the document.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding his Department is providing for development of hydrogen fuel cell technology. [72202]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Minister for Energy and Construction.

Driving Licences

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his estimate is of the number of fraudulent driving licences in circulation. [72108]

Mr. Jamieson: It is not possible to provide the estimate which the hon. Member is seeking.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the bar code on the (a) driving licence card and (b) counterpart driving licence accesses information additional to the information contained on the face of the driving licence card and the counterpart driving licence. [72116]

Mr. Jamieson: The bar codes on these two documents are only for processing purposes. They do not allow access to any additional information.

Cycling

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will initiate a bicycle awareness campaign. [71929]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department is currently developing a cycle safety campaign for teenagers which it intends to launch in early 2003. This is a new departmental commitment and complements existing material for younger cyclists.

Roads

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what national guidelines there are on the use of road signs alerting road users to the presence of cyclists. [71718]

Mr. Jamieson: The primary guidance on the use of traffic signs to alert road users to the presence of cyclists is contained in Chapter 4 of the Traffic Signs Manual, "Warning Signs". Further general guidance on cycle signing is given in Local Transport Note 2–87 "Signs for Cycle Facilities". There is also a wide range of Traffic Advisory Leaflets dealing with the provision of special facilities for cyclists, including guidance on how these should be signed.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road users in the Carmarthen, East and Dinefwr constituency had accidents in the last year for which figures are available; and what the UK average is. [71763]

Mr. Jamieson: Information is not available for parliamentary constituencies. The table gives the number of casualties in road accidents in 2000 and the number of casualties per 100,000 population in the Carmarthenshire unitary authority and the UK.

Road casualties and casualty rates per 100,000 population: 2000

	Carmarthenshire	UK
Road casualties	856	335,003
Casualty rate per 100,000	506	560

The casualty rate is the number of casualties per 100,000 people.

Congestion

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the loss of time per kilometre in hours for drivers and passengers on roads in (a) England and (b) Great Britain in each of the last three years as a result of congestion. [71323]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: We hope to publish the year 2000 baseline for congestion in the autumn.

Road and Bridge Maintenance

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 15 July 2002, Official Report, column 668W, on road and bridge maintenance, if he will place copies of the assessment made by his Department on the condition of roads and bridges as set out by the local transport plans and annual progress reports submitted by the highways authorities last year in the Library; and what assessment he has made of the annual progress reports, submitted by the highways authorities last year, as to the progress made in road and bridge maintenance. [71376]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The individual assessments of the highway maintenance elements of the Local Transport Plans and Annual Progress Reports were rough working documents. For this reason I have not placed them in the Library. Feedback on the assessments is provided to authorities in their decision letters.

The Annual Progress Reports (APRs) for 2001 showed that most authorities had made progress towards halting the deterioration in the condition of principal roads by 2004, and were tackling the strengthening and structural maintenance work outstanding on bridges. This is of course as a result of the increased investment in roads.

A140

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans there are for (a) bypasses, (b) road widening and (c) road schemes on the A140. [71866]

Mr. Jamieson: The A140, from Norwich to the A14 in Suffolk, was detrunked in May 2001 and is now the responsibility of Norfolk and Suffolk county councils. The Councils are jointly developing a route management strategy for the A140, which is expected to be completed later this year. The Strategy will identify a future programme of improvements along this route. Any road improvement schemes, which are identified through this study, will be for the local authority to take forward within the context of their local transport plan.

"In Town Without My Car! Day"

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to promote and facilitate local authorities participation in the "In Town Without My Car! Day"; and if he will make a statement. [71228]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department established a website www.itwmc.gov.uk and appointed a national co-ordinator to give advice to local authorities and others who wish to participate in the European "In Town Without My Car!" campaign on 22 September 2002. The closing date for local authorities to register formal participation is Friday 19 July. By 18 July, 36 authorities had registered.

Drink-driving

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many crashes in which people were (a) killed, (b) seriously injured, (c) slightly injured and (d) not injured on roads in England and Wales were caused by a driver who was over the drink-drive limit in each of the last 10 years. [70956]

Mr. Jamieson: Estimates of the numbers of road accidents in Great Britain which involved personal injury and where at least one driver was over the drink-drive limit are given in the table. Information on the number of accidents involving drink-driving where injuries did not occur is not available.

Estimates of accidents involving illegal alcohol levels: Great Britain 1991–2000

	Number of accidents
	Fatal	Serious	Slight	Total
1991	570	2,590	8,530	11,690
1992	540	2,360	7,890	10,790
1993	460	1,870	7,160	9,480
1994	470	2,090	7,330	9,900
1995	460	2,140	7,590	10,180
1996	480	2,150	8,240	10,870
1997	470	2,140	8,100	10,710
1998	410	1,860	7,840	10,100
1999	400	1,850	8,800	11,050
2000[1]	430	1,950	9,410	11,780

[1] Provisional

Harbours

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) fishing and (b) non-fishing harbours there are in each country and region of the UK. [72563]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department does not keep information on the exact overall numbers of harbours in the UK. There are 74 Fishery Harbours in England and 21 in Wales, listed in Schedule 4 to the Sea Fish Industry Act 1951. Responsibility for fishery harbours in Scotland is a devolved matter and related questions should therefore be addressed to the Scottish Parliament.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what basis he classes harbours as (a) fishing and (b) non-fishing. [72562]

Mr. Jamieson: Fishery Harbours in England and Wales are designated by virtue of being listed in Schedule 4 of the Sea Fish Industry Act 1951. There is no process of designating general harbours. Responsibility for harbour legislation in Scotland is a devolved matter and related questions should therefore be addressed to the Scottish Parliament.

Housing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Deputy Prime Minister on the transport implications of the Deputy Prime Minister's oral statement on housing of 18 July. [72111]

Mr. Jamieson: The Secretary of State and the Deputy Prime Minister have regular discussions on a range of issues of mutual interest.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to revise (a) the 10-Year Transport Plan and (b) the SRA 10-Year Plan to accord with the Deputy Prime Minister's oral statement on housing strategy on 18 July. [72113]

Mr. Jamieson: The Deputy Prime Minister's statement on housing strategy will be taken into account in any future review of either Plan.

Mersey Passenger Transport Authority

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the experience and qualifications in rail expertise in the Mersey Passenger Transport Authority. [72486]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 11 July 2002, Official Report, column 1114W.

Rail Freight

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guarantee he has had from the French Government that previous levels of cross channel rail freight will be resumed; and when he expects the full and reliable 100 services each way each week to be achieved. [72093]

Mr. Spellar: After their meeting on 12 July, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and the French Interior Minister announced that they would visit in September to confirm the effectiveness of security measures taken to ensure normal service.

A full and reliable service is one which meets demand. Immediately prior to the current disruptions the scheduled inbound service was 96 trains per week.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress he has made towards rail freight targets under the 10-year plan. [72092]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority set out in its Freight Strategy last year the detailed plans for achieving the significant rail freight growth envisaged by the Government's 10-year plan for Transport. During the financial year 2001–02, the first full year of the plan, the amount of rail freight moved has grown by 9 per cent.

We will be producing a review of the 10-year plan later in the year.

West Coast Main Line

Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the Strategic Rail Authority to present its report on the upgrading of the West Coast Main Line. [71725]

Mr. Jamieson: The SRA are currently expecting their draft strategy for the West Coast Main Line to be issued for consultation in September.

Train Operating Companies

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much revenue has been lost by train operating companies in each of the past five years as a result of (a) no staff being available to collect fares on services and (b) staff being unable to proceed along trains owing to overcrowding. [71538]

Mr. Jamieson: None. Revenue protection is a matter for the train operating companies. It is in their commercial interest to ensure that passengers travel with valid tickets.

Rail Journey Times

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the reduction in rail journey times in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [71155]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The Strategic Rail Authority generally considers journey time improvements at the level of specific routes or investment propositions.

Trains (Punctuality)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what figures he has collated relating to the (a) punctuality and (b) reliability of trains as given under the former Passenger's Charter measure, in each of the last three years. [71059]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 July 2002]: Passenger's Charter data are still published by individual TOCs but are no longer collated by the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA). They have been superseded by Public Performance Measure (PPM) which, unlike the Passengers' Charter data covers all trains, on all lines, all days of the week.

Performance data are published quarterly by the SRA in 'On Track' (copies of which are in the Libraries of the House).

Annual Rail Freight Conference

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place a copy of the speech made by the Minister for Transport on 20 June to the annual rail freight conference in the Library. [70644]

Mr. Spellar: A copy has now been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Rail Investment Programmes

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list in real terms (a) rail investment programmes for 2002 and (b) projected plans for 2003. [72462]

Mr. Jamieson: The prioritised programme for rail investment was set out in the SRA's Strategic Plan. Individual investment projects within programmes such as the Rail Passenger Partnership fund and the freight grant scheme are appraised on an on-going basis.

Air Services (Scotland)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the Government will publish the transportation document on the future of Scotland's air services and airports. [72439]

Mr. Jamieson: We are today publishing the consultation document on the future of air transport in Scotland, which has been prepared jointly with the Scottish Executive.

Aviation White Paper

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to meet the Unmanned Aerial Vehicle Systems Association to discuss the forthcoming Aviation White Paper. [71849]

Mr. Jamieson: The Secretary of State has no plans to meet the Unmanned Aerial Vehicle Systems Association. The UAVSA will, however, be sent a copy of the Department's consultation paper on development options at airports around the UK, to which the Association may respond. If the Association has other concerns it wishes to raise then it should make representations to the relevant departmental officials.

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what forecast he has made of the change in the numbers of unmanned aerial vehicles over the next five years; what assessment he has made of the safety and economic benefits of unmanned aerial vehicles; and what assessment he has made of the civilian and commercial applications of unmanned aerial vehicle systems. [71841]

Mr. Jamieson: It is difficult to forecast the change in numbers of unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs) over the next five years, but the CAA has established a framework to help ensure that any future UAV operations are integrated safely and with minimal impact on existing airspace users.

The CAA's Directorate of Airspace Policy has published a guidance document, "Guidance for UAV Operations in UK Airspace", designed to provide consolidated information for UAV operators, both military and civil. The CAA is awaiting applications from industry to fly UAVs but to date there has been little interest.

Flight BA 2069

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who invited the Civil Aviation Authority to participate in the investigation of the incident on flight BA 2069; on what date the Civil Aviation Authority began its investigation; and what the brief was of that investigation. [71233]

Mr. Jamieson: British Airways notified the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) of the incident on the day it occurred, 29 December 2000, and immediately began its own investigation. The CAA has monitored and reviewed the British Airways investigation throughout as part of its ongoing regulatory oversight of UK airlines. As a result, 12 new safety requirements were issued to all UK operators on 18 September 2001.

The Government asked the CAA to keep it advised of the progress of its review and the completed review was sent to the then Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on 23 January 2002. An abbreviated version was placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Thameslink

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his predecessor received the report of the inspector following the public inquiry into proposals by Thameslink; and what the earliest and latest dates are which he has set for a decision. [72087]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

The Inspector provided his report on the inquiry into the Thameslink 2000 scheme in January this year. He later provided two addenda reports in May and June. These reports will be published when we make an announcement on this scheme, which we expect to do shortly.

CABINET OFFICE

Government Car and Despatch Agency

Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when he will publish the Government Car and Despatch Agency's annual report and accounts 2001–02. [73104]

Mr. Alexander: I have today laid the GCDA annual report and accounts 2001–02 before Parliament, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Regulatory Assessment

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when the baseline measures for overall compliance with the regulatory assessment process will be published; and if he will make a statement. [69535]

Mr. Alexander: The Cabinet Office is currently undertaking work to calculate a baseline measure for overall compliance with the regulatory impact assessment process. Some further work remains to be done to validate the data underlying the baseline. However, it is currently expected that the Cabinet Office will be in a position to publish the baseline measure before the end of the financial year.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Consultation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the public consultations undertaken by her Department since 1997, indicating for each consultation (a) if copies were available online, (b) if copies were available in print, (c) the date the time period given for responses opened and (d) the date the time period given for responses closed. [69794]

Dr. Howells: The Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultation applies to all formal national public consultation documents issued by Departments from 1 January 2001 and the information requested is not available before that date. Since 2001, the details are as follows:

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which consultation documents published by her Department in 2001 were not made available as paper copies. [70981]

Dr. Howells: None—all consultation documents were made available as paper copies.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many complaints her Department has received about its 2001 consultations in electronic or printed form. [70980]

Dr. Howells: The Department received two complaints in electronic or printed form about the consultation process of its 2001 consultations.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how long her Department allowed for consultation on each consultation document it published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form. [70976]

Dr. Howells: The following table indicates the length of time allowed for consultation on each consultation published in 2001.

National Lottery

Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimates her Department has made of the effect on the income for good causes of the rebranding and relaunch of the National Lottery. [71726]

Mr. Caborn: The Department has made no separate assessment of the financial impact of this part of Camelot's marketing expenditure; and it would be difficult to make a meaningful assessment at this stage.

Mr. Anthony D. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what arrangements she has made to take forward the review of the National Lottery announced on 20 March. [72871]

Tessa Jowell: The review is to be in two parts, one dealing with licensing arrangements and the other looking at distribution of Lottery funding to good causes. A consultation paper on the licensing process was published on 27 June.

I will publish a consultation document on the distribution of Lottery funding to good causes on 29 July. The document is intended to initiate a process of public consultation and I wish to encourage as many people as possible to contribute to the debate.

I will arrange to deposit copies of the consultation document in the Libraries of both Houses.

Sporting Talent

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what she is doing to nurture future sporting talent among young people. [72045]

Mr. Caborn: This Department is working in partnership with the Department for Education and Skills to improve access to and the quality of PE, school sport and club links for 5 to 16-year-olds. Gifted and talented sportspeople, specifically, will benefit from: a national support network based around specialist sports colleges; a programme of summer schools and performance camps; a much stronger emphasis on sporting talent within all parts of our national strategy for gifted and talented education; improved coaching; and stronger links between schools and sports clubs. As far as the last is concerned, we aim to increase the numbers of children and young people moving into sports specific junior clubs in seven major sports from 386,000 now to 1 million by 2006.

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what public consultations have been commenced by her Department since 1 April; and what the (a) closing date and (b) website address of each were. [72072]

Dr. Howells: The following table shows all public consultations commissioned by the Department since 1 April, and the (a) closing date and (b) website address of each consultation.

Sport

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the Interdepartmental Group on Sport has discussed the relationship of sport and health; and what conclusions were reached. [72235]

Mr. Caborn: The Interdepartmental Group on sport which includes my hon. Friend the Minister for Public Health, has discussed a wide range of issues related to sport policy, including the relationship of sport and health. It is agreed that the promotion of sport can play a valuable role in improving health across the population and we have been working closely with the Department of Health to ensure the co-ordination of sport and health policy.

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement about progress achieved towards meeting the aim of significantly raising the time spent on sport and physical activity by five to 16-year olds. [72234]

Mr. Caborn: We have no data on overall progress as yet. The baseline was set by Sport England's Young People and Sport survey, last carried out in 1999. The survey will be repeated this year in June (with results available in December) and again in 2004. However, there are indicators of performance from individual programmes that suggest a positive trend overall. For example by September this year there will be 142 Specialist Sports Colleges supporting 742 SSCos and 3,576 Primary Link Teachers and 45 Sports Partnerships have been established to enable young people to participate in sport more frequently, improve their skills, and compete at various levels.

Sport England

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she expects the number of staff positions at Sport England which have a remuneration package worth over £50,000 per annum to increase by 2005–06. [72472]

Mr. Caborn: Sport England expect that the number of staff receiving remuneration packages worth over £50,000 will increase from 14 to 26 by 2005–06. This is due mainly to the regrading of the Regional Director posts and the creation of a new post of Head of Placements and Alliances under the proposed restructuring of Sport England.

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what grant-in-aid to (a) Sport England, (b) UK Sport, (c) Sports Scotland, (d) the Sports Council for Wales and (e) the Sports Council for Northern Ireland has been in each year since 1972. [72467]

Mr. Caborn: Grant-in-aid provided to Sport England and UK Sport is as follows. Funding for sport in Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales is a devolved matter and an issue for those administrations.

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer of 1 July 2002, Official Report, column 123W, what assessment has been made of the impact on national governing bodies of the reduction in their Exchequer grant aid from 2000–01 to 2002–03. [72595]

Mr. Caborn: The grant that it pays to national governing bodies of sport is a matter for Sport England. The total amount that Sport England has paid to national governing bodies has increased each year from 2000–01 to 2002–03.

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer of 1 July 2002, Official Report, column 123W, if she will provide a breakdown of Sport England's regional support, listing the budget heads for (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03. [72503]

[1] Annual budget

[2] Actual

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list how many staff positions at Sport England have a remuneration package worth over £50,000 per annum for (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03. [72474]

Mr. Caborn: The information requested is as follows:

2000–01: 14

2001–02: 14

2002–03: 23.

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what instructions Sport England has been given about senior executive salary ranges. [72471]

Mr. Caborn: No instructions have been given to Sport England on the salary ranges of its senior executives.

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on staffing levels in (a) Sport England headquarters and (b) its regional offices for (i) 2000–01, (ii) 2001–02 and (iii) 2002–03. [72468]

Mr. Caborn: Details of staff levels are in the table.

	Headquarters		Regional offices

[1] Proposed

Sport England estimates that its restructuring will result in savings of £1.2 million a year.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMISSION

National Audit Office

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Chairman of the Public Accounts Commission whether the Commission has considered the National Audit Office's Corporate Plan for 2003–04 to 2005–06. [73004]

Mr. Alan Williams: At its meeting on 9 July 2002 the Commission examined the Comptroller and Auditor General and officials of the National Audit Office on the NAO's Corporate Plan for 2003–04 to 2005–06. The plan envisages an increase in spending by the NAO for 2003–04 of some 10 per cent. compared with the current financial year. The additional funding is required for four main purposes: to implement the wide-ranging recommendations of the Sharman report on public expenditure audit; to maintain service to Parliament at a time of rapid public expenditure growth and more complex service delivery mechanisms; to strengthen the audit of revenue departments; and to enable the NAO to increase from 50 to 60, over time, the number of Value for Money studies it carries out annually, as proposed by the Commission and agreed with the Public Accounts Committee.

After satisfying itself on a number of points, including the robustness of the NAO's expenditure plans and its response to comments contained in external evaluations of its Value for Money studies, the Commission approved the Corporate Plan.

A transcript of the evidence given by the NAO to the Commission will be placed in the Library shortly. A report containing more details about the Commission's activities, including its own response to the Sharman report, together with further information provided by the NAO in response to questions from the Commission, will be published in due course.

SCOTLAND

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the cost of refurbishing each ministerial private office was in each year since May 1997. [37824]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

Ministerial offices are decorated or refurbished as part of a rolling programme, in accordance with the terms of the buildings' lease. Redecoration work was carried out during 2001–02 in ministerial offices in my Department's London building. Final costs are not yet available but are likely to be around £20,000.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people have been employed by her Department in each of the last three years under (a) the New Deal for Young People, (b) the New Deal for the Over 50s and (c) the New Deal for Lone Parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44920]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

Since that date my Department has employed one person under the New Deal for Young People, one under the New Deal for Over 50s and two under the New Deal for Lone Parents. The only costs to my Department have been salary costs.

Staff Pay

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the cost in 2001–02 was of the pay increase to staff in her Department, agencies and the non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible; and what the cost of the forthcoming increase will be in 2002–03. [50402]

Mrs. Liddell: The cost of pay increases to staff in my Department in 2001–02 was £91,000. Details of the cost of pay awards for 2002–03 are not yet available.

Correspondence

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many letters were received by each Minister in her Department in each month since June 1997. [59309]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. The Cabinet Office publishes an annual report on Parliament on the volume of Members' correspondence received by Departments. The report for 2001 was published on 24 May 2002, Official Report, columns 673–76W. Copies of previous reports are available in the Library of the House.

Records of other correspondence by my Department are not kept centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Press Releases

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many press releases were issued by her Department in each month from the creation of her Department in July 1999 to 2001 inclusive. [59471]

Mrs. Liddell: From July 1999 to end 2001, the following number of press releases have been issued by my Department (this does not include operational notes issued to the media):

July 1999: 11
August 1999: 6
September 1999: 13
October 1999: 16
November 1999: 32
December 1999: 20
January 2000: 20
February 2000: 20
March 2000: 30
April 2000: 15
May 2000: 33
June 2000: 34
July 2000: 22
August 2000: 15
September 2000: 27
October 2000: 30
November 2000: 42
December 2000: 27
January 2001: 26
February 2001: 25
March 2001: 33
April 2001: 23
May 2001: 11
June 2001: 12
July 2001: 17
August 2001: 20
September 2001: 20
October 2001: 20
November 2001: 33
December 2001: 20.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many press releases have been issued by her Department in each month of 2002. [59472]

Mrs. Liddell: All news releases issued by the Scotland Office are published on the Department's website. The number of news releases issued in 2002 is as follows, and does not include operational notes issued to the media in connection with public engagements carried out by Ministers:

Up to 19 July: 8
June: 9
May: 20
April: 16
March: 20
February: 18
January: 17.

Eurostar

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment she has made of the importance of securing a Eurostar link from Scotland to the continent. [60789]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government believe that all areas of the country should have good access to Channel Tunnel rail services.

The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) have said that they plan to publish a strategy later this year on facilitating rail services through the Channel Tunnel from various parts of Great Britain.

The SRA announced last year that a consortium led by WS Atkins Consultants has been awarded the contract to undertake a feasibility study to ascertain the need for, and viability of, a new dedicated high speed line between London and the "north".

The study should report in the latter half of this year. The resultant report will feed into proposals for the implementation of the Government's 10-year plan and will inform an SRA strategy document regarding long-term capacity between London, the Midlands, the north of England and Scotland.

Outcomes from this study may identify options for greater interconnection between high speed Channel Tunnel services and those from London to Scotland.

Members of Parliament (Personal Data)

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information is held by her Department on each hon. Member in relation to (a) personal relationships, both current and past, (b) financial status and dealings, (c) connections with companies and interest groups, (d) connections with Governments and (e) published works; and what was held in January 2002. [61831]

Mrs. Liddell: Ministers and officials in this Department have access to published reference sources, as well as to the information about hon. Members made publicly available by the House authorities, for the purpose of parliamentary business.

Ministerial Visits (Wales)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the (a) date, (b) location and (c) purpose was of visits by Ministers in her Department to Wales since 1997; and when she next intends to visit Wales. [62072]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 17 June 2002]: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

I attended a join ministerial committee in Cardiff on 30 October 2001. All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the guidelines set out in the Ministerial Code and Travels by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Neither of my Scotland Office ministerial colleagues has visited Wales in an official capacity and none of us has, at present, any immediate plans to do so.

Female Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the staff of her Department are women; and what the percentage was in June 1997. [66912]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office, on 5 July 2002, Official Report, column 622W.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the overseas trips on departmental business that have been undertaken in each of the last five years by officials in her Department; and what the (a) cost, (b) purpose and (c) result was in each case. [68737]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

Since that date no officials have undertaken overseas trips on departmental business, other than to accompany Scotland Office Ministers.

Hewlett Packard

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions she has had with (a) Scottish Enterprise and (b) the Scottish Executive regarding the recent redundancies announced by Hewlett Packard. [72442]

Mrs. Liddell: I have regular discussions with Scottish Executive and Scottish Enterprise colleagues on a range of issues, including the recent disappointing announcement by Hewlett Packard of the loss of 450 permanent and 180 temporary jobs at its facility in Erskine.

The Scottish Executive takes the lead in responding to local redundancies. Support will be provided to those affected through the Renfrewshire local response team (LRT) in conjunction with the Executive's PACE (Partnership Action for Continuing Employment) framework. This will ensure a rapid response from local agencies in terms of offering advice, support and guidance on the range of retraining/upskilling and employment opportunities.

Air Services

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Government will publish the transportation document on the future of Scotland's air services and airports. [72435]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the oral statement my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport made to the House earlier today at column 848–50.

Unemployment

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions she has had with (a) Scottish Enterprise and (b) the Scottish Executive regarding unemployment in Scotland. [72434]

Mrs. Liddell: I last met Scottish Enterprise on 2 July. I also have regular discussions with Scottish Executive Ministers on a wide range of issues. The latest figures show that claimant count unemployment in Scotland has fallen by 1,900 over the last year to its lowest level for 25 years. There are 2,388,000 people in work in Scotland, the highest for a generation.

Funding Policy

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations she made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer prior to publication of the third Statement on Funding Policy as it affects Scotland. [72408]

Mrs. Liddell: I have discussions with Treasury Ministers on a range of subjects. The Statement of Funding Policy sets out the arrangements that govern funding for the devolved administrations. These arrangements provide a fair, transparent and flexible basis for deciding spending plans in Scotland.

North Sea Tax

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations she has received from oil companies since the announcement of the North Sea tax changes. [72409]

Mrs. Liddell: Following the Chancellor's Budget statement, I have had contact with a number of companies involved in oil and gas operations and held a meeting with UKOOA, which represents 31 oil and gas exploration and production companies operating in the UK.

Anglo-Irish Ministerial Meetings

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when and where Ministers in her Department have held meetings with Ministers and officials of the Irish Government since 1 June 2000; which Ministers were involved in each meeting; which Irish Government departments were involved in each meeting; and which Ministers and officials from the Irish Government attended each meeting. [72697]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Europe, on 20 June 2002, Official Report, col. 533W.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations she made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer with regards to public expenditure in Scotland prior to the publication of the most recent comprehensive spending review. [72407]

Mrs. Liddell: I have discussions with Treasury Ministers on a range of subjects. I welcome the outcome of the comprehensive spending review, which produced an excellent settlement for Scotland. Our successful management of the economy and sound public finances mean that, by 2005–06, spending will be £4.1 billion higher in Scotland than in 2002–03. This shows that Scotland continues to benefit from being part of the United Kingdom and that devolution is working for the benefit of all Scotland's people.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General how many people have been employed by her Department in each of the last three years under (a) the New Deal for Young People, (b) the New Deal for the Over-50s and (c) the New Deal for Lone Parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44915]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland at column 981W.

Staff Pay

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General what the cost in 2001–02 was of the pay increase to staff in her Department, agencies and the non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible; and what the cost of the forthcoming increase will be in 2002–03. [50401]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland at column 981W.

Female Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General what percentage of the staff of her Office are women; and what the percentage was in June 1997. [66913]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office on 5 July 2002, Official Report, column 622W.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Consultation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the public consultations undertaken by her Department since 1997, indicating for each consultation (a) if copies were available online, (b) if copies were available in print, (c) the date the time period given for responses opened and (d) the date the time period given for responses closed. [69795]

Estelle Morris: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which consultation documents published by her Department in 2001 were not made available as paper copies. [69824]

Estelle Morris: All consultation documents published by my Department in 2001 were made available in both paper and electronic formats.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether consultation documents published by her Department in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [70086]

Estelle Morris: My Department reproduced the consultation criteria from the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations in 25 per cent. of the consultation documents published in 2001. All on-line consultations have two available links to the Cabinet Office Code of Practice.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether her Department has a designated consultation co-ordinator in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [69825]

Estelle Morris: Yes, my Department does have a designated consultation co-ordinator.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many consultation documents published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form his Department has monitored and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [69822]

Estelle Morris: All 66 consultations carried out by my Department in 2001 were available electronically, in printed form and were included in the Cabinet Office monitoring and evaluation return for 2001.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many complaints her Department has received about its 2001 consultations by (a) electronic and (b) printed means. [69823]

Estelle Morris: I have not received any formal complaints about my Department's 2001 consultations. However, I have responded to feedback from respondents to improve consultations.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in what format her Department has published the results of its 2001 written consultations. [69846]

Estelle Morris: The favoured format for publication of results is electronic, via the Consultation website at www.dfes.gov.uk/consultations. Other methods have also been used including: press releases, notifying individuals and by placing results in the House of Commons Library.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how long her Department allowed for consultation on each consultation document it published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form. [70085]

Estelle Morris: Of the 66 consultations my Department published in 2001, 36 per cent. allowed 12 weeks or more for consultation, 27 per cent. allowed 8–12 weeks and 18 per cent. under 8 weeks. All consultations were available in printed and electronic formats. In planning consultations with the public, my Department complies with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultation, applying formal exemptions where appropriate. The introduction to the Code of Practice also states that > "occasionally, being a responsive government means acting quickly, because it is clearly in the public interest to do so".

Student Funding

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much capital was made available to (a) FE and (b) HE in each of the years 1992–93 to 2001–02 as expressed at 2001–02 prices. [65396]

Margaret Hodge: The capital funding made available was as follows:

£ million

	Capital funding FE[1]	Capital funding HE[1]
1992–93	171	281
1993–94	185	389
1994–95	189	387
1995–96	187	409
1996–97	0	0
1998–99	0	0
1999–2000	42	167
2000–01	56	243
2001–02[2]	136	381

[1] 2001–02 prices

[2] Estimated

Notes:

1. All figures are in 2001–02 prices, are rounded to £ million and exclude student loans.
2. All figures from 1992–93 to 2000–01 cover the separately identified capital grants made available by the Department to the Funding Councils.
3. The division between FE and HE in 1992–93 is based on allocations made by the then Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council (PCFC) and the Universities Funding Council (UFC) respectively.
4. The figure for HE in 1992–93 includes £9 million expenditure on Higher Education outside of the Universities Funding Council.
5. For 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99 no separate capital payments were made and the capital was funded from the Councils' allocations and not disaggregated.
6. For 1999–2000 and 2000–01, figures cover some additional capital grants made available separately by the Department. Figures for HE in the years 1999–2000 to 2001–02 include moneys made available to higher education institutions by the Office of Science and Technology (OST) through the Joint Infrastructure Fund (JIF).
7. The figures for 2001–02 cover total capital expenditure by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) and Higher Education Funding Council (HEFC) themselves which, under resource budgeting form 2001–02, counts as departmental expenditure.

Sixth Form Colleges

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much of the additional funding in the spending review will be allocated to sixth form colleges; and when she expects funding for sixth form colleges to be increased to match the level allocated to sixth forms in schools. [71606]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: As a result of the spending review, the core unit of funding per full-time equivalent student for further education colleges will increase 1 per cent. in real terms in each of the next three years in return for improved outcomes from colleges. We will be agreeing new improvement targets with colleges to make sure we maximise the return on these resources. We are now considering further the outcome of the spending review and other decisions on allocations, including to further education, will be announced in the autumn. We remain committed to bringing up the level of funding for colleges towards that of school sixth forms. This will take time and can be done only as resources allow.

Children's Centres

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the activities to be carried out in the Children's Centres referred to in the Chancellor's Comprehensive Spending Review; and what funding will be available for them. [71081]

Estelle Morris: Children's Centres will provide a core offer of services including high quality early years education and child care. They will also provide extensive parental outreach, family support services and child and family health services.

The Comprehensive Spending Review announced a £1.5 billion combined budget for child care, early years and Sure Start by 2005–06, which will be committed to the development of integrated services, including the development of new Children's Centres.

Additional Investment

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much additional investment will result from the spending review for each (a) primary and (b) secondary school in Cheltenham. [71753]

Estelle Morris: I will take the decisions on the distribution of the additional resources provided by the spending review between and within the various sectors of education later in the year. Decisions on how each primary and secondary school on Cheltenham will be funded will continue to be taken by Gloucestershire local education authority but typical primary and secondary schools in Cheltenham, as in the rest of England, will get a year-on-year increase of £10,000 and £50,000 in direct funding through School Standards Grant and devolved formula capital.

Press Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) full time equivalents were employed by her press office and (b) secondees were placed in her press office in the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [70536]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 22 July 2002]: The following table shows the average number of Press Officers employed in the DfEE/DfES press office in each of the last 5 years:

	Total (fte)
1997	20.5
1998	29.5
1999	27.5
2000	28
2001	23
2002	26

In addition, for each of the years an average of eight administrative staff were also employed in the Press Office. Since 2001 there have been two posts available in the press office for short-term secondments for staff from other areas of the Department (posts filled sporadically so not included in table). In 2001 there was one press officer on long-term secondment to the Press Office. Currently there are two. They are included in the table.

Higher and Further Education

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the expected total of spending on (a) higher and (b) further education was (i) in 2002–03 and 2003–04 before the CSR and (ii) in 2003–04, 2004–05 and 2005–06 after the CSR. [71388]

Estelle Morris [holding answer 22 July 2002]: Prior to the Spending Review 2002, the total publicly planned funding to higher education institutions and on further education in England was:

£ billion

	Higher education[1]	Further education
2002–03	6.1	4.3
2003–04	6.4	4.6

[1] These figures are taken from the grant letter issued to the Higher Education Funding Council for England in November 2001.

The new total allocations for higher and further education in 2003–04, 2004–05 and 2005–06 following the Spending Review 2002 will be announced later.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what regulations exist on the space provided for the education of students in further education colleges. [65363]

Margaret Hodge: There are no such regulations for further education colleges.

School Playing Fields

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many school playing fields have been sold since 1997. [68971]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 22 July 2002]: Section 77 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 was introduced on 1 October 1998 to stop the indiscriminate sale of school playing fields that occurred in the 1980s and early to mid 1990s. There are no central records of how many school playing fields were sold before October 1998.

A total of 115 applications to sell areas of school playing field larger than a small sports pitch for the under 10s—that is, over 2,000m^2, have been approved since October 1998. Some 50 of these approved applications involved sports pitches at closed schools, while a further 17 were at operating schools where the playing fields were no longer used by the schools and were not needed by other local schools. In a further 15 cases, alternative sports pitches have been provided to replace those that have been lost. In all cases, we have ensured that the remaining playing fields would meet the full needs of the schools involved and of other schools in the local area.

Applications to sell school playing fields are only approved where it is clear that any proceeds will be used to improve school sports provision or education facilities. Some of the proceeds from these approved applications have been earmarked to provide new sports halls and to improve other sports facilities at schools, such as new all-weather pitches and to bring other, poorly drained pitches back into use. The rest of the proceeds are being used to help lever up standards in our schools—for example, by providing modern, up to date, teaching accommodation, such as science and technology classrooms. In a number of cases, the proceeds are to be used to help build new schools or to enable multi site schools to consolidate on to one site.

All applications made since 16 July 2001 are scrutinised by the School Playing Fields Advisory Panel to make sure that they meet our published criteria. The panel comprises representatives from the National Playing Fields Association, the Central Council of Physical Recreation, Learning through Landscapes, the National Association of Headteachers and the Local Government Association.

Dyslexia

Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action she is taking to assist adult students who have ADHD and dyslexia. [70157]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government is committed to encouraging more students, including those with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) and dyslexia, to continue in education and training and to raising attainment levels.

We have introduced a range of legislation designed to ensure that people with learning difficulties and/or disabilities are not discriminated against in respect of their access to education and training. As a result the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) is required, under section 13 of the Learning and Skills Act 2000, to consider the needs of people with learning difficulties and/or disabilities in the discharge of its duties to secure facilities for education, training and work experience.

From September 2002, it will be unlawful for those bodies responsible for the provision of further education, higher education, adult and community learning and youth services to discriminate against disabled students and other disabled people and they will be required to make reasonable adjustments to provision where disabled students or other disabled people might otherwise be substantially disadvantaged.

In addition we have made available a range of learning and learner support funds to enable access to and participation in post-16 learning. These funds recognise the need for additional support that may arise for an individual with a learning difficulty and/or disability and help us to provide equality of opportunity and tackle social exclusion.

The department and the LSC are currently reviewing the arrangements for the funding of additional learning support across the post-16 education and training sector and will consider any necessary changes as part of the review.

Apprenticeships

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the (a) past, (b) current and (c) future funding of (i) HNDs and (ii) HNCs within apprenticeship training. [70296]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Before 1999–2000 the further education funding council provided funding for HNDs and HNCs to colleges and universities; since then funding has come from the higher education funding council for England and is allocated through the council's normal funding method for teaching. HND and HNC courses do not form a compulsory part of apprenticeship training.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many modern apprenticeships there were in each of the past 10 years; what the average cost is of a modern apprenticeship; and what percentage of modern apprenticeships are (a) commenced and (b) completed by (i) men and (ii) women. [71133]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: (a) Advanced Modern Apprenticeships (AMA, formerly known as Modern Apprenticeships) were fully operational from September 1995. Foundation Modern Apprenticeships (FMA, formerly known as National Traineeships) were introduced nationally in September 1997.

The numbers of Modern Apprenticeships (Foundation and Advanced) started are as follows:

	AMA and FMA starts	% men	% women
1995–96	25,800	66	34
1996–97	70,300	54	46
1997–98	84,200	53	47
1998–99	119,100	50	50
1999–2000	170,700	49	51
2000–01	188,300	49	51
2001–02[1]	167,800	50	50

[1] Starts after 25 March 2001 exclude transfers between AMA, FMA and Other (work-based) Training.

(b) Information on completion of modern apprenticeship (MA) framework is not available.

An average figure for the cost of a modern apprenticeship is not available because the funding paid to training providers varies according to the length of stay, apprenticeship framework, the occupational sector, the age of the apprentice and from year to year.

In 2001–02 payments by the Learning and Skills Council to learning providers for AMAs and FMAs amounted to approximately £432.5 million but this does not include other costs such as administration, learner expenses or publicity.

The funding rates for those in learning on MAs 2002–03, and completing training, are based on the following:

Advanced modern apprenticeship	Learners aged 16–18 years	Learners aged 19–24 years
Occupational Sector	Total Funding (£)	Total Funding (£)

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to replace individual learning accounts with a successor programme; and if she will make a statement. [70450]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The Government is committed to introducing a successor scheme to Individual Learning Accounts. An announcement will be made in the autumn.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many learning providers have been investigated by the Individual Learning Accounts Compliance Unit since 1 November 2001; and how many prosecutions have taken place. [70447]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 18 July 2002]: Since 1 November 2001, 698 registered Individual Learning Account (ILA) providers have been referred to the ILA Compliance Unit. Currently 145 providers are being followed up through correspondence; three of these have been referred to the Department's Special Investigation Unit (SIU) and a further 17 providers have been subject to visits by the audit review team. 96 other providers have been referred directly to SIU. 77 of those referred to SIU have been passed to the police. So far no prosecutions have resulted from this action. A further 440 providers are awaiting follow-up.

In total 132 cases have been passed to the SIU; of these, 98 have been referred to the police. To date there have been 45 arrests, which have resulted in 10 people accepting cautions and charges being brought against 13 individuals, 12 of whom are awaiting court appearances. One person has been convicted.

Arts and Humanities Research Funding

Mike Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the results were of the review of Arts and Humanities Research Funding announced by the Minister of State for Lifelong Learning and Higher Education in September 2001. [72880]

Margaret Hodge: The review, which was commissioned in conjunction with education Ministers in the devolved Administrations, concluded that the current Arts and Humanities Research Board has done much since its creation in 1998 to establish an effective system for awarding research grants and funding for postgraduate students. It recommended that there should now be a further step, the creation of an Arts and Humanities Research Council. It concludes that this body should have UK-wide responsibilities and the same status as the existing Research Councils, with which it should be closely linked. A copy of the review report has been placed in the Library. The Government will respond to the report in due course, when there has been chance fully to consult the devolved Administrations on the way forward.

SMEs

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many SMEs have lost their Investors in People Award status as of January; and if she will make a statement. [70195]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 22 July 2002]: The numbers of small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs) that have lost their IiP award at January 2002 are as follows:

Size of enterprise (UK wide)	Total revoked since the first IiP recognitions in October 1991
Less than 10	289
10–49	908
50–249	975

Investors in People has a very high customer retention rate. Over the past decade it has maintained a customer retention rate of over 90 per cent. on organisations that have been recognised.

Child Care (Regulation)

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many child care professionals the Government estimate are working in the UK. [69139]

Estelle Morris: The latest published Childcare Workforce Survey shows that in spring 2001 there were 274,520 paid employees, working in nurseries (94,294), playgroups (79,800), Out of School Clubs (28,126) and child minders (72,300), in England.

The latest quarterly Labour Force Survey for spring 2001, which uses a wider definition of child care and covers the whole of the UK, shows that there were 305,000 paid employees within the child care sector.

Nursery Education

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of three-year-olds were in nursery education on (a) 1 May 1997, (b) 31 December 1998, (c) 31 December 2001 and (d) the latest date for which information is available; and if she will make a statement. [69296]

Estelle Morris [holding answer 11 July 2002]: The available information on three-year-olds in early years education provision is shown in the following table.

Percentage[1] of three-year-olds[2] by type of early years education provider 1997–2002 (provisional estimates) position in January each year—England

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002

[1] Number of three-year-olds attending provider expressed as a percentage of the three-year-old population.

[2] Any child attending more than one provider may have been counted twice.

[3] Includes some local authority providers (other than schools) registered to receive nursery education grants; excludes independent schools and providers not registered to receive nursery education grants.

[4] Not available.

[5] Includes reception and other classes not designated as nursery classes.

[6] Includes general hospital schools.

[7] Private and voluntary provider information was not available for the years 1997–99.

We are committed to providing all three-year-olds, whose parents want one, with a free nursery education place by September 2004.

Latest figures on three-year-olds in early years education providers were published by the Department in the Statistical First Release "Provision for Children Under Five Years of Age in England—2002 (Provisional Estimates) (09/2002)" in May 2002, a copy of which is available from the Library. An electronic copy of this publication is also available on the Department's website (www.dfes.gov.uk/ statistics).

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the annual cost is of providing a child with five full days per week in a nursery school in the latest year for which figures are available [69749]

Estelle Morris: My Department does not collect the information requested.

In England all funding for full and part-time nursery education places for four-year-olds, along with the majority of funding for three-year-olds, in the local authority maintained sector, is determined locally.

The balance of funding for three-year-olds comes through the Nursery Education Grant. In 2002–03 the grant for a free, part-time early education place for three-year-olds is £1,218 per child. This funding purchases five, two and a half hour sessions per week, for 33 weeks per year.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidelines exist on the provision of pre-school education to children with special educational needs. [69721]

Estelle Morris: All children in the early years should be treated as individuals to ensure each has equal opportunity to develop their full potential. This message is reinforced throughout the joint DfES/Qualifications and Curriculum Authority publication, "Curriculum guidance for the foundation stage", which has been made available to all early years practitioners. The guidance stresses the importance of early intervention and the key role practitioners play in identifying learning needs, and in the planning required to support those needs.

The requirements of the Nursery Education Grant require all early years settings that receive it to have an SEN policy and have regard to the revised SEN Code of Practice. We included a new chapter in the revised SEN Code of Practice entitled, "Identification, Assessment and Provision in Early Education Settings", which expands significantly on SEN provision for children under five years of age. In addition, the SEN and Disability Act 2001 enables private, voluntary and independent sector settings to request statutory assessments for the four year olds in their care, and for three year olds by 2004 when we expect universal provision for this age group.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what financial support is available to children with special educational needs to attend mainstream pre-school in the same circumstances as other children. [69722]

Estelle Morris: In March 2001, we announced a £25 million three year programme to support children with disabilities or special educational needs in the early years. This funding supports a number of DfES SEN and disability initiatives all of which are focused on enabling children with SEN to participate in mainstream provision. These initiatives include £9.5 million for local training over three years of identified Special Educational Needs Co-ordinators (SENCOs) in the private, voluntary and independent sector early years settings; £11 million additional funding for LEAs and Early Years Development and Child care Partnerships (EYDCPs) this financial year and the next, to support and improve existing SEN support activities; £3 million for support services such as Portage schemes, projects aimed at early identification and intervention for SEN, and better resources for children with low incidence disability; and £1 million for the development of national training materials to support local SEN training activity. The funding has also resourced 4 Area SENCO pilot projects in 2001–02. We are drafting guidance following the conclusion of the pilot projects on the role and objectives of Area SENCOs, and encouraging EYDCPs to start developing networks of "Area SENCOs" who will work with early years settings by the autumn of this year.

The Department continues to work closely with EYDCPs who are making SEN and disability support a priority over the three financial years 2001–02 to 2002–03 and 2003–04. In 2002–03 we asked them through the statutory planning process, to develop local joined up SEN and disability support/resource strategies, and to build networks with local education, social and health support services and other key local agencies. We also asked EYDCPs to provide us with details on planned working groups in 2002–03 involving key local services and to highlight the difficulties in bringing these services together.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. May: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission when he will answer the questions from the hon. Member for Maidenhead of 11 March (a) on the electoral systems used for elections to (i) the office of London Mayor, (ii) the Greater London Assembly, (iii) the Scottish Parliament and (iv) the Welsh Assembly, (b) on the closed list electoral system for the European Parliament, (c) concerning the electoral system used for electing the House, (d) concerning electoral systems that may be used for electing the elected element of a reformed second chamber in Parliament and (e) concerning electoral systems used for electing directly-elected mayors in England and Wales. [71490]

Mr. Beith: I have already written to apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in replying to her questions of 11 March. At the time she asked similar questions of the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions. I regret that her separate questions to the Speaker's Committee were not noticed. Each of her questions sought information on the plans of the Electoral Commission for work in the areas listed. This answer deals with all five of them.

I understand that the Electoral Commission has no plans to carry out any reviews of existing or proposed electoral systems in the UK. However, the Commission will, in accordance with its statutory duties, report on the administration of elections to the European, United Kingdom and Scottish Parliaments, and elections to the Welsh and Northern Ireland Assemblies. No such duty exists in relation to other elections mentioned, although the Commission is required to keep under review, and from time-to-time submit reports to the Secretary of State on, a range of elections and referendums including local elections in England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

It is expected that these statutory election reports from the Electoral Commission will examine a wide range of issues linked to the administration and conduct of the election in question, including levels of voter participation and public understanding of the voting system. However, the Commission has taken the view that it would not be appropriate for it to adopt any policy view in relation to the merits of current or alternative systems of voting while there is a prospect of the Government asking the Commission to conduct a referendum on the use of a form or proportional representation for voting in elections to the House of Commons.

Financial Contributions to Political Parties

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, on behalf of the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what plans the Commission has to review legislation regarding financial contributions to political parties. [71030]

Mr. Beith: I understand from the Chairman that the Electoral Commission will be launching this summer a review of the funding of political parties, which will examine a number of issues including the capping of donations. The Commission is also undertaking a review of the operation of the financial regulatory framework set out in the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000, and a separate review of the policy development grants scheme that it administers.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) affirmative and (b) negative resolutions his Department plans to make in the next 12 months. [61616]

Mr. Leslie: The negative and affirmative resolutions planned over the next 12 months will be announced by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in the normal course of business in the usual manner.

Homelessness

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what statutory powers are vested in (a) local housing authorities, (b) local social services authorities and (c) other authorities to offer financial assistance to intentionally homeless families with a child in order to secure for that child a permanent home with his or her family. [69240]

Mr. McNulty: Under section 190(2)(b) of the Housing Act 1996, local housing authorities have a duty to ensure that applicants who are eligible for assistance, intentionally homeless and who have dependant children are provided with advice and assistance in any attempts they may make to secure accommodation for themselves. Advice and assistance may include the provision of financial assistance.

Under section 17 of the Children Act 1989, social services authorities have a duty:

(a) to safeguard and promote the welfare of children in their area who are in need; and

(b) so far as is consistent with that duty, to promote the upbringing of such children by their families.

Where the child is a child in need solely as a result of family homelessness the social services authority can assist the family to obtain accommodation, possibly by providing temporary accommodation or a rent deposit, if they consider that this is the best way of meeting his needs.

Under section 2 of the Local Government Act 2000, local authorities have a power to promote the economic, social or environmental well-being of their area, which includes a power to give financial assistance. If the authority chooses, the power in section 2 can be exercised for the benefit of individuals in the area. This power does not apply where an activity is prohibited by other legislation.

The Government have introduced an amendment to the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Bill, currently being considered by Parliament, that will curtail the support that local authorities can provide to certain categories of new arrivals in the UK who seek support.

Sub-post Offices

Clive Efford: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what discussions he has had with the Department of Trade and Industry regarding the need to maintain sub-post offices in deprived urban areas; and if he will make a statement; [69510]

(2) what action he is taking to support sub-post offices in deprived urban areas. [69509]

Mr. McNulty: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has been working closely with the Department of Trade and Industry to develop a scheme to maintain sub-post offices in deprived urban areas. In particular ring-fenced funding of £15 million has been set aside to support a fund that is being set up to contribute to practical measures to improve and modernise post office premises in deprived urban areas.

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the degree to which cost of living elements are adequately weighted in the local government funding formula; and by what mechanism sparsity and rurality elements are included in the present mechanism. [71853]

Mr. Raynsford: The cost of living is allowed for within the local government grant distribution system by the Area Cost Adjustment. We are currently consulting on options for a new grant distribution formula, and this includes a range of alternatives to the existing Area Cost Adjustment. We will be carefully considering all the views that are put to us during the consultation period before making a final assessment on the best way forward.

In the existing formula, sparsity and rurality are reflected by using a population sparsity indicator that reflects the number of hectares per capita in each authority. This indicator is used in the current formulae for education, elderly domiciliary social services, police and environmental, protective and cultural services. Full details are in the Local Government Finance Report that we publish each year, and which is available in the Libraries of the House.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how he will ensure that the new financial system for local authorities will provide an effective framework within which councils can initiate innovative ways of delivering customer-food services. [69986]

Mr. Raynsford: Our comprehensive agenda for reform of the local government finance system was set out in last December's White Paper "Strong Local leadership—Quality Public Services". Our finance reforms will give councils more space to innovate in all areas of service delivery by providing local authorities with greater freedom to borrow, invest, trade, charge and set spending priorities.

Local Government Act

Mr. Love: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on progress on the review of access to information in local authorities relating to the Local Government Act 2000. [73109]

Mr. Raynsford: The implementation plan which we issued, following the publication of the 2001 White Paper "Strong Local Leadership, quality Public Services" indicated that we would be reviewing the local authority access to information regime from June 2002. Officials have now begun discussions with the Information Commissioner, the Local Government Association and others to identify key issues for analysis in the review.

We intend, as the next step, to publish during the summer a policy paper to examine the key issues involved, including the future implications for the local government sector of the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act 2000. The paper will seek to identify practical issues which local authorities are now facing and invite views, in particular from councils, the Local Government Association and the Campaign for Freedom of Information, on the issues discussed and to come forward with examples of good practice. We will place copies of the policy paper the House Library.

We plan to continue working with the Local Government Association, the Information Commissioner and others to secure the most sound and practical implementation by local government of the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act 2000. We want to link this with a streamlining of the current access to information requirements to maintain and re-enforce the culture of openness and transparency which is essential to effective, democratic local government.

Local Councillors

Paul Clark: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he intends to make regulations governing the local investigation and determination of misconduct allegations concerning local councillors. [73108]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department issued a consultation paper on 20 May, setting out a proposed framework within which the Standards Board for England would refer certain allegations of misconduct for local investigation and determination by standards committees. We have received around 1,000 responses to that consultation which we are now considering carefully. We intend in October, having had regard to these responses, to make regulations putting in place a regime for local investigation and determination of misconduct allegations.

Annual Report

Mr. Beith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost was of publishing his Department's annual report and those of the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions in each of the past five years; and if he will provide a breakdown of the costs incurred. [70104]

Mr. Raynsford: Before June 2002, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was part of the Cabinet Office, and its expenditure and work were therefore not separately reported. The Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions was created in June 2001, from the former Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR). The publication costs of the DETR Annual Reports for 1998–2000 can be identified only at disproportionate cost; those for the 2000–01 report were approximately £5,200. The final publication costs for the DTLR report for 2001–02, which was published last month are not yet known. I will write to the right hon. Member with the details when they are available.

Office Accommodation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent in relation to changes in office accommodation which have taken place as a result of the change in Department structure since June; and if he will make a statement. [70743]

Mr. Leslie: Expenditure since June to date on changes in office accommodation resulting from the change in Department structure amounts to £16,000 plus VAT.

Rebranding

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent by his Department in rebranding his Department, broken down by (a) design of the departmental logo, (b) design and orders of new stationery, (c) Department signage and (d) website designs, as a result of the Department structural change in June; and if he will make a statement. [70746]

Mr. Leslie: ODPM uses the Royal Crest as the main part of its corporate identity and has incurred no 'design' costs as such. A nominal amount has been spent on originating artwork for print and electronic publishing.

My Department's costs have been low as it makes extensive use of electronic templates, keeps low stocks of stationery and generally uses out of date stationery for purposes such as internal photocopying and notepads.

Cost breakdown is as follows:

(a) logo £525 plus VAT

(b) stationery £7,400 including value of existing stock

(c) signage £3,600 plus VAT

(d) website £3,145.

The figure of £3,145 for the website represents half the cost of dividing one site into two sites. The other half of the cost is attributable to the Department for Transport.

Consultancy Fees

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent on consultancy fees in relation to the change in Department structure since June; and if he will make a statement. [70744]

Mr. Leslie: Additional consultancy costs of £10,858 (plus VAT) have been incurred, under an existing contract, for estates advice following the creation of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Department for Transport.

Standard Spending Assessment

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list those unitary authorities that made representations regarding the review of the SSA formula. [70951]

Mr. Leslie: We have had at least one written representation making at least one point relating to the SSA system from the following shire unitary authorities since the publication of the Green Paper "Modernising Local Government Finance" in September 2000:

Bath and North East Somerset
Blackburn with Darwen
Blackpool
Bournemouth
Bracknell Forest
Brighton and Hove
Bristol
Darlington
Derby
East Riding of Yorkshire
Halton
Hartlepool
Isle of Wight Council
Kingston upon Hull
Leicester
Luton
Medway
Middlesbrough
Milton Keynes
North East Lincolnshire
North Lincolnshire
North Somerset
Nottingham
Peterborough
Plymouth
Poole
Portsmouth
Reading
Redcar and Cleveland
Rutland
Slough
South Gloucestershire
Stockton-on-Tees
Stoke-on-Trent
Swindon
Telford and the Wrekin
Thurrock
Torbay
Warrington
West Berkshire
Windsor and Maidenhead
Wokingham
York.

Others may have made representations either before that point, via representative groupings of authorities, in meetings with Ministers, or when talking to officials. As of Tuesday 15 July, we have not yet received any formal responses from unitary authorities to the current consultation.

Firefighters' Pay

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the formula is for calculating firefighters' pay; and what other public servants have their pay determined by similar calculations. [71017]

Mr. Leslie: Firefighters' pay is negotiated between the local authorities employers and the Fire Brigades' Union in the National Joint Council for Local Authority Fire Brigades. Annual pay increases since 1978 have been determined by a formula linking the pay of a fully qualified fire-fighter to the earnings of the top quarter of adult male manual workers.

No other public service pay group has their pay determined by the same formula but Police forces in England and Wales also have their pay determined by a formula. The formula used since 1994 is the median of private sector non-manual pay settlements in the past year.

Departmental Reorganisation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes there have been in the total wage expenditure budget of his Department since the departmental reorganisation in June; and if he will make a statement. [71450]

Mr. Leslie: There have been no changes in the total pay budget associated with the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions' total administration resources. The division of these resources between the two new Departments—the Department for Transport and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister—is currently being finalised. However, no additional resources are being made available from the Exchequer as a result of the departmental reorganisation.

Air-conditioning

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 8 March 2002, Official Report, column 584W, on air-conditioning, what his policy is on implementation of the ban on the use of chlorofluorocarbons in chiller plant in buildings owned by his Department; when a decision will be taken on a choice of air-conditioning for the QEII building to replace the present refrigerants of chlorofluorocarbon provenance; and whether it is intended that the new provision will contain not-in-kind and HFC refrigerants. [71597]

Mr. Leslie: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends not to purchase products that contain chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs), hydrochlorofluorocarbons (HCFCs) or any other ozone-depleting substances, where there are suitable alternatives.

In respect of the QEII conference centre, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Crawley (Laura Moffatt) on 9 July 2002, Official Report, column 874–75W.

Town and Country Finance

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to meet the leaders of the Town and Country Finance Issues Group. [71852]

Mr. Raynsford: There are no meetings fixed at present, but I would be happy to meet the TACFIG group to discuss the current consultation on the system to distribute general grant to local authorities.

Children in Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 1 July 2002, Official Report, column 196W, on children in care, what figures his Department holds on the number of children that are (a) homeless, (b) in bed and breakfast accommodation and (c) in temporary accommodation. [71887]

Mr. McNulty: Summary information on activity under statutory homelessness provisions is reported to the Department by local authorities in England. This includes the number of households accepted under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 and 1996 Housing Acts as being eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need, and the number of these households resident in various types of temporary accommodation, including bed and breakfast, at the end of each quarter.

Precise information on the total number of children is not collected, but from data reported we estimate there were some 112,500 children in households accepted as homeless during 2001–02. Available information indicates that on 31 March 2002 there were some 6,500 households living in bed and breakfast style accommodation, and the Bed & Breakfast Unit have estimated that this represents around 11,000 children. There were 40,700 households with dependent children in all forms of temporary accommodation provided by local authorities for the homeless, but no estimates for the number of children are available.

Mobile Phone Operators

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he plans to review the mobile phone operators' voluntary code of operation on planning. [71790]

Mr. McNulty: My noble Friend the then Minister for Housing, Planning and Regeneration met representatives of the five mobile phone network operators on 8 May 2002 to discuss their progress in meeting their commitments to best mast siting practice and the audit arrangements that they have put in place to assess continuing compliance with the commitments.

Work currently under way to revise the Code of Best Practice on Mobile Phone Masts is building on the commitments and on our guidance in Planning Policy Guidance Note 8 (Telecommunications) to improve consultation on mast proposals with local communities and local planning authorities. The Working Group established to take that work forward will monitor the operation of the revised code and effectiveness of the commitments themselves.

Empty Homes

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many empty homes there are (a) in England and (b) in each county or metropolitan district; and what each represents as percentage of housing stock. [72282]

Mr. McNulty: The number of empty homes in England at 1 April 2001 (latest data available) was 755,100. This figure represents 3.5 per cent. of all housing stock.

The number of empty homes in each county, unitary or metropolitan district at 1 April 2001 is shown in the table. Also given is the percentage of housing stock the vacant dwellings represent.

Sustainable Communities

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes will take place to the planned total house numbers in each county or unitary authority as a result of his statement on sustainable communities; and how many houses there were in each in 1997. [72285]

Mr. McNulty: We expect all local authorities to deliver the housing strategy set out in regional planning guidance. We will work with regional and local partners in the four growth areas identified in regional planning guidance for the South East to accelerate the proposals for significant growth. Information on the number of dwellings is given in the Department's Annual Housing Investment Programme Operational Information return submitted by local authorities. A copy of this information is held in the Library of the House of Commons.

Access for Disabled People

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the Government proposes to amend Part M of the Building Regulations relating to access for disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [72303]

Mr. Leslie: My officials, with the assistance of the Building Regulations Advisory Committee, have been preparing proposals for amendments to Part M of the Building Regulations relating to access for disabled people. The proposals for public consultation will be published during the summer recess. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House, and the document will be available online on the website of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, and in hard copy on request. The document will be available in a range of formats to accommodate the needs of people with disabilities.

Planning

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what were the median and upper and lower decile periods between (a) the receipt and determination of planning applications, (b) appeals against refusal of planning permission and inquiries into those appeals, (c) inquiries into appeals against refusal of planning permission and inspectors' reports thereon and (d) publication of inspectors' reports and determinations by Ministers in the last year for which information is available. [72320]

Mr. McNulty: Available information for the last financial year (1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002) is as follows:

(a) Data are not collected from local authorities on the time taken to determine every planning application. Information from district authorities is collected on the number of applications decided within eight weeks of receipt, between eight and 13 weeks and over 13 weeks.

2001–02	Percentage
Planning applications decided
Less than eight weeks	65
Eight to 13 weeks	18
More than 13 weeks	17

(b) and (c)

2001–02	Upper decile	Median decile	Lower decile
(b) From start date (notice of appeal) to inquiry in weeks	15	19	31
(c) From start date to submission of report in weeks	28	58	160

(d) Information on cases which fall to be determined by the Secretary of State (recovered appeals and called in planning applications) is available on the following basis:

Number of recovered appeals decided within eight weeks, between eight and 13 weeks, and over 13 weeks from receipt of inspector's report

2001–02	Percentage
Recovered appeals cases determined by the Secretary of State
Less than eight weeks	44
Eight to 13 weeks	13
More than 13 weeks	43

Number of called in planning applications decided within 13 weeks, between 13 and 20 weeks, and over 20 weeks from receipt of inspector's report

2001–02	Percentage
Called in planning applications cases determined by the Secretary of State
Less than 13 weeks	36
13 to 20 weeks	18
More than 20 weeks	46

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the proposals for the revision of Part M of the Building Regulations will be published for consultation. [72870]

Mr. Leslie: My officials, with the assistance of the Building Regulations Advisory Committee, have been preparing proposals for amendments to Part M of the Building Regulations relating to access for disabled people. The proposals for public consultation will be published during the summer recess. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House, and the document will be available online on the website of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, and in hard copy on request. The document will be available in a range of formats to accommodate the needs of people with disabilities.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received on his proposals for planning reforms. [72091]

Mr. McNulty: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has published a comprehensive statement on the outcome of consultation on the planning Green Paper and copies are available in the Library.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures he intends to bring forward to use the planning system to raise the required density of dwellings in new developments. [72816]

Mr. McNulty: Planning Policy Guidance note 3: Housing, states in paragraph 58 that local authorities should "avoid developments that make inefficient use of land (those at less than 30 dwellings per hectare net)".

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends to intervene in planning applications for housing that involve a density of less than 30 dwellings per hectare.

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the way in which proposals to reconcile provision for the retention by local authorities of tariffs for the granting of planning permission on major developments as set out in the document, "Reforming Planning Obligations", can be implemented alongside proposals for the reform of the local authority capital finance system as set out in the document, Local Government Finance Formula Grant Distribution-A Consultation Paper. [70111]

Mr. Leslie: We do not consider that there is a significant relationship between proposals on the retention of receipts from planning tariffs and the options for reforming how revenue support for capital finance is distributed, as set out in the Formula Grant distribution consultation paper. Therefore no such assessment has been made.

Parish Councillors

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many resignations of parish councillors he has received notice of by reason of the new Model Code of Conduct for Parish Councils. [72806]

Mr. Leslie: I refer to the answer the Minister for Local Government, my right hon. Friend the Member for Greenwich and Woolwich (Mr. Raynsford), gave to the hon. Member for North Norfolk (Norman Lamb) on 21 June 2001, Official Report, column 629W.

Since that answer, some 20 more parish councillors (making around 50 in all) have written saying that they have resigned in response to the introduction of the code.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he is intending to review next the new Model Code of Conduct for Parish Councillors. [72805]

Mr. Leslie: We will decide the timing and form of any review of the Model Code in the light of the experience of councils' adopting and implementing their own codes of conduct in accord with the Model Code.

Telecommunications Working Group

Mr. Norman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the remit is of the Telecommunications Working Group set up by his Department. [72803]

Mr. McNulty: The mobile phone operators have made a series of commitments to improve the handling of telecommunications development.

The Telecommunications Working Group was set up to update the existing Code of Best Practice for Telecommunications.

The terms of reference for the group are:

to produce a Mobile Phone Network Development Code of Best Practice; to oversee the implementation of the operators' 10 commitments;

and to monitor the effectiveness of the operators' 10 commitments and the Code of Best Practice.

National Land Use Database

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many local authorities have submitted returns to National Land Use Database; and which authorities have not made a submission. [72845]

Mr. McNulty: 344 local authorities submitted returns to the National Land Use Database, reporting on previously-developed sites in England in 1998. The following authorities did not make a return then:

Aylesbury Vale District Council
Bradford City Council
Council of the Isles of Scilly
Croydon LBC
Kettering Borough Council

Ordnance Survey

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Quinquennial Review of Ordnance Survey. [72983]

Mr. McNulty: I am pleased to announce today the outcome of the second and final stage of the Quinquennial Review of Ordnance Survey.

On 19 December 2001 it was announced that the Government were minded to accept the recommendation from stage 1 of the Review of Ordnance Survey, that it should move to become a Government-owned public limited company (GOplc). Ordnance Survey is a Government Department and Executive Agency operating within a trading fund regime. The stage 1 review considered that it needed additional freedoms and flexibilities to enable it to use its full potential to develop the geographic information and e-business marketplace, and concluded that a change in status could offer such freedoms.

Subsequently, a Steering Group chaired by this Department, including representatives from Ordnance Survey, HM Treasury, Cabinet Office and two external members from the Association for Geographic Information, and the London borough of Lewisham, undertook further work based on the stage 1 findings consulting external advisers. As with the stage 1 review, consultation took place with a wide range of stakeholders and customers in the geographic information business in Great Britain.

Following work on stage 2 of the Quinquennial Review, I am now of the opinion that there is no clear evidence to support the view that Ordnance Survey would benefit from a change of status to GOplc.

The stage 2 review has drawn attention to three issues:

> first, there is a need to reach agreement on enhanced financial freedoms and flexibilities that should be made available to Ordnance Survey;
> secondly, the provision and location of policy advice to Government on geographic information, currently provided by Ordnance Survey alongside its data supply role, will be reviewed; > and thirdly, in the context of a review of Ordnance Survey's Framework Document, we will consider issues surrounding Ordnance Survey's relationship with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

The importance of geographic data to Government has recently been underlined by the pilot agreement to make Ordnance Survey data widely available within central Government to help match the extensive benefit that local government already gains from using such data. Ordnance Survey's work in underpinning Great Britain with geographic information and its successful operation since becoming a Trading Fund in 1999, are clearly worth sustaining in the most appropriate way.

I am satisfied that sustaining Ordnance Survey as a trading fund with some extended freedoms will enable it to continue to develop—and continue to progress its impressive programme of cultural change—to the benefit of all who use its geographic data. Ordnance Survey must be given the right operating framework to enable it to respond to the demands of the geographic information marketplace, which is dependent on the quality, consistency and availability of Ordnance Survey geographic data.

Ordnance Survey must also, quite crucially, be able to play a full part in ensuring geographic information firmly underpins the e-government agenda, and informs policy formulation and delivery of information and services.

I have asked my officials to take forward work as a matter of urgency on the three issues I have referred to, and ensure that the decisions reached are reflected in a new published framework document for Ordnance Survey as soon as possible after the House reconvenes in October, but certainly no later than December 2002.

Press Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) full-time equivalents were employed by his press office and (b) secondees were placed in his press office in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [70544]

Mr. Leslie: Detailed information on the numbers of permanent press officers employed in departmental press offices during the financial years 1997–98 were provided in a memorandum dated 16 June 1998 to the Select Committee on Public Administration and published in its report on The Government Information and Communication Service (HC 770) in July 1998. A copy is in the Library of the House.

The number of full-time equivalent press officers employed in the relevant departmental press office on 1 January for subsequent years were:

	Full-time equivalents
Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions (Central)
1999	34.3
2000	40.8
2001	38.0
Cabinet Office
2002	18.0

Secondees to the press office during the full calendar years for which information is available were:

	Number of secondees
1999	Nil
2000	1
2001	1

Housing Benefit

Mr. Challen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people claimed housing benefit as a percentage of the total population in (a) Leeds, (b) Yorkshire and Humber region and (c) the London region, in the period 1998 to 2002. [69940]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The information is in the table.

Housing benefit recipients in Leeds, Yorkshire and the Humber and London as a percentage of the total population aged 16 or over in each area: 1998 to 2002

	Leeds city council area	Government office region of Yorkshire and the Humber	Government office region of London
1998	11.7	10.4	12.7
1999	11.1	10.1	11.9
2000	11.1	9.1	10.6

Housing benefit recipients in Leeds, Yorkshire and the Humber and London as a percentage of the total population aged 16 or over in each area: 1998 to 2002

	Leeds city council area	Government office region of Yorkshire and the Humber	Government office region of London
2001	9.9	8.7	10.1
2002	9.6	8.5	10.0

Notes:

1. The data refer to households claiming housing benefit which may be a single person, a couple or a family. More than one benefit household can live in one property, for example, two or more adults in a flat or house share arrangement.

2. Figures exclude any housing benefit extended payment cases.

3. figures for any non-responding authorities have been estimated.

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people claimed housing benefit as a percentage of the total population in (a) the Colchester constituency and (b) Essex between 1998 and 2002. [71472]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The available information is in the table:

Housing benefit recipients in Colchester and Essex as a percentage of the total population aged 16 or over in each area: 1998 to 2002

	Colchester borough council area[1]	Essex
1998	6.9	7.1
1999	6.7	6.6
2000	6.3	6.5
2001	3.1	6.1
2002	5.9	5.8

Notes:

1. Housing benefit data for the parliamentary constituency of Colchester are not available; figures are only available by local authority area.

2. Essex figures refer to the local authorities of Basildon, Braintree, Brentwood, Castle Point, Chelmsford, Colchester, Epping Forest, Harlow, Maldon, Rochford, Tendring and Uttlesford.

3. The data refer to households claiming housing benefit which may be a single person, a couple of a family. More than one benefit household can live in one property, for example two or more adults in a flat or house share arrangement.

4. Figures exclude any housing benefit extended payment cases.

5. Figures for any non-responding authorities have been estimated.

Fire Service

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1088W, on the fire service, how much money his Department has provided for rescues by the fire service that did not involve a fire in the last three years. [70767]

Mr. Leslie: Fire service funding is supported through the standard spending assessment arrangements. Over the period in question, the funding distribution formula has included a factor based on the number of fires, false alarms and calls to road traffic accidents, rail and air incidents, and leaks and spills attended by each brigade. Responses to other types of calls are not counted. Responsibility for setting budgets and the allocation of funds received through these arrangements are a matter for individual fire authorities.

Urban Regeneration Company

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will introduce an urban regeneration company to Gloucester. [70844]

Mr. McNulty: Urban regeneration companies (URCs) are established by the relevant local authority, Regional Development Agency, English Partnerships (if appropriate), the private sector and other key partners. It will be for the South West Regional Development Agency and its local partners to decide whether, and when, to bring forward a proposal to central Government for an urban regeneration company in Gloucester.

Congestion

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to promote and facilitate local authorities' participation in the 'In Town Without My Car Day'; and if he will make a statement. [71227]

Mr. McNulty: The UK Government have signed a pledge to support the European 'In Town Without My Car Day'. Responsibility for this now rests with my colleagues in the Department for Transport.

Voting Arrangements

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister who the intended recipients are of the funding for e-voting announced in the 2002 Spending Review. [71231]

Mr. Leslie: Under the 2002 Spending Review, there is provision of £30 million: £10 million for each of the three years 2003–04, 2004–05 and 2005–06, for local e-voting, enabling the Government to contribute this sum to the costs of those local authorities and their IT partners participating in e-voting pilot schemes over the next three years.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total Government expenditure on the trials into new methods of voting undertaken at the May elections was, broken down into (a) e-voting, (b) postal ballots and (c) other. [71226]

Mr. Leslie: The Government made £4.135 million available to contribute to the costs of the 16 local authorities running electronic voting and counting schemes in the May 2002 electoral modernisation pilot programme. The costs of piloting all-postal or other voting techniques were borne by the 14 local authorities concerned.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what study has been made of the trials of e-voting at the May elections. [71229]

Mr. Leslie: The Electoral Commission is evaluating the local authorities that ran e-voting pilot schemes in the May 2002 local and mayoral elections and will provide a detailed assessment of the impact of each scheme to the Deputy Prime Minister by 1 August 2002.

Best Value Programme

Angela Watkinson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost to local government of administering the Best Value programme was in each of the last three years. [71720]

Mr. Leslie: No reliable estimates exist of the costs incurred by local authorities in complying with their duty under the Local Government Act 1999. Any such costs would have to be set against the benefits of improved services.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has commissioned Cardiff Business School to evaluate the long-term impact of best value in English local authorities from 2001 until 2005. Part of this involves an assessment of the impact of Best Value in delivering improved services, including an element of cost-effectiveness. However, this is reliant upon year-on-year Best Value performance indicator data, which is currently being collected to monitor improvements. In the meantime, we are aiming to publish the results arising from the first year's census of local authorities. The census provides the benchmark against which the implementation of Best Value and its impact on service delivery will be assessed.

Housing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proposals he has to ensure that empty homes are (a) located and (b) put to use. [71204]

Mr. McNulty: The Government set out their policies for locating and bringing back into use empty and abandoned properties in their response to the Transport, Local Government and the Regions Committee's report on empty homes, published on 8 May 2002. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

The range of measures in place include: funding for the Empty Homes Agency to help local authorities bring empty properties back into use; the reform of private sector renewal legislation; and the introduction of low demand pathfinder projects.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures there are to ensure that public sector workers are able to find affordable homes in (a) Coventry, (b) London and (c) the rest of the UK. [71205]

Mr. McNulty: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made by our right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister on 18 July. This set out our plans for tackling the shortage of affordable homes in London and the south-east, and providing homes for key workers and those in the most need.

With the additional funding for housing and planning announced by our right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, spending will rise to £4.7 billion by 2005–06—up by £1.5 billion on this year's figures.

The new plans will supplement our existing measures to deliver new homes for key workers, which include the £250 million Starter Home Initiative (SHI). This aims to help 10,000 key workers in England, particularly teachers, police, nurses and other essential health staff to buy homes within a reasonable travelling distance from their work place in areas where the high cost of housing is undermining recruitment and retention.

Key workers may also be helped through the increased investment provided for rent and low cost home ownership through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme and local authorities. Since 1997, we have almost doubled funding for affordable housing to £1.2 billion a year and this is now supporting the creation of 20,000 new homes every year. As well as the additional funding for new homes, we will be looking at ways to extend our existing programmes for affordable housing through greater partnership with employers and public and private sector landlords.

Measures to assist public sector workers in the rest of the UK to find homes are the responsibility of the National Assembly for Wales and the Scottish and Northern Ireland Executives.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many new homes have been (a) built and (b) improved in Coventry since 1997. [71206]

Mr. McNulty: The number of new homes by tenure built within the district of Coventry city council since 1997 is shown in table A. It is not possible to report exactly how many homes have been improved in Coventry since 1997. However, figures for the numbers of local authority dwellings which received 'capital type' investment and the number of private sector renovation grants allocated is given in table B. This information is available by financial year only.

Table A: Permanent dwellings completed in Coventry

Number of dwellings

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001
Private enterprise	379	408	483	311	425
Registered social landlords	69	132	69	11	36

ODPM Housing Investment Programme returns.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has for housing construction in the Huntingdon constituency. [72804]

Mr. McNulty: RPG6 identifies that development plans should provide 4,000 additional dwellings in Cambridgeshire each year between 1996 and 2016. It is the role of the local planning authorities to prepare development plans to accommodate the development proposed in RPG. The replacement Cambridgeshire and Peterborough Structure Plan, prepared by Cambridgeshire county and Peterborough city councils, proposes that 9,500 dwellings be built in Huntingdonshire over the period 1999 and 2016. The structure plan's proposed housing distribution will be debated at an examination in public starting in October.

Last week the Deputy Prime Minister expressed his concerns that housing needs are not being met and that tackling the housing shortage is national responsibility. The Deputy Prime Minister also announced that over the coming months he intended to work with regional and local partners to establish where, at what scale, and how quickly development could be achieved in the potential growth areas, including within the London-Stansted-Cambridge corridor. The Local Government Conference has commenced a review of regional planning guidance for the East of England and I would expect this to consider the issues of where, at what scale and how quickly development can be delivered.

Housing Association Stock

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) houses and (b) flats have been completed by housing associations in each of the years 1990 to 2001. [71299]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is available for financial years and is given, for England, in the table.

Numbers of dwellings completed by housing associations: England

Thousand

	Houses	Flats
1990–91	5.5	9.1
1991–92	7.0	9.0

Land Development

Ms Shipley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much (a) greenfield and (b) brownfield land has been redeveloped by each regional development agency in each year since their formation. [71752]

Mr. McNulty: This information is held by individual regional development agencies, and it has not been possible to obtain all the data in the time available. I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Right-to-buy Receipts

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received from borough councils regarding the proposed redistribution of right-to-buy receipts from local authorities. [72395]

Mr. Raynsford: Written representations have been received from about 20 local authorities, either directly or via local MPs. We will be consulting on the details of the new arrangement shortly.

Local Government Contracts

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the Government will publish the draft code of practice on work force matters in local government contracting, relating to the review of best value. [73110]

Mr. Raynsford: The Code of Practice, setting out an approach to work force matters in local government service contracts which involve a transfer of staff, is being published today as part of a draft Government circular for public consultation "Best Value and Performance Improvement".

The draft code will ensure that all contracting exercises and contracts are designed in a way that secures a high quality work force over the life of a contract. It meets our commitment to act to end the threat of a 'two-tier workforce' of transferees and new joiners in local government contracting. And it is consistent with the message in the draft circular that all local authorities must adopt a positive approach to work force matters if they are to achieve best value.

In publishing the draft circular, the Government are delivering on their commitment in the local government White Paper "Strong Local Leadership—Quality Public Services", to streamline and reform best value. The circular consolidates and replaces existing guidance, and emphasises the key role that best value can play in driving up the delivery of local services and improving the quality of life for all. Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the House Libraries.

Physical Regeneration

Ms Shipley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will make a statement on the implications of the comprehensive spending review for the future direction of (a) funding for physical regeneration and (b) regional development agencies; [71756]

(2) what the levels of spending on physical regeneration will be following the comprehensive spending review; and if he will break down the figures into the various funding streams for which he is responsible. [71855]

Mr. McNulty: Physical regeneration is undertaken on behalf of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister by the regional development agencies and English Partnerships.

RDAs are funded through a single programme that enables them to undertake a holistic approach to economic development and regeneration. The level of spending on physical regeneration is not distinguished from other spending within this single programme.

Following the spending review, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced substantial new resources and responsibilities for the RDAs, further strengthening their role as catalysts for economic development and regeneration in the regions. The details are set out in Chapter 23 of the Spending Review 2002 White Paper.

English Partnerships is currently subject to a quinquennial review and we intend to make a further announcement about its future remit shortly, although as my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister told the House on 18 July he has > "instructed English Partnerships to use its new role on brown fields to search out and to deliver even more land for housing".

The expenditure consequences of English Partnerships' new role have not yet been finalised.

New Deal for Communities

Mr. Love: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the (a) total expenditure and (b) expenditure in capacity building was in each year in each New Deal for Communities area; what the (i) total planned expenditure and (ii) planned expenditure on capacity building will be until the end of each project; and if he will make a statement. [69187]

Mr. McNulty: The tables, which I shall place in the Library, illustrate the total expenditure and expenditure in capacity building in each year in each New Deal for Communities area so far and the total planned expenditure and planned expenditure on capacity building until the end of each project.

Good regeneration schemes are developed by genuine and effective partnerships. And good regeneration partnerships genuinely empower the local community, local business, schools, service providers and others in the district. Building and maintaining such partnerships, however, takes time and effort.

The Government have designed the New Deal for Communities (NDC) programme so as to enable local partnerships to build the capacity of all those involved, including local residents and statutory agencies.

There is no single definition of community capacity building, and so the figures in the tables should not be used as a basis for comparison between partnerships. Community capacity building can involve a wide range of differing activities—for example it may involve training community representatives, providing support workers to help the community develop skills, or providing access to administrative or office resources. Retaining the involvement and support of the community should be a priority throughout the life of any regeneration scheme.

Government guidance for NDC partnerships has made clear that we expect them to spend time and money in building the capacity of local people and agencies to participate. NDC partnerships were given considerably longer to prepare their Delivery Plans than in previous regeneration programmes. For the first time, the Government provided funding to help the partnership prepare its Delivery Plan, so that local people could be genuinely involved in the process of preparing the plan. The rules for NDC partnerships allow them to spend up to 10 per cent. of their funding on management and administration costs (that is double the amount allowed under previous programmes), to ensure that the partnership is properly resourced to deliver a programme with communities at its heart. We have asked each partnership to develop and implement a local learning plan, to equip all of the key players to play their full part in the process of neighbourhood renewal.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Rents

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much he estimates has been saved by the introduction of local reference rent and single room rent. [61382]

Malcolm Wicks: The local reference rent and single room rent were introduced to ensure that the needs of people receiving benefit are balanced against those of the taxpayer. These rules ensure that people receiving housing benefit do not have their rent met in full if it exceeds the broadly average rent for similar sized properties in the locality in which they live, and that the benefit system does not provide unemployed young adults with better housing than their working peers can afford.

The information is in the table.

People's Consultative Forums

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many seats pensioners voluntary groups have on Older People's Consultative Forums, broken down by each nation and region. [64843]

Mr. McCartney: Within central Government pensioners voluntary groups are represented on the Partnership Group on Older People, established to focus on the provision of advice to the Cabinet Ministerial Committee on Domestic Affairs Sub-committee on Older People. There are 22 members, who include voluntary organisations such as Age Concern England, Help the Aged and the National Pensioners Convention.

There is one other central Government forum, the Department of Health's Older People's Taskforce, which includes Age Concern England.

Consultative forums within the devolved Administrations are the responsibility of the Scottish Executive, Welsh Assembly and Northern Ireland Executive. Consultative forums are also organised by local authorities.

Information on representation on these and other forums is not held centrally.

Recycling

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of waste produced in his Department was (a) recycled, (b) composted, and (c) re-used, broken down into (i) paper, (ii) plastics, (iii) aluminium cans and (iv) other in each year since 1997; what plans there are to increase these proportions; and if he will make a statement. [65699]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001. In 2001, the former Department of Social Security produced 24,000 tonnes of waste, of which 37 per cent. was recycled. The vast majority of recycled waste was paper. No waste was composted. Details are not available prior to 2001.

For 2002, figures show that paper recycling has risen to 55 per cent. of the total waste produced, amounting to 16,172 tonnes. We plan to extend our paper-recycling scheme across the whole Department in the coming year.

Redundant office furniture is recycled by DWP's estates partners wherever possible. Metal components are reused and desktops are pulped and recycled where possible. Volume figures are not available for this.

Surplus IT equipment is refurbished and reused wherever possible. This is facilitated by the Disposal Service Agency, and the refurbished equipment is then distributed through the Computers Within Reach initiative.

DWP as a whole does not currently separate plastics and aluminium cans from the general waste stream, although local schemes to recycle waste are encouraged and are in place at a number of locations. We plan to examine the potential for a national scheme to recycle these waste streams.

In addition to the recycling initiatives in place, staff are also actively encouraged to reduce the amount of waste that they generate.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of (a) paper and (b) other goods purchased by his Department was recycled paper in each year since 1997; what the annual total cost of these purchases was; what plans there are to increase these proportions; and if he will make a statement. [65770]

Maria Eagle: 2.12 per cent. of the 1,824,682 reams of paper purchased by DWP in 2001–02 was recycled paper. Of this 1,330,392 reams were purchased from the joint OGC/DWP contract at a cost of £4,913,629. Costs for the remaining 494,290 reams are not available.

In 2001–02 DWP also purchased 8,434 tonnes of pre-printed paper (leaflets and forms), of which 16 per cent. was recycled. 721 tonnes of card and board were also purchased of which 68 per cent. was recycled. Costs are not currently available.

Information is not available prior to 2001–02.

We are currently reviewing the measures we have in place to reduce the overall amount of paper used within the Department at the same time as increasing the percentage of recycled paper used.

Departmental Energy Use

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the estimated (a) level and (b) cost of energy use in his Department and associated agencies was in each year since 1997; what proportion of energy was generated from renewable sources; and if he will make a statement. [65955]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Rural Affairs on 3 July 2002, Official Report, columns 385–86W.

Statistics

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the statistics that are collected by his Department by English parliamentary constituency; and if he will make a statement. [67097]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 8 July 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Ruth Kelly) on 8 July 2002, Official Report, column 769W.

Sanctions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what sanctions have been applied against claimants over 24 on the Government's New Deal programme; and if he will make a statement. [67725]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Up to March 2002, we estimate that around 17,979 sanctions[1] had been applied to people aged over 24 on the New Deal programme. This represents the number of sanctions applied, not the number of people sanctioned as some people will have been sanctioned more than once.

[1] This information has been collected by undertaking a special exercise and is based on a combination of IT-generated statistics and information supplied clerically. The figure is therefore an estimate and should be treated as a guide to the number of sanctions applied only.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many claimants there were to whom deductions in their income support or income based jobseeker's allowance would have been made on their refusal to co-operate with the Department but where the sanctions were not applied because (a) their application would put the claimant or their children at risk of harm and (b) the claimant was in receipt of the disabled premium, disability premium, or a higher pensioner premium, in the latest year for which figures are available; [66727]

(2) how many claimants there were have had deductions of benefit on the grounds of their refusal to co-operate with the Child Support Agency; what sanctions have been applied; and for what average length of time the sanctions have been applied. [66726]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 4 July 2002]: Every child has a right to a decent start in life whether their parents live together or apart. Children are entitled to care and support and both parents are responsible for providing it. It is reasonable to expect that the parent with care should co-operate with the Child Support Agency unless there are reasonable grounds for believing there would be a risk of harm or undue distress to the parent or any child living with them. If a parent with care refuses, without good cause, to co-operate with the agency, their benefit may be reduced by up to 40 per cent. of the income support personal allowance for a person aged 25 or over.

The available information is in the tables. Following the introduction in April 1998 of face-to-face interviews with parents with care claiming benefits, there has been a sharp rise in compliance and a corresponding fall in the number of reduced benefit directions issued. These interviews provide the opportunity to explain to parents with care the advantages of co-operating with the agency as well as the good cause rules.

Reduced benefit directions issued in respect of parents with care who have failed to co-operate with the Child Support Agency

Child Support Agency

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to give the Child Support Agency the power of surveillance in tackling fraud; and if he will make a statement. [67042]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to hon. my Friend the Member for Lincoln (Mrs. Merron) on 24 June 2002, Official Report, column 676W.

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether student loan repayments and student overdraft interest payments are counted as outgoings when the CSA calculates payments due from absent parents. [70749]

Malcolm Wicks: No.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in how many cases a parent with care withdrew a claim for income support after action by the Child Support Agency in each year from 1993–94 to 2001–02. [67237]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available.

Public Consultations

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the length was of each public consultation undertaken by his Department since 8 June 2001. [68742]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department for Work and Pensions follows the Cabinet Office's guidance on written consultation which sets 12 weeks as the standard minimum period for a consultation. The table lists the consultations the Department has begun, or completed since 8 June 2001. There were two occasions where shorter consultations have been conducted, and the reasons for this are included in the table.

Consultation

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether consultation documents published by his Department in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultations. [70084]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001. From then to the end of 2001, the Department published eight consultation documents. Of these, two included the consultation criteria listed in the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on written consultation. Procedures are now in place to ensure that all new consultations include this information.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which consultation documents published by his Department in 2001 were not made available as paper copies. [69830]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the former Department of Social Security and parts of the Department for Education and Employment. All written consultations published by the Department were available as paper copies.

Benefits

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps have been taken to simplify the benefits system over each of the past three years; what steps it is proposed to take to simplify the system further; and if he will make a statement. [69249]

Malcolm Wicks: There will always be an element of complexity in the benefits system due to the diverse range of contingencies for which it must cater. However, we are overhauling service delivery to meet the different needs of the Department's client groups and investing in improved and modernised services that are more accurate, make better use of technology, and are simpler for people to understand and access.

For people of working age, we are delivering this through Jobcentre Plus, building on the success of the ONE pilots in bringing together employment and benefit services at a single point of contact. Some 50 pathfinder offices opened in October 2001, and Jobcentre Plus was launched as a national organisation at the beginning of April 2002. 56 integrated Jobcentre Plus offices are now open, and we aim to roll out a further 225 between October of this year and April 2003. The 2002 spending review further advances our reform and modernisation programme by announcing the roll-out of Jobcentre Plus nationally by 2006 to deliver an enhanced work-focused service for all people of working age.

Further steps to promote work include the introduction of the Working Tax Credit from April 2003 which extends support to low income workers without children. And the new Child Tax Credit, also from April 2003 will provide a single, seamless system of support for families.

The new Disability and Carer Directorate operates as a discrete business within the Department, responsible for the civil rights agenda for disabled people. Through the Disability and Carers Service, it also delivers Disability Living Allowance, Attendance Allowance and Invalid Care Allowance and will, over time, streamline benefits delivery and improve customer service.

The Pension Service replaced the Benefits Agency services for pensioners from April 2002, and is working to introduce an improved service tailored to the needs of today's and future pensioners. For the first time, there is a service dedicated to the needs of pensioners and helping people understand their pension options and ways to save for their retirement. Pensioners can use The Pension Service as a gateway to other services such as Housing Benefit and Attendance Allowance.

The Pension Service will also deliver Pension Credit from October 2003. This replaces the Minimum Income Guarantee and represents a major simplification of provision for pensioners. For example, it does away with the rules excluding pensioners with savings of £12,000 or more from receiving help and, from age 65, most pensioners will not have to report changes in income for a fixed period of five years, effectively abolishing the weekly means test.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what notification his Department has provided to benefit recipients about the move to automated credit transfer from April 2003; and what role Jobcentre Plus and the Pension Service will have in ensuring that all claimants are aware of the changes. [70021]

Malcolm Wicks: The department intends to conduct a customer information campaign, which will inform customers about the changes to the way we pay benefits and pensions. The campaign will begin in the run up to April 2003 when we will start to move customers to payment into bank or building society accounts so that customers have the information they need at the point of their transfer from payment by order book. The campaign will incorporate the Pension Service and Jobcentre Plus.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he will take to co-ordinate activities between the Child Support Agency and the Benefits Agency to combat benefit fraud; and if he will assess the advantages of measures to deal with deliberate evasion of child support maintenance by absent parents. [69741]

Malcolm Wicks: Jobcentre Plus and the Child Support Agency (CSA) already work closely to identify and investigate benefit fraud.

In a Child Support case where either parent is in receipt of prescribed benefits and fraud is suspected or detected, the case is referred to Jobcentre Plus to investigate. All Departmental fraud investigations (including those carried out by the CSA) are to a common standard informed by a single Professional Standards Unit established in Jobcentre Plus. All fraud structures and processes are informed by the Fraud Head of Profession in Jobcentre Plus who has the function of integrating and co-ordinating good practice.

In January 2001 new criminal offences were introduced to the Child Support legislation. Parents who seek to avoid their child support responsibilities by lying to the Child Support Agency or refusing to provide information now face criminal proceedings. The legislation provides for a fine of up to £1000. The CSA has so far successfully prosecuted 5 non-resident parents under this legislation.

Legislation was also introduced in April 2001 to allow the courts to consider disqualifying a non-resident parent from holding or obtaining a driving licence as an alternative to a term of imprisonment for non-payment of maintenance. The courts decide which, if either, option to use. Since April 2001 the CSA has submitted 94 cases for committal. Of these, 44 non-resident parents began paying maintenance when they learned of the possible disqualification. The courts withdrew one driving licence and imposed a suspended disqualification in three other cases.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action he intends to take following the second report by the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate on the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit in Kirklees Metropolitan Council. [72979]

Malcolm Wicks: Using the powers available to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in Section 139D of the Social Security Administration Act 1992, my right hon. Friend is today giving Directions to Kirklees Metropolitan Council, following the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate's second report on the Council's administration of Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit.

We are disappointed that Kirklees Metropolitan Council has been the subject of two critical reports by the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate before taking action to remedy their problems with benefit administration.

However, we are pleased that the Council is now starting to take its responsibilities seriously and that significant improvements are being made in benefit administration.

We hope the council will look upon the Directions as a further stimulus for continuing improvement.

A copy of the Directions has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the (a) total cost of benefit fraud investigations and (b) the net savings from benefit fraud investigations in each of the last five years. [71778]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 22 July 2002]: We set out our strategy for tackling fraud and error in the paper "A New Contract for Welfare: Safeguarding Social Security" (CM4276) published on 23 March 1999. The overall aim of the strategy is to have a benefit system that is secure from first claim to first payment.

The implementation of this strategy means that an anti-fraud focus is integral to the work of the Department, as is dealing with the wider agenda of error and incorrectness in benefit payments. It is therefore not possible to account for the cost of anti-fraud work separately.

The work of benefit fraud investigators has an important effect both through fraud detected and as a deterrent that prevents fraud happening in the first place. It is therefore not possible to provide an estimate of net savings from benefit fraud investigations. However, we know from our continuous measurement of the level of fraud and error in income support and jobseeker's allowance that by March 2001 we had achieved a reduction of 18 per cent.—almost twice the target of 10 per cent. for March 2002 and a year ahead of schedule.

The Spending Review announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 15 July includes an increase in our existing target to reduce fraud and error in payments of income support and jobseeker's allowance. We are now committed to a 33 per cent. reduction in these payments by March 2004, as a milestone towards a 50 per cent. reduction by March 2006. And for the first time we have set a target for tackling fraud and error in housing benefit that aims for a 25 per cent. reduction by 2006.

Pension Rights

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he intends to introduce primary legislation to protect the pension rights of British citizens who have worked in Australia. [69936]

Mr. McCartney: We will legislate at the earliest suitable opportunity to ensure that, for British citizens who went to live in Australia before the end of the reciprocal Social Security Agreement on 28 February 2001, any periods of residence in Australia from the start of the Agreement on 29 January 1958 up to and including 5 April 2001 will be used in the calculation of basic state pension if they return to live permanently in the United Kingdom.

Until we can introduce primary legislation, we will continue to make extra statutory payments to such people who return to the UK on a permanent basis, if they have less than the standard rate of basic pension.

ACT

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the Government expects the installation of the hardware and software for the ACT system to commence; when the training for Post Office staff will commence; and when guidance for customers will be issued. [70189]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 22 July 2002]: Plans are progressing to put all of the necessary changes in place from April 2003.

Training for Post Office staff is an operational matter for the Post Office, who say they are also on track for April 2003.

The Department is currently planning an information campaign to give customers the information they need about the move to paying directly into bank/building society accounts.

Pension Credit

Mr. Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners in the Hastings and Rye constituency who will benefit from (a) the guaranteed credit and (b) the savings credit when the pension credit provisions take effect in April 2003. [70332]

Mr. McCartney: I regret that the information requested is not available. Pension Credit will be introduced in October 2003. The guarantee credit will ensure that no pensioner need live on less than £100 a week. The savings credit will ensure that even those with modest savings will see that it pays to have saved. On average pensioners who qualify for Pension Credit will be £400 a year better off.

Currently in the Hastings and Rye constituency there are around 3,600 pensioners receiving the Minimum Income Guarantee. Those in receipt in October 2003 will be automatically transferred onto Pension Credit which will subsume the Minimum Income Guarantee.

Notes:

1. Based on a 5 per cent. sample; therefore subject to sampling variation.
2. Figure has been rounded to the nearest 100.
3. Parliamentary Constituency has been allocated using the relevant ONS postcode directory.
4. Minimum Income Guarantee claimants are defined as Income Support benefit units where the claimant, and/or partner, is aged 60 and over.

Age Discrimination

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the Government are doing to encourage private companies to combat age discrimination. [71360]

Mr. McCartney: The Government are determined to combat age discrimination in employment, and are actively doing so under the banner of our Age Positive campaign. We are working hard to encourage companies to use non-ageist employment practices, leading up to the implementation of age legislation in 2006.

In consultation with employers, we have produced the Code of Practice on Age Diversity in Employment. The Code sets the standard for non-ageist employment practices. Evaluation of the impact of the code shows that the number of companies whose policies discriminate against older people has halved, from 14 per cent. to 7 per cent., since 1999.

Our Age Positive campaign is strongly promoting the business benefits of an age diverse work force to employers of all types. Small and medium sized companies are currently participating in our second series of 20 good-practice workshops. Age Positive awards recognise businesses that are tackling discrimination by means of non-ageist employment policies. Employers are supporting the campaign by sharing their experiences with others. These case studies are on the Age Positive website, together with the Code of Practice and other guidance. Last month we published the report 'Flexible Retirement—a snapshot of large employers' initiatives', which shows that an increasing number of companies are now adopting more flexible retirement policies.

Children (Low-income Families)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what baseline figure is to be used in assessing progress in meeting his target of reducing the number of children living in low-income households by at least a quarter by 2004. [71783]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 22 July 2002]: The baseline used to measure this Public Service Agreement target is 1998–99 Households Below Average Income figures. This target is shared with HM Treasury. Full details of the target, its baseline and how it is measured are contained in a technical note which has been placed in the Library.

The latest available HBAI figures for 2000–01 show that there has been a fall of 0.3 million children on the after housing costs measure and 0.4 million children on the before housing costs measure. Therefore, after a third of the way through monitoring this PSA target we are a third of the way to meeting it.

Car Allowance

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what rate of car allowance is payable to a person attending a medical or appeal board; when the rate was set; how the rate is calculated; whether there are plans to raise it; and if he will make a statement. [72013]

Maria Eagle: For people attending a medical board, the standard rate of car allowance payable is 6.5 pence per mile, which is paid towards meeting the fuel costs of customers attending for a medical examination when public transport is not available.

The rate, which was chosen by the Department for Work and Pensions, reflected the rate in payment to its own staff, at the time it was set, where the only element of reimbursement was in respect of fuel. This decision was taken in the interests of safeguarding public resources and was intended to correct the wide variations in interpretation of previous instructions, so as to ensure that customers received the same rate of recompense regardless of where in the country they lived.

In order to continue improving the standard of information provided to its customers, SchlumbergerSema have revised the AL1C form that provides important information about the medical examination.

The AL1C form now states: 'if you do not travel by public transport we will make a 6.5 pence per mile contribution to fuel costs if you use a private motor vehicle'. This will enable the customer to be aware of exactly how much they will receive if they travel by car.

The rate of car allowance payable to people attending an appeal board is set by the Appeals Service, who pay 12 pence per mile and 2 pence per mile for each additional passenger. The rate was set on 1 January 2002. It is calculated by using the average petrol costs as researched by the Automobile Association. The rate is for actual fuel costs and does not cover running costs.

There are no immediate plans to raise the rates. However, a full review of departmental policy with regard to the reimbursement of travelling expenses to interviews, tribunals and examinations is being carried out, with the recommendations to be made later in the year.

Social Fund

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the (a) annual report on the social fund 2001–02 and (b) Social Fund Commissioner's annual report on the standard of social fund inspectors' decisions will be published. [72421]

Malcolm Wicks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's annual report on the social fund for 2001–02 (CM 5492) was published today and has been laid before Parliament.

The report records that gross expenditure, excluding winter fuel payments, in 2001–02 was £761.8 million. Together with expenditure on winter fuel payments of around £1.7 billion, this resulted in total gross expenditure of almost £2.5 billion. The discretionary social fund helped more people than ever before with around 2.5 million awards made. This included more than 233,000 non-repayable grants and more than 2,231,000 interest-free loans together worth £646.9 million. 42,000 funeral and 1.8 million cold weather payments totalling £53.7 million were made. More than 11 million people aged 60 or over in eight million households benefited from a winter fuel payment. In addition, 201,000 sure start maternity grants worth £61.2 million were made.

The Social Fund Commissioner's report has also been published today and copies placed in the Library.

Pensions Policy

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to change pensions policy. [72458]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 11 July 2002, Official Report, column 1054.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answers of 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 959W, 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 242W and 17 June 2002, Official Report, column 88W, on winter fuel payments, if he has concluded his discussions with the European Commission about the extent of the United Kingdom's legal obligations under European regulations on winter fuel payments; and if he will make a statement. [72604]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Wayne David) on 19 July 2002, Official Report, column 599W.

Annual Reports

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will publish the 2000–01 annual reports and accounts for each of his agencies. [72980]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The 2001–02 annual reports and accounts for Benefits Agency (HC 929) and Employment Service (HC 955) which ceased to operate on the 31 March 2002 and those for The Appeals Service (HC1068) and Child Support Agency (HC 894) and have been laid before Parliament today.

Employer Direct

Phil Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many employers have contacted Employer Direct since it was introduced; and what measures have been taken to ensure that this initiative meets the needs of employers. [61487]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive, Leigh Lewis. I have asked him to reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Phil Sawford Esq MP, dated June 2002:

As Jobcentre Plus is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of employers who have contacted Employer Direct since it was introduced and the measures that have been taken to ensure that this initiative meets the needs of employers. This falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Since the national implementation of Employer Direct on 26 January 2002 over 700,000 calls from employers have been received and nearly 600,000 vacancies notified.

During the development of Employer Direct there was wide ranging consultation with employers. This included the formation of a national group of employers in addition to discussion and liaison at local level.

In addition to taking employers' views in the development and roll out of Employer Direct we seek feedback from employers as a matter of course whenever they use the Employer Direct service.

I hope this is helpful.

Specialist Training

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance and specialist training is given to staff in benefits offices and jobcentres in dealing with people with learning difficulties; and if he will make a statement. [65785]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive, Leigh Lewis. I have asked him to reply to the hon. Member.

Benefit Information (Pilot Schemes)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what pilot schemes he will run to ensure that information and procedures given to benefit recipients will have been fully tested prior to the April 2003 deadline; and if he will make a statement. [70556]

Mr. McCartney: There will be a phased introduction of different benefit types and customer volumes. This is aimed at reducing risk and operational complexity during the early part of the conversion period and will also be a way to test conversion processes and the information to be given to customers to ensure that it meets their needs.

Benefits Data

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many individuals' personal data have been processed in data matching exercises in connection with benefit fraud; how many cases were identified as part of that data matching exercise as being possible cases of benefit fraud requiring further investigation; how many cases after investigation were deemed likely to be fraudulent; how many cases were prosecuted; what the total costs were of all data matching exercises, including staff and computer costs; and what the estimated total savings to the public purse are and the multiplier used in this calculation. [59210]

Malcolm Wicks: Data-matching is a powerful tool in the detection of fraud and incorrectness in the benefit system. The Department's Matching Intelligence Data Analysis Service (MIDAS) operates the Generalised Matching Service (GMS) for benefits administered by the Department, and the Housing Benefit Matching Service (HBMS) for housing benefit and council tax benefit which are administered by local authorities.

The data-matching process involves data extracts being taken from the Department's main benefit computer systems and local authority benefit systems which are matched against each other using data matching "rules" to identify discrepancies between the data sets. Such discrepancies are then referred for local investigation. Legislation also provides for personal data held by other Government Departments to be matched against departmental and local authority data to identify discrepancies.

It is not possible to say how many individuals' personal data have been processed in data-matching exercises because each individual's details may be held on several systems at the same time.

Information on the overall cost of conducting data-matching exercises and investigating discrepancies is not available.

The available information on the results from GMS and HBMS data-matching operations is in the tables.

MVA was introduced during the 1999–2000 financial year. Prior to the GMS recorded a Weekly Benefit Savings (WBS) figure that used a multiplier of 32 weeks. This method of recording savings was used by HBMS until 31 March 2002, after which it began to use MVA. Separate GMS figures for WBS and overpayments prior to 1999–2000 are not available.

Press Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) full time equivalents were employed by his press office and (b) secondees were placed in his press office in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [70537]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 22 July 2002]: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed on 8 June 2001 from parts of the former Department of Social Security, parts of the former Department for Education and Employment and the Employment service,

The Department for Work and Pensions currently employs 21 full time press officers. No secondees have been placed in the press office.

Council Tax

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to analyse the potential effects of council tax revaluation on the levels of council tax benefit restriction; and if he will make a statement. [68906]

Malcolm Wicks: Council Tax revaluation will start in 2005 and Council Tax bills based on updated property values will be issued in 2007. Nearer the time, when the implications of Council Tax revaluation become clear, we will consider what impact this may have on Council Tax Benefit restrictions.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the annual saving has been to the Exchequer since the council tax benefit restriction scheme was introduced; [70033]

(2) what average cost was borne by each restricted household in (a) band F, (b) band G and (c) band H in (i) England and (ii) each Government office region, in the most recent year for which figures are available; [70026]

(3) how many council tax benefit cases there were in (a) band F, (b) band G and (c) band H in (i) England and (ii) each Government office region in the most recent year for which figures are available; [70027]

(4) how many and what percentage of council tax benefit claims restricted to band E are (a) owner occupied and (b) rented in (i) England and (ii) each Government office region; [70029]

(5) how many and what percentage of council tax benefit cases are (a) owner occupied and (b) rented in (i) England and (ii) each Government office region; [70028]

(6) how many and what percentage of council tax benefit claims were restricted to band E for (a) all properties, (b) RSLs and (c) local authority properties in (i) England and (ii) each Government office region in the most recent year for which figures are available; [70030]

(7) how many restricted council tax benefit cases there were in (a) band F, (b) band G and (c) band H for (i) England and (ii) each Government office region in the most recent year for which figures are available. [70025]

Malcolm Wicks: We do not believe it is right that people living in more expensive properties and who therefore have a higher council tax liability, should, as a matter of course, have all that liability met by taxpayers.

Since 2 July 2001, local authorities have been able to make discretionary housing payments to people entitled to housing benefit and council tax benefit who require additional help with their rent or council tax, including those people whose council tax benefit has been restricted. These payments are at the discretion of the local authority and subject to an annual cash limit. For 2002–03, the Government are contributing £20 million nationally towards the overall limit of £50 million which local authorities can spend.

Comparative data from which to calculate the actual reduction in spending since the restrictions were introduced in April 1998, are not available.

Such other information as is available has been placed in the Library.

Disability Discrimination Act

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact on the disabled of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [71015]

Maria Eagle: The Department has commissioned a number of research studies that examine how the Disability Discrimination Act is having an impact on disabled people. Some have yet to report but it is clear that the number of cases being taken under the DDA is increasing, demonstrating that disabled people are making use of their rights[1]. A body of case law is being developed, which will help disabled people to understand the practical application of the law to their own circumstances. There is also evidence that employers are changing their policies and practices with an increase in the number of employers with policies on the employment of disabled people since the Act's introduction in 1996[2].

Pensioners

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people reached state pension age in each of the last five years; and how many people are expected to do so in each of the next five years. [72417]

Mr. McCartney: The available information is set out in the table.

	Number of women aged 60 and the number of men aged 65
1997	540,000
1998	540,000
1999	540,000
2000	550,000
2001	530,000
2002	560,000
2003	590,000
2004	610,000
2005	600,000
2006	590,000
2007	710,000

Notes:

1. Information is taken from the Government Actuary's Department population statistics.
2. The figures are based on people reaching age 60–65 in a particular year.
3. The total number of people is rounded to the nearest 10,000.

Pensions Advice

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research has been undertaken into the preferred methods by pensioners of accessing pensions advice; and if he will make a statement. [72188]

Mr. McCartney: A number of research projects have been undertaken by the Department and other organisations looking at pensioners' preferred methods of obtaining advice and of claiming pensions and benefits. The research published by the Department is listed below and copies of the reports are available in the Library.

In 2001 the Department commissioned BMRB International to carry out a large scale survey of peoples' attitudes to electronic methods of conducting benefits business. The survey topics include pensioners' current and preferred methods of applying for benefits and pensions. Findings from the research will be published in the autumn.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the overseas trips on departmental business that have been undertaken in each of the last five years by officials in his Department; and what the (a) cost, (b) purpose and (c) result was in each case. [68723]

Mr. McCartney: All overseas travel by officials in the Department is undertaken in accordance with the principles set out in chapter 8 of the Civil Service Management Code, and the detailed rules and guidance set out in the Departmental Business Travel and Relocation Expenses Guide. The detailed information requested about individual trips is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum Seekers

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision is planned for HIV-positive mothers in the new asylum seekers accommodation centres. [70561]

Beverley Hughes: HIV positive mothers in accommodation centres will be advised not to breast-feed. We will ensure that safe alternatives to breast milk are available for HIV-infected mothers with young babies, and that these can be accessed in a way that preserves their privacy.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the employment concession for asylum seekers; and if he will make a statement. [72779]

Beverley Hughes: The asylum system is working increasingly quickly, through reforms and increased resources. Measures in the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Bill will continue this process. This means that the employment concession, whereby asylum seekers could apply for permission to work if their application remained outstanding for longer than six months without a decision being made, is becoming increasingly irrelevant. The vast majority—around 80 per cent. of asylum seekers—receive a decision within six months, and work is continuing to improve that further. An increasingly small number of people, therefore, are entitled to apply for the concession. It is also the case that the great majority of new asylum applicants will have their cases decided within two months and the concession, which dates from a time when lengthy delays were widespread in the asylum system, is therefore no longer appropriate.

I am determined to make it clear that there is a distinct separation between asylum processes and labour migration channels. It is essential that we have a robust asylum process that works effectively and swiftly in the interests of refugees, and also is not open to abuse by those who would seek to come here to work. But that does not mean we are 'fortress Britain'. The Government are putting in place an effective managed migration programme and continues to create a number of work routes to allow more people to come and work here legally in ways which boost our economy. For example, the Government have overhauled the work permits system and the number of work permits issued has doubled over the past two years—in 2001 we issued work permits to nearly 140,000 people. Other entry routes for people who want to work in the United Kingdom include the Highly Skilled Migrant Programme, the Working Holidaymakers Scheme (under which nearly 40,000 Commonwealth young people a year come to the United Kingdom for a working holiday) and the Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme (which brings in nearly 20,000 seasonal workers a year). In addition, the Government are currently consulting on schemes to bring in more temporary workers in industries with recruitment difficulties.

Those who are granted refugee status can work immediately, and we welcome the enormous contribution that the skills and knowledge of refugees can make to our society and to our economy. However, our asylum system exists to help those fleeing persecution—those who want to come here to work must do so through the various economic routes available rather than abuse the asylum system.

I have therefore decided, with immediate effect, that the concession should be abolished. Asylum seekers who already have permission to work will retain that right until such time as a final decision is made on their claim. Asylum seekers who, prior to this announcement, had sought permission to work but have not had a response, will have their requests considered in line with our previous policy. I will retain a discretion to grant permission to work for asylum seekers in exceptional cases.

It is absolutely vital, of course, that all asylum seekers use their time constructively while their case is considered. Therefore, I have also decided to review our current rules governing the voluntary work which asylum seekers can undertake, in order to ensure that there are no unnecessary barriers to participation.

To demonstrate our on-going commitment to purposeful activity for asylum seekers, we have also awarded over £900,000 to 135 projects across the United Kingdom for summer programmes to give them the opportunity to get involved in voluntary activities in the community, or partake in sports-orientated and educational events.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he gives his officials as to the acceptable time within which a decision is notified to asylum seekers after interview. [70383]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The Government's target in 2002–03 is for officials in the Integrated Casework Directorate of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate to make and serve decisions within two months from the date of application in 65 per cent. of new substantive asylum claims. Against that target the aim is to notify decisions as soon after interview as full consideration of the individual merits of each case can take place.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the length of time set by him an applicant for indefinite leave to remain in the UK should normally be required to wait for their application to be considered; and what information about the progress of the application is provided to the applicant during this period. [70142]

Beverley Hughes: We aim to decide straightforward general immigration applications, which can include those for indefinite leave to remain, on initial consideration within three weeks. At present such applicants are taking on average around four weeks to decide but we are working to reduce this to three weeks as soon as possible. Some applications that need more detailed consideration of further inquiries are, at present, taking up to 12 months to consider due to the large number of cases currently in the system.

All applications are acknowledged within two weeks of receipt which includes advice as to the likely time scale for initial consideration. If the application cannot be completed on initial consideration a further letter is sent advising the likely time scale for considering such cases.

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the maternity grant is available to asylum seekers who are mothers living in emergency accommodation. [70562]

Beverley Hughes: Asylum seekers in emergency accommodation are provided with temporary support under section 98 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 (the 1999 Act). Asylum seeking mothers in emergency accommodation are not eligible to receive a maternity grant because this is available only to asylum seekers assessed as eligible to receive support and in receipt of support under section 95 of the 1999 Act. Asylum seekers in emergency accommodation who give birth to a baby are provided with a pack of items to enable them to meet the needs of their baby.

Asylum Removals Centres

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are included which take into account the proximity of schools, housing estates, industrial and regeneration sites in respect of asylum removals centres. [70945]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 22 July 2002]: When examining individual sites differing criteria are used, dependant upon our requirements. These will be specific to a particular site or project.

National Asylum Support Service

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 9 May 2002, Official Report, column 329W, on the National Asylum Support Service, what the average time taken by NASS to respond to correspondence from (a) supported asylum seekers and (b) their representatives is. [56636]

Beverley Hughes: The Operations Section of the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) is responsible for determining applications for support and answering correspondence about the support offered. All correspondence received within the Operations Section of NASS—currently in excess of 4,000 pieces per week—is subject to a target for completion. Targets are applied across the board—there is no distinction between correspondence received from an asylum seeker or a third party.

Targets for response depend on the nature of the correspondence. Correspondence which can be fast tracked will receive meaningful action within three working days. Correspondence raising complex issues will receive meaningful action within 10 working days. For example, an application for a single additional payment will be assessed within three working days of receipt and the applicant is notified of the outcome at this stage. Any payment approved will be included in the support applicant's regular payment within three weeks of the application being made.

All targets are monitored to ensure compliance and any backlog is addressed to avoid unnecessary delay.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received the annual report for 2001–02 of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate's independent Complaints Audit Committee; and if he will make a statement. [72982]

Beverley Hughes: A copy of the report has been placed in the Library and will be placed on the Immigration and Nationality Directorate website. It is a useful and informative document, and I am grateful to the Committee for its comments and its recommendations. I am currently considering how best to implement the recommendations.

Committee Mandates

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the mandate of the Committee for the implementation of the programme of training, exchanges and co-operation in the field of asylum, immigration and crossing of external borders (Odysseus) is; how many times it has met over the last 12 months; what the UK representation on it is; what the annual cost of its work is to public funds; if he will list the items currently under its consideration; if he will take steps to increase its accountability and transparency to Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [58454]

Beverley Hughes: The Odysseus Committee assisted the European Commission in the management and implementation of a programme to co-fund projects to promote co-operation in matters of asylum, immigration, the crossing of external borders and the security of identity documents. The programme expired on 31 March 2002.

The Odysseus Committee met once a year to discuss the proposed bids for funding and agree the allocation of funds to successful projects. One of the first projects to receive such funding was a seminar held at the Civil Service College in Sunningdale in 1998 on combating illegal immigration.

The United Kingdom was represented on the Committee by a Home Office official and an official from the United Kingdom Permanent Representation in Brussels.

The Odysseus programme was funded by the European Community budget and travel costs to attend Committee meetings were met by the European Commission. However, the Home Office paid a subsistence allowance to cover attendance at a Committee meeting.

The European Commission was required to prepare an annual report on the implementation of the Odysseus programme and is currently preparing the report for its final year. This will be sent to the European Parliament and Council, and will be published on the EUROPA internet website. I did not see a need for further measures to increase the Committee's accountability and transparency during its lifetime.

The Odysseus programme is to be replaced by a new funding programme for co-operation in the fields of external borders, visas, asylum and immigration to be known as ARGO.

Deportees

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in jails in the UK have been deported to the US to face charges that could result in the death penalty in that country in each of the last five years. [71327]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: None. Our policy is in accordance with the Sixth Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights, and with the provisions of the Extradition Act 1989. We do not extradite any persons to a jurisdiction where the offence for which they could be tried, or for which they have been tried, carries the death penalty, unless sufficient assurances are provided by the requesting state that the death penalty will not be imposed, or if imposed, will not be carried out.

Accommodation Centres

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the per capita cost of education provision in accommodation centres. [71326]

Beverley Hughes*[holding answer 19 July 2002]:* We are in the process of running a competition for the delivery of accommodation centres. Information about costs is commercially confidential.

Police

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of service was for a (a) policewoman and (b) policeman in England and Wales in the latest year for which figures are available. [50682]

Mr. Denham: The latest figures available are for March 2000 and they are set out in the table.

The lower average length of service for women officers in part reflects the increase in recent years in the number and proportion of women in the police service from 14,496 female officers (11.6 per cent. of strength) in 1990 to 21,800 (17.4 per cent. of strength) by September 2001.

However, the rate of voluntary resignation by women is higher than the rate for men and this also contributes to the shorter average length of service.

As part of the Dismantling Barriers initiative, we have asked forces to carry out externally audited exit interviews with departing staff to build a picture of why those leaving have decided to do so, and identify where changes might help retain staff.

We are liaising with the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) Work/Life Balance Team to determine how the Home Office can assist forces in using flexible working.

A research project into the retention of policy officers is under way, to inform the development of effective and practical approaches by forces to improve the retention of police officers. The focus of the research is on those forces identified as having high or increasing levels of resignations and among those groups of officers (including women officers) that have disproportionately high levels of resignations.

Mean average length of service in years for female and male police officers March 2000[1,2]

	Mean
Female officers (0–30 years' service only[3])	9.7
All female officers (includes over 30 years' service[3])	9.7

Mean average length of service in years for female and male police officers March 2000[1,2]

	Mean
Male officers (0–30 years' service only[3])	14.6
All male officers (includes over 30 years' service[3])	15.0

[1] Source—Dismantling Barriers monitoring return March 2002.

[2] Individual officers' length of service is not available centrally. These figures are calculated from aggregate returns showing the total number of officers in each year of service and are therefore approximate.

[3] Two figures are shown. The standard period of service 30 years, although some officers elect to serve beyond this, with the agreement of their chief constable. The first figure is therefore the average for officers who have 0–30 years' service. The second figure includes officers who have over 30 years' service. There are very few female officers with over 30 years' service, so the average length of service does not increase if they are included, where it does for male officers.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contingency plans he has in place should the police work to rule, ban overtime or strike. [38817]

Mr. Denham: Police officers do not have the right to strike. Under section 91 of the Police Act 1996, it is a criminal offence for anyone to cause disaffection among police officers or to induce any police officer to withhold his services. Police officers are under a duty to carry out all lawful orders, so would have to work overtime if required to do so.

On 9 May, we reached agreement in the Police Negotiating Board (PNB) on a package of reforms to police pay and conditions of service. PNB is the statutory negotiating body for police pay and conditions of service, on which all the main police organisations are represented, including the Police Federation, the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Association of Police Authorities. The PNB was, in part, set up to compensate for police officers not having the right to strike. Due process was followed throughout the negotiations leading up to the Agreement on 9 May.

Police Retention

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 12 February 2001, Official Report, column 299W, on police retention, what proportion of police officers retired from each force in each year since 1997 (a) on medical grounds (b) at normal retirement age and (c) on other grounds; and what the net change was as a proportion of each force in each year since 1997. [38032]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 27 February 2002]: The figures given in the answer of 12 February 2001, were those collected by the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate (RDS) and published as Police Personnel Statistics. For the purpose of these statistics, wastage is collected on a headcount basis (ie the number of persons) in the following categories: retirements, resignations and other. The statistics do not distinguish between medical and other retirements.

In addition to the information collected by RDS, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) collects information annually about wastage from the police service broken down into the following categories:

Dismissals from force (including requirements to resign)

Voluntary resignations

Medical retirements

Ordinary retirements

Transfers from force

Deaths.

Forces are asked to provide these figures on a full-time equivalent basis, not on a headcount basis. HMIC's information has been used to provide the figures in a table for the numbers and proportion of medical and ordinary retirements and other leavers (excluding transfers), a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Information for 2001–02 will not be available until later in the year.

As the statistics collected by HMIC are gathered on a different basis from those collected twice a year by RDS, information from the two sources cannot be reconciled directly. We are aware of the inconsistent basis between the two sets of figures and established a task force to consider these issues. The task force report was issued for consultation on 18 December 2001. The report of the task force proposes a comprehensive revision to the current requirements on police personnel statistics. Following consultation with the police service we will implement the necessary changes from September 2002.

Police Firearms

Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the most recent statistics are for the police use of firearms. [72974]

Mr. Denham: The statistics for April 2000 to March 2001 show that the number of police operations in which firearms were issued was 11,109. The number of occasions on which firearms were discharged by police increased to nine.

There was a small decrease in the number of operations in which armed response vehicles were deployed.

Full details are set out in the tables:

Police Vacancies

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which 10 police authorities have (a) the highest and (b) the lowest number of vacancies for police officers; and how many officers were involved in each case. [36912]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many, and what proportion, of employees of the Metropolitan Police were off sick on average on each day in the last month for which figures are available; how many and what proportion of those (a) were absent on self-certification or without authorisation, (b) were on sick leave of less than a week, (c) were on sick leave of more than one week and less than one month, (d) were on sick leave of more than one month and (e) were on leave as a result of injuries sustained while on duty. [41102]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 18 March 2002]: I understand from the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police that the available figures for April 2002 are as follows:

	Police officers	Percentage of all police officers	Civilian support staff and traffic wardens	Percentage of all civilian support staff etc.	All staff	Percentage of all staff
Average daily number of working days lost to sickness absence	710.5	2.7	328.4	2.9	1038.9	2.7

Number of employees on sick leave for seven or more days	974	3.7	429	3.8	1,403	3.7
Number of employees on sick leave as a result of injury on duty	273	1.0	22	0.2	295	0.8

Police Officers

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of police officers accepted into the Metropolitan Police in each year from 1997 have minor criminal records. [30452]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 29 January 2002]: I am informed by the Commissioner that no central record of this information is held by the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS).

The MPS follow the Home Office National Recruitment Standards on criminal convictions, agreed with the Police Service and issued in October 2001.

Applicants who have been convicted or cautioned may still be eligible for appointment, depending on the nature and circumstances of their offence.

Minor offences which would not lead to automatic rejection of an application include, for example failing to have a current television licence or MoT certificate.

West Midlands Police

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the prospects of West Midlands police receiving regional allowance; [39491]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent in the last five years to which police forces have trained police officers and then have lost them by transfer to neighbouring police forces, with particular reference to the West Midlands; and if he will make a statement on measures to prevent this happening. [39482]

Mr. Denham: Figures for the number of officers leaving police forces on transfer are collected annually by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC). In 2000–01, the latest full year for which figures are available, the total number of officers leaving forces in England and Wales on transfer was 1,189 or one per cent. of the police strength.

The figures collected by HMIC do not distinguish between officers who transfer soon after completion of initial training and those who transfer later in their career. Nor do the figures identify how many of the officers transferring have transferred between forces on previous occasions.

In the case of West Midlands police, that between April 2000 and March 2001, 59 officers left the force on transfer. This represented 0.8 per cent. in fall of force strength at the start of the year, a little below the overall rate from England and Wales.

The number of officers transferring between forces remains small. It is healthy for there to be an interchange of experience between police forces and I do not intend to prevent transfers.

Of course, the number of transfers from a force may present a problem if those transferring leave predominantly from particular areas or specialisms, or if the number leaving is not offset by transfers in. We are presently conducting research into the reasons why officers resign from the police service or choose to transfer from one force to another. The findings of this research will help forces decide on which measures to implement in order to encourage officers to stay in the service, or in a particular force.

It is for the Home Secretary to determine police pay and allowances. In doing so, he is required to take into account any recommendation by the Police Negotiating Board (PNB). It would, therefore, be for PNB to consider in the first instance the case for a regional allowance for officers in the West Midlands. In 2001, the PNB failed to reach agreement on a Staff Side claim for a regional allowance for all police forces. The matter was then referred to the Police Arbitration Tribunal (PAT). The PAT rejected the Staff Side claim and decided that there was no evidence of a significant nationwide recruitment problem for the police service.

Police Sick Leave

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many days of sick leave were taken by the (a) police force, (b) fire service and (c) prison service in the last year for which records are available; and what the cost was. [56065]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 20 May 2002]: The number of days taken as sick leave in 2000–01 and the estimated costs are set out in the table:

	Number of days sick leave taken	Estimated cost £ million
Police officers	1,516,147	[1]280
Police support staff	746,928	[2]106
Total	2,263,075	386
Fire service[3]	[4]407,369	[5]—
Prison service	614,150	[6]68

[1] The average daily cost of a police officer is £185.

[2] The average daily cost of a member of support staff is £142.

[3] Responsibility for the fire service rests with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

[4] This is based on 45 out of the 50 brigades providing full information.

[5] Not available.

[6] The prison service figure is calculating using a daily costing of £110 for all staff.

Investigatory Branch CIB3

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received regarding the progress of the investigatory branch CIB3 in investigating alleged misdemeanours. [69332]

Mr. Denham: I received representations on alleged malpractice in corruption investigations by the Anti-Corruption Unit of the Metropolitan Police Service's Directorate of Professional Standards (formerly CIB3) from my noble Friend (Lord Graham) of Edmonton, five hon. Members and a solicitor at a meeting on 20 March 2002. I received a dossier of written material from my noble Friend Lord Graham on 30 April. I have also received nine other pieces of correspondence on related issues.

We have received no other representations this year.

Deaths in Custody

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he is taking to reduce the number of deaths in police custody; [70830]

(2) what assessment he has made of the causes of the change in the annual number of deaths in police custody since 1992. [70952]

Mr. Denham: The number of people dying in police stations has fallen from 16 to five in the period 1998–99 to 2000–01. Provisional figures for 2001–02 show that the decline is continuing.

The definitions of deaths in police custody or otherwise with the police were revised in 1996 to make them clearer, and to distinguish between deaths of those in police detention and other deaths involving the police. This resulted in a broader range of deaths being reported, for example people who died while attempting to evade arrest in vehicles. This has resulted in an increase in the published figures.

The increased figure for 1995–96 reflected the change to collecting the figures on a financial year basis rather than on a calendar year basis and were collected over a 15 month period (1 January 1995 to 31 March 1996).

Much has been done in recent years by the police, the Home Office and the Police Complaints Authority (PCA) to identify the main factors responsible for deaths in custody and to consider how the position can be improved. Police forces in England and Wales are taking a range of actions to reduce such deaths. These include safer custody facilities, improved training, Close Circuit Television (CCTV) monitoring and an emphasis on better care, assessment and monitoring of detainees.

Special Constables

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about establishment, recruitment and retention in the special constabulary. [65610]

Mr. Denham: Special constables are a key element of our police reform agenda. We are working on a package of measures designed to help improve the way they are recruited, managed and deployed.

We are particularly keen to improve liaison with employers. Later this year, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Home Secretary will publish a joint discussion paper on fiscal and other changes we can make to promote community service, including service as a special constable. A new headline role for specials has been published, focusing on intelligence-led patrolling and crime reduction initiatives. A new foundation training package for specials was issued in June and revised conditions of service regulations and new conduct regulations are being prepared.

Central to this process will be Home Office/the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) good practice guidance covering all aspects of the recruitment, management and deployment of specials, which will be issued by the end of the year. We have also set aside £300,000 to help "specials champions" forces drive forward initiatives to improve the recruitment and retention of specials. I have asked deputy chief constable Peter Fahy of Surrey police to help with this.

Bilateral Ministerial Meetings

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Ministers in his Department have held meetings with Ministers and officials of the Irish Government since 1 June 2000; when and where each meeting took place; which Ministers were involved in each meeting; which Irish Government departments were involved in each meeting; and which Ministers and officials from the Irish Government attended each meeting. [63089]

Mr. Blunkett: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Member for Neath (Peter Hain) on 20 June 2002, Official Report, column 533W.

Ring-fenced Funds

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funds allocated by (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies are ring-fenced for specific purposes; and if he will list the allocations of funds involved. [22952]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 18 December 2001]: I regret the delay in responding to this question. Ring-fenced expenditure for the Home Office and Prison Service Agency for financial year 2001–02 is detailed in the table:

£000

	2001–02

Conviction Rate

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes resulted in a conviction as a proportion of total recorded crime in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [55855]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is contained in the table.

Number of convictions for notifiable offences as a percentage of recorded crime, 1998–99 to 2000–01

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Recorded crime	5,109,116	5,301,171	5,170,196
Convictions for notifiable offences	755,705	756,629	705,450
Convictions as a percentage of recorded crime	14.8	14.3	13.6

Notes:

1. A crime may involve more than one offender.
2. Each notifiable offence for which an individual was convicted is counted.
3. Some convictions will relate to crimes recorded in earlier years.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether businesses that have lost money as a direct result of the failure of the Criminal Records Bureau to meet its published service standards will be entitled to compensation. [70238]

Hilary Benn: Part V of the Police Act 1997 imposes no time frame for the issue of disclosures and the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) has no liability in contract or tort for taking time to process applications. The CRB has sought advice about the circumstances in which it is suitable to consider paying, or declining to pay, WW compensation.

Air Weapons

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions there were for (a) carrying a loaded air weapon in a public place, (b) a person under 14 having an air weapon, (c) a person under 17 having an air weapon in a public place and (d) the sale of air weapons to minors in the last five years. [67831]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The information requested is contained in the table.

Statistics for 2001 will be available in the autumn.

Ministerial Training

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how much has been spent by his Department on training in leadership skills for Ministers and officials in each of the last five years; [52734]

(2) how much has been spent by his Department on voice coaching for Ministers and officials in each of the last five years; [52755]

(3) how much has been spent by his Department on training by the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts for Ministers and officials in each of the last five years. [52715]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 26 April 2002]: There are no central data available on how much has been spent by the Home Department on training in leadership skills for Ministers in the last five years.

In the financial year 2001–02, the Cabinet Office provided funds for leadership development for officials as part of the invest to modernise programme. Records available show that £583,967 was spent by the Home Department on training in leadership skills for officials from 1 December 2001 to 31 March 2002 under the excellent leaders scheme. All expenditure under the excellent leaders scheme came from a ring-fenced allocation from the Cabinet Office and not from general Home Office funds.

The aim of the excellent leaders scheme was to grow leadership skills in the senior civil service by developing their competencies. In the period December 2001 to March 2002, 84 senior members of staff received executive coaching sessions; 13 specifically tailored Directorate leadership conferences were held for senior Home Office staff, and 40 members of staff attended publicly available leadership programmes and training events.

£316,000 was spent on executive coaching sessions; £197,000 on tailored leadership conferences and £70,967 on leadership training.

Ministers in the Home Department are able to take advantage of the programmes for Ministers organised by the Centre for Management and Policy Studies (CMPS) in the Cabinet Office. This programme has not delivered training on voice coaching or training by the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts. Neither have officials received such training in the last five years.

Prostitution

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women have been sent to prison in the United Kingdom for living on the earnings of, or for controlling, a prostitute in each of the last five years. [70283]

Hilary Benn: The information requested, relating to (a) males and (b) females sentenced to immediate custody for living on the earnings of, or controlling a prostitute in England and Wales from 1996 to 2000 are shown in the table.

Statistics for 2001 will be available in the autumn.

Figures for Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the Scottish Parliament and the Northern Ireland Assembly respectively.

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.

[2] Staffordshire Police Force were only able to supply a sample of data for magistrates' courts proceedings covering one full week in each quarter for 2000. Although sufficient to estimate higher orders of data, these data are not robust at a detailed level and so are excluded from this analysis.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) boys and (b) girls aged under 15 years have been cautioned by police officers in the Metropolitan Police Authority for being involved in prostitution in the last 12 months. [70271]

Mr. Denham: No instances of males or females aged under 15 cautioned in 2000 for prostitution in the Metropolitan Police Force Area were reported to the Home Office.

Statistics for 2001 will be available in the autumn.

Justice and Home Affairs Agenda

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to take forward the Justice and Home Affairs Agenda of the EU. [64838]

Mr. Blunkett: I intend to work closely with the incoming Danish Presidency with a view to taking forward the justice and home affairs work programme. Consequently, I met with Lene Espersen, the Danish Minister of Justice, on 19 June to discuss the priorities for the next six months.

My key priority will be to push forward implementation of the conclusions agreed at the Seville European Council on 21–22 June on combating illegal immigration and creating a common asylum policy. Those conclusions were prompted by United Kingdom concerns at the lack of progress on asylum and immigration measures and incorporate specific ideas proposed by the United Kingdom for the purpose of advancing that work. In particular, the conclusions set deadlines for agreeing the instruments which will form the basis of the European Union's common asylum system, and I attach importance to supporting the Danish Presidency in securing agreement to the Dublin II Regulation (on responsibility for processing an asylum claim) by the end of this year.

I also intend to focus greater attention at European Union level on action against drug trafficking as part of the mid-term review of the European Union's Action Plan against Drugs 2000–04. Improved cross-border police co-operation, including the effective use of Europol, is also a priority, as is progress in implementing the programme of measures on mutual recognition of court decisions and judgments. In particular, I would like to see completion of the negotiations on the mutual recognition of financial penalties, which was a joint initiative tabled by the United Kingdom, Belgium and Sweden.

Racism

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent advice he has given to local authorities about tackling racism and promoting community cohesion. [69955]

Beverley Hughes: The Government is committed to making race equality and community cohesion central to its aims.

We are committed to outlaw discrimination in employment by December 2003 as required by the European Employment Directives.

The Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000 came into force on 2 April. It places a general duty on specified public authorities to have due regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination—and to promote equality of opportunity and good relations between persons of different racial groups.

Public bodies were required to have in place by 31 May this year, realistic and timely plans to show how they intend to comply with the general duty.

The Government is working right across Departments on a number of measures to promote community cohesion. Our aim is to build communities where:

> there is a common vision and a sense of belonging for all people—there is an appreciation of people's different backgrounds and circumstances > where those from different backgrounds have similar life opportunities; and
> strong and positive relationships are being developed between people from different backgrounds in the work place, in schools and within neighbourhoods.

The Government published draft Guidance on Community Cohesion in May this year, in conjunction with the Commission for Racial Equality, and the Local Government Association. The draft provides advice to local authorities on ways to integrate community cohesion within their day to day operations. It focuses upon 16 themes covering housing, leisure, education, media, and training and employment schemes. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much funding has been provided to each authority for tackling racism and promoting community cohesion in the last 12 months. [69956]

Beverley Hughes: The Government believe that effectively addressing community cohesion issues forms a crucial part of the work of local government.

In working to achieve this aim, the Government are investing resources in local authorities through the following ways:

community facilitation work—these projects will help build capacity at a grass roots level and to bring local people together. This is important in order to encourage dialogue and tackle local grievances or misunderstandings that threaten good community and race relations;

a summer activity programme—in response to last summer's disturbances; we made £7 million available to fund summer activities with over 200,000 beneficiaries. We have released further funding for a similar and extended programme for this year, including additional activities in those areas with high levels of street crime;

a community support team programme—this is providing support to areas such as Burnley, Bradford and Oldham to help build the capacity of these areas in promoting community cohesion.

In addition, the Community Cohesion Unit set up by the Home Office this year, which works to the Ministerial Group chaired by me, is working closely with local authorities.

Additionally, and in recognition of the need to genuinely build cohesion into the agenda of local government, the Government recently announced that community cohesion will form one of the key themes of the Government's beacon council scheme.

Draft guidance for local authorities has also been produced in conjunction with the Commission for Racial Equality and the Local Government Association. This sets out practical ways in which local authorities can integrate community cohesion into day-to-day operations. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Police Force (Diabetes)

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) for what reason the police force is not permitted to recruit diabetics; and what guidance has been issued on the transfer of a diagnosed diabetic from one constabulary to another; [41093]

(2) if he will respond to the letter of the hon. Member for Leominster dated 17 December 2001, on behalf of Mrs. T. A. Smith, a constituent, concerning a transfer to the West Mercia Constabulary. [41197]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 7 March 2002]: The Home Office issues no guidance to police forces on the subject of medical standards for officers transferring from one force to another.

Home Office guidance for forces on the recruitment of diabetics is currently under review by independent medical experts as part of the Home Office's National Recruitment Standards project. This work aims to ensure that occupational medical standards for police recruitment are evidence-based, job-related and not unfairly discriminatory. The new standards are expected to be applied consistently by the 43 forces of England and Wales.

The medical review will also take into account the implications of the proposed extension of the employment-related provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 to the police.

Recommendations on proposed new medical standards should be available for consultation shortly.

In the meantime, there are current Home Office medical guidelines on the recruitment of new entrants to the police service. These were formulated after consultations between occupational physicians and force medical advisers, and agreed by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) Working Group on Organisational Health, Safety and Welfare.

The Working Group further confirmed that the standards should not only reflect "fitness to serve" at the time of assessment, but should also predict, as far as possible, that the individual is likely to remain fit for the full duties of a police constable for the foreseeable future. This is in order to minimise premature retirement on health grounds.

The guidelines on diabetes state that candidates with diabetes mellitus should be rejected.

I responded to the hon. Member's letter of 17 December to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary (Mr. Blunkett) on 6 March 2002.

Working Holidaymaker Scheme

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons have been for individuals in the working holidaymaker scheme remaining in the UK after the two-year period had lapsed. [70797]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Working holidaymakers can stay in the United Kingdom beyond their initial two-year leave of entry if they obtain leave to remain in another category, for example, as a student.

Working holidaymakers are not normally permitted to remain in the United Kingdom for the purposes of employment, although some are permitted to switch into work permit employment on a case-by-case discretionary basis. A short extension of stay may be granted on an exceptional basis to a working holidaymaker employed as a supply teacher, until the end of the school term. Those working holidaymakers who have not been specifically permitted to stay longer should leave the United Kingdom at the end of the two-year period.

The Working Holidaymaker Scheme

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people participating in the working holidaymaker scheme are based in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland. [70795]

Beverley Hughes: [Holding answer 19 July 2002]: The information is not collected. Under the scheme young Commonwealth citizens come to the United Kingdom (UK) for an extended two-year holiday, during which they can take incidental employment to fund their stay here. They are free to move around the UK as they wish. Around 40,000 come to the UK each year on the scheme but, given its nature, it is not feasible or necessary to collect information on where participants base themselves at any one particular time during their stay.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people participating in the working holidaymaker scheme in each of the last five years have continued to stay in the UK after the two year period has been completed. [70796]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 19 July 2002]: This information is not available. Unless working holidaymakers have been granted an extension of stay, they should leave the country at the end of their two-year working holiday.

Housing

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make an assessment of the availability of empty housing stock owned by (a) local authorities, (b) housing associations, (c) public sector bodies and (d) the private sector in areas of industrial decline and its suitability to accommodate asylum seekers; and if he will make a statement. [68805]

Beverley Hughes: The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) is responsible for administering the support available to asylum seekers including the provision of accommodation. Research to identify cluster areas suitable for the dispersal of asylum seekers was conducted centrally by NASS in consultation with regional consortia. NASS is satisfied that it has a sufficient supply of accommodation for single adults but is currently negotiating for further accommodation for families.

Careless Driving

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drivers convicted of causing death by careless driving when under the influence of drink or drugs (a) served the whole of their sentence and (b) had their sentence reduced, in each of the past 10 years. [70972]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: I will write to my hon. Friend.

EU Committees (Scottish Executive Representation)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when the EU Committee for the Implementation of the Programme of Exchanges, Training and Co-operation between Law Enforcement Authorities (OISIN) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [70925]

(2) when the EU Committee for the Implementation of the Joint Action Establishing a Programme of Exchanges, Training and Co-operation for Persons Responsible for Action to Combat Organised Crime (Falcone) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [70923]

(3) when the EU Committee for the implementation of the incentive, exchange, training and co-operation programme for combating trade in human beings and the sexual exploitation of children (STOP) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [70922]

(4) when the EU Committee for the implementation of the incentive, exchange, training and co-operation programme for the prevention of crime (Hippokrates) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [70924]

(5) when the EU Committee for the Implementation of the Programme of Training, Exchanges and Co-operation in the Field of Asylum Immigration and crossing of External Borders (Odysseus) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [70929]

(6) when the EU Committee for the Implementation of the Community Action Programme on Preventive Measures to Fight Violence Against Children, Young Persons and Women (Daphne) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [71836]

(7) when the EU Committee on the Introduction of a Uniform Format for Visas is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [71827]

Beverley Hughes: The committees which assist the European Commission in managing the Oisin II, Falcone, Hippocrates and Grotius funding programmes will meet on 23 July to discuss the bids which have been received for the year 2002 and agree the allocation of funds to successful projects. The STOP Committee will meet on 24 July for the same purpose. The Daphne Committee will next meet on 11 September 2002. The Odysseus funding programme has expired.

The committees consist of a representative of each member state who may be accompanied by additional experts at the expense of the individual member state. The United Kingdom (UK) is represented on each committee by a Home Office official and an official from the UK Permanent Representation to the European Union (EU) in Brussels. A representative from Her Majesty's Customs and Excise also attends the OISIN Committee as appropriate.

In accordance with the Concordat on co-ordination of European Union policy issues, officials from the Home Office are in contact with Scottish Executive officials about the development and implementation of relevant funding programmes. Attendance by Scottish Executive officials at meetings of the committees would be agreed bilaterally, but has not so far taken place. Immigration and asylum matters are reserved subjects and consequently officials from the Scottish Executive were not members of, and did not attend, the Odysseus Committee.

Public Relations

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by (a) his Department and (b) bodies for which it is responsible on external public relations consultants in each of the last four years. [27397]

Beverley Hughes: In November 1999, the Treasury published a statement of Best Practice on the use of consultants within Government. This is accessible on the archive section of Office of Government Commerce's (OGC's) website (www.ogc.gov.uk). It represents a set of principles that should apply to many areas of consultancy. But it is not binding on Departments and has no status in law.

Decisions on the use of consultants is left to individual business units, but in making positive decisions units will take into account value for money considerations and whether the particular skills exist internally.

The increase in expenditure on Public Relations Consultants can be attributed to the Criminal Records Bureau and United Kingdom Passport Agency undertaking a greater degree of Public Relations work in areas such as market research and media. We do not have historical information to provide any other valid comparisons for the increase.

The available information held by the Home Department on cost for the use of external Public Relations Consultants by (a) Home Department and (b) other bodies over the last four years is as follows:

(a) Home Office

1998	Nil
1999	Nil
2000	32,164
2001	33,881

(b) Other bodies

1998	Nil
1999	81,299
2000	140,150
2001	319,000

Correspondence

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter dated 26 April from the hon. Member for Yeovil on the subject of private home security companies. [59719]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 12 June 2002]: I replied to the hon. Member on 22 July 2002.

Refurbishment Projects

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the refurbishment projects that (a) are in progress and (b) will start within the next six months; and what action is being taken to ensure that these will procure certified timber. [59759]

Beverley Hughes: The information on existing and forthcoming refurbishment projects with a value over £500,000 in the Home Office including its executive agencies (but excluding sponsored non-departmental public bodies) is as follows:

National Probation Directorate

In addition to the projects listed in the tables, 155 refurbishment project on the National Probation Directorate estate are either under way or are planned to begin within the next nine months. The average cost will be approximately £100,000. Full details could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Pending the issue of central technical guidance the Home Office did not require contracts to specify certified timber although its use was encouraged. Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) issued a model timber procurement clause in May which has been widely disseminated across the Department and all contracts for future major capital build schemes which involve the use of timber will require contractors to demonstrate that such timber will be provided from properly certified sources. This includes the new Home Office headquarters in Marsham Street.

Information Campaigns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent on information literature, advertising and campaign material in financial year 2001–02; if he will list the campaigns that spent over £250,000; and if he will make a statement. [70212]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 22 July 2002]: In 2001–02, the Home Office spent £22.4 million (exc. VAT) on information literature, advertising and campaign material. The campaigns that spent over £250,000 include: vehicle crime reduction, police recruitment, electoral issues, drugs misuse and child protection on the internet

Personality Disorder Assessments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason the target to complete 180 dangerous and severe personality disorder assessments by 2001–02 was not met. [68782]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 11 July 2002]: The development of an assessment process for those who are dangerous as a result of a severe personality disorder is innovative and groundbreaking work.

We are currently piloting assessments at Whitemoor prison and Rampton hospital and using their experience, along with the latest research evidence, to develop a framework for assessment in which clinicians, tribunals and the courts can have confidence. This is fundamental to ensuring that people are referred appropriately to services and that any new legislative powers are applied properly.

The target to complete 180 assessments was agreed early in the life of the pilots, following which a number of refinements were made, the most significant being to extend the assessment process from 12 to 16 weeks. In addition the Whitemoor pilot has had significant difficulties in recruiting suitably qualified clinical staff and had to be temporarily suspended to allow for some refurbishment work in preparation for the treatment unit there. While these factors have inevitably had an effect on throughput, the 94 assessments completed during the period have proved invaluable in informing the development of a high quality assessment process, and provide a sound basis for further work.

PSA Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated cost to public funds is of the failure to achieve the public service agreement target to increase the number and proportions of recorded crimes for which an offender is brought to justice. [68778]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 11 July 2002]: As the public service agreement target relates to the number of offences which are brought to justice in 2003–04, it will not be possible to say until after the end of 2003–04 whether or not the target has been met.

Drug Misuse

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the proportion of young people under 25 (a) misusing illegal drugs and (b) with access to illegal drugs in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [69105]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 11 July 2002]: Results from the 1998 and 2000 British Crime Surveys estimate that 29 per cent. of adults aged between 16 and 24 reported to have used an illegal drug in the previous year.

Results from the 2001 survey of drug use, smoking and drinking among school children aged 11 to 15 years in England (published in a statistical press notice by Department of Health on 15 March 2002) show that 42 per cent. have been offered at least one or more drugs and that 20 per cent. reported the use of an illegal drug in the previous year.

A revised method of measuring the prevalence of drug use was introduced in 2001. The format of the questions was changed as was the wording of the questions, after research showed that pupils found the previous survey difficult to answer. It is likely that the increase in levels of reported drug use is due to this change in question format rather than a real change in behaviour. Because of this revised methodology the 2001 estimates on drug use are not strictly comparable with results from previous sweeps.

The estimates from previous years for those who reported ever having been offered at least one or more drug are 34 per cent. in 1998, 35 per cent. in 1999, and 35 per cent in 2000.

The estimates from previous years for those reporting use of an illegal drug in the previous year are 11 per cent. in 1998, 12 per cent. in 1999 and 14 per cent. in 2000.

Information regarding younger children is not available centrally.

Recovered Assets Fund

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what payments have been made for projects under the Recovered Assets Fund, broken down by region. [69337]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The Confiscated Assets Fund (CAF) was the forerunner of the Recovered Assets Fund (RAF) and provided funding for anti-drug projects. In 1999–2000 it approved national projects totalling £764,300. In 2000–2001 its national projects totalled £6,841,000 plus one in Wales for £262,000. Finally, in 2001–2002 it approved national project funding of £5,624,143 plus £2,500 in the south west, £879,600 in the midlands and £625,500 in London and the south east.

I expect to announce shortly a first tranche of projects that are to receive funding under the Recovered Assets Fund, which has replaced the CAF and has a broader scope. These are in addition to RAF grants worth £250,000 for two asset recovery related projects which are already under way.

Mr. B. K. Pathan

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter sent by the hon. Member for Leicester, East (Keith Vaz) on 22 April, concerning Mr. B. K. Pathan of Leicester, reference P302501; and if he will make a statement. [69247]

Beverley Hughes: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 23 July 2002.

Firearms

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has collated on the types of firearms used for criminal purposes since 1997. [47446]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Criminals in the United Kingdom use a range of different firearms obtained from a variety of different sources. The information collected centrally at present relates only to broad categories of weapons and is given in the table.

As part of our efforts to crack down on misuse, we are currently funding a new National Firearms Forensic Intelligence Database which is expected to be operational in 2003. As well as helping to track the provenance of guns which have been recovered and to identify any which have been previously used, it will also help to provide a much more detailed assessment of the types of weapons used.

Recorded crimes in which firearms were reported to have been used by principal weapon: England and Wales

Emergency Planning

Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which Departments will take the lead in the event of different kinds of emergency taking place in the UK. [72965]

Mr. Blunkett: Most emergencies are handled at a local level by the emergency services and by the appropriate local authority or authorities with no direct involvement by central Government.

Where central Government do become involved because the incident is of such a scale or complexity to require central co-ordination or support, it is essential that we are clear in advance which Department will be in the lead.

The Civil Contingencies Committee has had an up-to-date list of pre-nominated leads produced in order to reflect the devolution settlement; the changes to the machinery of Government made by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister since the general election; and incidents which were not covered in the earlier 'Dealing with Disaster' guidance document.

I am placing in the Library a paper explaining the respective roles of lead Government Departments and the Civil Contingencies Secretariat and a table summarising which Departments will have the lead for different categories of emergency.

The table shows the position that holds within the devolved Administrations and arrangements are being made to place the material in the Libraries of the Scottish Parliament, the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Assembly.

Arrangements are also being made for this material to be made available to the local authority and emergency services associations and to be placed on the internet at www.ukresilience.info that will be updated whenever necessary and should be consulted for the latest information on pre-designated lead Departments.

Prisons

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the level of staff absence through (a) short-term and (b) long-term sickness is in each prison, broken down by category, in the last 12 months for which information is available. [62378]

Hilary Benn: Information relating to the financial year 2001–02 is contained in the table. Information about privately managed prisons is not available as it is commercial in confidence.

Vulnerable Prisoner Units

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) male and (b) female prison inmates are held in vulnerable prisoner units in prisons in England and Wales. [70280]

Hilary Benn: On 31 May 2002 there were 3,911 male prisoners held in vulnerable prisoner units. There are no vulnerable prisoner units in the female estate. The female estate does not have any dedicated units specifically for vulnerable prisoners as they are managed within the general female population. There are some beds reserved for women who are vulnerable from the nature of their offence but these are only in very small numbers and not in designated units.

Prisoners

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated timetable will be for implementing the enhanced wages scheme for prisoners outlined in the Social Exclusion Unit's latest report; and if he will make a statement. [67837]

Hilary Benn: An action plan setting out the Government's response to the report will be published later this year.

Prison Service

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the final Key Performance Indicator targets for the Prison Service for 2002–03. [72976]

Hilary Benn: The Prison Service Business Plan for 2002–03, published in February 2002, included Key Performance Indicator (KPI) measures for the year but at that stage not all the associated targets had been finalised.

The full set of measures and targets for 2002–03 are listed as follows:

To ensure no escapes of Category A prisoners;

To ensure that the number of escapes from prisons and from escorts undertaken by Prison Service staff, expressed as a proportion of the average prison population, is lower than 0.05 per cent.;

To ensure that the number of escapes from contracted out escorts is no more than one per 20,000 prisoners handled;

To ensure that the number of positive adjudications of assault on prisoners, staff and others, expressed as a proportion of the average prison population is lower than 9 per cent.;

To ensure that the number of prisoners held two to a cell designated for one, expressed as a proportion of the average prison population does not exceed 18 per cent.;

To ensure that the number of minority ethnic staff in the prison service, expressed as a proportion of the total work force is at least 4.5 per cent. by April 2003;

To ensure that average staff sickness does not exceed nine working days per person by April 2003;

To ensure that the average cost per uncrowded prison place does not exceed £38,743;

To ensure that the average cost per prisoner does not exceed £36,539;

To ensure 7,100 accredited offending behaviour programme completions in 2002–03, including 950 sex offender treatment programmes;

To ensure that prisoners spend on average at least 24 hours per week in purposeful activity;

To ensure the rate of positive results from random mandatory drug tests is lower than 10 per cent. by April 2003;

To achieve a 5 per cent. reduction in the number of self inflicted deaths expressed as a rate per 100,000 of average population compared with 2001–02;

Prisoners to achieve 45,000 key skills awards and 28,800 in basic skills including 10,800 at level 2, 12,000 at level 1 and 6,000 at entry level;

To ensure 28,200 prisoners have a job, training or education place after release by April 2003; and

To develop and pilot a joint indicator with Department of Health to reduce waiting times for mental health transfers and to implement the KPI from April 2003.

Prisoners (Feltham)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours per day the (a) 16 to 18-year-old and (b) over 18-year-old prisoners at Feltham receive (i) compulsory education, (ii) extra-curricular education, (iii) sport and (iv) general exercise; and if he will make a statement. [67311]

Hilary Benn: Education is only compulsory for those under school leaving age; they receive 15 hours of education per week at Feltham in five, three-hour sessions. Anyone over this age cannot be ordered to undertake education, as it is not classified as work.

On extra-curricular education, there are currently no evening classes at Feltham. It is hoped that the prison's local recruitment campaign will deliver sufficient staff to make this possible.

With regard to participation in sporting activities, juveniles (under 18s) are currently receiving an average of 4.9 hours of physical education (PE) a week. Young offenders are currently receiving an average of 5.4 hours per week. However, attendance at PE is voluntary.

For general exercise, all prisoners receive a daily minimum of 30 minutes of time in the open air. Those in segregation receive one hour a day, weather permitting.

London Probation Service

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) full-time, (b) part-time, (c) agency and (d) temporary staff work for the London Probation Service. [69430]

Hilary Benn: The latest figures from the London Probation Area show that they currently employ 2,836 staff in total; 2,137 of which are full time employees, 530 are part time, 89 are agency staff and 80 are on temporary contracts.

Forensic Science Service

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the Forensic Science Service. [72977]

Mr. Denham: A review of the Forensic Science Service will commence on 2 September and is expected to be completed by spring 2003. The review team, independently lead by Robert McFarland, a former chief executive of the BOC Group, has been appointed and preliminary work is already under way. A steering group, chaired by one of my officials, will oversee the review and recommendations will be made to me in due course. I will report back to the House on its findings.

The review process will provide extensive opportunities for consultation work with internal and external stakeholders and will follow the procedures recommended in the guidance for the review of executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies published by the Cabinet Office.

Auld Review

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Government expect to publish a detailed response to Sir Robin Auld's, Review of the Criminal Courts of England and Wales, and John Halliday's, Making Punishments Work—A Review of the Sentencing Framework for England and Wales. [72981]

Hilary Benn: 'Justice for All' presented to Parliament on 17 July set out our policy on reform of the criminal justice system. We made clear that we are indebted to Sir Robin auld and John Halliday for their extensive and thorough review of the criminal courts and sentencing policy. Today we publish a detailed response to all their recommendations and copies will be placed in the Library.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list his Department's total expenditure by month in each financial year since 1997–98. [32794]

Mr. Blunkett: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Boateng) on 4 February 2002, Official Report, column 692W.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by how much his Department underspent its expenditure limits in the financial year 2000–01. [40831]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 7 March 2002]: The Home Office full, financial year outturns for the years 1998–99 to 2000–01 are shown in the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses (Cm 5401) published by the Treasury in May 2002.

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total under-spend in his Department was on (a) capital and (b) non-capital expenditure in each financial year since May 1997. [34026]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 7 February 2002]: The Home Office full, financial outturns for the years 1998–99 to 2000–01 are shown in the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses (Cm 5401) published by the Treasury in May 2002.

The full, financial outturn for the 1997–98 financial year was shown in the previous Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses (Cm 5101).

Departmental Report

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of publishing his Department's annual report for each of the past five years. [70479]

Beverley Hughes: The information is as follows:

Home Office annual report	Design	Print	Total cost
1999	28,120.37	15,200.00	43,320.37
2000	20,639.46	14,681.00	35,320.46
2001	57,695.66	22,842.00	80,537.66
2002	30,411.35	17,967.98	48,379.33

The costs for 1998 are not readily available. To obtain the 1998 figures would amount to disproportionate costs.

We believe the benefit to Parliament and the public of publishing a detailed account of our work is considerable, facilitating more open government.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Transsexuals

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when she will make a statement about the ECHR judgments in the cases of Goodwin v. UK and I v. UK; and when she expects British transsexuals will be able (a) to change their NI numbers and (b) to marry. [71488]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government reconvened recently the Interdepartmental Working Group on Transsexual People, to re-examine the implications of granting full legal status to transsexual people in their acquired gender, and to make recommendations to Ministers before the end of this year. It has now been tasked additionally with considering urgently the implications of the judgments of the European Court of Human Rights in the cases of Christine Goodwin v. The United Kingdom and I v. The United Kingdom.

The Government are obliged, under international law, to implement the judgments and will decide as soon as possible how to do so. The devolved Administrations are also considering their approach to these issues where responsibilities are devolved.

The matters under consideration include policy on marriage and national insurance arrangements. Transsexual people may already obtain new national insurance cards in their new names.

Following the ruling, statutes must be interpreted in the light of the ECtHR findings and, where a statute allows, discretion must be exercised differently in any case where the traditional interpretation or exercise of discretion would result in a violation of a transsexual person's Convention rights.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) whether the Government accepts the ruling of the European Court of Human Rights in the case of Goodwin and I; what action is being taken to bring UK law into compliance with the ruling; and if she will make a statement; [71604]

(2) what the terms of reference are of the reconvened Interdepartmental Working Group on Transsexual Rights. [71605]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government will decide their response to the Court's judgments as soon as possible. We had already reconvened the Interdepartmental Working Group on Transsexual People because the issues faced by the transsexual community affect the policy of a large number of Government Departments and the devolved Administrations.

The group met on 9 July. Its agreed terms of reference are:

> "In the light of the report of the Interdepartmental Working Group on Transsexual People and more recent relevant developments, to re-examine the implications of granting full legal status to transsexual people in their acquired gender; and to make recommendations".

These terms of reference remain valid subsequent to the ruling of the ECtHR, delivered on 11 July: but the Working Group has been tasked to consider urgently the implications of the judgments in the cases of Christine Goodwin v. The United Kingdom and I v. The United Kingdom. The Government are obliged, under international law, to implement the judgments and will decide as soon as possible how to do so. The devolved Administrations are also considering their approach to these issues where responsibilities are devolved. Recommendations on a course of action will be put to Ministers in october for collective decisions to be reached during the autumn.

Following the ruling, statutes must be interpreted in the light of the ECtHR findings and, where a statute allows, discretion must be exercised differently in any case where the traditional interpretation or exercise of discretion would result in a violation of a transsexual person's Convention rights.

Compensation

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what action she has taken to ensure that QinetiQ pays appropriate compensation to genealogical societies, for their administrative costs relating to vouchers for the 1901 Census website. [71268]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All vouchers which have not been used will receive a full refund on request, including the purchase cost, postage and packaging. All vouchers which have been partially used, will have a full six months of active life starting from the date when the online service resumes. Payment of compensation for any additional administrative costs would be dealt with by the contractor, QinetiQ Ltd.

Election Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the total Government expenditure was on (a) local elections in each year since 1997, (b) the 1997 general election and (c) the 2001 general election. [71230]

Yvette Cooper: To date, central Government expenditure for the conduct of the parliamentary general elections in 1997 and 2001 is £46.2 million and £44.3 million, respectively.

Central Government makes no direct contribution to the cost of conducting local government elections, the funding of which is the responsibility of local authorities themselves.

Information on the cost of local elections in England and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Deputy Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland respectively. This is a devolved matter in Wales and Scotland.

Law Commission

Gillian Merron: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the next quinquennial review of the Law Commission is to take place. [72978]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The next QQR of the Law Commission is to begin today. The approach to the review will take into account the wider process of law reform and the relationship between the Law Commission and other agencies involved in that process, particularly Government Departments. It is expected that a final report to the Lord Chancellor, outlining key findings and recommendations, will be produced by the end of the year.

John Halliday CB has been appointed as Head of Review. Mr. Halliday has been selected for this role because of the extent of his knowledge of the operation of Government, Parliament and the civil service. In particular, he has experience of working with the Law Commission and of leading the fundamental review of the framework for sentencing criminal offenders in England and Wales. This resulted in the Halliday report, 2001.

Copies of the Terms of Reference for the review have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Public Guardianship Office

Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Public Guardianship Office's annual report and accounts for 2001–02 will be laid before Parliament. [72886]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have today laid before the House the Public Guardianship Office's annual report and accounts for 2001–02, which gives full details of the Agency's performance and expenditure for that year.

Departmental Functions

David Wright: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on the recent changes in the functions of her Department. [72984]

Ms Rosie Winterton: For the assistance of hon. Members, I have today placed in the Library of each House a list which sets out briefly the current functions of the Lord Chancellor's Department.

Thames Valley Magistrates Court Service

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) staff and (b) legal advisers have left the Thames Valley magistrates court service since 1 January 2001; how many trials have been cancelled since 1 January 2001 in the Thames Valley magistrates court area, how many vacancies there are in the Thames Valley magistrates court service; and if she will list them and the salaries offered. [72597]

Yvette Cooper: I have been advised by Thames Val[illegible] Magistrates Courts Committee (MCC) that 52 staff members have left service since January 2001, of which 11 were legal advisers. There are currently 27.4 vacancies within the area, 7.4 of which are for legal advisers. Salaries for legal advisers are advertised at £25,518 to £32,001 (depending upon experience); deputy justices' clerks are advertised at £39,072 to £43,293; and admin/payments staff vacancies are advertised at £10,974 to £14,433.

I am advised by Thames Valley MCC that no trials have been cancelled since 1 January 2001.

Mentally Incapacitated People

Mr. Drew: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will publish the evidence presented to the consultation exercise on 'Making Decisions: Helping People who have Difficulty in Deciding for Themselves'. [70173]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Consultation on 'Making decisions: Helping People who have Difficulty Deciding for Themselves' is being conducted fully in accordance with the Cabinet Office's code of practice on written consultations. The code recommends that responses should be analysed carefully and that the results of the analysis should be made widely available. Responses are currently being analysed and, once completed, the results of that analysis, including an account of the views expressed, will be made public.

HEALTH

Medicines Commission

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to receive the annual report of the Medicines Commission for 2001; and if this will be published. [72975]

Ms Blears: We have received the report, and copies have been laid before both Houses of Parliament today in accordance with the requirements of section 5(2) of the Medicines Act 1968.

Bound volumes have been placed in the Library containing the 2001 reports of the Medicines Commission, the Committee on Safety of Medicines, the Advisory Board on the Registration of Homoeopathic Products, the British Pharmacopoeia Commission, the Independent Review Panel on Advertising, the Independent Panel for Borderline Products and the Veterinary Products Committee.

We are glad to acknowledge the valuable work done by the distinguished members of the Medicines Act advisory bodies and thank them for the time and effort dedicated in the public interest to this important work.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the 2001–02 annual report and accounts for the Meat Hygiene Service will be laid before Parliament. [73106]

Ms Blears: The 2001–02 annual report and accounts for [illegible] Meat Hygiene Service were laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library, but formal printing and publication will not occur for another 6–8 weeks, pending preparation of a version in Welsh as required by the Welsh Language Act.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the annual report and accounts of the Medicines Control Agency. [73107]

Ms Blears: We have received the report, and copies have today been laid before both Houses of Parliament in accordance with the requirements of sections 5(2) and 5(3) of the Exchequer and Audit Departments Act 1921. Copies have also been placed in the Library.

NHS Pensions Agency

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the key targets for 2002–03 for the NHS Pensions Agency; and if he will make a statement about the future of the Agency. [72783]

Mr. Hutton: I have agreed the Agency's key targets for 2002–03, and have placed copies in the Libraries of both Houses. A review of the Agency will be completed by the end of this year. This will address the performance of the Agency and will examine the options ('prior options') for the future of the Agency.

Syd Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the annual report and accounts of the NHS Pensions Agency. [69536]

Mr. Hutton: I have approved the annual report and accounts which have today been laid before the House of Commons in accordance with the requirements of section 7 of the Government Resources and Accounts Act 2000.

Copies have been placed in the Library.

Child Care

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce child care centres in every community in the United Kingdom. [68254]

Estelle Morris: I have been asked to reply.

Following emerging recommendations of the inter-departmental review of child care, recently carried out and due to report in the autumn, the Chancellor announced on 15 July that funding would be provided for children's centres to be set up in the most disadvantaged areas across England. The Government's long-term aim is to have such a centre in every disadvantaged ward in England. Building, where possible, on existing child care and Sure Start facilities, these centres will sit at the heart of the community offering integrated services and support to children, parents and child care providers. By March 2006, an additional 300,000 children and their parents will have access to health, education and other services through children's centres.

Vaccines

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether pneumococcal vaccine will be added to the flu campaign for the elderly. [56920]

Ms Blears: The potential cost-effectiveness of introducing universal vaccination with pneumococcal polysaccharide for everyone over 65 years and efficacy of the vaccine in this age group is under investigation by the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation.

Committee Mandates

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the mandate of the Committee for the implementation of the Community action programme for the prevention of AIDS and certain other communicable diseases is; how many times it has met over the last 12 months; what the United Kingdom representation on it is; what the annual cost of its work is to public funds; if he will list the items currently under its consideration; if he will take steps to increase its accountability and transparency to Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [57474]

Ms Blears: The European Union Committee for the implementation of the Community action programme for the prevention of AIDS and certain other communicable diseases was mandated under Article 5 of Decision 647/96/EC of the European Parliament and the Council (amended under Article 4 of Decision 521/2001/EC).

The committee assisted the Commission in taking forward the programme by providing opinions on proposed measures by the Commission. It is due to terminate with the introduction of the new EU action programme on public health.

The committee met once in the last year, in January 2002. The United Kingdom is normally represented by an official from this Department.

Costs of the committee to public funds are minimal. Meetings last one day, and the Commission pay the travel costs of nominated representatives. UK Departments are required to pay subsistence and UK costs.

The financial framework for implementation of the Community action programme for the prevention of AIDs and certain other communicable diseases, from 1 January 2002 to 31 December 2002, is euro 10.07 million.

The Commission has now decided which projects it will fund. This list will be published on the Department's website.

Together with members states, the Commission is currently conducting a review to bring existing legislation on the conduct of comitology committees into line with Council Decision 1999/468/EC, to "simplify the requirements for the exercise of implementing powers conferred on the Commission".

As an obligation to the Decision, the Commission undertook to publish an annual report on the working of committees. The first report was deposited in the Libraries of both Houses on 28 February 2002 (Com (2001) 783 Final).

As part of the review process, the UK Government have encouraged the Commission to produce and maintain an electronic database of every comitology committee, its agendas and recent actions, to be accessible through its website: http://europa.eu.int/comm/health/index_en.html.

PPP

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) progress has been made, (b) targets have been set and (c) success has been measured, in the public-private initiative in the NHS. [66897]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 July 2002]: The Government set out their policies about the role of the private sector in the national health service in detail in the response to the House of Commons Health Committee's first report on the role of the private sector in the NHS, published on 10 July 2002 (Cm 5567).

The NHS plan in 2000 set two main targets for investment in new NHS buildings, involving PFI:

Target 1:

over 100 new hospital schemes in total between 2000 and 2010 (both public and privately financed);

Target 2:

over half of the major 38 schemes given the go ahead at the time (July 2000) will be open by 2003–04 and the remainder will be under construction;

progress against Target 1: 64 major and 33 medium-sized PFI schemes have been given the go ahead. A further four major and six medium-sized schemes are being built under the public procurement route, making a total of 107 new hospital schemes; progress against Target 2: 23 of the major PFI schemes are scheduled to become operational before the end of 2004. Three of the publicly procured schemes are scheduled to be operational by 2004;

success against Targets 1 and 2: 12 major PFI schemes and eight medium-sized schemes are already built and operational, as are two of the publicly procured schemes; a further 12 major and 10 medium-sized schemes have signed final contracts and are under construction.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make it his policy to require the release of detailed information, withheld from the public on the grounds of commercial confidentiality when private finance initiative contracts are awarded in the NHS, after a period of three years to permit assessment of their value for money; [66435]

(2) if he will provide information on PFI schemes, withheld on the grounds of commercial confidentiality, to bona fide research bodies, to make objective assessments of their value for money. [67075]

Mr. Hutton: The National Audit Office has indefinite access to all information in the business cases and private finance initiative contracts to allow independent, objective assessments of value for money.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what method the Government use to measure the value of risk in assessing value for money for NHS private finance initiative projects in the NHS. [65532]

Mr. Hutton: Her Majesty's Treasury and the Department's guidance requires that a register of all risks is compiled which will provide a means for monitoring the evaluation and allocation of risk throughout the procurement exercise and whole life of private finance initiative project.

The methodology for assessing the values of risk includes standard techniques such as weighting and scoring analysis, single point and multi-point probability analysis. In addition, sensitivity analysis should always be undertaken on the risks which have been assessed as having relatively large values and those which are subject to the greatest uncertainty (e.g. due to lack of historical information). National health service trusts are required to use as much empirical information as possible in all their risk calculations.

Diagnostic and Treatment Centres

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if pre-existing plans for new hospitals, which already include the elements of diagnostic and treatment centres, will be fast-tracked when submitted for capital funding from the diagnostic and treatment centre funding programme; [66825]

(2) what funds his Department plans to make available for the establishing of diagnostic and treatment centres by primary care trusts in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004; [66828]

(3) what the typical allocation of funds will be to a primary care trust to establish a diagnostic and treatment centre; and on what basis this will be calculated; [66829]

(4) when he expects to announce the first tranche of diagnostic and treatment centres to be established by primary care trusts; [66830]

(5) what his policy is on the establishment of diagnostic and treatment centres by primary care trusts. [66827]

Mr. Hutton: We committed ourselves in the NHS Plan to having eight diagnostic and treatment centres up and running by 2004 with a further 12 in development.

On 21 February 2002, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Health, announced the first wave of eight diagnostic and treatment centres. One of these is The Chase Hospital, Bordon, part of the North Hampshire Primary Care Trust. The Department has allocated £700,000 to North Hampshire Primary Care Trust to support this development.

We are now looking to expand and bring forward the diagnostic and treatment centre programme further in order to grow capacity and reduce waiting times. We have asked the NHS to put forward proposals. In certain cases this may result in the acceleration of all or part of existing proposals for hospital development. The proposals may also include additional diagnostic and treatment centres established by primary care trusts.

Capital funding will be available to support the development of some of these diagnostic and treatment centres. Some proposals will involve working with, and/or funding from the private sector.

Smallpox Vaccine

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the smallpox contract awarded to Powderject is estimated to represent profit for Powderject. [67547]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has made no such estimate. Before letting the contract to Powderject, the prices offered by other companies for similar products were compared, and comparisons were made with the price being paid by the United States Government for its smallpox vaccine. On the basis of consideration of all the price information available relating to similar products, the vaccine was deemed to represent value for money.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason he has chosen to purchase a smallpox vaccine which is of a different strain from that ordered by the US Administration. [67544]

Mr. Hutton: The choice of smallpox vaccine strain took into account expert advice under the auspices of a specially convened sub-group of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI).

The advice of the JCVI sub-group was that there was no difference between the two strains on scientific grounds. Vaccines based on both strains were considered to have been effective in the past. However, the JCVI sub-group concluded that there was a greater body of evidence to demonstrate the efficacy of the Lister strain rather than for the New York City Board of Health strain, and that the smallpox vaccine has been challenged in the field more often by the more severe form of smallpox (variola major) with the strain chosen by the United Kingdom Government. The JCVI sub-group also recommended that using a different strain of vaccine from that used in the United States offered the greatest safeguard if difficulties arose with the production of either strain, ensuring that the alternative strain could act as a fallback.

NHS Hospital Trusts

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS hospital trusts have been merged in the last five years. [67185]

Mr. Hutton: A list of national health service trusts which have been involved in major reconfigurations over the last five years has been placed in the Library. Most of these have merged by dissolution and establishment of new trusts, but there are also absorption mergers and parts of NHS trusts involved in the formation of new NHS trusts and primary care trusts.

Health Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the outcome was of the Health Council held on 26 June; what the Government's stance was on each issue discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [67732]

Mr. Hutton: I represented the UK at the Health Council in Luxembourg on 26 June 2002.

The Council debated the Commission's package of proposals for review of pharmaceutical legislation, covering the authorisation of medicinal products through a centralised authorisation procedure and the constitution of the management board of the European Agency for the Evaluation of Medicinal Products (EMEA). No conclusions were reached.

During discussions of the framework convention on tobacco control, the Commission along with the incoming Danish presidency, urged member states to be flexible to allow the adoption of a strong European Union position for the next round of negotiations in Geneva in October. Some member states called for high level political input to seek to avoid adoption of a position that simply represented the lowest common denominator. The United Kingdom remains a supporter of a strong and effective convention.

Council conclusions on patient mobility were adopted; with the Commission expected to bring forward proposals during the Danish presidency.

The rest of the agenda covered the presentation of new dossiers or updates on the progress of current legislation. The Commission presented a draft directive on the safety of tissues and cells, to complement the current one on blood safety, as well as one on traditional medicines. There were also two recommendations: one on smoking prevention and tobacco control and another on the reduction of risks associated with drug dependence.

Details of these and other agenda items are set out in the table which will be placed in the Library. No votes were taken on any issue before the Council.

Renal Dialysis

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the training of new doctors and nurses in order to staff the opening of new renal stations; and when he expects to provide additional dialysis in east Lancashire. [6916[illegible]]

Jacqui Smith: The NHS plan commits the national health service to 7,500 more consultants and 20,000 extra nurses by 2004. As part of this expansion programme, the north-west deanery are planning a 15 per cent. increase during this year in the number of specialist registrar posts dedicated to the specialty of nephrology. This will support the renal development programme established for Lancashire and south Cumbria.

Nurses required to support the new renal stations at Chorley have been recruited through a process of internal recruitment within the United Kingdom together with an overseas recruitment campaign. The same approach will be adopted for the future planned developments at Blackpool and Burnley.

The Burnley Unit is a private finance initiative scheme which is expected to be commissioned during 2005, and in conjunction with the developments at Chorley and Blackpool, will significantly enhance the 'take-up' rates for each Lancashire from the current level of 73 per million to the planned 'take-up' rate of 90 per million by 2005.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what impact the opening of new renal stations in Lancashire will have on the number of patients at Royal Preston hospital; and if he will make a statement. [69217]

Jacqui Smith: The new renal facility at Chorley and South Ribble district general hospital is due to become operational in August 2002, and is expected to provide for 48 additional patients dialysing three times per week. Initially, patients currently being treated in Manchester hospitals will be given the choice of relocating to the new facility at Chorley. The facilities at Chorley are expected to achieve capacity by 31 March 2004.

Once the new unit becomes operational, the Royal Preston hospital can then ensure that more clinically appropriate patients are managed at what is the main Lancashire renal centre, while the service also increases its 'take-on' rate for new patients.

Social Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the net expenditure of each social services authority in England was in each year since 1990–91 at 2000–01 prices excluding expenditure on places in the private and voluntary homes sector; and what the percentage increase was in each year since 1990–91; [69716]

(2) what the gross expenditure is of each social services authority in England in each year since 1990–91 at 2000–01 prices; [69713]

(3) what the net expenditure was of each social services authority in England in each year since 1990–91 at 2000–01 prices; [69718]

(4) what the net expenditure was of each social services authority in England in each year since 1990–91 at 2000–01 prices on purchasing places in the private and voluntary homes sector. [69717]

Jacqui Smith: Tables have been placed in the Library which provide the information requested except for net expenditure on places in the private and voluntary homes sector by local authorities for the years 1990–91 to 1993–94 (inclusive) and 2000–01 which is not available centrally.

Care Homes

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the meaning of accredited training in relation to Minimum Standard 9.7 for homes for older people and Minimum Standard 20.10 for homes for younger adults. [70314]

Jacqui Smith: The administration of medication within care homes is a major responsibility and should not be undertaken lightly, since inappropriate administration could result in harm or, in some instances, the death of a service user. In this respect care home providers, therefore, must ensure that any staff who are charged with the responsibility to administer medication must fully understand the seriousness of this task, are trained in safe practices, and also have some awareness of the side effects of drugs on service users. The Commission is currently considering what forms of accredited training would be acceptable, but in the first instance, would suggest that training supplied by local pharmacists and community nurses would be acceptable.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will issue guidance to determine what constitutes regular contact with service users in respect of Care Home Regulations; [70318]

(2) if he will list the occupational groups the members of which will be considered as persons having regular contact with service users in connection with the Care Home Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [70319]

Jacqui Smith: The National Care Standards Commission takes 'regular contact with residents' to mean where a member of staff employed by the care home routinely interacts with residents on a one-to-one basis as part of their employment. This interaction may be restricted to talking to residents, but generally the commission will take it to mean where an individual is providing specific forms of care to a resident, such as personal care, nursing care, counselling and general support.

The staff having regular contact with residents will also vary from home to home. A range of internal and external people are likely to have regular contact with residents. This could include care staff, ancillary workers, volunteers and management staff, social workers and specialist health care professionals.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) for what reasons the Care Home Regulations make no reference to a requirement for a business and financial plan as specified in the National Minimum Standard for homes for older people 34.5; [70317]

(2) what must be contained in a business and financial plan as specified in National Minimum Standard for older people 34.5. [70316]

Jacqui Smith: The care homes regulations and the national standards are related but they are not the same. There are, therefore, differences in the language and level of detail they contain. The regulations set out in general terms mandatory requirements with which care homes must comply. The national standards are an assessment tool which the commission must take into account when it makes a decision about whether a care home conforms to the regulations. However, the commission may also take into account any other factors it considers reasonable or relevant to do so. The regulations do not, therefore, specifically refer to business and financial plans.

The regulations and standards do not specify what must be contained in a care home's business and financial plans. In deciding whether a care home's business and financial plans conform to the requirements, the commission will need to satisfy itself that they contain sufficient information to ensure that service users are safeguarded by the accounting and financial procedures of the home.

Queen Alexandra Hospital (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what companies and organisations have expressed an interest in being involved in the private finance initiative for the Queen Alexandra Hospital in Portsmouth; when he expects to make a decision on which of these will be involved; and if he will make a statement; [71000]

(2) what the reasons are for the cost of the private finance initiative of Queen Alexandra Hospital, Portsmouth, being raised; and if he will make a statement. [70998]

Mr. Hutton: The bidding process is still under way, but I am advised by Portsmouth Hospitals National Health Service Trust that three organisations were chosen to go through to the next stage. These were: The Hospital Company, Key Health Services and Summit Healthcare. I cannot, at this time, confirm when the bidding process will be completed.

The time scale for a final decision is a matter for the trust itself. The final business case has not yet been submitted because the bidding process is not complete. The cost for the private finance initiative, specified at the outline business case stage, was an estimate and would be expected to increase over the period required to complete the project, partly as a result of inflation and other outside cost pressures.

Doctors (Suspensions)

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 July 2002, Official Report, column 1209W, on doctors (suspensions), for what reasons absence or special leave or gardening leave are not included in official statistics; and what guidance is issued to NHS trusts on (a) staff suspensions and (b) placing staff on special or gardening leave. [70724]

Mr. Hutton: The process of formal monitoring of suspensions lasting over six months began in March 1995, six months after the issue of HSG(94)49, the current guidance on suspension of hospital and community medical and dental staff.

As a result of an undertaking to the Public Accounts Committee in April 1995, the Department monitors formal suspensions lasting over six months on a quarterly basis. This has enabled the financial implications of those suspensions to be monitored and helped to ensure that individual cases are being actively managed.

Information on special leave is collected on an ad hoc basis when concerns are raised. No official guidance has been issued on the use of special or gardening leave. In December 2001, the Chief Medical Officer wrote to all national health service trusts requesting information regarding the use of this type of leave. This information is currently being analysed.

Correspondence

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department intends to answer the letter of the hon. Member for North Norfolk of 1 March, in relation to Kelling Park Nursing Home. [71537]

Jacqui Smith: A reply was sent on 16 July 2002.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letter of 20 March 2002 from the hon. Member for Totnes regarding Mrs. B. A. Bence of Kingsbridge, Devon, a constituent. [59795]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 10 June 2002]: A reply was sent on 3 July 2002.

Hearing Aids

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the percentage cost is to the NHS of (a) a digital hearing aid and (b) an analogue aid; and what the differential was 12 months ago. [71758]

Jacqui Smith: Under the national health service contract, digital hearing aids had been available at a cost of between £140 and £205 each, for moderately powered aids. The contracts and prices have been renegotiated by a team set-up by Ministers and led by James Strachan, Chief Executive of Royal National Institute for the Deaf, which includes representatives from the Department and the Purchasing and Supply Agency (PASA), and allows moderate powered digital aids to be purchased at £65 to £75 each plus value added tax (VAT).

The cost of a moderately powered NHS analogue aid ranges from £59 to £126 each plus VAT.

Portsmouth and South East Hampshire Health Authority

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate his Department has made of the shortfall of social workers in (a) Portsmouth, (b) Hampshire and (c) the South East; and if he will make a statement. [72025]

Jacqui Smith: Information on vacancy rates for social workers is not available centrally.

Bed Blocking

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the Government's strategy to tackle bed blocking. [71769]

Jacqui Smith: The Government set a target in October 2001 to reduce the number of acute hospital beds blocked at any one time by 1,000, by 31 March 2002. In March 2001 there were 5,938 beds blocked by the over-75s, and at the end of March this year 4,691 were blocked.

The Government will shortly be consulting on its plans, first announced in, "Delivering the NHS Plan", to introduce a system of charges for delays where people are ready for discharge and are awaiting social services input.

Later in the year, the Government will be responding in full to the House of Commons Health Select Committee's forthcoming report on delayed discharges.

Audit Commission Reports

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to implement the recommendations of the Audit Commission's reports, "Fully Equipped" and "Fully Equipped Two"; and if he will make a statement. [71799]

Jacqui Smith: The Government are progressing their programme to improve equipment services for older and disabled people, and in doing so, are taking fully into account the recommendations made by the Audit Commission in its two reports on the subject.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to implement recommendations from the Audit Commission's report, "Fully Equipped Two". [72464]

Jacqui Smith: The Government are progressing their programme to improve equipment services for older and disabled people and, in doing so, are taking fully into account the recommendations made by the Audit Commission in its two reports on the subject, "Fully Equipped", published in March 2000, and "Fully Equipped Two".

Nurses

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS nurses have left the NHS to take nursing posts in north America in the last year. [72478]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected by the Department.

NHS Staff

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate his Department has made of the shortfall of (a) nurses, (b) general practitioners, (c) cancer specialists and (d) consultants in (i) St. Helens and Knowsley Health Authority, (ii) Merseyside, (iii) the North West and (iv) England. [71279]

Mr. Hutton: The Government's plans for increasing the size of the national health service work force were set out in the NHS Plan and our manifesto before the last election. Both targets for increasing nurse numbers have been met ahead of schedule. Our latest projection for 2008 is 35,000 more nurses than there were in 2001. This has not been broken down by strategic health authority (StHA).

The NHS Plan set a target of 2,000 more general practitioners (GPs) and 7,500 consultants in England by 2004, over the 1999 baseline. To date, there has been an increase of 483 GPs and 3,130 consultants. The target has been broken down by StHA level. Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority have an envelope of 141 more GPs and 377 more consultants by 2004.

The number of cancer specialists employed in the NHS is growing. As at March 2002, there were 3,857 cancer specialists in England. This represents an increase of 17 per cent. since 1999. We are on track to hit the target set out in the Cancer Plan of nearly 1,000 extra cancer consultants by 2006, this target has not been broken down by StHA.

Social Workers

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate his Department has made of the shortfall of social workers in (a) St. Helens, (b) Merseyside, (c) the North West and (d) England. [71281]

Jacqui Smith: Information on vacancy rates for social workers is not available centrally.

Public Consultation

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the public consultations undertaken by his Department since June 2001, stating in each case the (a) number of respondents and (b) percentage of those specifically consulted who responded. [60145]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 10 June 2002]: Since June 2001, the Department has undertaken 87 public consultations. A list of these will be placed in the Library.

The Department does not collect the number of respondents nor the percentage of those specifically consulted who responded either centrally or at all and it would be disproportionately expensive to assemble the information.

Hospital Discharges

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 17 June 2002, Official Report, column 168W, on hospital discharges, for what reason statistics for the Eastern Region on discharges that were delayed for less than eight days are not available. [64852]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 27 July 2002]: The statistics were not available because of inconsistencies in the data provided by some health authorities in eastern region. By checking with hospitals in the former eastern region, I have been able to estimate the number of discharges delayed for less than eight days in that region. I have placed some corrected figures in the Library.

NHS Maternity Units

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list NHS maternity units in descending order of the percentage level achieved against the standards expected of such a unit. [67457]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 5 July 2002]: There is no data available centrally on percentage levels against standards for maternity units.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason general practitioners practising within the area covered by the North Surrey PCT have been refused permission by the PCT to refer expectant mothers to the maternity units of their choice. [67468]

Ms Blears [holding answer 5 July 2002]: North Surrey Primary Care Trust has not stopped general practitioners referring expectant mothers to the maternity unit of their choice.

Mental Health

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff vacancies there are in the mental health sector of the NHS, broken down by region. [67972]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 8 July 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave the hon. Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Turner) today.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many remanded prisoners were transferred under the provisions of section 48 of the Mental Health Act 1983 in each of the last six years, including the most recent year for which figures are available. [70239]

Hilary Benn: I have been asked to reply.

Section 48 of the Mental Health Act 1983 empowers the Home Secretary to transfer people from prison to hospital who require urgent treatment in a psychiatric hospital. The section covers those remanded by the courts to custody; those convicted but awaiting sentence; those detained under the Immigration Act 1971; and civil prisoners.

Figures for remand prisoners only are not available. The figures are for all four categories.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the money to improve wards and conditions for psychiatric patients announced on 6 April 2001 was spent. [68148]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 11 July 2002]: £3,890,200 was spent in the financial year 2001–02.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve the monitoring of children for the first signs of the onset of mental illness. [67947]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 8 July 2002]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 24 April 2002, Official Report, column 351W, regarding current mental health promotion and early intervention services for children and adolescents. Additionally, under the NHS Plan, 50 early intervention services will be established over the next three years to reduce treatment delay in psychosis. All young people who experience a first episode of psychosis such as schizophrenia will receive the early and intensive support they need. This is expected to benefit 7,500 young people in the 14–35 age range each year. The early detection of the onset of mental illness is also an issue we expect to consider in the child and adolescent mental health services strand of the children's national service framework on which work is currently progressing.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies exist in (a) clinical psychology and (b) psychiatry in each health authority. [58841]

Mr. Hutton: The number of vacancies and the vacancy rates for clinical psychology and consultants in psychiatry and psychotherapy have been placed in the Library.

Hotspot Councils

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 176W, on care funding, what his definition is of hotspot councils; and what the names are of the hotspot councils as referred to in Annexe B. [68748]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 11 July 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 176W, and the information provided in Annexe B. 'Hotspot' councils were those 55 selected to receive additional funding. The 55 councils are as follows:

Food Safety

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the level of public confidence in the Government's arrangements for food safety measured by public opinion surveys in each year since 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [69086]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 July 2002]: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) has had responsibility for food safety since its establishment in April 2000. Levels of public confidence have been measured quantitatively rather than estimated as part of the annual "Consumer Attitudes to Food Standards", published in January 2001 and February 2002. In the most recent survey, 71 per cent. of consumers are aware of the FSA and, among them, levels of trust are high approximately 80 per cent. When asked how confident they were about the role played by the FSA in protecting health with regard to food safety, only 13 per cent. of consumers stated that they were not confident. Both surveys were widely reported by national media and are freely available on the Agency's website. The next annual survey will be published in early 2003. There were no similar surveys or estimates of public confidence by the Ministry for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, now the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, before 2000.

Cancer

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what Government funding was allocated to (a) treatment for and (b) research in (i) prostate, (ii) breast, (iii) lung and (iv) colon cancer in each of the last 10 years. [69292]

Ms Blears [holding answer 12 July 2002]: The Department does not collect figures on the cost of national health service services in a way that enables an accurate figure to be calculated for the cost of treatment or research for individual cancers.

Residential Child Care

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will undertake research into the reasons underlying the increase in the number of children being looked after in residential placements in the south west since 1997. [70356]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 16 July 2002]: The most recently published figures for children looked after by local authorities at 31 March 2001 show that, over the past three years, while the overall number of children looked after by local authorities in the south west region has risen slightly, the relative proportion of children in residential placements has declined from 9 per cent. to 8 per cent. There is no evidence that south western local authorities have increased their use of placements in residential care.

Doctors (Recruitment)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer given to the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox), of 2 July 2002, Official Report, column 298W, on doctors (recruitment), how many health care professionals from developing countries have been provided with formal training and education in the UK since 1997; and of these, how many returned to their home countries after completing their studies. [71046]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The information requested is not collected centrally.

NHS Leadership Centre

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 10 June 2002, Official Report, column 1317W, on the NHS Leadership Centre, how many people are employed by the NHS Leadership Centre. [71038]

Ms Blears [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The leadership centre is part of the National Health Service Modernisation Agency. As at 1 July 2002, there are a total of 48 staff who work for the leadership centre. 26 of those staff are on secondment or fixed term contracts from the NHS.

Overseas Recruitment

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has recently met the Secretary of State for International Development concerning the recruitment of nurses and doctors from developing countries. [71041]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 18 July 2002]: No. Officials from the two Departments are due to meet at the end of July to discuss the recruitment of health care professionals.

Junior Doctors

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated cost to the NHS is of compliance with new junior doctors' hours regulations. [71563]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The junior doctors' hours regulations are those incorporated into the new contract for junior doctors which requires Pre-Registration House Officers to be contracted for no more than 56 hours from August 2001, with senior house officers and specialist registrars following suit in August 2003.

The estimated cost of implementing the new contract from January 2001 to December 2003 is in the region of £210 million on a total junior doctors' pay bill of some £1.3 billion per annum. However, detailed information on doctors' pay is not held centrally. The driving principle underlying the new contract was to create financial disincentives through the pay bill if trusts continued to employ doctors in non-compliant posts. The effect of these cost pressures on trusts has been to bring overall non-compliance down from 44 per cent. in March 2001 to 32 per cent. in March 2002, with consequent potential long-term reductions in the junior doctor pay bill.

Acute Services

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to make a decision on the re-organisation of acute services in East Kent. [71189]

Ms Blears [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the information I gave him in my response of 16 July 2002, Official Report, column 219.

Written Answers to Questions

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Death in Custody

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Solicitor-General when the Attorney-General will announce the outcome of the review of the role and practices of the Crown Prosecution Service in cases arising from a death in custody. [73440]

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General hopes to make an announcement around the end of September. He had hoped to do so before Parliament rose this month, but because of the thought provoking contributions that have been made, and because he wishes to examine aspects of the handling of a trial which ended in acquittal earlier this month, he has decided to extend the period of the review. He is grateful to all those who have so far responded to the consultation paper or contributed their views in other ways.

DEFENCE

Aircraft

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list, by aircraft type, the RAF's (a) requirement, (b) actual operating fleet and (c) the total number of aircraft of each type owned and leased by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [52132]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 25 June 2002]: The information requested is set out in the table. The figures provided in the table are a snapshot of the situation as at 3 May 2002.

The Required Operating Fleet is the total number of aircraft needed to undertake the defined military task, the Actual Operating Fleet is the total number of aircraft available to undertake the defined military task and the Departmental Fleet is the total number of aircraft.

Suez Medal

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Honours and Decorations Committee re-opened the case to consider awarding a 1951–54 Suez Canal Campaign Medal; who requested that the matter be reviewed; and when he expects a decision to be made. [61264]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave on 17 June 2002, Official Report, column 43W to my hon. Friend the hon. Member for Waveney (Mr. Blizzard).

The Government considers it important to respect the principle that where there is a clear, demonstrable decision taken within five years of a campaign that a General Service Medal should not be awarded, that decision should not be reopened.

The evidence relating to consideration of a General Service Medal for the Suez Canal Zone is however less clear-cut. A number of representations.

In view of these exceptional circumstances, the Government is setting up a small sub-committee of HD Committee under the chairmanship of General Lord Guthrie of Craigiebank to report on the case for an exceptional award of a General Service Medal for the Suez Canal Zone without creating wider precedent or breaching longstanding principles which underpin the making of such awards.

International Criminal Court

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the UK Government's policy towards the surrender of UK nationals where accused of a crime in connection with a UN peacekeeping or enforcement operation committed after 1 July upon request of the International Criminal Court. [66479]

Mr. Hoon: Under the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court (ICC), investigation and, if necessary, prosecution of any allegations of war crimes, crimes against humanity, and genocide by United Kingdom nationals would be carried out by the UK. The purpose of the ICC is to bring to justice those who commit these crimes and to act as a deterrent against their being committed. The UK strongly supports the ICC and these aims. The ICC will intervene only when it determines that a state is unwilling or unable to pursue a particular case, but it is inconceivable that this would ever apply to the UK. We do not, therefore, envisage that the UK would ever be required to surrender its nationals to the ICC.

RAF Chilmark

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the closure of RAF Chilmark was announced; what was the (a) planned date and (b) actual date of closure; what was the (i) estimated and (ii) actual date of disposal; what was the (A) estimated and (B) actual sale value of the site ; what was the (1) estimated and (2) actual cost of remediation; who calculated the estimated sale value of the site and on what basis; what the (x) estimated and (y) actual annual running costs of the site were between closure and disposal; and what the annual costs have been of decontamination work since the announcement of closure. [68927]

Dr. Moonie: The closure of RAF Chilmark was formally announced in September 1992, with a planned closure date of April 1995. The site closed on 1 April 1995.

RAF Chilmark originally comprised separate sites at Dinton and Chilmark. Sales of the various parts were planned to follow clearance of explosive ordnance devices and any necessary decontamination, although it was accepted that final clearance of the entire site could take a considerable time.

The first major sale was completed in July 1995, with seven further sales since. Chilmark HQ site and land at Ladydown are the only parts remaining unsold.

No formal estimate was made of overall sale receipts, since at the time of closure, no firm estimation could be made as to the eventual timetable for sale.

Receipts from those parts sold since closure total approximately £1.5 million.

No formal figure was prepared prior to the results of the Land Quality Assessments and prior to the introduction of more refined investigatory equipment.

The cost over the first five years since closure of clearing explosive ordnance has been in the region of £1.7 million. A further £371,000 has been spent on preparation of Land Quality Assessments and remediation. Later figures have not yet been compiled.

The values of those parts already sold have been assessed either by consultants to the Ministry of Defence or by the District Valuer. All sales have been at not less than open market value.

The total of the actual holding costs of the site from closure in 1995 to 31 March 2002, excluding remediation works but including the cost of security guarding, is in the region of £1.9 million (excluding VAT). Estimated costs are prepared on an annual basis, and have proved to be very close to the actual costs.

The future cost of any necessary decontamination of the remaining parts at Chilmark HQ site and Ladydown cannot be assessed until clearance of explosive ordnance is complete.

Nuclear Arsenal

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost was of maintaining Britain's nuclear arsenal in each of the last five years; and what the projected annual cost of maintaining the nuclear arsenal is in each of the next five years. [71007]

Mr. Hoon: The cost of maintaining Britain's nuclear weapons has been about 1 per cent. of the total annual defence budget and is expected to remain at around that level for each of the next five years.

Consultation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the public consultations undertaken by his Department since 1997, indicating for each consultation (a) if copies were available online, (b) if copies were available in print, (c) the date the time period given for responses opened and (d) the date the time period given for responses closed. [69797]

Dr. Moonie: The Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultation applies to all formal national public consultation documents issued by departments from 1 January 2001 and the information requested is not available before that date. Since that date, all formal consultation documents have been published on-line and either immediately made available in print or made available in print on request. Details are as follows:

Public consultations	Issued	Responses required by
The Future of the Defence Diversification Agency	Mid February 2001	23 March 2001

Second Consultative Document on the introduction of a Voluntary Screening Programme for Depleted Uranium	11 April 2001	4 July 2001
Ministry of Defence Police Quinquennial Review	26 April 2001	Within six months

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has a designated consultation co-ordinator in accordance with the Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultations. [70989]

Dr. Moonie: Yes.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many consultation documents published in 2001 in (a) electronic or (b) printed form his Department has monitored and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultations. [70986]

Dr. Moonie: For two of the consultations it is too early in the process for meaningful evaluation. The remainder have not yet been monitored and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice.

Galileo Satellite Navigation System

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from (a) other European countries and (b) the United States regarding the possible military implications of the Galileo satellite navigation system. [70695]

Dr. Moonie: Secretary for Defence Rumsfeld discussed Galileo with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence at the NATO Defence Ministers' meeting of 6–7 June 2002. Deputy Secretary for Defence Wolfowitz had previously written to my right hon. Friend about United States concerns over Galileo in December 2001. No representations to the Secretary of State about possible military implications of Galileo have been received from European countries.

Armed Forces (Recruitment)

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the recruitment figures to the armed forces from the Glasgow, Pollok constituency and the city of Glasgow were in the latest year for which figures are available; if he will list the services and units to which people have been recruited; how many individuals were recruited as (a) officers and (b) other ranks in each service; and what the figures were in each of the last five years. [71652]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Chinook ZD576

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Chinook ZD576. [71185]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the statement which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence made to the House on 22 July 2002, Official Report, columns 689–704.

Emergency Repairs

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of emergency repairs have been done within 24 hours of notification; what percentage of urgent repairs have been completed within five working days of notification; what percentage of routine repairs have been completed within two months of notification in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [71818]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Housing Executive became an Agency of the Ministry of Defence in 1999. Prior to this date the information requested was not collected in a comparable way. The information requested is as follows:

Per cent.

	Target	Outturn
To complete emergency repairs within 24 hours of notification:
1999–2000	95	95
2000–01	95	94
2001–02	95	93
To complete urgent repairs within five days of notifications:
1999–2000	90	79
2000–01	90	86
2001–02	90	87
To complete routine repairs within two months of notifications:
1999–2000	90	90
2000–01	90	96
2001–02	95	99

The 2001–02 figures are provisional. Routine repairs within the required time scale have consistently achieved or exceeded the targets. The achievement on urgent repairs continues to fall slightly short of the target but still represents a year on year improvement. There has also been a slight shortfall against target emergency repairs for the past two years. The Defence Housing Executive (DHE) is addressing areas of under-performance and will take remedial action to improve their service to service families. The DHE is also developing a more sophisticated system of measuring its performance on repairs which will take into account quality and customer satisfaction.

Defence Housing Executive

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who manages the Defence Housing Executive IT national database of recorded repairs; and if he will make sta[illegible]nt. [72026]

Dr. Moonie: Data is inputted into the Defence Housing Executive (DHE) database of repairs by DHE staff. The provision of IT services to DHE, including an application that maintains the database of housing repairs, is managed by Steria Ltd. (formerly Bull Information Systems Ltd.) under a contract let on 7 September 2001.

Property Disposal

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what role Annington Homes Ltd. has in deciding which properties are released back to them for disposal; and if he will make a statement; [71817]

(2) how much money has been received in each year since 1996 from the profit share on his Department's homes released to Annington Homes Ltd. for disposal; what share of the profit these amounts represent; and if he will make a statement. [71840]

Dr. Moonie: Annington Homes has no influence over which properties are released to them. They can only reject properties if a release is not in accordance with the sale agreement. This states that a release must comprise, as Annington's minimum entitlement, the lesser of 10 per cent. of a site or 20 units. The Ministry of Defence releases to Annington Homes only those families quarters for which there is no longer a service requirement.

The sale agreement incorporates a profit share agreement which has yielded the following by financial year:

	£ million
1997–98	2.29
1998–99	3.53
1999–2000	6.80
2000–01	8.03
2001–02	18.79

The Exchequer receives a proportion of any gains in excess of an agreed level according to the sliding scale as follows:

	Percentage
1997	50
1998	45
1999	40
2000	35
2001	30
2002	25
2003	25
2004	25
2005	25
2006	25
2007	22
2008	19
2009	16
2010	13
2011	10

National Asset Register

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what disposals and acquisitions have been made by his Department since the publication of the National Asset Register on 19 July 2001; and if he will make a statement. [71767]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Funding

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list his net cash requirement and planned net cash requirement in 2002–03 cash terms for financial years from 1997–98 to 2005–06; [71633]

(2) if he will list his Department's parliamentary funding and planned parliamentary funding in 2002–03 cash terms from the Consolidated Fund (Supply) for financial years from 1997–98 to 2005–06. [71632]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The data requested are given in the table. All figures are at 2002–03 prices and include costs of un-programmed operations/conflict prevention. Figures beyond 2002–03 are not available.

Budget Holders

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list his Department's top level budget holders and their related management grouping for each financial year since 1997–98. [71634]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

C130J

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what problems have arisen with the propellers of RAF C130Js when landing on non-concrete runways; and if he will make a statement. [71715]

Dr. Moonie: No RAF C130J aircraft have landed on non-concrete runways. The first rough strip landing trial is scheduled for later this year.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes have been made on troop seating on RAF C130Js; and if he will make a statement. [71713]

Dr. Moonie: No changes have been made to the configuration of troop seating in the RAF C130J aircraft. A maximum of 128 personnel can be accommodated in the C-Mk 4 and 91 people in the C-Mk 5. At present, however, passenger seating in the cargo compartments of both C130J marks is restricted while an investigation is carried out into the cause of noise and vibration within the compartment and its effect on passengers. This has temporarily reduced the seating capacity by 22 seats on the C-Mk 4 and 23 seats on the C-Mk 5.

Ammunition

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long after their arrival in, and how long before their departure from Afghanistan, Royal Marines were issued with, and had to return, their ammunition; and if he will make a statement. [71700]

Dr. Moonie: Royal Marine commandos at Bagram were issued with ammunition prior to specific tasks or operations, and returned any unused ammunition upon their completion. Ammunition was also issued to troops at Bagram for force protection tasks, including guarding.

SA80s

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many SA80s and SA80 A2s have been issued to (a) the Royal Navy, (b) the Royal Marines, (c) the RAF, (d) army armoured regiments, (e) airborne regiments, (f) infantry regiments, (g) the TA and (h) other units; and if he will make a statement. [71699]

Dr. Moonie: As the SA80 A2 deployment continues and the unmodified weapon is withdrawn, the information requested changes daily. As at 19 July 2002 the following information was available.

MOD unit	SA80 A2	SA80 A1
(a) The Royal Navy	131	10,179
(b) The Royal Marines	3,713	5,012
(c) The RAF	5,437	27,389
(d) Armoured regiments	514	6,982
(e) Airborne regiments	2,137	[1]—
(f) Infantry regiments	2,415	32,939
(g) The TA[2]	100	—
(h) Other units (including the TA)	9,522	89,264
Total	23,969	171,765

[1] SA80 A1 figures for Airborne troops are included within Infantry regiments figures.

[2] Reserve Training and Mobilisation Centre (RTMC), Chilwell.

Approximately 4,000 SA80 A2s are being issued each month and the deployment is expected to be complete by May 2006.

Reserve Forces Doctors

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the opportunity cost was of the compulsory mobilisation of reserve forces doctors on 16 May. [72552]

Dr. Moonie: I understand that the opportunity costs requested relate to any national health service (NHS) operations or activities which did not take place because of compulsory mobilisation of reserve forces doctors on 16 May. Such details are not held by the Ministry of Defence.

Defence Spending

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what defence spending was as a percentage of United Kingdom gross domestic product in each year since 1980. [72576]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 30 October 2001, Official Report, column 565W to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws). On the basis of provisional outturn for 2001–02, United Kingdom defence spending as a percentage of UK Gross Domestic Product (GDP) in that year is now estimated to be 2.5 per cent.

All the figures are based on cash outturn and include the unprogrammed cost of operations and other additions to the planned budget provided in Supplementary Estimates. They are not therefore comparable to forecasts of future defence spending as a percentage of UK GDP, based on the defence spending plans published in the White Paper "2002 Spending Review: New Public Spending Plans 2003–06" (Cm 5570).

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the projected defence spending is, as a percentage of UK GDP, from 2002–03 to 2005–06. [72577]

Dr. Moonie: The defence budget is expected to represent the following share of forecast GDP.

Financial year	Percentage GDP
2002–03	2.3
2003–04	2.3
2004–05	2.3
2005–06	2.2

This reflects the defence budget expressed as 'near-cash spending in MOD DEL' in Table 12.1 of the White Paper "2002 Spending Review: New Public Spending Plans 2003–06" (Cm 5570), which is the most appropriate basis of comparison with forecast GDP. Outturn figures are likely to be higher than these plans, when the costs of operations and any other in-year additions are taken into account, and this would increase the share of GDP represented by defence spending in these years.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide a breakdown of incremental 2002–03 defence spending announced in the 2002 comprehensive spending review by (a) type of expenditure, (b) country and (c) region of the United Kingdom in which this increase is likely to be spent. [72579]

Dr. Moonie: The 2002 spending review covered the period 2003–04 to 2005–06. Additional resources will also be made available during 2002–03 to enable us to manage the pressure arising from the high levels of activity in which we are currently engaged, but these will not be finalised until later in the year and it is therefore not possible to provide the breakdown requested.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much of the increase in defence spending announced in the recent comprehensive spending review will be spent on Trident in each year from 2002–03 to 2005–06. [72575]

Dr. Moonie: Decisions on the allocation of the defence budget plans announced in spending review 2002 will be made in the normal way through the Ministry of Defence's annual planning process.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide a breakdown of defence spending in each year since 1997–98 by each country and region of the United Kingdom in which it was spent. [72578]

Dr. Moonie: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Future Rapid Effects System

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Future Rapid Effects System and the future of (a) the UK's heavy warfighting capability, (b) the development of lighter forces and (c) the role of the medium force in the UK army. [72539]

Dr. Moonie: In order to meet the full range of security challenges it might encounter in the future, the Army must be able to draw upon a full spectrum of forces—heavy, medium and light. The Strategic Defence Review, with its emphasis on expeditionary forces, recognised the requirement to develop further the capabilities of all our forces for more rapid intervention.

The Future Rapid Effects System (FRES) is intended to balance our capacity to meet the requirement for capable medium forces. We shall continue to develop our heavy and light forces as we anticipate a continuing need for the capabilities they provide. None of the capabilities is discrete. We shall continue to organise our forces for specific operations into force packages tailored to the requirements of the missions, using joint capabilities drawn from across the services.

Army Pensions

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to review the current pension system for widows of army personnel who decide to remarry or cohabit. [72151]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 23 July 2002]: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Defence and the Social Security Minister announced on 20 July 2000 that changes would be made to the Armed Forces Pension Scheme (AFPS) to allow widows and widowers in receipt of an Attributable Forces Family Pension to retain their pension if they remarry or cohabit. These changes took effect from 31 October 2000. Previously, an attributable widow(er)s' pension was withdrawn on remarriage or cohabitation, although it would have been automatically restored on second widowhood or at the end of a period of cohabitation. Those widows or widowers who had already remarried, and have had their attributable pension withdrawn, were not included in the change. Those in receipt of a War Widows' Pension payable under the Naval, Military and Air Force etc. (Disablement and Death) Service Pensions Order 1983, or a non-attributable widows or widowers' AFPS pension, are also not affected by the change; their pensions will still cease on remarriage or cohabitation.

No further changes to widow(er)s' pensions under the current pension scheme are envisaged, however, the review of the AFPS currently proposes extending the October 2000 change to non-attributable pensions. On current plans, this would only apply to those joining the new scheme.

Anglo-Irish Ministerial Meetings

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when and where Ministers in his Department have held meetings with Ministers and officials of the Irish Government since 1 June 2000; which Ministers were involved in each meeting; which Irish Government Departments were involved in each meeting; and which Ministers and officials from the Irish Government attended each meeting. [72695]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 20 June 2002, Official Report, columns 533–34W, by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Europe (Peter Hain).

Memorandums of Understanding (US)

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what memorandums of understanding have been signed with the United States Administration since 1 January 1999; on what dates each was signed; where each was signed; and with which Department of the United States Administration each was signed. [72690]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Colchester Garrison

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 1 July 2002, Official Report, column 36W, if the Investment Approvals Board has further considered the Colchester Garrison PFI project; if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Board's considerations; and when it will next meet to consider this matter. [72608]

Mr. Ingram: The Colchester Garrison PFI Project remains under review by the Investment Approvals Board (IAB), and an outcome of their considerations has not yet been reached. The IAB is scheduled to convene again on 12 August.

Runways

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's airfields in the UK have runways in excess of 1,800 metres in length; how many have a runway and taxiway bearing strength sufficient to take large civil aircraft; and if he will make a statement. [71899]

Dr. Moonie: The table lists all Ministry of Defence airfields with runways in excess of 1,800 metres. 16 of these 34 airfields, indicated by '*', can in principle accommodate a large civil aircraft, such as a DC10. To give a specific answer on the capability of any of these airfields to take large civil aircraft, details would be required of the aircraft type, variant, Aircraft Classification Number (ACN), maximum all up weight and tyre pressure for the load to be carried, as well as details of crash category and handling equipment requirements.

Military Maritime Graves

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in offering protection to military maritime graves. [73461]

Dr. Moonie: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 9 November 2001, Official Report, column 435W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon (Mr. Dismore). A Statutory Instrument (SI) was made on 9 July 2002 which prohibits intrusive activity without licence on 11 vessels: HMS Bulwark, HMS Dasher, HMS Formidable, HMS Hampshire, HMS Natal, HMS A7, HMS Vanguard, HMS Affray, HMS Exmouth, HMS Royal Oak and H5, and in addition the U-boat U12, as representative of all U-boats lost in United Kingdom territorial waters. The SI prohibits intrusive activity without licence by UK national on a further five vessels: HMS Hood, HMS Prince of Wales, HMS Repulse, HMS Gloucester and RFA Sir Galahad which lie in international waters. These regulations come into force on 30 September 2002.

Army Headquarters

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has completed the final assessment of the decision to locate the Army's headquarters in the north in Edinburgh. [73462]

Dr. Moonie: A post Project Evaluation into this decision has been completed and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Warship Support Agency

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Warship Support Agency for financial year 2002–03. [73463]

Dr. Moonie: Key Targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the War Support Agency for financial year 2002–03. The targets build on progress already made and are as follows:

Key Target 1: Timeliness

Upkeep period timeliness—target: Less than 7 per cent.

Key Target 2: Quantity

Available Vessel Days—target: More than 95 per cent.

Key Target 3: Timeliness

Timely completion of high priority upgrade programme—target: 95 per cent.

Key Target 4: Quantity

Provision of the appropriate standard of single living accommodation to Naval Personnel—target: 25 per cent.

Key Target 5: Quality

Operational support services—meeting the customers need ISO Quality Control Comment Form—targets:

Group 1: 0 failures

Group 2: Less than 1 per cent. failure

Group 3: Less than 5 per cent. failure

Survey target:

Greater than or equal to 95 per cent. to standard by survey

Greater than or equal to 45 per cent. of customers more than satisfied

Key Target 6: Quantity

Availability of material/manpower to Support the Naval Force General Plan—target: green assessment against all elements.

Key Target 7: Cost/Efficiency

To make the necessary Agency contribution to the DLO Strategic Goal of reducing output costs by 20 per cent. by 2005 while ensuring that we continue to deliver and indeed where appropriate improve the quality of our outputs.

RAF Personnel Management Agency

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the RAF Personnel Management Agency for the financial year 2002–03; [73464]

(2) what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the RAF Personnel Management Agency for financial year 2002–03. [73468]

Dr. Moonie: The Commander-in-Chief Royal Air Force Personnel and Training Command has set the Chief Executive of the Agency the following targets for financial year 2002–03.

Key Target 1: Peacetime Manning

Performance indicator: The percentage of available trained personnel either filling established posts or on diversions for which there is an approved Manning and Training Margin—Greater than or equal to 93.25 per cent.

Key Target 2: Operational and Non-Operational MOD Authorised Unestablished Tasks

Performance indicator: The percentage manning level of operational and non-operational MOD authorised unestablished tasks—target: Greater than or equal to 98 per cent.

Key Target 3: Career Management

Performance indicator: The percentage of PMA's customers who are either satisfied or not dissatisfied with the service provided by the PMA—target: Greater than or equal to 82.5 per cent.

Key Target 4: Manpower Planning

Performance indicator: Percentage variation between actual trained strength and the authorised trained strength taken as an average over the financial year—target: No greater than or equal to ±1 per cent.

Key Target 5: Efficiency

Performance indicator: Maintain operating costs within resources allocated—target: Expenditure contained within RCT.

Duke of York's Royal Military School

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Duke of York's Royal Military School for the financial year 2002–03. [73470]

Dr. Moonie: The Chief Executive of the Duke of York's Royal Military School has been set the following Key Targets for 2002–03.

Key Target 1

To achieve 95.9 per cent. of 15-year-old pupils gaining five or more passes graded A* to C at GCSE.

Key Target 2

To achieve 23.93 per cent. of GCSE passes at grades A* or A.

Key Target 3

To achieve an average GCSE points score per 15-year-old pupil of 57.36.

Key Target 4

To achieve an average GCE points score per candidate of 20.59.

Key Target 5

To achieve 38.72 per cent. of GCE passes at grades A or B.

Key Target 6

To achieve a pupil per capita cost of no more than £12,542.

Key Target 7

To generate income of at least £600,000.

Key Target 8

To achieve at least 300 applications for September 2003 intake.

Afghanistan

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to send a TA infantry platoon to support the International Security and Assistance Force in Afghanistan. [73502]

Dr. Moonie: We plan to deploy a composite Territorial Army infantry platoon to Kabul in order to provide a protection platoon to the United Kingdom component to the International Security and Assistance Force. The platoon will comprise members of the Territorial Army who have volunteered to be called out for this task. They will be mobilised at the end of July and deployed for three months from the end of August. The deployment is in line with the policy of making the Territorial Army more usable and integrated with the regular force.

Geographic and Imagery Intelligence Agency

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Defence Geographic and Imagery Intelligence Agency for the financial year 2001–02. [73452]

Dr. Moonie: The role of the Defence Geographic and Imagery Intelligence Agency is to provide imagery intelligence and geographic support to Defence policy, operations and training; to meet customer requirements for imagery intelligence and geographic support in accordance with Defence priorities; to maintain and develop Agency capabilities and readiness in line with future Defence requirements; and to become progressively more efficient, while improving the quality and delivery of its products and services. The Key Targets for the Agency for the 12 months from April 2002 are:

Key Target 1

To satisfy operational requirements for Imagery Intelligence and Geographic Support within time scales and to standards agreed between the Agency and its customers.

(a) For Imagery Intelligence, by satisfying at least 95 per cent. of requirements overall, while delivering not less than 98 per cent. of Priority 1 tasks.

(b) For Geographic Support, by satisfying 100 per cent. of the geographic products and services essential to support current and potential operations, both from the Agency's United Kingdom based capabilities and its deployable units.

Key Target 2

To achieve the required levels of operational readiness for the deployable geographic support elements of the Agency in line with Defence Planning Assumptions.

To maintain agreed states of readiness as set by PJHQ for all contingency forces (JRRF).

Key Target 3

To satisfy strategic and contingency requirements for Imagery Intelligence and Geographic Support within time scales and to standards agreed between the Agency and its customers.

(a) For Imagery Intelligence, by satisfying at least 54 per cent. of the requirements as set out in the Imagery Exploitation Programme (IEP) agreed during Financial Year (FY) 2001–02, while delivering not less than 92 per cent. of Priority 1 tasks.

(b) For Geographic Support, completing at least 90 per cent. of a customer endorsed programme of work for geographic products and services.

Key Target 3T (Transitional)

To develop Regional Support Agreements (RSAs) and establish an accurate baseline of the totality of Defence requirements for geographic information to be used as measurement in FY 2003–04.

The implementation of the new Key Target.

Key Target 4

To demonstrate a further 1 per cent. improvement in the coverage of geographic information holdings resulting in a cumulative 3 per cent. improvement on the baseline established in 1999 and to maintain their quality for Defence use.

Maintain the Ministry of Defence Map Library collection at the agreed level of readiness and achieve a further 1 per cent. improvement in coverage of geographic information holdings.

Key Target 5T (Transitional)

In FY 2002–03, to develop output related targets and performance measures for implementation in FY 2003–04, which taken together across the Agency deliver outputs through a more efficient utilisation of resources.

The implementation of the new Key Target.

Army Personnel Centre Agency

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Army Personnel Centre Agency for the financial year 2002–03. [73453]

Dr. Moonie: The Chief Executive of the Army Personnel Centre has been set the following key targets for 2002–03:

Key Target 1

To maintain at 94 per cent., the percentage of posts which are manned (excluding posts gapped for less than 28 days and all posts for private soldiers and subaltern officers). The 2001–02 performance was the maintenance of 94 per cent. of posts manned.

Key Target 2

To increase to 98 per cent. the proportion of personnel posted in-year by the APC whose rank and service qualifications meet the specifications of the post. The 2001–02 performance was 98 per cent. of personnel posted in-year who met the specifications of the post.

Key Target 3

To increase to at least 65 per cent., the percentage of in-year postings authorised by the APC where personnel are given at least four months notification. The 2001–02 output was 63 per cent. of personnel were given at least four months notification.

Key Target 4

To remain within 0 per cent. to -1 per cent. of the annual resource allocation while achieving targets.

Transport and Movements Agency

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Defence Transport and Movements Agency for the financial year 2002–03. [73455]

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Defence Transport and Movements Agency for the financial year 2002–03. [73467]

Dr. Moonie: The Chief Executive of the Defence Transport and Movements Agency has been set the following Key Targets for 2002–03:

Key Target 1

To meet the customer's requirements as negotiated and agreed in Customer Supplier Agreements.

Key Target 1a

95 per cent. or more of Agency transactions and services provided under call-off contracts to be within agreed (TQQC) criteria.

Key Target 1b

At least 92 per cent. of transactions against each Agency service, and call-off contracts, to be within agreed (TQQC) criteria.

Key Target 2

To achieve an overall 3 per cent. increase in efficiency.

Key Target 3

To demonstrate improved net added value.

Key Target 4

To achieve at least a satisfactory rating in the provision of operational transport and movements support.

British Forces Post Office Agency

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the British Forces Post Office Agency for the financial year 2002–03. [73456]

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the British Forces Post Office Agency for the financial year 2002–03. [73465]

Dr. Moonie: The chief executive of the British Forces Post Office Agency has been set the following key targets for 2002–03:

Key Target 1

To meet 95 per cent. of customers' requirements as negotiated and agreed in customer supplier agreements.

Key Target 2

To achieve an overall 4 per cent. increase in efficiency.

Key Target 3

To reduce the net level of Customer Care Unit (CCU) compensation paid that is directly attributable to BFPO by 3 per cent. on the 2001–02 financial year.

Storage and Distribution Agency

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency for the financial year 2002–03. [73457]

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency for the financial year 2002–03. [73466]

Dr. Moonie: The Chief Executive of the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency (DSDA) has been set the following key targets for 2002–03:

Key Target 1

To meet the customers' requirements as negotiated and agreed in customer supplier agreements.

Key Target 1a

95 per cent. of all issues to consumers to meet that element of the supply chain pipeline for which DSDA has a responsibility.

Key Target 1b

98 per cent. of all receipts that conform to the specifications laid down in the contract and/or material regulations to be processed within time limits agreed with each individual customer.

Key Target 2

To achieve an overall 5 per cent. reduction in the unit cost of output.

Key Target 3

The value of inventory written-off as a result of DSDAs action to be less than levels agreed within each specific customer supplier agreement.

Training Group Defence Agency

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Training Group Defence Agency for the financial year 2002–03, [73458]

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Training Group Defence Agency for the financial year 2002–03. [73469]

Dr. Moonie: The Commander-in-Chief Royal Air Force Personnel and Training Command has set the Chief Executive of the Agency the following targets for financial year 2002–03.

Key Target 1—Training Output

To recruit and select Royal Air Force personnel in the required numbers to achieve the Into Training Targets defined by the Royal Air Force manning plans.

To train aircrew of the three services to standards for entry to the Royal Air Force and Royal Navy Operational Conversion Unit training, the Defence Helicopter Flying School and other specialist flying training courses.

To train military personnel to the standards required to undertake ground appointments.

KT1a—Quantity of Output (ab initio flying training)—the number of RAF aircrew trainees graduated as follows:

	Target
Fast Jet Pilots	67
Multi-Engine Pilots	57
Rotary Wing Pilots	33
Fast Jet Navigators	28
Multi-Engine Navigators	9
Rotary Wing Navigators	10
Airman Aircrew	104

KT1b—Quantity of Output (ab initio ground training)—the number of RAF trainees who graduated from the following courses:

	Target
Officer Initial Specialist Training	358
RAF Tradesmen Training	2,104

Key Target 2—Quality of Output (Training Places)

To train the aircrew of the three services to standards for entry to the Royal Air Force, to Royal Navy Operational Conversion Unit, the Defence Helicopter Flying School and other specialist flying training courses.

To train military personnel to the standards required to undertake ground appointments.

KT2a—Training Place (Flying)[1]

	Target
Flying Training Courses—RN	202
Flying Training Courses—Army	374
RAF Flying Instructor Courses	150
RAF Refresher and Orientation Courses	170
RAF Specialist and Operational Courses	240
Flying Training (F and C)	92

[1] The number of training places provided on the following RN, Army, RAF instructor Refresher and Orientation, and specialist and operational flying courses. Also, the number of training places provided for Foreign and Commonwealth (F and C) flying courses.

KT2b—Training Places (Ground)

	Target
Pre-Employment Training	15,547
Career Development Training	6,506

Key Target 3—Quality of Output

To underpin the military effectiveness of the Royal Air Force by the timely provision of military personnel trained to the standards agreed with the Agency's customers.

KT3—Quality of Output: Achievement of a satisfactory assessment of customer satisfaction with the quality of graduate trainees as reflected in an assessment based on a matrix of the following measures:

Reports from the Aircrew Training Standards Sub-Committees;

Quantitative reports from the Owner's Customer Advisory Committee;

Quantitative reports on the satisfaction level of graduate trainees.

Target: Satisfactory rating.

Key Target 4—Cost Management

To ensure the necessary systems are in place to manage the business on an output cost basis.

KT4—Cost Management: Output based management.

Target: Deliver an Agency wide prototype of the planned financial management and accounting system to provide unit costs of output by 31 March 2003.

Key Target 5—Efficiency

KT5—Efficiency: By 2005–06, reduce by 3 per cent. the average annual per capita cost of training a successful recruit to the agreed standard.

Target: Performance level for 2002–03 to be £0.138 million.

Queen Victoria School

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of Queen Victoria school for the financial year 2002–03. [73459]

Dr. Moonie: The Chief Executive of Queen Victoria school has been set the following key targets for 2002–03:

Key Target 1

To maintain the staying on rate at school of S4 to S5 at a minimum of four per cent. above the Scottish national average.[1]

Key Target 2

To maintain the percentage of pupils obtaining at least five credit awards at standard grade at two per cent. above the Scottish national average.[1]

Key Target 3

To maintain a percentage of the S4 roll gaining 3+ awards at level 6 or better by the end of S5, at least equal to the Scottish national average.[1]

Key Target 4

To achieve a pupil per capita cost of not more than £14,000 by March 2003.

Key Target 5

To generate gross income to the school of at least £295,000 per annum.

[1] All Queen Victoria school statistics to be based on the school's results over the last three years, compared with the Scottish national average for the current year, those statistics being as published in the Scottish Executive Official Statistics.

Test and Evaluation Facilities

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future provision of test and evaluation facilities. [73460]

Dr. Moonie: It is widely recognised that the Test and Evaluation (T&E) business has been in need of radical restructuring for many years. As part of tackling this problem head on, a long-term partnering contract is currently being negotiated with QinetiQ for the delivery of the T&E capability. The process includes the Ministry of Defence setting challenging targets to ensure that the T&E structure is more closely aligned with MOD's requirement for T&E capabilities. To achieve this within the taut budget, QinetiQ has put forward a number of proposals, which aim to remove excess capacity, duplication and obsolete facilities.

QinetiQ has identified three major rationalisation proposals for the air ranges. These are: conversion of the Aberporth range to an instrumented training range, the closure of Llanbedr airfield, and the reduction to campaign operation status of the West Freugh range.

The proposals will potentially deliver net savings in excess of £300 million across the life of the 25-year contract, and will transform the T&E business into the effective, modern organisation that we require.

The delivery of these savings is likely to lead to around 400 job losses, spread across all three establishments. I will be writing today to fully inform interested parties, including the unions, about the proposals beginning the consultation process.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Consultations

Mrs. Calton: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission how many times the Electoral Commission has been consulted in accordance with 7(1) and 2(h) of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000; where their consultation responses are reported; and on how many occasions the Electoral Commission has provided a response. [69787]

Mr. Beith: I will write to the hon. Member.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

World Bank

7. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the forthcoming United Nations world summit on sustainable development will review the performance of the World bank business partners for development initiative. [69879]

Ms Keeble: Business Partners for Development (BDP) was a project-based initiative set up in 1998 to initiate partnerships for development. It involved 30 focus projects in 20 countries around the world. The BPD final report containing conclusions and recommendations was launched in April of this year. An independent evaluation of BPD, funded by my Department and the World bank, has already been conducted, and the findings will be available later this month. WSSD will review general progress on sustainable development to see where the implementation gaps are, as well as new challenges. Although not formally part of the WSSD process, the review will of course be available to all participants.

Zimbabwe

8. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she next expects to meet representatives of international aid agencies to discuss their plans for assisting Zimbabwe; and if she will make a statement. [69880]

Clare Short: My Department is in frequent contact with representatives of development agencies in Harare and internationally. We are working to try to prevent the current crisis becoming a catastrophe but the situation is very worrying.

9. Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her policy towards aid for Zimbabwe. [69887]

Clare Short: Our aim is to prevent loss of life arising from current food shortages and the increasing burden of disease and to support survival strategies of the poorest people. We have increased our financial provision for Zimbabwe to £32 million to meet humanitarian needs. Aid is being channelled through non-governmental and international organisations.

Cameroon

11. Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department is taking to relieve poverty among the anglophobe minority in Cameroon. [69882]

Clare Short: The support my department provides to Cameroon is not restricted to a particular linguistic or ethnic group. As part of the international community we support Cameroon's efforts to develop a poverty reduction strategy for all its people. Moreover, my department contributes directly to overall poverty reduction through our support to the forestry sector, in recognition of the sector's importance to the Cameroonian economy and the number of poor people living in the forest zone.

Famine (Southern Africa)

12. Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what she is doing to prevent famine in southern Africa. [69883]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Banbury (Tony Baldry) on 17 June 2002, Official Report, columns 58–59W. Since then our contribution to the world food programme has been used to buy about 60,000 tonnes of commodities which are being shipped now. Further allocations from the overall commitment of £45 million have been made to NGOs, and support has been provided for logistics personnel and vulnerability and nutrition assessments.

Fatal Diseases

13. Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she is taking to tackle (a) HIV/AIDS, (b) TB, (c) malaria and (d) other fatal diseases. [69884]

Clare Short: Approximately half of infectious disease deaths in developing countries can be attributed to three diseases: HIV, TB and malaria, which cause more than five million deaths per year. DFID is working to strengthen developing countries' health systems to deliver effective services to the poorest. We have committed more than £1 billion to that purpose since 1997. The UK has also taken an active role in the establishment of the global fund to fight AIDS, TB and malaria, which is designed to improve provision of drugs and commodities to treat those diseases. DFID has pledged $200 million over five years for the fund.

Clean Water (Africa)

14. Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking to improve supply of clean water in Africa. [69885]

Clare Short: My Department is working with Governments, civil society and the private sector to achieve the Millennium development goals for access to safe water in Africa. With all partners we seek to ensure that activities are sustainable and have a pro-poor focus. Expenditure on water in Africa was over £29 million last year.

Sub-Sahara

15. Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her policy towards assisting economic and agricultural developments in the sub-Sahara. [69886]

Clare Short: DFID policy is to work with African Governments to implement internationally agreed poverty reduction strategies and to work through multilateral organisations, African institutions and the international community to promote private investment, create an equitable international trading system and bring an end to conflict in Africa.

Trade Links

16. Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she will take to seek reform of European Union policy on international aid and development relating to promotion of trade links with aid recipients. [69888]

Clare Short: The European Union has three instruments to help improve trading opportunities for developing countries:

First, the Everything but Arms initiative (EBA), which grants the worlds 49 Least Developed Countries (LDCs) duty and quota free access to EU markets for all their export products, excluding arms and munitions.

Second, the Economic Partnership Agreements (EPAs), which are about to be negotiated with the 77 countries of the African, Caribbean and Pacific regions which are party to the Cotonou Agreement. These EPAs will seek to create WTO compatible free trade areas between coherent groups of ACP countries and the EU.

Third, the Generalised System of Preferences (GSP), which grants all developing countries zero or reduced tariffs on the majority of their exports to the EU.

The Government will continue to work to improve the trade access offered under these arrangements.

Agricultural Exports

17. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the impact on the economies of developing countries of subsidised agricultural exports from the European Union; and if she will make a statement. [69889]

Clare Short: The UK understands the damaging impact of subsidised agriculture exports on developing countries. We recognise that subsidised agriculture exports have a dampening effect on world prices and thus constrain agriculture investment and growth in developing countries. The UK is therefore pressing for substantial CAP reform under the current mid-term review, to reduce EU subsidies.

Ethiopia

18. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the development aid she is providing to Ethiopia. [69890]

Clare Short: We are building up a development partnership with Ethiopia which will support the Ethiopian Government's Poverty Reduction Strategy. We understand that the Government of Ethiopia hope to produce a final version of the strategy in the next few weeks. Excluding humanitarian support our initial aid framework for 2002/03 was £9 million. There are also additional funds for a three-year input to help tackle HIV/AIDS.

Current and planned support includes assistance in the road sector, water, food security including rural transportation, pastoralism and tax reform. We are currently developing a strategy for future years when the programme will expand. The strategy will address which sectors will be focus areas for DFID support. There will be full consultation during the strategy process. Initial discussions with the Ethiopian Government suggest that our focus should be on education, food security and capacity building across sectors. We shall continue to bear in mind political developments in Ethiopia while drawing up our plans.

Afghanistan

19. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the oral answer of 26 June 2002, Official Report, column 866, on Afghanistan, what the result has been of the Under-Secretary of State's inquiries. [69891]

Clare Short: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 16 July 2002, Official Report, column 258W.

20. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on humanitarian aid to Afghanistan. [69892]

Clare Short: Thanks to the efforts of the UN-led humanitarian system, with the support of the international community, a potential humanitarian catastrophe in Afghanistan after 11 September 2001 has been avoided. The achievements of recent months have led to an optimism that can be seen in the massive influx of returning refugees from neighbouring countries—over 1.25 million Afghan refugees have returned to their country since 1 March 2002. However, serious challenges remain. Chronic malnutrition, food shortages and socio-economic vulnerability are still alarmingly high. According to the UN, almost one third of the Afghan population is dependant on some form of emergency assistance. In many parts of the country these challenges are compounded by problems of access due to continuing insecurity, the presence of land mines and UXOs, and, in the later winter months, will be further complicated by heavy snows and extreme cold temperatures.

The United Nations estimates that donors must provide a further US$780 million in order to meet immediate requirements in Afghanistan up to December 2002; almost US$400 million of which is required to cover needs over the next three months. Support from the international community, under the guidance of the Afghan transitional administration (ATA), will be used to address the on-going humanitarian crisis, support the return of refugees to Afghanistan, develop a comprehensive analysis of and approach to vulnerability in Afghanistan, and support the transition of competence, ownership and technical capacity to the ATA to meet the immediate needs of its own people.

In addition to the £60 million that my Department disbursed from September 2001 to March 2002 under our humanitarian programme, we pledged at the Tokyo conference in January 2002 to commit a further £200 million over the next five years. This amount is already being allocated and disbursed. We are fully committed to helping to meet the immediate priorities of the ATA and are encouraging other donors to do likewise by maximising their contributions and speeding up the disbursement of promised assistance.

26. Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's relief activities in northern Afghanistan. [69898]

Clare Short: My Department is supporting a range of humanitarian agencies working across Afghanistan, including in northern areas; these include UN humanitarian agencies, the Red Cross, and international and national non-governmental organisations (NGOs). We remain concerned about continuing insecurity in northern Afghanistan, including attacks against NGOs. We support the actions of the Special Representative of the United Nations Secretary General, Lakhdar Brahimi, who has written to President Karzai, and visited the north to impress upon the various factions the need for a secure environment. Other UN representatives have also visited insecure areas and received assurances from local leaders that measures are being put in place to control factional fighting and allow for the safe delivery of humanitarian and recovery assistance. We will continue to monitor the situation closely.

29. Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much of the aid money promised to Afghanistan has reached that country. [69901]

Clare Short: Precise data on the disbursement of aid to Afghanistan are not yet available. However, we estimate that donor pledges to Afghanistan amount to a little under $2 billion in 2002, of which about $1.1 billion has been committed and about $0.8 billion disbursed. The pace of further disbursements will now depend on improvements in security and access and on the completion of the national Development Framework and Development Budget.

The UK has disbursed over £60 million to Afghanistan since September 2002 and is in the process of completing a further round of disbursements to UN agencies, NGOs, quick impact projects and the Afghan Authority for the Co-ordination of Assistance.

Social Exclusion

21. Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department is giving to programmes combating social exclusion of vulnerable groups in south eastern Europe. [69893]

Clare Short: We are working with governments, civil society and international organisations in the region to tackle this issue. Specifically: we are supporting two regional programmes on promotion of minority rights and rights and access to justice for Roma communities and a project in Bulgaria focused in reduction in social exclusion. In Romania we are assisting the Anti-Poverty Commission to develop a social exclusion policy.

We are funding projects in Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Kosovo, Croatia, Serbia, Romania and Bulgaria to assist with the reform of social policy, focused on more effective social services, social welfare and employment systems, including improved cooperation between government and civil society. These will, in part, address the situation of socially-excluded groups. These projects are mostly linked to World bank structural adjustment credits.

We are supporting poverty surveys in Bosnia and Herzegovina and Albania to assist the authorities in identifying the features of poverty and monitoring measures to address it.

We have provided grants totalling £8.4 million to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia for family welfare payments targeted at the poorest section of the population.

We have assisted with the preparation of a Poverty Reduction Strategy for Albania, and are supporting their preparation in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Macedonia and Serbia.

We are working with the World bank to support social mitigation programmes in Romania (targeted at ex-mining communities) and Bosnia and Herzegovina. Also in Romania we are assisting the Social Development Fund.

In Romania and Bulgaria we are supporting child welfare and protection projects.

In Albania we are funding a programme of suppo[illegible] rural livelihoods, targeted at the poorer, mounta[illegible] regions.

Sexual and Reproductive Health

22. Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on UK funding to international sexual and reproductive health organisations. [69894]

Clare Short: My Department supports a number of international sexual and reproductive health organisations which share our aim of eliminating poverty including United Nations agencies and non-governmental organisations. We believe that the goal of the international conference on population and development of universal access to reproductive health is central to attainment of the health Millennium Development Goals, specifically those related to maternal mortality, HIV/AIDS and child mortality. Without access to high quality reproductive health services and care, it is most unlikely that progress will be achieved in meeting the health MDGs. We will continue to support international organisations which make an effective contribution to these goals, and of course the efforts of governments seeking to improve people's access to reproductive health services.

Departmental Management Board

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development who has been recruited as non-executive directors to her Department's management board. [73499]

Clare Short: Bill Griffiths, Director of WRG Associates, and Nemat Shafik, Vice-President for Private Sector Development and Infrastructure at the World bank, have been recruited as non-executive Directors to sit on DFID's Management Board. Mr. Griffiths will also chair our Audit Committee.

Common Agricultural Policy

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the European Commission's proposal for the reform of the common agricultural policy, with particular reference to farmers in developing countries; and if she will make a statement. [72768]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Banbury (Tony Baldry) on 17 July 2002, Official Report, column 261W.

Gujarat

23. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance she has given to refugees in the State of Gujarat. [69895]

Clare Short: My Department has provided nearly £750,000 of assistance to internally displaced persons (IDPs) in Gujarat, channelled through international and local NGOs operational on the ground.

Primary Education

24. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of World Bank proposals to fast-track support for primary education in certain poor countries. [69896]

Clare Short: The Government are strongly committed to the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) on education and is working to mobilise the international community in support of them. The World bank has a critical role in supporting countries as they seek to give priority to education, and primary education in particular, within the overall context of their poverty reduction strategies. We have been working with the Bank to develop its new Action Plan for accelerating progress towards Education for All.

We believe the World bank Action Plan's fast-track initiative provides an opportunity to try to ensure that no country genuinely committed to economic development, poverty reduction and good governance is denied the chance to achieve universal primary education through lack of resources. The Government were successful in calling for the fast-track initiative to include Nigeria and Ethiopia, where over 14 million children are out of school. It offers 18 poor countries the chance to qualify for additional financing for primary education if they can demonstrate that their Government is fully committed and has effective policies in place. A further five countries can apply for assistance in building capacity, filling gaps in data and developing effective policies for primary education.

The Government are committed to further increasing our support for basic education, particularly in Africa. We will continue to support the Fast Track proposals and participate in on-going discussions with the World bank about implementation arrangements.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she expects the additional resources committed for good quality primary education to the group of 18 countries selected to receive immediate financing to be provided. [72767]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Banbury (Tony Baldry) on 17 July 2002, Official Report, column 291W.

Steel Industry (Eastern Europe)

25. Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her Department's policy is in relation to financial support for the steel industry in eastern Europe. [69897]

Clare Short: The UK believes that the countries of Eastern Europe need to privatise and restructure their steel industries as part of their transition from central planning to open market orientated economies. Privatisation and restructuring help to improve efficiency and enable governments to redirect subsidies—which currently keep inefficient companies afloat—into investment in essential public services.

The UK does not provide direct financial support to the steel industry in Eastern Europe. The UK is a shareholder in the International Finance Corporation (IFC) and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) which both support the restructuring of former communist economies in Eastern Europe, including through non-concessional loans to support steel industry privatisation and restructuring.

Renewable Energy

27. Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she is taking to widen access to renewable energy in developing countries. [69899]

Clare Short: My Department takes the approach that a full menu of options should be considered when providing access to energy in developing countries, not just renewable energy. Poor people will rely on fossil fuels and traditional biomass resources for many years to come, so cleaner more efficient uses of these energy resources should not be ignored.

Our recent consultation document 'Energy for the Poor' invited comments on the role that DFID can play in providing poor people in developing countries with access to energy for poverty reduction. The final Paper will be produced in August.

We have a number of on-going activities in the energy sector in specific countries, which are listed on the attachments to this reply, together with details of our research work in this sector. We are also a contributor to the multi-donor technical co-operation facilities (ESMAP and PPIAF), which have activities in the energy sector, some of which include renewables. Brief details of the work of these are also attached to this reply.

Commodity Prices

28. Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans her Department has to ensure that the work done to reduce the debt burden of highly indebted poor countries and other countries is not undermined by recent declines in commodity prices. [69900]

Clare Short: The Government have been working to try to ensure that countries exit the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative process with sustainable debt levels. At the Annual Meetings of the World bank and IMF we asked the World bank staff to revisit the debt sustainability analyses of all commodity dependent low-income countries, including HIPCs. The IMF and World bank analysis shows that, although the situation varies from country to country, the external debt indicators for most HIPC countries have deteriorated, and several HIPC countries now face unsustainable debt burdens as a result. Following UK pressure, the World bank and IMF Boards have agreed to provide additional relief to countries in this situation. This was reconfirmed at the Spring meetings, in April, and Burkina Faso became the first HIPC country to benefit from 'topping up' at Completion Point.

World Summit

30. Mr. Luke: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her priorities are for the world summit on sustainable development in September. [69902]

Clare Short: The Government's strategic objective for the world summit is to make globalisation work for sustainable development, especially for the poorest. We see the summit as part of a broader process that includes the Millennium Declaration, the WTO Doha Development Agenda and the agreement reached at the Financing for Development Conference in Monterrey.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the affordability of HIV/AIDS drugs to patients in Africa. [71933]

Clare Short: The Government are strongly committed to increasing access to essential medicines for the world's poor, especially in Africa.

The Working Group on Access to Medicines, which I chair, has brought together UK Government, pharmaceuticals and others over the last year to look at options for bringing about widespread, sustainable and predictable differential pricing of medicines, including HIV/AIDS drugs. Good progress has been made. The final meeting will be held tomorrow and the group will report back to the Prime Minister by September.

Affordability is only one of four key factors that influence access to medicines. Others are the need for sustainable financing, the rational selection and use of existing drugs and reliable health and supply systems.

On sustainable financing, we have pledged $200 million over five years to the Global Fund to Fight TB, AIDS and Malaria (GFATM). We have also committed over £1 billion since 1997 to strengthening developing countries' health systems, building their capacity both to deliver medicines to the poor and to make effective choices about the selection and use of drugs.

European Bank for Reconstruction and Development

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if the Government support a continued role for the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development in the EU candidate countries after accession. [73472]

Clare Short: Yes. We have refined the view taken in the UK's institutional strategy paper for the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) that accession to the EU would complete transition for eligible countries and should trigger a graduation from EBRD operations. We now consider that there will still be important transition challenges in less advanced sectors of the countries of Central Europe and the Baltics after they join the EU. Working within its three key principles—transition impact, additionality and sound banking—the EBRD will continue to have a role assisting the countries address these challenges. The UK believes that the EBRD should take a strategic approach, co-ordinating closely with other public institutions and working to widen the benefits of transition to those who have benefited least.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she will answer the written question from the hon. Member for Chichester, tabled on 22 May, on the official travel of departmental and non-departmental special advisers. [72677]

Clare Short: According to the Order Paper, no such question was tabled to my Department on 22 May by the hon. Member for Chichester.

Temporary Staff

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many employees under contract from temping agencies worked in her Department; and how much was spent on temporary staff (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of the total staffing budget in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [72643]

Clare Short: The information on staff numbers is set out in the following table as at 1 April 2001 and 1 April 2002, which are the only two of the last five years for which figures are available. The table shows the information as a percentage of total DFID staff numbers in the UK.

	April 2001	April 2002
Temporary agency staff employed	29	58
Temporary agency staff as a percentage of total staff number in UK	2.2	3.6

No central data are held on the cost of agency staff. However as a proportion of the total staffing budget, this will be less than percentages for staff numbers shown in the table because the majority of such staff are contracted to fill temporary positions at junior level.

Departmental Bodies

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many jobs under the remit of her Department in (a) the core Department, (b) non-departmental public bodies, (c) executive agencies and (d) independent statutory bodies, organisations and bodies financially sponsored by her Department and other such organisations, are located in (i) Scotland, (ii) England, excluding Greater London, (iii) Greater London, (iv) Wales, (v) Northern Ireland and (vi) overseas, broken down by (A) whole-time equivalent jobs and (B) the percentage per individual Department, body or organisation. [72731]

Clare Short: The information in respect of DFID's civil service posts as at 1 April 2002 is contained in the table. Information in the other categories listed is not readily available.

	Number	Percentage of total
Scotland	527	33.5
Greater London	791	50.3
Overseas	255	16.2

G8 (Expenditure and Policies)

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how the G8's commitment to focusing their development efforts on cultures that demonstrate a political and financial commitment to good governance and the rule of law, investing in their people and pursuing policies that spur economic growth and alleviate poverty will be reflected in (a) their development spending for 2003 and (b) their policies in 2003. [72304]

Clare Short: Each G8 member will decide for itself how to meet the commitments entered into at the Kananaskis Summit. These commitments reflect the Department for International Development's existing policies as set out in its Strategies for Achieving the International Development Targets published in 2000–01, copies of which are available in the House Library. The Department is currently reviewing how these should be applied to the outcome of the recent Comprehensive Spending Review. The resulting allocation and its underlying rationale will be set out in the 2003 departmental report. In setting our priorities we will take fully into account the extent to which developing country Governments pursue effective pro-poor policies. We encourage other donors to do likewise.

Developing Countries

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking to ensure that poorer people in developing countries benefit from water supply projects in which United Kingdom companies invest. [72055]

Clare Short: My Department is working in many different ways to ensure that all water companies who engage in water supply projects cater for all, especially the poor. Our policy for achieving the Millennium Development Goal of halving the number of people without access to safe water by 2015 is set out in the strategy paper "Addressing the Water crisis—Healthier and More Productive Lives for Poor People". The policy seems sustainability in water supply and sanitation service delivery with a proper pro-poor focus. We are working with developing country Governments to ensure priority for pro-poor water supply and sanitation services within the Poverty Reduction Strategy processes. We are also supporting a considerable body of research that is seeking specifically to develop mechanisms by which the private sector is able best to provide for the poor.

My Department has been at the forefront of developing new facilities to ensure that the engagement of the private sector in water supply and sanitation addresses the needs of the poor. These include the Public Private Infrastructure Advisory Facility (PPIAF), which is building capacity for effective regulation, and the Emerging Africa Infrastructure Fund (EAIF), which seeks to harmonise developmental and commercial objectives.

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how OECD guidelines for multinational enterprises, as they relate to developing countries are monitored. [72054]

Clare Short: Like all 36 signatories to the OECD Guidelines on Multinational Enterprises (MNEs), the UK has a national contact point (NCP), responsible for ensuring effective implementation of the guidelines, this includes contributing to the resolution of concerns about the behaviour of MNEs raised with it. The UK NCP is based on the Department of Trade and Industry working in liaison with other Government Departments. Signatories to the guidelines recognise that there are greater difficulties in implementing them in non-adhering countries (which includes almost all developing countries), not lest because they do not have NCPs. However, the Government's expectations of UK MNE behaviour are the same wherever they operate. In developing countries positive co-operation between the NCP, UK Government representation locally, business, unions, NGOs, and individuals is important for successful implementation and promotion. The UK Government are working hard to raise the profile of the guidelines in developing countries, for example through the recent G7/8 Action Plan for Africa initiative, through UK overseas posts, and through discussions with fellow signatories and interested parties at the regular NCP meetings in the OECD. We will continue these efforts as it is in developing countries where, arguably, the guidelines can make the most impact.

Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what public consultations have been commenced by her Department since 1 April; and what the (a) closing date and (b) website address of each were. [72062]

Clare Short: Since April 2002, my Department has conducted limited public consultations on the following documents:

"Better Livelihoods for Poor People: The Role of Agriculture" (consultation closed 5 July 2002)

A DFID-wide research policy study, "Research For Poverty Reduction", (consultation closed 10 May 2002);

"Energy for the Poor" (consultation closes 31 July 2002)

"Making connections: Infrastructure for poverty reduction" (consultation closes 31 July 2002).

All these documents are made available in print form and electronically on our website www.dfid.gov.uk for the public to comment on.

Centre for Tropical Veterinary Medicine

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what level of funding her Department intends to provide for research by the Centre for Tropical Veterinary Medicine in Edinburgh (a) over the current financial year, (b) in the period up to 2005 and (c) after 2005. [72152]

Clare Short: The Centre for Tropical Veterinary Medicine at the University of Edinburgh is contracted by my Department to manage a programme of animal health research. The programme develops, and promotes the adoption of, cost-effective strategies for the sustainable control of livestock diseases affecting the livelihoods of poor people in parts of east and southern Africa and in Asia. The contract runs to March 2005. Funding available under the contract by financial year is:

2002–03: £3,373,000

2003–04: £2,771,000

2004–05: to be determined.

These figures include funds provided specifically for a project to develop an improved vaccine to prevent losses from East Coast fever, a fatal tick-transmitted disease of cattle in eastern, central and southern Africa.

No decisions have been taken on funding for animal health research after March 2005.

China

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will ascertain from the Government of China if the population and family planning law due to come into effect in China in September requires detailed population control quotas; and if she will make a statement. [72543]

Clare Short: We understand that the new Population and Family Planning Law in China, which is due to come into effect on 1 September this year, does not include detailed population quotas. The law sets out the rights and responsibilities of the state and individuals in the areas of reproductive health and family planning. Birth targets and quotas remain a feature of population policy in China, but we are supporting the work of the United Nations population fund which seeks to demonstrate to the Chinese authorities that a client-oriented quality of care approach is a viable alternative to the current administrative family planning approach. Birth targets and quotas have been removed in counties where UNFPA is operating.

Somalia

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to the answer of 15 July 2002, Official Report, column 41W, on Somalia, which individuals her Department have lobbied for the lifting of the ban on Somali livestock exports. [72436]

Clare Short: Our embassies in relevant Arab states have lobbied foreign Ministers about the livestock restrictions affecting Somalia. My Department is in regular touch with the FCO about these efforts.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimates her Department has made of how the planned increases in her departmental budget announced in the Comprehensive Spending Review will assist in reaching the UN millennium targets for development. [71728]

Clare Short: The planned increase in my Department's budget announced in the 2002 spending review settlement will enable us to increase significantly our bilateral contribution to achieving the Millennium Development Goals, and to play a greater role in strengthening the contribution of the international system. There is no room for complacency. Achievement of the Millennium Development Goals will entail a massive collective effort by the entire international community, developed and developing countries, to support poverty reduction. This includes further progress by donors towards the 0.7 per cent. target; delivering on the Doha commitments to make trade fairer for developing countries; improving the effectiveness of development assistance through sharpening its poverty focus; untying and promoting harmonisation of donor practices to reduce transaction costs. for developing countries it means tacking responsibility for developing and implementing poverty reduction policies and tackling the constraints on pro-poor growth including corruption, weak governance and conflict.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the progress being made with the campaign for good governance her Department is supporting in Sierra Leone; and what plans she has for developing further this work. [72332]

Clare Short: DFID's current support for the civil society campaign for good governance is committed for two years. Its aim is to help build up a well informed, strong, viable and active civil society that effectively addresses political, socio-economic and human rights issues in Sierra Leone, particularly in areas of corruption, local government, economic empowerment, and the legal and human rights of women. It is just over half way through its course.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement about progress being made with the Chieftans' Government reform projects in Sierra Leone; and what plans she has for developing this work further. [72331]

Clare Short: In response to the wishes expressed by civil society, soon after the conclusion of the peace agreement signed at Lomé in July 1999, I agreed to support a project that would help restore the machinery of government at the local level in Sierra Leone. This entailed returning Paramount Chiefs to their Chiefdoms.

A project was designed for this purpose and became known as the Chiefdom Governance Reform Programme. It had three components: the construction of a chiefdom house from where chiefdom business is conducted; the filling of chiefdom vacancies (there are presently more than 60 and the drafting of a code of conduct that would constitute a uniform set of regulations determining chiefdom administration and practices.

The project has run its course and has recently been reviewed. The review findings are awaited. They will help to inform us whether we should approve a second phase to complete what we have begun or take forward only a limited range of activity, concentrating on what the review team deem to be the crucial components of the project.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on progress in implementing the EU health programme in Sierra Leone. [72168]

Clare Short: The EU Health Sector Support Project was approved under the 8th EDF, National Indicative Programme for Sierra Leone. It will concentrate on revitalising much needed health care delivery and management systems with an emphasis on first contact and first referral levels in rural areas.

It is disappointing that despite lobbying from DFID and others the project has not yet started, over 18 months since the EDF Committee approved it in November 2000. We are advised that their preliminary assessments will be completed by last August and implementation will commence in early 2003.

Street Children

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what estimate she has made of how many street children there are in the developing world; and what plans she has to provide support for the work being done in developing countries to bring street children into mainstream society to benefit from more general education and health programmes; [72326]

(2) what account her Department will take of the policy statement on promoting and protecting the rights of street children formulated by the South Asian Civil Society Forum meeting in Colombo last December when developing programmes to support Governments in South Asia combating poverty, ill health and poor education. [72167]

Clare Short: Children live on the streets because of poverty in their communities. We have no specific estimate of their numbers, but street children form a proportion of the 600 million children who live in poverty, and we know that some 113 six to 11-year-olds are not in school (1998 figure). Some of these will be street children. Support for children's rights to basic health care, education, nutrition, shelter, and protection from violence and abusive labour, along with work on sustainable livelihoods for their parents, is central to our effort towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals.

We are currently providing financial support of nearly £2 million to a number of organisations that work directly with street children. We also support many more organisations and Governments working to tackle the underlying causes of the poverty, deprivation, and social exclusion that force children on to the streets.

Arms Exports

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the impact of the proposed changes to guidelines on UK arms exports on the possibility of British military equipment reaching developing countries in regions of instability. [72623]

Clare Short: I have made no assessment of the impact of the proposed changes to the guidelines on UK arms exports on the chances of British military equipment reaching developing countries in regions of instability.

Anglo-Scottish Ministerial Meetings

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many formal and official inter-ministerial meetings her Department has held with the Scottish Executive since May 1999, broken down by (a) Scottish Executive Department, (b) subject and (c) date. [72723]

Clare Short: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Malawi

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the percentage of farmers in Malawi who will receive seed and fertiliser as overseas aid for planting 2003's crop. [73402]

Clare Short: DFID is currently discussion with Malawi Government and other potential donors the options for supply of inputs for the 2002–03 crop. These discussions will take account of the national food needs and the availability of finance for this and other interventions within an overall National Food Security Programme. Agreement is expected within the next three weeks to enable registration and required procurement to proceed in a timely manner.

Spring Meetings

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people attended the spring meetings of the IMF and World bank from (a) her Department and (b) other UK Government Departments; and what the total cost of the visit was. [66227]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Lady to the answer I am giving today to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow).

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Press Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) full-time equivalents were employed by her press office and (b) secondees were placed in her press office in the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [70549]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 22 July 2002]: As DEFRA was set up in June 2001, information relating to the last five years is not available.

There are 18 full-time press officer posts in the DEFRA Press Office. None of these posts are secondees.

Farm Payments

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was paid in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 to farmers in matching funds to charitable payments. [72487]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 July 2002]: Under the Charity Matched Funding Scheme, the Government matches charitable donations from the public pound for pound from Government funds. The Government paid over £17,000,000 to charities to alleviate rural hardship resulting from the foot and mouth disease outbreak in match funding in 2001–02. Match Funding was not made available in 2000–01.

Foot and Mouth

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her latest assessment is of the contribution that the closure of footpaths made to resisting the spread of foot and mouth disease. [72488]

Alun Michael: In the early stages of last year's outbreak of foot and mouth disease (FMD), the extent to which the disease might have spread was highly uncertain. At this stage MAFF encouraged local authorities to close footpaths and other rights-of-way on a precautionary basis. On 28 March MAFF and DETR published guidance advising authorities to reopen footpaths as quickly as possible when reopening was justified by the veterinary risk assessment. It is not possible to quantify the impact that footpath closures had in helping to control the disease.

Responding to the recommendations of the Rural Task Force report published last October, the Government made clear that in any future outbreak of FMD, any restrictions on countryside access would take account both of the requirements of disease control and of the impact on countryside users, the businesses that depend on them, and the wider rural economy. On the basis of the current veterinary risk assessment, closures of rights of way would probably be advised only within a 3 km radius zone around infected premises; this is set out in DEFRA's published Interim Contingency Plan for FMD.

There is no case in which FMD is known to have been spread by walkers; but the Royal Society's report "Infectious Diseases in Livestock", published last week, states at paragraph 3.24 that > "There is a theoretical risk that tourists on footpaths close to infected areas can spread disease, particularly if their route brings them into intimate contact with animals, but the actual risks from this source are poorly understood and require proper investigation."

The Government will respond in full to this and other recommendations from the FMD inquiries later this year.

Bushmeat Trade

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has for the latest machinery for monitoring and checking bags to tackle the illegal trade of bushmeat into the UK. [70306]

Mr. Morley: In March of this year the Department published its action plan to reduce the risk of plant and animal diseases entering the country and damaging our horticultural and agricultural industries.

In implementing this action plan the Department has been investigating a variety of alternatives for improved detection and deterrence of illegal imports of meat and animal products. The Department has held discussions with officials from other countries on their experience with different regimes and technologies, as well as other individuals, and has a number of pilot schemes due to start this summer to determine the effectiveness of these in detecting illegal imports of meat and animal products.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on those groups which are involved in illegally importing bushmeat into the UK. [70307]

Mr. Morley: The Department currently has no conclusive evidence of specific groups involved in the illegal importation of bushmeat into the UK. We are in the process of improving our intelligence gathering and sharing this with enforcement agencies and specialised units such as the Wildlife Crime Unit. If and when such intelligence builds up a suitable evidence action will, of course, be taken accordingly.

Illegal Meat Imports

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what arrangements are in place to check against the illegal importation of meat by sea and air, with specific reference to (a) their cost and (b) man hour equivalents devoted to them. [69991]

Mr. Morley: Consignments of meat or animal products entering the European Union are subject to documentary and identification checks as well as physical checks, testing and sampling. The proportion subject to physical checks is dependent on the product—for example, at least 20 per cent. of beef, pork and lamb and at least 50 per cent. of consignments of poultry, game and honey are checked to ensure they comply with the appropriate rules. The cost of these checks are recovered from importers.

Checks on other consignments not declared as meat or animal products are targeted on a risk basis.

There are enforcement officers employed by local and port health authorities, HM Customs and Excise, Meat Hygiene Service and DEFRA who contribute directly or indirectly to policing laws on meat imports. Total numbers are not held centrally.

Targeted checks for illegal imports of meat and animal products are carried out at sea ports and air ports. We do not hold information centrally on the costs of these checks.

Through its action plan published in March, the Government are stepping up activities to improve the prevention and detection rates for illicit trade. Measures include improved co-ordination and co-operation with, and between, enforcement agencies. Certain measures in the action plan measures will have implications for future arrangements. For example the volume and type of checks made will be informed by the outcome of a disease risk assessment, and how checks are arranged, by the outcome of a Cabinet Office review of the current enforcement arrangements. Both reports are due this autumn.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will make a statement on the Government's strategy to tackle illegal meat importation; [72008]

(2) what steps she has taken since March to tackle illegal meat importation. [72007]

Mr. Morley: The strategy to tackle illegal imports is to assess the disease risks linked to imports; identify the critical control points that need to be strengthened in order to reduce those risks, and to maximise opportunities for the prevention and detection of illicit trade. The strategy is underpinned by improved communication, including campaign to increase public awareness of our import rules and reasons for them.

The various measures we are taking are set out in the action plan published [illegible] March, and which have been endorsed by the [illegible], Follett and Anderson reports. I refer the hon. Member to our progress report published on 8 July: a copy of which can be viewed on the illegal imports pages on the DEFRA website (www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/illegali).

Correspondence

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many letters from hon. Members received by her Department before 1 January have not been answered. [72018]

Mr. Morley: As at 23 July there are 113 letters from hon. Members received before 1 January that have not been answered.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to improve the performance of her Department in replying to correspondence. [72016]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and all of her ministerial team have afforded the highest importance to improving performance against correspondence targets and this has been tackled at the highest levels within the Department.

The Department has addressed this by trebling the number of staff in the correspondence unit and strengthening its line management; introducing a more up to date IT system to facilitate faster transmission of letters within the Department, better case recording and improved management data; strengthening contingency arrangements to deal with surges of correspondence on a particular issue and enhancing guidance and training throughout the department (with input from Ministers) to improve the timeliness and quality of draft replies.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average time taken by her Department has been to answer a letter from an hon. Member since January; and what the longest time for which such a letter has been awaiting a reply is in this period. [72017]

Mr. Morley: The average time taken to answer a letter from an hon. Member since January is 21 working days. The longest time for which such a letter has been awaiting a reply in this period is 139 working days. The latter relates to problems of disruption carried out during the FMD outbreak.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter of 10 June from the hon. Member for the Vale of York on behalf of constituent L. Peter Davies, concerning the Meat and Livestock Commission. [71301]

Mr. Morley: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 18 July.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when a reply will be sent to the letter of 4 March from the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar, on behalf of Mrs. Griffin, a constituent. [69360]

Mr. Morley: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 17 July.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Totnes of 19 April about illegal trade in wildlife, which was transferred to her Department from the Home Office on 26 June. [71273]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 July 2002]: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 19 July.

Livestock Movements

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria the Government have set for the removal of the 20 day standstill rule on livestock movement. [72006]

Mr. Morley: There is firm veterinary and scientific advice in support of the present 20 day standstill, as a means of helping protect against the rapid spread of any new incursion of disease. Such a standstill both improves the prospect of identifying disease on infected premises before animals move off and slows the rate of spread of any undetected disease.

Before making a decision on the future of the 20 day rule, we wish to consider—and discuss with stakeholders—the relevant recommendations of the Royal Society and Lessons Learned Inquiries into the FMD outbreak. In reaching a view, we will seek to strike a balance between disease control considerations and the economic impact of movement standstills on livestock farmers and markets.

Rural Farms

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what help she plans to give (a) rural farms to help with modulation and (b) environmental schemes (i) in national parks and (ii) elsewhere. [71297]

Mr. Morley: Because of the requirement for match-funding, modulation means an increase in the national funds available to farmers. Depending upon their ability to deliver the objectives of agri-environment or other rural development schemes, farmers may have access to additional funding streams. In England, the Government plan to roll-out a new "broad and shallow", entry-level agri-environment scheme during 2005–06, following a successful pilot. This scheme will be widely drawn so that most farmers will be eligible to enter.

The scheme will be introduced as an addition to the existing agri-environment schemes, Countryside Stewardship, Environmentally Sensitive Areas and the Organic Farming Scheme. Under the England Rural Development Programme the Government planned to spend a total of £1 billion on these schemes in the period 2000–06.

There are currently no plans to give English rural farms within national parks additional help with national modulation or environmental schemes over and above that which they receive at present or may be eligible to apply for. However, individual national park authorities are able to negotiate their own management agreements with individual farmers and landowners within their boundary.

Regional Fisheries, Ecology and Recreation Advisory Committees

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many appointments have been made to Regional Fisheries, Ecology and Recreation Advisory Committees since 1997; and how many have a (a) canoeing background and (b) fishing background. [71587]

Alun Michael: Regional Fisheries, Ecology and Recreation Advisory Committees were established under the Environment Act of 1995 to replace the previous Regional Fisheries Advisory Committees. Their principal remit is to deal with issues of relevance to fishing. Representation of fishing interests therefore form the majority of their members. There is no statutory requirement to have recreation and navigation interests represented on these committees but the Environment Agency with the approval of Ministers, has agreed that these interests should be represented. The committees comprise no more that 21 members and each has at least two members representing recreation interests.

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what public consultations have been commenced by her Department since 1 April; and what the (a) closing date and (b) website address of each were. [72073]

Mr. Morley: The Department has commenced 28 consultations since 1 April 2002. The following table is a list of the consultations indicating the date it was issued, the deadline for responses and the website address for each consultation.

Groundwater Regulations

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what help and advice is available to sectors affected by the requirements of the Groundwater Regulations 1998. [73503]

Mr. Meacher: Following publication of a groundwater protection code for sheep dipping last summer, the Department has prepared two further codes of advice. A groundwater protection code for those involved with petrol stations and underground storage tanks for hydrocarbons will be published shortly. In addition the Department will be consulting this summer on a code aimed at businesses which use solvents. These codes will provide a useful source of advice on all aspects relating to groundwater protection, including site design and development, operation and decommissioning.

Farms

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) mean and (b) median farm (i) incomes and (ii) sizes were in the last five years broken down by region. [71028]

Mr. Morley: Mean and median full-time farm incomes and sizes as recorded by the Farm Business Survey in England are given in the table. A regional breakdown is not available due to sample size limitations.

Contaminated Land

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what financial support is being given to English local authorities to meet the capital costs of dealing with contaminated land. [73505]

Mr. Meacher: The Contaminated Land Supplementary Credit Approval (SCA) programme has provided support to English local authorities' capital works for 12 years. It assists local authorities to fulfil their responsibilities under the contaminated land regime which was introduced on 1 April 2000, under part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. The regime makes local authorities responsible for identifying contaminated land as defined in the Act, and they may also be responsible for its remediation in their capacity as regulators or in carrying some responsibility for the land's condition. The SCA programme assists local authorities to meet these obligations.

I have agreed the programme for new projects to start this year. The Department has already written to the successful authorities notifying them of the allocations which have been made for these new projects, and in respect of continuing commitments for projects approved in previous years.

Some bids are still being discussed with the authorities concerned, and there may be further allocations in respect of these and any further bids received later this year. The following table sets out the allocations which have been made so far this current financial year.

Sustainable Development

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Government will publish their Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate. [73504]

Mr. Meacher: I am pleased to announce that, from today, the first three parts of the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate are publicly available on the Government's Sustainable Development website. Copies of the website on floppy disk have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Part A of the Framework sets out the overarching commitments to which all Departments have signed up, and outlines the means by which progress towards these targets will be monitored and reported. It also sets a new target for Environmental Management Systems to be rolled out across the Estate. Parts B and C contain specific targets and guidance in the areas of Travel and Water consumption.

It is planned that the remaining parts of the Framework—covering Waste, Energy, Procurement, Estates Management, Biodiversity, and Social Impacts—will be rolled out over the coming year.

The online publication of the Framework is designed to facilitate the provision of the most up-to-date guidance, and examples of best practice, in relation to targets to all those involved in management of the Government Estate.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Government will publish its response to the Environmental Audit Committee's third report of Session 2001–02, "UK Preparation for the World Summit on Sustainable Development". [73506]

Margaret Beckett: I am pleased to announce that I have today, laid in the Libraries of both Houses, copies of the Government's response to the Environmental Audit Committee's third report of the 2001–2002 Session, "UK Preparation for the World Summit on Sustainable Development".

The Government's response sets our continued commitment to the achievement and promotion of sustainable development both internationally and at home. We have continued to play a significant role in preparations for the World summit on sustainable development taking place in Johannesburg between 26 August and 4 September 2002.

Sheep

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of (a) the number of sheep and (b) the proportion of the national flock which were born before the imposition of the ban on feeding animal protein to ruminants and are still alive. [65467]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 1 July 2002]: Pursuant to the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 8 July 2002, Official Report, column 695W. My answer referred to an estimate that the number of sheep still alive which were born before 1 August 1996 is less than 500, representing approximately three per cent. of the UK national flock. This is incorrect. The number of sheep still alive which were born before 1 August 1996 is 500,000, representing approximately three per cent. of the national flock of around 17 million breeding sheep. The rest of the answer remains correct.

Foxhunting

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what volume of correspondence she has received on the consultation on the future of foxhunting; and how many of those were in favour of the continuation of the sport. [64130]

Alun Michael: Over 7,000 communications were received following my statement to the House on 21 March. The majority were pro-hunting and came in response to a pro-hunt campaign. These have to be balanced against a smaller number of anti-hunting representation received immediately prior to the statement. We have also received many contributions providing evidence and referring to practical experience from a variety of viewpoints.

EU Directives

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the EU directives and regulations that have been implemented through her Department in 2002; and what was the cost of each to public funds. [64990]

Mr. Morley: In answer to the first part of the question the information is in the tables. The first table shows all EC directives transposed in the whole of the UK and notified in 2002, for which DEFRA took the lead. The second table shows Council regulations agreed in 2002 for which DEFRA took the lead. Regulations have a direct effect in the laws of member states and do not usually require Governments to take action to implement them. The table does not show Commission regulations. Details of all regulations and directives agreed can be found on the Eur-Lex database available on the European Union's website.

The Department does not hold information in the form requested in the second part of the question. This information could be assembled only at disproportionate cost.

Beef Exports

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the level of UK beef exports was in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [69093]

Mr. Morley: [holding answer 11 July 2002]: The following table shows the volume and value of UK exports of beef and beef products between 1997 and 2001.

	Beef		Beef product
Year	Tonnes	£ thousand	Tonnes	£ thousand

Scottish White Fish Producers Association

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Fisheries Minister next intends to meet the Scottish White Fish Producers Association. [70333]

Mr. Morley: I am always ready to meet representative organisations where there is business which would justify this. I am currently considering a response to a letter of 28 June from the Scottish White Fish Producers Organisation about the deep water fishery.

Infectious Diseases

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her proposed action following the Royal Society's report into infectious diseases in livestock. [71930]

Mr. Morley: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement on the foot and mouth inquiries, given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, to the House, on 22 July 2002, Official Report, column 669.

Countryside and Rights of Way Act

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which regulations under Part I of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 need to be in force before the Act can be implemented in any region before 2005. [72940]

Alun Michael: Regulations on the following must be put in place before land shown on maps of open country and registered common land may be opened up for access under Part I of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000:

(a) mapping of access land and consultation on draft maps (section 11);

(b) the issue of provisional maps, appeals against such maps, and the issue of conclusive maps (section 11);

(c) the exclusion or restriction of access under Chapter 11, including appeals (section 32);

(d) the exclusion of access in emergencies (section 31);

(e) appeals relating to notices in respect of means of access (section 38);

(f) references to public places in existing enactments (Section 42).

Regulations under (a) came into force on 1 November 2001. Regulations under (b) will come into force on 29 July 2002. We have completed consultations on (c) and, subject to the outcome of consultations on the remaining regulations, expect all of them to be in force by the end of 2003.

Free Range Poultry Units

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received concerning planning applications for the erection of mobile and static free range poultry units. [72519]

Mr. Morley: Producer interests wish to see a positive approach taken by local planning authorities when planning permission is needed for new or enlarged poultry units. Other interests are concerned about the environmental effects of some proposals. Government planning policies for local authorities make clear that an efficient and competitive agricultural industry is very important. In particular, local authorities are encouraged in general to support proposals relating to the requirements of new environmental, hygiene and welfare legislation.

DEFRA contributes to both national and regional planning and, through Government offices, provides technical advice to local authorities to help achieve sustainable development. This includes advice on giving farmers flexibility to adapt to changing animal welfare legislation and market conditions. In doing so, local authorities are enabled to take due account of these aspects as part of considering all economic, environmental and social issues when preparing their local development plans and assessing individual planning applications.

Air Conditioning

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 717W, on air conditioning, if she will make a statement on the results of the monitoring of the Building Research Establishment's Environmental Assessment; and what progress has been made in BREEAM to discourage the procurement of refrigerants with a high global warming potential. [71453]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

BREEAM is a commercial product of the Building Research Establishment and its methodology is revised annually. I understand that the current revision, which is due to be applied for assessments from September 2002 onwards, is likely to address the global warming potential of refrigerants.

Sausages

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what scientific evidence she has collated that supports the proposed ban on the use of sheep's intestines in the manufacture of sausages. [68068]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

I am advised by the Food Standards Agency (FSA) that the basis of their recommendation to the European Commission that sheep intestine be banned as specified risk material (SRM) is outlined in a report by a core group of stakeholders endorsed by the Board of the FSA on 13 June 2002. The risk assessments taken into account in this report indicate that the proposed ban, added to the current controls, could increase the reduction in potential infectivity entering the food chain to up to two-thirds if BSE were found in sheep. Current precautionary SRM measures are estimated to reduce risk by very approximately one-third. The FSA believes the proposed measure has to be considered in the context of the lives that might be saved from variant Creutzfeldt Jakob Disease (vCJD) if BSE were present in sheep.

A copy of the report can be found on the FSA's website www.food.gov.uk

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment has been made of the potential presence of BSE in beef protein collagen used in the manufacture of sausages. [68069]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

The Food Standards Agency have advised me that the European Commission Scientific Committee gave an opinion on safety with respect to TSEs (transmissible spongiform encephalopathies, including BSE) and the risks of collagen produced from ruminant hides at its meeting of 10–11 May 2001. They concluded that on the basis of current knowledge the parts of ruminant hides used for the production of collagen do not present a risk with regard to TSEs, provided contamination with potentially infected material is avoided. It is a regulatory requirement that food and food products (including collagen) must not be derived from BSE cases or suspected cases, or from specified risk material.

Chickens

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what checks are made for the presence of nitrofurans and chloramphenicol in chicken imported into the United Kingdom (a) directly from non-EU countries and (b) from a third country via another EU member state. [64117]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

Chloramphenicol and nitrofurans are veterinary medicines no longer permitted in the European Union for use in food producing animals and therefore residues of these chemicals should not be present in food.

Imports of products of animal origin for human consumption such as poultry meat to the United Kingdom from third countries are subject to harmonised EU import controls and must enter the EU through designated border inspection posts (BIP). Where the official veterinary surgeons at the BIPs have reason to suspect that poultry meat being imported to the UK direct from a third country may be contaminated with chloramphenicol or nitrofurans, they may take samples of the product for testing.

Imports of poultry meat from third countries to other EU member states must enter the EU through designated BIP where they may be subject to checks for chloramphenicol and nitrofurans. Once a food product is in free circulation within the EU it is not subject to routine checks at points of entry to the UK under EU single market requirements.

In response to concerns that poultry meat from South East Asia may be contaminated by illegal residues of veterinary medicines, the Food Standards Agency initiated a retail survey. As a consequence of the publication of these results and others from the Netherlands, an EU Commission Decision has recently required sampling and testing of poultry meat coming from Thailand. This requirement to sample and test applies to all EU member states.

The veterinary medicines directorate also undertakes testing of imported poultry meat as part of its non-statutory surveillance programme. In 2001, 50 samples of raw chicken were tested for the presence of chloramphenicol. No residues above the reporting limit were detected.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Consultations

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport in what format her Department has published the results of its 2001 written consultations. [70978]

Dr. Howells: The following table indicates in what format the Department published the results of all its 2001 written consultations:

Title	Format that results were published
National Gallery/National Portrait Gallery Review: stage one consultation	Summary of the views of consultees was published on the Department website and copies were also placed in the libraries of both Houses.
National Heritage Memorial Fund Review: stage one consultation	Results not yet published.
Report of the Gambling Review Body	Results of the consultation were published in A safe bet for success (Cm 5397). In addition, copies of all the substantive responses (unless respondents requested otherwise) were placed in the libraries of both Houses.

Religious Broadcasting

Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether in the course of her consultations on the draft Communications Bill she plans to meet representatives from the Christian broadcasting industry to discuss the statutory ban on religious organisations holding several categories of broadcasting licence. [70728]

Dr. Howells: I met representatives from the Centre for Justice and Liberty on 21 March 2002 and discussed a range of issues concerning religious organisations and broadcasting licensing.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if it is her policy to seek to regulate religious broadcasting by (a) placing limits on ownership, (b) regulation and (c) legislation. [72406]

Dr. Howells: Yes. We have set out our position on religious broadcasting in the document "The draft Communications Bill—The Policy".

Libraries

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which libraries have (a) opened and (b) reopened since 1997; and what sources of public funding are available to them. [71167]

Dr. Howells: The number of library openings and re-openings is not held centrally. However, the total number of libraries in England between 1996–97 and 2000–01 was:

	Number
1996–97	3,083
1997–98	3,053
1998–99	3,037
1999–2000	3,031
2000–01	3,032

The figures in the table reflect only branch and central libraries open for at least 10 hours a week. They do not include static libraries open for less than that duration, mobile libraries or special services provided by English library authorities to senior citizens' homes and others in sheltered housing schemes. In 2000–01 the figures for these two types of provision were, respectively: 130 static libraries open for less than 10 hours, 465 mobiles and 16,819 outlets in institutions.

Core funding for public libraries is provided through the Environmental Protection and Cultural Services block.

It is for local authorities to decide how much of their EPCS funding to allocate to their libraries in line with their statutory duty to provide library services that are comprehensive and efficient.Core funding for public libraries is provided through the Environmental Protection and Cultural Services block.

National Foundation of Youth Music

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment has been made of the success of the National Foundation of Youth Music in increasing the participation of young people from low-income families in its activities. [71926]

Dr. Howells: Youth Music has established 19 Youth Music Action Zones in the most deprived areas of the country, and its programmes have already reached over 270,000 young people.

All Youth Music programmes are evaluated. Youth Music's ongoing programme of Youth Music Action Zones (YMAZ) began in August 2000 and an interim evaluation of each of the zones was carried out from December 2001 to April 2002.

Website

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport for how long she retains documents referred to in parliamentary answers on his Department's website. [72284]

Dr. Howells: My Department will seek to retain any document held on my Department's website referred to in a parliamentary answer for at least the life of that Parliament and while the document remains valid.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether it is her policy to ensure that documents referred to in parliamentary answers are available via her Department's website. [72292]

Dr. Howells: My Department makes all publications available through the Department's website. Other documents, if referred to in a parliamentary answer, may be published on the website if it is felt relevant and useful to do so.

Tourism

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she will take to encourage people to holiday in the United Kingdom. [72400]

Dr. Howells: This year the Government are spending £72 million on tourism, of which £54 million is available to the British Tourist Authority (BTA). The BTA promotes Britain as a tourist destination in 27 countries and is currently running the 'Only in Britain, Only in 2002' campaign in our seven biggest overseas markets with television, radio and press advertising.

On 13 May we announced that we will be working with the English Tourism Council to improve the marketing within the UK of England as a tourist destination.

BBC

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what representations she has received regarding the BBC's digital curriculum proposition; and if she will make a statement; [72337]

(2) when she expects to make a decision on the BBC's digital curriculum proposition; and if she will make a statement. [72336]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is considering the digital curriculum proposal in accordance with the Department's published guidelines on proposed new BBC public services. The proposal has been subject to a period of public consultation which closed on 22 July and a substantial number of comments have been received. My right hon. Friend will now assess the response to the consultation and reach a decision as soon as possible.

Wembley Stadium

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will publish the Government's response to the Culture, Media and Sport Committee's sixth report entitled "Wembley National Stadium Project: Into Injury Time". [72964]

Tessa Jowell: I am today publishing the Government's response to the Select Committee's sixth report entitled "Wembley National Stadium Project: Into Injury Time". The response is available on the DCMS website (www.culture.gov.uk) and copies of the response have been laid before Parliament and deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

Scottish Executive

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many formal and official inter-ministerial meetings her Department has held with the Scottish Executive since May 1999, broken down by (a) Scottish Executive department, (b) subject and (c) date. [72711]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Minister for Sport regularly meet the Scottish Minister for Tourism, Culture and Sport at the Sports Cabinet meetings. These were held on:

6 October 1999;
6 October 2000;
16 February 2001;
31 October 2001;
18 June 2002.

My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for the Arts met with the Scottish Deputy Minister for Tourism, Culture and Sport on 25 April 2002 to discuss Design Champion issues.

In addition Ministers in DCMS and the Scottish Executive are in regular contact on policy issues by telephone, e-mail and letter.

Free Television Licences

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many households are entitled to free television licences in Taunton; and if she will make a statement. [73272]

Dr. Howells: TV Licensing, which administers the free television licence scheme for the BBC as Licensing Authority, is not able to provide geographical breakdowns of the number of free licences issued. However, estimates based on the 1991 Census indicate that there were approximately 8,500 people aged 75 or over in the Taunton constituency.

Science and Discovery Centres

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to assist the funding of science and discovery centres; and if she will make a statement. [72324]

Dr. Howells: The Government have currently no plans to assist the funding of science and discovery centres. The Millennium Commission, together with the Wellcome Trust and the Wolfson Foundation has on Monday 22 July launched a £33 million fund for science centres and museums to allow them to renew or replace high quality science, education and technology exhibitions.

"A Force for Our Future"

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress has been made on implementing the recommendations contained in the Government's statement on the historic environment: A Force for Our Future. [73437]

Dr. Howells: Since A Force for Our Future was published in December 2001 the following has been achieved:

December

The Listed Places of Worship Grant scheme was launched.

March

Paradise Preserved, a guide to local authorities and cemetery managers on the care of the built and natural history of cemeteries was published.

April

The Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment put in place arrangements for providing advice on all post-war listing proposals.

May

The Heritage Lottery Fund's Strategic Plan for 2002–07, agreed with the DCMS, DEFRA and then DTLR was published. Entitled Broadening the Horizons of Heritage it sets out proposals, among other things, to ensure that everyone can learn about, have access to and enjoy their heritage.

The Quinquennial Review of English Heritage was completed with the full involvement of the DTLR (now OPDM), DEFRA, HMT and DfES. English Heritage are taking forward the recommendations as part of their modernisation programme;

The review of PPG 15 'Planning and the Historic Environment' and PPG16 'Archaeology and Planning' commenced with full involvement from the sector.

Heritage Link, an umbrella organisation for the voluntary organisations working in the sector was established. It will be formally launched in December.

The Construction Industry Training Board set up a heritage working group with full participation of the Building Skills Action Group and English Heritage to coordinate the promotion of heritage skills. English Heritage and the Heritage Lottery Fund are promoting training in conservation craft skills by making it a requirement that all projects over £1 million produce a Training Plan, and by supporting training, including Modern Apprenticeships, as part of wider projects. HLF also support stand-alone projects for training volunteers in heritage skills.

June

The consultation document People and Places: a draft social inclusion policy for the built and historic environment, was launched by the Secretary of State, during Architecture Week.

July

The National Heritage Act 2002 Act came into force. This allows English Heritage to operate in overseas countries and to become involved in underwater archaeology in territorial waters adjacent to England. A Statutory Instrument specifying the boundaries of English territorial waters is being drafted in consultation with he Devolved Administrations and other relevant bodies.

The Statutory Order extending the definition of Treasure was laid before Parliament in July. It comes into force in January 2003 subject to its successful passage through both Houses.

English Heritage hosted a workshop with key players in the sector to consider how to take forward the consultation on how to broaden access to the historic environment. This was informed by the National Trust leaflet "Making History Matter".

English Heritage published a consultation document Making the Most of our Civic Heritage—some guiding principles for decision makers—at the Local Government Association Conference in June.

Sustainable Communities: Delivering through Planning, sets out the Government's plans for transforming the planning system.

DEFRA have agreed that English Heritage become a distributor for the Aggregates Levy Sustainability Fund, alongside the Countryside Agency and English Nature. Together they will disburse over £30 million to mitigate the impact of aggregates extraction.

The Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment has distributed Our Street: Learning to See and From One Street to Another to every school in the UK.

This is only the beginning of the process. We and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are working closely with the sector to take this forward. We will publish a full progress report in December.

Playing Fields

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the Playing Fields Monitoring Group will be publishing statistical information concerning playing fields. [73447]

Tessa Jowell: The Playing Fields Monitoring Group has today published for the first time statistics which clearly show that Government policy is already protecting playing fields that schools and local communities need. The statistics are available from the Department for Culture, Media and Sport's website at: www.culture.gov.uk/sport/

Out of 875 planning applications to change the use of playing fields referred to Sport England in 2000–01, only 39 which were deemed to represent a net detriment to sport were approved. Indeed, 92 per cent. of the 1,765 playing field planning applications referred to Sport England over the last two years were either not detrimental to sport or did not proceed—ensuring that sport is the winner in the vast majority of cases.

This Government is committed to the protection of playing fields and will continue to look closely at how current protective measures are working as well as publishing figures through the DCMS Playing Fields Monitoring Group. I should like to pay tribute to the assistance that the Central Council of Physical Recreation and the National Playing Fields Association are providing to the work of the Group.

Sport Expenditure

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the Government's expenditure plans are for sport following the 2002 Spending Review. [73448]

Tessa Jowell: Increasing opportunities for all to participate is key to the Government's strategy for sport. As a result of the Spending Review, the Government will channel £6 million into talent scholarships up to 2005–06. When combined with funding from other sources, these will provide quality-assured support to 2,000 young people in higher education.

The Youth Sports Trust has already produced web-based guidance for local coordinators and teachers. Now, for the first time, they have a clear framework for responding to the needs of talented young sportspeople of different ages and abilities. Next year, we will build on those foundations. We will expand the website into a one-stop shop for teachers, coaches, mentors and parents; develop a national support network based around specialist sports colleges; introduce a full programme of summer schools and performance camps for different ages and abilities; and ensure a much stronger emphasis on sporting talent within all parts of our national strategy for gifted and talented education. For the first time, teachers and coaches will be working together to ensure that all of our talented young sportsmen and women reach their full potential while continuing to receive a broad and balanced education.

As a final rung of the talent development ladder, over £25 million over the next three years will enable the key recommendations of the Coaching Task Force to be implemented. This investment will create 3,000 full-time, qualified Community Coaches to help develop sports skills across the country by 2006, with particular emphasis on improving opportunities for those in areas of deprivation.

For the first time, nationally-recognised qualifications will be established to give coaches a professional career pathway, and we will create new opportunities to enable skilled coaches in a number of disciplines to be deployed across the country.

There will also be support for governing bodies of sport to help them make the most of our new coaching initiatives. This will ensure that new coaches work in partnership at local level with clubs, schools and other regional organisations supporting sport.

Complementing this, £ 4 million of funding for the Step into Sport programme will enable more than 60,000 young people to achieve awards for leading sport. By developing a sense of teamwork, responsibility and self-esteem while serving their schools and communities, the young sport leaders of today will form the volunteer and coaching base of our sporting future.

These and other programmes stand to benefit more from the extensive reform of Sport England that is now under way. I expect substantial savings to be made and these resources to be directed into our priority programmes for sport.

Finally, the Government is committed to ensure that funding of the World-Class Performance programme in the four years leading up to the Athens Olympics remains as high as in the run-up to Sydney, our most successful Olympics since London in 1920.

Criminal Records Checks

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will share information with other countries about UK citizens who have been convicted of offences against children within sport. [68831]

Hilary Benn: I have been asked to reply.

If a person is convicted of a relevant sex offence against a child they become subject to the notification requirements of the Sex Offenders Act 1997.

New provisions in the Criminal Justice and Courts Services Act 2000 (including regulations made under the power contained therein) provide that if an offender subject to the notification requirements of the Sex Offenders Act 1997 leaves the United Kingdom for eight days or longer, he must notify the police at least 24 hours prior to his departure: of his date of departure; the country to which he is travelling; the identity of the carrier he intends to use; his point of arrival in the country; details of his first night's accommodation; if he intends to return to the United Kingdom; and if so, the date of his return and point of arrival.

On such a notification, the police will assess the level of risk the offender poses and then make a decision over whether to pass on this information to the authorities of the destination country or not.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Employment Relations Act

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, when he expects an announcement to be made about granting the clergy the rights and privileges given to workers under the Employment Relations Act 1999. [73304]

Mr. Bell: The Church of England is currently considering issues raised by the Department of Trade and Industry's "Discussion Document on Employment Status in Relation to Employment Rights". It will make a formal response by 11 December.

CABINET OFFICE

Central Office of Information

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when he expects to publish the Central Office of Information's annual report and accounts 2001–02. [73438]

Mr. Alexander: I have today laid the COI annual report and accounts 2001–02 before Parliament, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Public Appointments

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what rules govern appointments to non-departmental public bodies; and what have been the (a) ethnic, (b) gender and (c) party breakdown of these appointments in (a) 2001 and (b) 2002. [72445]

Mr. Alexander: Appointments to non-departmental public bodies made by Ministers are subject to the Commissioner for Public Appointments' code of practice, and regulated accordingly. Appointments to tribunals follow the code of practice as best practice, but are not regulated by the Commissioner. It is Government policy that appointments to non-departmental public bodies, not made by Ministers, also follow the code as best practice.

The Commissioner for Public Appointments issued the seventh annual report on 17 July 2002. Included in this publication are tables showing details of gender, ethnicity, disability, and political activity of those appointed for regulated appointments made in the year ending 31 March 2002, and a comparative set of figures for the previous five years. Additionally, the Cabinet Office's annual publication, "Public Bodies", includes details of diversity in public appointments as a cumulative total rather than for those appointments made in any one year. "Public Bodies 2002" will be published shortly.

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what public consultations have been commenced by his Department since 1 April; and what the (a) closing date and (b) website address of each were. [72070]

Mr. Alexander: The following formal national public consultations, which are subject to the Code of Practice on Written Consultation, have been commenced by the Cabinet Office since 1 April 2002:

"In the Service of Democracy". A consultation paper on a policy for electronic democracy, July 2002. The closing date for the consultation is 31 October 2002. The web address for the consultation document is www.edemocracy.gov.uk

"Privacy and Data-sharing: the Way Forward for Public Services", published by the Cabinet Office's Performance and Innovation Unit on 11 April 2002. The report included three recommendations that were raised for consultation. The consultation exercise is being managed by the Lord Chancellor's Department. The consultation period ended on 12 July. The web address for the consultation document is www.lcd.gov.uk/foi/sharing/index.htm

Legal and Regulatory Framework for Charities

Mr. Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when the Strategy Unit Review of the Legal and Regulatory Framework for Charities in the not-for-profit sector will be published. [73439]

Mr. Alexander: The Strategy Unit (formerly Performance and Innovation Unit) review of the legal and regulatory framework for charities and the not-for-profit sector will be published in September.

EU Legislation

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what mechanism there is to ensure Government Departments produce explanatory memoranda on proposed EU legislation in time for proper consideration by the European Scrutiny Committee. [71654]

Mr. Alexander: The Government is committed to the effective scrutiny by Parliament of proposed EU legislation and has given an undertaking that Ministers will not agree to proposals in the Council of Ministers until scrutiny by Parliament has been completed. This undertaking is the cornerstone of the scrutiny process and is embodied in a Resolution of the House of Commons dated 17 November 1998.

The Government is committed to depositing proposals for primary EU legislation in Parliament within 48 hours of receipt by the Government, and to the provision of an Explanatory Memorandum (EM) within 10 working days of an EU document's deposit in Parliament, wherever practicable.

The Cabinet Office is responsible centrally for the maintenance of scrutiny procedures, working closely with Departments and the staff of the European Scrutiny Committee. Where EMs cannot be submitted quickly, the Cabinet Office ensures that the lead Department provides the European Scrutiny Committee with an explanation for any delay together with an assessment of the impact on the opportunity for consideration by the Committee. The Cabinet Office also liaises with Departments to ensure Departments plan ahead effectively to avoid occasions when late submission of an EM will cause difficulties for the proper consideration of issues by the European Scrutiny Committee.

Politics (Young People)

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what recent meetings he has had regarding young people's involvement in the political process; and what the outcomes of those meetings were. [72386]

Mr. Denham: I have been asked to reply.

I have held a number of meetings with young people, members of the UK Youth Parliament, hon. Members, and the media, relating to the re-engagement of young people in democracy and voting. Those discussions have supported the recommendations of the YVote?/YNot? project published on 3 July.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what (a) legislation is in place and (b) programmes are being funded that encourage young people's involvement in the political process. [72387]

Mr. Denham: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have taken several legislative steps in recent years to modernise and simplify electoral law and processes so that they are more relevant to modern lifestyles, including those lived by young people. These measures should make access to the process more flexible and make it easier both to register to vote and to cast a ballot. The Government, with the help of others such as the Electoral Commission, will continue to consider carefully any suggestions for changes that will lead to increased involvement of the young in the electoral process.

The National Curriculum Order for Citizenship laid before Parliament on 23 June 2000 sets out the statutory requirements for citizenship education. The subject will be part of the national curriculum for secondary schools from this August. It will consist of three main strands: political literacy, social and moral responsibility and community involvement. These will help young people to develop the skills and confidence they need to engage in active citizenship and understand their role in the political process.

The Children and Young People's Unit will continue to work with a range of organisations to support the action recommended in the YVote?/YNot? project. The independent Electoral Commission, with whom the Children and Young People's Unit has been working closely, has a statutory responsibility for raising public awareness of the electoral process and democratic systems, and has run focused advertising campaigns aimed at encouraging higher levels of voter participation within specific communities, including young people. The commission intends to continue to run bi-annual advertising campaigns, linked to key dates in the electoral calendar, including local and national elections and the annual registration canvass. The commission will also be launching later this year a 'New Initiatives Fund' which will provide grant funding to individuals and organisations outside government to test innovative ideas aimed at increasing participation in elections by young people and others.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Publications Scheme

Michael Fabricant: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if he will make a statement about the House's publications scheme under the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [73374]

Mr. Kirkwood: The Freedom of Information Act 2000 requires any public authority, including this House, to develop and implement a publication scheme setting out details of the classes of information which it publishes or intends to publish. I am pleased to announce that the House of Commons scheme has now been approved by the Information Commissioner and will be available on the parliamentary website at www.parliament.uk from Wednesday 24 July. Paper copies are available to hon. Members in the Library and to any member of the public on request from the House of Commons Information Office.

House of Commons Staff

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what percentage of House of Commons staff are (a) full-time employees and (b) agency staff provided by outside contractors. [72814]

Mr. Kirkwood: At 30 June 2002, the House employed 1,373 full-time staff and 90 agency staff, out of a total work force of 1,740 individuals. Thus full-time staff represent 79 per cent. of the total, and agency staff represent 5.2 per cent.

Sir Edward Heath Statue

Mr. Banks: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what arrangements have been made for re-siting the bust of the right hon. Sir Edward Heath by Martin Jennings within the Palace of Westminster. [73638]

Mr. Kirkwood: I have been asked to reply.

Hon. Members will wish to know that Mr. Speaker has amended the "10-year rule", governing the display of representations of politicians in the main building of the Palace. A portrait, bust or statue of a politician other than a Prime Minister may be displayed once 10 years have passed after their death. A portrait, bust or statue of a former Prime Minister may now be displayed either once five years have passed after their death, or when three Parliaments have elapsed after they have resigned the office of Prime Minister (provided they are no longer Members of the House and that a minimum of 12 years has elapsed), whichever of these events comes first. There remain no restrictions on the siting of representations of living politicians in the outbuildings of the Palace.

Accordingly the bust of Sir Edward Heath may now be displayed in the main building of the Palace. It is the intention that it should be sited in Members' Lobby from later this year.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the President of the Council what the (a) dates, (b) location and (c) sources were of attributable (i) articles, interviews or contributions for the media, books or other journals and (ii) speeches or presentations made in the public domain, by departmental special advisers since March 2001; who in his Department authorised the activity; and on what date this activity was recorded with the departmental Head of Information. [72245]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given earlier today by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

Computer Equipment

Dr. Cable: To ask the President of the Council what his policy is for the disposal of computer equipment that has been updated; and if he will make a statement. [72843]

Mr. Robin Cook: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to my answer given on 19 June 2002, Official Report, column 398W.

TREASURY

Value Added

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his most recent estimate is of the gap between value-added per employee in the public and private sectors in the UK. [73653]

John Healey: The Office for National Statistics publish data on jobs in the public and private sectors annually in an article in Economic Trends. The latest, which gives data for 2001, appeared in the June 2002 edition of Economic Trends (page 39–52). Value Added by sector of the UK economy is available in the ONS Blue book. The latest Blue book dataset, including statistics for 2001, will be published on 26 July.

Transport Expenditure

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will indicate, in respect of the graph entitled UK Transport Spending on page 3 of the leaflet 2002 Spending Review, how much spending in each year is (a) subject to the decisions of devolved Administrations and (b) central Government's own investment. [71608]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The information requested is set out in table 8.1 of the Spending Review 2002 White Paper, "Opportunity and Security for All: Investing in an Enterprising Fairer Britain".

There was a misprint in the table as set out in the White Paper. A corrected version of the table is as follows. The Treasury will be issuing a corrigendum shortly.

Table 8.1: Key figures

				£ million
	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06

Statistics

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what proportion of the population in (a) Wigan MBC, (b) the North West Region and (c) England had an income of (i) up to twice, (ii) up to five times and (iii) more than five times the national average in each of the past 10 years; [71898]

(2) what proportion of the total relevant population were higher rate tax payers in (a) Wigan MBC, (b) the North West Region and (c) England for each of the last 10 years. [71897]

Dawn Primarolo: Available estimates are in the tables.

Number of higher rate taxpayers[1] as a percentage of the total population[2] for the respective geographical areas

	Wigan	North West[3]	England
1995–96	1.5	2.5	3.8

[3] Government Office Region of North West.

[4] Number of individuals based on the Survey of Personal Incomes.

[5] Average earnings based on the New Earnings Survey.

[6] Rounded to 1 decimal place.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the annual report of the Statistics Commission. [72457]

Ruth Kelly: The 2001–02 annual report of the Statistics commission, which was released on Wednesday 17 July 2002 is a thorough review of the year's developments and details the Commission's progress in achieving its aims as set out in the "Framework for National Statistics".

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the independence and quality of national statistics. [72452]

Ruth Kelly: The Government's commitment to improving trust and confidence in official statistics was set out in the National Statistics Framework document which became operational in June 2000. Since then the National Statistician has issued a National Statistics Code of Practice for public consultation. This showed widespread support for the Code of Practice and its aim of promoting and demonstrating the independence and quality of National Statistics. The final version of the Code of Practice will be published shortly.

R and D Tax Credit

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has carried out on the impact of the DTI guidelines on the definition of development for tax purposes on the research and development tax credit in respect of large companies; and if he will make a statement. [70864]

Dawn Primarolo: The current definition of Research and Development (R&D) in the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry's guidelines is based on UK accounting principles—in SSAP (Statement of Standard Accounting Practice) 13—and on international standards established by the OECD. It was introduced in 2000 and underpins both the R&D tax credit for SMEs, also introduced in 2000, and the new R&D tax credit for large companies, in the current Finance Bill.

This definition was introduced after extensive consultation. It has only been in force for a short time, and it will not be possible to assess either its impact or that of the credits themselves (which are measures for the long-term) until companies have had a period of stability in which to make use of them. In the meantime, the Inland

Revenue, the Treasury and the DTI are working with industry on case studies to clarify the application of the definition.

Energy Efficiency

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to extend the reduced rate of five per cent VAT to all purchases of energy efficiency materials. [72705]

John Healey: The existing reduced rate applies to installations by contractors of certain energy-saving materials whose primary purpose is to save energy. European law does not permit a reduced rate for energy-efficient or energy-saving materials sold direct to the public, but the Government has pressed the European Commission to bring forward proposals to allow a reduced rate for energy-saving materials.

Jobs Location

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to increase the number of customs staff employed in Scotland. [72706]

John Healey: HM Customs and Excise focuses its resources on areas of greatest risk and keeps its staffing numbers and locations under review to ensure that staff with the necessary skills are in place to support the Department's operational activities.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many jobs under the remit of his Department in (a) the core Department, (b) non-departmental public bodies, (c) executive agencies and (d) independent statutory bodies, organisations and bodies financially sponsored by his Department and other such organisations are, located in (i) Scotland, (ii) England, excluding Greater London, (iii) Greater London, (iv) Wales, (v) Northern Ireland and (vi) overseas, broken down by (A) whole-time equivalent jobs and (B) the percentage per individual department, body or organisation. [72727]

Ruth Kelly: The numbers of whole time equivalent staff employed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Department are shown in the following table:

Staff in the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Department

	Scotland	England excluding Greater London	Greater London	Wales	Northern Ireland	Overseas	Total	Percentage of Chancellors staff

Anglo-Scottish Ministerial Meetings

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many formal and official inter-ministerial meetings his Department has held with the Scottish Executive since May 1999, broken down by (a) Scottish Executive Department, (b) subject and (c) date. [72721]

Mr. Boateng: Treasury Ministers meet Scottish Executive Ministers on occasion on a range of subjects.

White Van Imports

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many vehicles have been impounded by HM Customs and Excise in respect of white van imports since 1 January 2000. [72505]

John Healey: Customs' centrally held information on vehicle seizures does not differentiate the types of vehicle seized as outlined in the answer given by the former Financial Secretary (Paul Boateng), to the hon. Member for Guildford (Sue Doughty), on 3 December 2001, Official Report, column 65W. The total number of vehicles seized for all excise offences across the whole of the UK was 5,200 in the financial year 1999–2000, and 10,219 for the year 2000–01. Figures for 2001–02 will be published in the context of the overall performance of the 'tackling tobacco smuggling' strategy later in the year.

Hearing Aids

Rachel Squire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to exempt from tax the hearing aids required for hearing impaired people to pursue employment. [72203]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Perth (Annabelle Ewing) on 11 July 2002, Official Report, column 1104W.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will change the rules so that hearing aids paid for by employers are exempt from tax. [71717]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are continuing to remove barriers to work and ensure that disabled people do not face discrimination in the work place. Regulations came into force on 9 July 2002 to ensure that benefits for disabled employees which may be used both in and out of the work place, such as a hearing aid, will not be liable to a tax charge.

Non-domicile Tax Status

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what methodology the Inland Revenue is using to assess the number of individuals claiming non-domicile tax status; what the cost is of such status; what other work is being undertaken as a result of the review announced in paragraph 5.83 of the 2002 Budget; and if he will make a statement. [70274]

Dawn Primarolo: In his Budget statement, the Chancellor announced a review of the residence and domicile rules as they affect the tax liabilities of individuals. The work of the review is being undertaken by officials. As part of that work the Inland Revenue will be carrying out various fact-finding exercises, drawing on a range of sources.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) when the EU Customs Code Committee on customs warehouses and free zones is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [71834]

(2) when the EU Customs Code Committee on transit is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [71839]

(3) when the EU Customs Code Committee on the movement of air or sea passengers' baggage (technical problems) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [73150]

(4) when the EU Customs Code Committee on favourable tariff treatment (nature or end-use of goods) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [73151]

(5) when the EU Customs Code Committee on counterfeit and pirated goods is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [73148]

(6) when the EU Customs Code Committee on the single administrative document is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [73149]

(7) when the EU Customs Code Committee on general customs rules is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [73156]

(8) when the EU Customs Code Committee on the recovery of claims is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [73157]

(9) when the EU Customs Code Committee on customs procedures with economic impact is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement; [73147]

(10) when the EU Customs Code Committee on customs valuation is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [73144]

John Healey: The following table indicates when the various EU Committees are next due to meet.

EU Committee[1]	Next meeting (2002)
Transit	16 September
Customs warehouses and free zones	25 September
Customs Valuation	23 September
Movement of air or sea passengers' baggage (technical problems)	[2]—
General Customs Rule	Date to be arranged
Counterfeit and Pirated Goods	3 September
Customs Procedure with Economic Impact	25 September
Favourable Tariff Treatment (Nature or End-use of Goods).	25 September
Single Administrative Document	Date to be arranged

[1] There is no EU VAT or Customs Committee on the recovery of claims other than that on mutual assistance.

[2] This Committee has not met in the past five years and has no outstanding items under consideration. No further meetings have been timetabled.

The UK is normally represented by one or two officials from HM Customs and Excise on each of these Committees. The Customs delegates at these Committees represent all of the UK.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the European Advisory Committee on statistical information in the economic and social spheres (CEIES) is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [71838]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Angus Robertson, dated 24 July 2002:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question concerning the EU European advisory committee on statistical information in the economic and social sphere (CEIES). I am replying in his absence. (71838)

The European advisory committee on statistical information in the economic and social sphere (CEIES) next meets on 22nd November 2002. In addition to the National Statistician there are 2 UK members who serve in a personal capacity. Members do not represent individual interests or organisations.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the EU Committee on monetary, financial and balance-of-payments statistics is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [71826]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Angus Robertson, dated 24 July 2002:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question concerning the EU Committee on monetary, financial and balance-of-payment statistics. I am replying in his absence. (71826)

The EU Committee on monetary, financial and balance-of-payments statistics is due to meet at the end of January 2003. The exact date of the meeting is not yet fixed.

The Scottish Executive has never attended and is not a member.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the EU Committee on the harmonisation of the compilation of gross national product at market prices is next due to meet; whether representatives of the Scottish Executive (a) have been and (b) are members of it; and if he will make a statement. [71833]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Mr. John Pullinger to Mr. Angus Robertson, dated 24 July 2002:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question concerning the EU Committee on the harmonisation of gross national product at market prices. I am replying in his absence. (71833)

The EU Committee on the harmonisation of gross national product at market prices is due to meet on 5th November 2002.

The terms of reference of the committee relates to methodology for compilation of National Accounts, which is a reserved issue. The Scottish Executive has never attended and is not a member.

PFI Contracts

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 2 July 2002, Official Report, column 120W, on PFI contracts, what estimate his Department has made of the payments under PFI contracts for each year from 2002–03 to 2027–28 for Government PFI deals which are expected to reach preferred bidder stage in the next three years. [71927]

Mr. Boateng: During the competitive process, before a preferred bidder is selected, it is not possible to determine with any degree of accuracy exactly what the long term payment obligations are likely to be for any project. However, once projects have reached preferred bidder status, Departmental estimates of the relevant future service payments are published twice a year.

The most recent publication of this information can be found in the Financial Statement and Budget Report 2002, Table C 19. As is customary, I shall provide an update of these figures later this year.

Inward Investment

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the level of inward investment into the United Kingdom was in the years ending (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) 1 May 2002; and if he will make a statement. [72094]

Mr. Boateng: The Office for National Statistics publishes annual figures on inward investment into the United Kingdom in its Foreign Direct Investment Business Monitor (MA4). It also publishes quarterly estimates as part of the Balance of Payments First Release. Both of these can be found on the ONS website (statistics.gov.uk). The UK has continued to attract the largest share of inward investment in Europe and announcements made in this year's Budget will further serve to consolidate the UK's lead position.

DEL Spending

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of DEL spending labelled 'transport' is spent on (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) England and Wales and (d) England, Wales and Scotland in each year from 2002–03 to 2005–06. [72591]

Mr. Boateng: The amount allocated to the Department for Transport to spend on transport provision in England, and the national rail system, is given in the Spending Review 2002 White Paper, table 8.1. (An amended version of this table follows, which corrects a misprint. A corrigendum will be issued shortly.). The line in this table which gives an estimate of total UK transport spending does so on the basis of estimated spending by local authorities and devolved Administrations. It is of course a matter for devolved Administrations as to how they spend their allocated budgets.

Table 8.1 key figures

£ million

Department for Transport	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06
Resource budget	4,960	7,632	7,749	8,650
Capital budget	2,948	3,369	3,811	3,391
Total Departmental Expenditure Limit[1]	7,661	10,692	11,197	11,640
Near-cash spending in DfT DEL[2]	7,843	10,829	11,333	11,774
UK transport spending (estimated)[3]	11,962	15,347	15,827	16,406

[1] Full resource budgeting basis net of depreciation.

[2] Consistent with previous control basis.

[3] Subject to spending decisions of local authorities and devolved Administrations.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which mid-year population estimates were used to determine incremental Scottish DEL expenditure for 2002–03; and which mid-year population estimates will be used for the same determination for Scottish funding for each year from 2003–04 to 2005–06. [72594]

Mr. Boateng: The mid-year estimates were set out in the Statement of Funding Policy on 15 July 2002 and were the Office for National Statistics latest mid-year estimate published last year. Future funding changes will be based on the latest available ONS estimates as explained in the Statement of Funding Policy.

Taxis and Buses

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new incentives he will introduce to stimulate the use of less environmentally damaging vehicles as (a) taxis and (b) other public service carriers. [73207]

John Healey: In Budget 2002, the Chancellor announced a number of measures to encourage reductions in the environmental impact of transport, which could apply equally to taxis and public service carriers. Any new incentives will be considered as part of the normal Budget process.

United Kingdom Listing Authority

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make available the annual objectives for the United Kingdom Listing Authority. [73471]

Ruth Kelly: The Financial Services Authority, acting in its role as the competent authority for listing, is referred to as the United Kingdom Listing Authority. Every year, the operational objectives of the UKLA are discussed with the Treasury. The annual objectives for 2002–03, which the Treasury has endorsed, will be placed in the Library, and also put on the Treasury website.

Royal Gifts

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanism is in place to distinguish between gifts received by (a) the Queen and (b) other members of the royal family in (i) their official roles and (ii) their private capacities; what rules govern the receipt of gifts donated to members of the royal family in their official capacities; and whether such gifts are exempt from taxation. [65160]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 2 July 2002]: Gifts are categorised as official if given during an official engagement or in connection with the official role or duties of a member of the royal family.

Gifts received in an official capacity are not taxed because they do not belong to the individual members of the royal family. Gifts received in a private capacity are treated by members of the royal family in the same way as gifts received by anyone else. The normal inheritance tax and lifetime transfer rules would apply to such gifts subject to the arrangements for Her Majesty and the Prince of Wales set out in the Memorandum of Understanding in the Royal Trustees report (HC464) published on 11 February 1993.

Records are kept of official gifts received by the Queen and where they are stored. Other members of the royal family follow similar practice. Gifts received by any member of the royal family in a private capacity are not listed in official records.

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what public funds were expended in 2001 on gifts given by (a) the Queen and (b) other members of the royal family in their official roles. [65161]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 2 July 2002]: The cost of official gifts given by Her Majesty the Queen and other members of the royal family in 2001 amounted to £36,783 and £11,071, respectively.

Royal Finances

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether paragraph 31 of the 1993 Memorandum of Understanding on the subject of royal finances has been invoked since its inception. [69414]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 17 July 2002]: No.

Throat Cancer

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the survival rate was for throat cancer in the UK in the last 12 months. [71097]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Tim Loughton, dated 24 July 2002:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question on the survival rate for throat cancer in the UK in the last 12 months. I am replying in his absence. (71097)

Cancer of the larynx is commonly referred to as "throat cancer". Information on laryngeal cancer survival for the UK as a whole is not available. Survival rates for the constituent countries of the UK are not comparable.

Cancers of the throat and related areas are formally classified to codes C13 and C14 (malignant neoplasm of hypopharynx, and malignant neoplasm of other and ill-defined sites in the lip, oral cavity and pharynx) according to the International Classification of Disease tenth revision (ICD10). There were 311 newly diagnosed cases of cancers in these locations in England in 1998, the most recent year for which information is available. No information on survival is available.

Information on survival from cancer of the larynx for patients diagnosed in England and Wales is summarised in chapter 21 of the book Cancer Survival Trends[1]. This publication present cancer survival trends in patients diagnosed between 1971 and 1990 and followed up for at least five years to the end of 1995.

For men, the most recent information available relates to diagnosis in 1991–93 and follow-up up to the end of 1998 (Health Statistics Quarterly 6[2]). The crude['] survival rate was 51% and relative['] survival 64%, based on 4,501 men diagnosed. Women are not included in the analysis, as they represent less than 20% of all the cases of cancer of the larynx.

The figures for patients diagnosed in 1986–90 and followed up to the end of 1995, are given in the table below.

One-and five-year survival from cancer of the larynx[*] for patients diagnosed in 1986–90, England and Wales

		One-year (%)		Five year (%)
	Number of patients	Crude[']	Relative[']	Crude[']	Relative[']
Men	7,195	80	84	51	64
Women	1,592	76	79	49	58

Studies in Medical and Population Subjects No. 61. London: The Stationery Office, 1999.

[*] Cancer of the larynx has been defined to the International Classification of Disease eight and ninth revision (ICD8 and ICD9) code 161 for the period 1975–1994, and to the code C32 according to the International Classification of Disease tenth revision (ICD10) from 1995 onwards.

['] Crude survival is the proportion of a cohort of subjects alive at the end of a specified time interval since diagnosis (irrespective of the cause of death). Relative survival is the ratio of the observed survival in the group being studied and the survival that would have been expected had they been subject only to the mortality rates of the general population.

Drug Seizures

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many drug seizures from foreign vessels have been made in Scottish waters since 1995; [70635]

(2) what the weight of drug seizures from foreign vessels caught in Scottish waters has been in each year since 1995, broken down by type of drug. [70636]

John Healey [holding answer 18 July 2002]: Since 1995, HM Customs and Excise have made 58 seizures from UK and foreign flagged vessels in international and UK waters. Of these, three were made from foreign vessels in Scottish waters. Two of the three seizures were made in 1998, one from a German and one from an Irish vessel. The third seizure was made in 2000, from a Maltese vessel. A total of 80 kilograms of amphetamine, 120 tonnes of cannabis, 14 and a half tonnes of cocaine, and 25 kilograms of heroin were seized as a result of these 58 cases. The three seizures in Scottish waters resulted in the recovery of 17 tonnes of cannabis.

Family Resources Survey

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 20 June 2002, Official Report, column 462W, on tax credits, when the Family Resources Survey 2000–01 was received by the Treasury; when full analysis of the survey began; and when he expects the analysis to be concluded. [65385]

Dawn Primarolo: The final data set was received in May 2002.

Government Art Collection

Mr. Swire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when an inventory was last prepared of the Government's holdings of art and antiques [68461]

Mr. Boateng: The National Asset Register, published for the first time in 1997 and updated, with full valuations, in 2001, summarised asset holdings across Departments. Where appropriate, Departments summarise heritage assets separately.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) disposals from and (b) acquisitions to the Government's art and antiques collection there have been since 1997. [R] [68463]

Mr. Boateng: The National Asset Register summarised departmental asset acquisitions and disposals between 1997 and 2001. Similar information is provided annually in Departments' accounts. Where relevant, heritage assets are categorised separately.

The aggregate information requested is not held centrally. Details of individual asset acquisitions and disposals are available from individual Departments.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Government have to sell its holdings of art and antiques; and what discussions his Department is having on the subject. [R] [68464]

Mr. Boateng: Specific asset sales are a matter for individual Departments. Departments' asset acquisition and disposal strategies will be set out in full in new departmental investment strategies, to be published in the autumn.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value is of the Government's holdings of art and antiques. [R] [68462]

Mr. Boateng: The 11,500 items that comprise the Government Art Collection are not valued, in accordance with accounting policy on heritage assets. Details of departmental asset holdings—including art and antiques assets—and their values are available in summary in Departments' accounts and are also published in the National Asset Register.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the overseas trips on departmental business that have been undertaken in each of the last five years by officials in his Department; and what the (a) cost, (b) purpose and (c) result was in each case. [68728]

Ruth Kelly: All overseas travel by Treasury officials is undertaken in accordance with the principles set out in Chapter 8 of the Civil Service Management Code, and the Department's own rules and guidance.

Consultation Documents

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which consultation documents published by the Treasury in 2001 were not made available as paper copies. [69852]

Ruth Kelly: Paper copies of all Treasury consultation documents are available from the Treasury's public inquiries unit.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how long the Treasury allowed for consultation on each of the consultation documents it published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form. [70094]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Twickenham on 10 June 2002, Official Report, column 865W. The same time is allowed for consultations regardless of the format in which the document is published.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints the Treasury has received about its 2001 consultations by (a) electronic and (b) printed means. [69851]

Ruth Kelly: Records of complaints about consultations are not held centrally by the Treasury.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what format the Treasury has published the results of its 2001 written consultations. [69849]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury consults regularly on a wide range of policy areas. Results have so far been formally published for a number of 2001 consultation exercises including responses to the Review of the Supply of the Supply of Scientists and Engineers (the Sir Gareth Robert's Review) and Securing our Future Health (the Wanless Review).

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether consultation documents published by the Treasury in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultations. [70091]

Ruth Kelly: Recent Treasury consultation documents have not carried the criteria. The relevant guidance will be re-issued.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many consultation documents published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form the Treasury has monitored and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [69850]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury has not yet formally monitored and evaluated consultation documents published in 2001.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Treasury has appointed a designated consultation co-ordinator in accordance with the Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultations. [69853]

Ruth Kelly: Yes, the Treasury has appointed a designated consultation co-ordinator.

Public Consultations

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the public consultations undertaken by his Department since 1997, indicating for each consultation (a) if copies were available online, (b) if copies were available in print, (c) the date the time period given for responses opened and (d) the date the time period given for responses closed. [69793]

Ruth Kelly: The Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations applies to all formal national public consultation documents issued by Departments from 1 January 2001 and the information requested is not available before that date. For consultations issued from January 2001, the information is available on the Consultations section of the Treasury's website, www.htm-treasury.gov.uk, which includes both launch dates and closure dates. Paper copies of Treasury publications are available on request.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what public consultations have been commenced by his Department since 1 April; and what the (a) closing date and (b) website address of each were. [72066]

Ruth Kelly: A list of consultations commenced since 1 April, with closing dates, is available on the Treasury's website at http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/Consultations_and_Legislation/.

Accounts

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the rules governing the publishing of (a) the Queen's accounts, (b) 10 Downing Street's accounts, (c) Chequers' accounts and (d) accounts relating to grace and favour apartments. [69012]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The accounts for The Queen's Civil List, and for the grants in aid for royal travel by air and rail, maintenance of the occupied royal palaces in England, royal communications and information, and for the maintenance of Marlborough House are published annually by the royal household on a purely voluntary basis.

Expenditure on No. 10 Downing Street is included in the Cabinet Office annual accounts and is not reported separately. Resource accounts for the Cabinet Office are laid annually before the House of Commons under sections 6 and 7 of the Government Resources and Accounts Act 2000. They are then published.

Chequers is a private trust and not a Government building. As a private trust the accounts are confidential.

Trading Partners

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) the coefficient of the exchange rates variation with sterling and (b) the value in sterling of reciprocal trade with the UK was for each of the United Kingdom's 20 principal trading partners from 1997 until 31 December 2001. [71813]

Ruth Kelly: The coefficient of variation of a data series can be calculated by dividing the standard deviation by the mean.

A detailed geographical breakdown of UK trade is published by the Office For National Statistics in section 9 of the annual Balance of Payments publication (The Pink Book). The ONS also publishes a list of the UK's top 50 trading partners for goods exports and imports in the Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics. Both publications are available on the ONS website (http://www.statistics.gov.uk/).

Employee Share Schemes

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the potential for employers to offer fractional shares within employee share schemes; and if he will make a statement. [71697]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor of the Exchequer has not received any representations on the potential for employers to offer fractional shares within employee share schemes.

Payroll Software

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much is set aside for Government Departments to replace their existing payroll provision with new software which has the Inland Revenue payroll standard; and if he will make a statement; [71709]

(2) which Government Departments have filed their P14 and P35 IR documents electronically; when those Departments that have not filed electronically will do so; and if he will make a statement; [71706]

(3) which elements of the payroll standard the Government's payroll provisions do not meet; and if he will make a statement; [71708]

(4) how much is to be set aside to enhance Government Departments' existing software to comply with the Inland Revenue payroll standard and undertake the testing; and if he will make a statement; [71710]

(5) which Government Departments pay their employees through software that has the Inland Revenue payroll standard; and if he will make a statement. [71707]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available or could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Quality standards for mandatory electronic filing of employers' end of year tax returns have not yet been settled.

Tax Return Errors

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) financial and (b) promotional incentives are offered to staff at the Inland Revenue for investigating errors in tax returns. [71870]

Dawn Primarolo: No financial or promotional incentives are offered to Inland Revenue staff specifically for investigating errors in tax returns. However, annual pay awards take account of overall individual performance.

National Rail

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether debt incurred by National Rail will be included in the net cash requirement. [72098]

Mr. Boateng: The Office for National Statistics has decided that Network Rail will be classified as a private sector company in national accounts. Therefore, its borrowing will not be included in the public sector net cash requirement.

Enterprise Investment Scheme

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on take-up of the Enterprise Investment Scheme. [71660]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on investment in EIS companies is published on the Inland Revenue website. The latest figures for take-up of EIS for the last three years are:

	£ million
1998–99	278.1
1999–2000	469.0
2000–01	661.6

The figures for 2001–02 will be available in September. The amounts for the earlier years will also be updated then as there is a considerable time lag between the year to which the claim relates and the receipt of the claim.

Inland Revenue

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many outstanding claims are pending in respect of the cases at issue in Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v. Perks and other appeals. [72566]

Dawn Primarolo: 720 claims were still receiving consideration as at 19 July 2002.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he estimates to be the total potential payout due from the Inland Revenue to claimants stemming from the cases at issue in Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v. Perks and other appeals. [72568]

Dawn Primarolo: No estimate of the total to be repaid has been made.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what redress can be sought by claimants who have not been paid their back-tax, pursuant to the Court of Appeal's decision Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v. Perks and other appeals. [72571]

Dawn Primarolo: If a taxpayer wants to find out why a decision on their entitlement to a tax repayment has not yet been made they should follow up their claim with the Inland Revenue involved. If they are concerned about the way in which their claim is being handled they should contact the officer in charge.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reason payments have ceased following the Court of Appeal's decision Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v. Perks and other appeals; and if he will make a statement. [72570]

Dawn Primarolo: They have not ceased. Repayment claims continue to be considered.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for which years claimants may have valid claims for refunds from the Inland Revenue after the Court of Appeal's decision, Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v. Perks and other appeals. [72569]

Dawn Primarolo: Taxpayers who were employed on a jack up rig before 17 March 1998 may be entitled to claim the foreign earnings deduction for tax years up to and including the year ended 5 April 1998 (1997–98). Taxpayers have until 31 October 2002 to request a return for 1996–97 and until 31 October 2003 to request one for 1997–98. For the year 1995–96 and earlier years claims can only be made within six years of the end of the tax year in which an assessment was made.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the (a) lowest, (b) highest and (c) average payout to claimants stemming from the cases at issue in Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v. Perks and other appeals. [72567]

Dawn Primarolo: The lowest repayment to date is £11. The highest is £70,590 and the average is £5,333.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many claims made by offshore workers have been paid as a result of the court decisions in Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v. Perks and other appeals. [72565]

Dawn Primarolo: 851 repayments of tax have been made up to 19 July 2002.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the Court of Appeal's decision Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v. Perks and other appeals, for what reason taxpayers who overpaid due to mistaken classifications between offshore jack-up rigs and ships, have not been repaid in full. [72572]

Dawn Primarolo: All taxpayers who establish a valid claim to the foreign earnings deduction will have the tax they overpaid as a result refunded. Work is still continuing in some cases to determine whether the various conditions for entitlement to FED are satisfied.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the status is of claims made by offshore workers regarding payment to them by the Inland Revenue stemming from the court decisions in Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v. Perks and other appeals; and if he will make a statement. [72564]

Dawn Primarolo: A majority of these claims have now been dealt with and either repayments made, or the claims turned down because entitlement to the foreign earnings deduction has not been established. Decisions will be made on the cases that remain under consideration in due course.

Development Assistance

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 15 July 2002, Official Report, column 73W, on development assistance, what strategy he has for raising UK official development assistance to the UN target of 0.7 per cent. of GNP from 2005–06. [72544]

John Healey: Since this Government came to power our aid has doubled and our aid ratio has increased from 0.26 per cent. in 1997, to 0.32 per cent. in 2001. The Government have pledged our aid ratio will rise to 0.40 per cent. in 2005–06, its highest level since 1981. This will take the UK above the commitment agreement at the UN Financing for Development conference held at Monterrey in March, to bring the EU average oda/GNI ratio to 0.39 per cent. by 2005–06. This is also more than double the current G7 country oda/GNI average of 0.18 per cent. and above the current OECD average of 0.22 per cent.

Any timetable beyond 2005–06 is a matter for future Parliaments.

Parliamentary Answers

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether it is his policy to ensure that documents referred to in parliamentary answers are available via his Department's website. [72277]

Ruth Kelly: When answering parliamentary questions, Treasury Ministers refer to a wide range of documents published by the Treasury, the other Chancellor's Departments and by other organisations, such as National Statistics.

Where a document is specifically referred to in a parliamentary answer as being on the Treasury website, it will be found there, as well as in the House of Commons Library. Other documents referred to in a parliamentary answer will be available in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for how long he retains documents referred to in parliamentary answers on his Department's website. [72287]

Ruth Kelly: Website documents which have been referred to in answers to parliamentary questions, will be on the Treasury's website for at least the next year and will be available on request thereafter.

Pharmaceutical Companies

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 17 July 2002, Official Report, column 336W, on pharmaceutical companies, what steps he is taking to ensure such tax incentives are not exploited by UK-based pharmaceutical companies, for the clearance of expired or nearly expired medicines to developing countries. [72432]

Dawn Primarolo: Donors will be encouraged to comply with the World Health Organisation's Guidelines for Drug Donations. Reference will be made to them in the guidance that the Inland Revenue issues to its inspectors which is published on the Inland Revenue website and is widely used by taxpayers and businesses in determining their tax liability.

Where a company makes a gift from its trading stock it would normally be required to bring the market value of the gift into its tax computation in order to reflect the sales proceeds foregone. The relief in Clause 55 of the Finance Bill 2002 works by removing this charge, subject to certain conditions. If stock is unsaleable because it is time expired or nearly so, there would be little or no tax charge to add back—therefore the tax relief would be of little or no value to the donor company.

Incomes

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people's annual gross income increased by more than £2,500 in each of the last two financial years for which such figures are available. [72416]

Dawn Primarolo: I regret that this information is not available.

Scotland Office Budget

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the budget of the Scotland Office is determined. [72553]

Mr. Boateng: Provision for the costs of the Scotland Office is found from within the total resources voted for Scotland by the United Kingdom Parliament, as allowed for in the Statement of Funding Policy.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the comparability factors for Scottish expenditure via Barnett were determined. [72592]

Mr. Boateng: The comparability factors for Scottish expenditure via the Barnett formula were published in the Statement of Funding Policy on 15 July, following consultation with the devolved Administrations. They reflect the extent to which UK departmental expenditure is devolved.

Spending Review Targets

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Government will ask the National Audit office to determine whether the spending review targets have been met. [72448]

Mr. Boateng: Departments are responsible for delivering and reporting progress against their public service agreement targets. The Government have invited the Comptroller and Auditor General to take responsibility for the validation of systems used in reporting on PSA targets where measurement of performance depends on data.

Culture, Media and Sport (Scotland)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reason the comparability factor for Culture, Media and Sport in Scotland has decreased. [72593]

Mr. Boateng: The comparability factor for Culture, Media and Sport in Scotland has decreased because a higher proportion of the DCMS budget is not devolved.

Scottish Fiscal Autonomy

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the Scottish Executive on the issue of Scottish fiscal autonomy. [72554]

Mr. Boateng: No specific representations have been received on this topic, although the Executive makes representations to Government on a wide range of issues.

Temporary Staff

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many employees under contract from temping agencies worked in his Department; and how much was spent on temporary staff (a) as a total and (b) as a percentage of the total staffing budget in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [72646]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Lady to the answer I gave her on 23 May 2002, Official Report, columns 574–75W.

Ministerial Meetings

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people attended the G7 Finance Ministers meeting in Halifax in June from (a) his Department and (b) other UK Government Departments; and what the total cost of the visit was; [66224]

(2) how many people attended the World Economic Forum in New York in February from (a) his Department and (b) other UK Government Departments; and what the total cost of the visit was. [66214]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Lady to the answer I am giving today to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow).

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when and where Ministers in his Department have held meetings with Ministers and officials of the Irish Government since 1 June 2000; which Ministers were involved in each meeting; which Irish Government Departments were involved in each meeting; and which Ministers and officials from the Irish Government attended each meeting. [72700]

Ruth Kelly: No formal meetings have been held between Treasury Ministers and their Irish counterparts since 1 June 2000. However, Treasury Ministers meet regularly with their Irish counterparts, for example in the margins at ECOFIN council meetings.

Growth Rates

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much growth would be required in the United Kingdom over the next two quarters of 2002 in order to meet the GDP growth targets set out in the 2002 Comprehensive Spending Review. [72589]

Mr. Boateng: The economic assumptions underpinning the public finance projections in Budget 2002 are set out in table C3 of the April 2002 Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average GDP growth rate for the United Kingdom has been in each year since 1997–98. [72590]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Alex Salmond, dated 24 July 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question on GDP annual growth rates. (72590)

The information requested is given in the table below.

GDP annual growth rates in percentages covering the period from 1997–2001

Year	Percentage
1997	3.4%
1998	2.9%
1999	2.4%
2000	3.1%
2001	1.9%

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on (a) the real growth rates of UK (i) total and (ii) average managed expenditure outlined in the 2002 Comprehensive Spending Review and (b) real growth rates in UK total managed expenditure over the last five years. [72555]

Mr. Boateng: Total managed expenditure (TME) is planned to rise in real terms by 4.3 per cent. a year on average between 2002–03 and 2005–06, while annually managed expenditure will rise at 3.0 per cent. a year in real terms over the same period, as detailed in the 2002 Spending Review White Paper, "Opportunity for all: investing in an enterprising, fairer Britain" (Cm 5570, July 2002). Between 1997–98 and 2001–02, TME rose in real terms by an average of 1.6 per cent. a year.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on (a) the real growth rates of UK departmental expenditure levels as outlined in the 2002 Comprehensive Spending Review and (b) real growth rates in UK departmental expenditure levels over the last five years. [72556]

Mr. Boateng: Total spending within departmental expenditure limits, on a full resource budgeting basis, is growing at 5.2 per cent. a year in real terms on average between 2002–03 and 2005–06, as detailed in the 2002 Spending Review White Paper, "Opportunity for all: investing in an enterprising, fairer Britain" (Cm 5570, July 2002). On a near-cash basis, the growth rate is 5.4 per cent. Between 1997–98 and 2001–02, real growth in total spending within departmental expenditure limits was on average 3.0 per cent., in near-cash terms.

Tax Credits

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in cases where two parents share the care of a child, which parent will be eligible for the child tax credit. [72427]

Mr. Boateng: Where two people share the care of a child the decision as to who is eligible to claim or who will receive payment depends on who has the main responsibility or is the "main carer" for that child or those children. This will depend on the particular circumstance of each case.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) pursuant to his answer of 24 April 2002, Official Report, column 336W, on tax credits, for what reason the Family Resources Survey for 2000–01 cannot be used to calculate a figure for the take-up of the working families tax credit; [64206]

(2) what assessment the Treasury has made of the research conducted by the Policy Studies Institute on behalf of the Department of Work and Pensions and the Inland Revenue on the take-up rate of the working families tax credit. [64124]

Dawn Primarolo: I have nothing to add to my previous answer.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the draft application form for the child tax credit and the working tax credit, with the relevant guidance notes. [72420]

Mr. Boateng: As the Paymaster General made clear in the debate in Standing Committee on the Child Tax Credit Regulations on 16 July, in August we shall start to send out application packs to potential claimants. She confirmed then that we would keep hon. Members informed, and provide them with the guidance to ensure they can property advise their constituents at that time.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which non-Government organisations will help distribute information about the new tax credits. [72428]

Ruth Kelly: The new tax credits, child tax credit and working tax credit, are to be introduced in April next year. In the run-up to their introduction, the Inland Revenue is working with a large number of organisations from across the voluntary sector to make sure they have the information they need.

Government (Appraisal and Evaluation)

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the consultation paper on a revised version of appraisal and evaluation in central Government before 24 July; and if he will make a statement. [71303]

Mr. Boateng: The Treasury is today publishing for consultation a revised version of the new Green Book: Appraisal and Evaluation in Central Government. Copies are available in the Vote Office and in the Library of the House.

Departmental Report

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost was of publishing his Department's annual report for each of the past five years. [70486]

Mr. Boateng: Over the past five years the costs of publishing the Treasury's annual report that were born directly by the Department are set out in the table. Other costs of printing and publication are met directly by the publisher, The Stationery Office Limited (TSO), and do not fall to Government.

	£ Direct cost
2002[1]	4,100
2001	11,760
2000	4,450
1999[2]	—
1998[2]	—

[1] Costs are approximate and, pending some outstanding issues, will be finalised shortly.

[2] Prior to 2000, the report was designed in-house and thus no additional costs were incurred.

Statistical Information

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many questionnaires or forms seeking statistical information were sent to businesses by (a) the Office for National Statistics, (b) the Inland Revenue and (c) HM Customs and Excise in the latest year for which figures are available; and how many in each case were mandatory. [70838]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. J. Whittingdale, dated 24 July 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question on how many questionnaires or forms seeking statistical information were sent to businesses by (a) the Office for National Statistics, (b) the Inland Revenue and (c) HM Customs and Excise in the latest year for which figures are available; and how many in each case were mandatory. (70838)

The information requested is given in the table below.

Statistical surveys of business and local authorities, carried out by the Office for National Statistics, HM Customs and Excise and Inland Revenue, 2000[1]

		Number of surveys
Department	Forms[2]	Total	Voluntary	Statutory
ONS	1,476,229	74	11	63
HM Customs and Excise	156,000	2	1	1
Inland Revenue	100,000	197	197	0

Taxation

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answers of 8 July 2002, Official Report, column 769W, and 26 June, Official Report, column 945W, on taxation, if he will restate his answers excluding benefits and assumed changes in original incomes; and if he will make a statement. [70755]

Mr. Boateng: The table gives the information requested. The estimates are based on a pooled Family Expenditure Survey dataset for the three years from 1997–98 to 1999–2000 with incomes and expenditure projected forward to 2001–02. The estimates themselves only include the impact of measures introduced and do not include any assumed changes to original incomes.

Marks and Spencer

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the implications for his consultation document on VAT on Face Value Vouchers of the 11 July judgment of the European Court of Justice in Case C-62/00, Marks and Spencer v Commissioners of HM Customs and Excise; [71696]

(2) what estimate he has made of the total cost to the Exchequer of the 11 July judgment of the European Court of Justice in Case C-62/00, Marks and Spencer v Commissioners of HM Customs and Excise, relating to HM Customs' three year rule on retrospective VAT claims across the economy; [71695]

(3) with reference to the 11 July judgment of the European Court of Justice in Case C-62/00, Marks and Spencer v Commissioners of HM Customs and Excise, if he will estimate the total VAT erroneously charged on (a) chocolate coated teacakes and (b) face value vouchers since 1973; and if he will make a statement. [71698]

John Healey: Customs officials are in the process of consulting with legal advisers on the implications of the judgment of the European Court of Justice in Case C-62/00, Marks and Spencer plc v the Commissioners of Customs and Excise.

As the ECJ has endorsed the UK's three year time limit for repayments of overpaid VAT, Customs' view is that the judgment will only affect certain claims which were made, or could have been made, around the time when the cap was introduced in 1996.

Customs will be publishing guidance on the wider implications of the judgment for VAT registered businesses soon.

We are currently unable to provide an accurate estimate of the total revenue effect of this judgment, nor of its effect on claims relating to particular types of product. However, given the limited scope of this judgment, it is not expected to have a significant revenue effect.

This judgment is not thought to have implications for the current consultation document on 'VAT on Face Value Vouchers'.

Salaries

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the percentage increase in spending on salaries in his Department for each year since 1992; and if he will make a statement. [71722]

Ruth Kelly: The percentage change in spending on salaries for the Treasury, including what is now the Office of Government Commerce, can be seen in the table. Data for years before 1996–97 could only be collated at disproportionate expense. Growth rates may be affected by changes of functions.

	Pay bill £ million	Percentage change on previous year

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans there are to monitor annual progress against long term targets set out in public service agreements. [71614]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Progress against all targets in public service agreements (PSAs) is set out in departmental reports and autumn performance reports. The Government will provide regular web-based reports on all the new PSA targets from next year.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what sanctions he will use against Departments which fail to deliver their public service agreements. [71615]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Departments are accountable to the public and Parliament for their performance against their public service agreement targets (PSAs). Performance is also one of a number of factors taken into account during a spending review, where performance can indicate where resources can best be deployed and the need for action and reforms to ensure delivery.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why there is no public service agreement target for Customs and Excise in respect of the illicit market share for oils in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [71607]

John Healey [holding answer 19 July 2002]: As explained in "Measuring Indirect Tax Fraud", published in November 2001, the non-UK duty paid share of the road fuel sector in Northern Ireland is more complex than in the rest of the UK. Because of the long land border with the Republic of Ireland, Customs are unable to distinguish clearly between legitimate cross-border shopping and fraud there in the same way they are able to on the UK mainland.

As a consequence, while the Government have judged it right to set a PSA target for reducing the size of the illicit market for England, Scotland and Wales, it is not yet possible to set a comparable target for Northern Ireland.

The Government are, however, determined to tackle road fuel fraud in Northern Ireland and Customs have, over the last two years, enhanced its enforcement activity by increasing the number of officers tackling oils fraud in Northern Ireland from 25 officers to over 160. This has resulted in the first increase in the volume of UK duty paid fuel delivered into Northern Ireland for over four years.

The Government still consider the level of fraud to be unacceptable and Customs is pursuing, with other agencies and in addition to steps taken on mainland oils fraud, ways in which the impact on oils fraud in Northern Ireland can be increased.

Public Works Loan Board

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money is on loan from the Public Works Loan Board, broken down by country or region of the United Kingdom; and how much money is available for lending from the PWLB. [72588]

Ruth Kelly: The 127th Annual Report of the Public Works Loan Board, laid before Parliament on 8 July 2002, notes that at 31 March 2002 the following principal amounts were on loan:

	£ million
England	34,359.0
Scotland	9,254.4
Wales	3,267.6
Total	46,881.0

The Public Works Loan Board does not lend to Northern Ireland authorities.

The maximum amount of loans outstanding to the Public Works Loan Board at any one time should not exceed £55,000 million.

Inheritance Tax

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have applied for conditional exemption from inheritance tax in the last 12 months; and how this tax relief is being amended to take into account the implementation of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 about access to the countryside. [72185]

Ruth Kelly: In the last 12 months the Inland Revenue have received eight inheritance tax exemption claims involving land. Of these, only one covers land in England not associated with a building where access may in due course be available by virtue of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000; the remainder are outside the territorial scope of the Act, or relate to the land surrounding a historic building, or both. Given this limited overlap, and the other public benefits secured by inheritance tax exemption, we are not persuaded that early change to the inheritance tax rules is called for: but we will keep the matter under review.

National Insurance Numbers

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the number of employees working in the UK without national insurance numbers. [72124]

Ruth Kelly: No estimate has been made of the number of employees working in the UK without national insurance numbers.

Local Government Staff

Ms Drown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much he estimates would be saved on the working families tax credit and other benefits if local government staff were paid a rate of £5 an hour. [72220]

Ruth Kelly: No reliable estimate can be made except at disproportionate cost.

Identity Cards

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how fees for an (a) voluntary and (b) compulsory proposed entitlement identity card will be treated in the national accounts. [72115]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Mr. Len Cook to Mr. Nick Gibb, dated 24 July 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question on treatment of identity cards in the National Accounts. (72115)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) will treat any fees relating to identity cards in the National Accounts according to established international guidelines. ONS have not been asked to offer advice on this subject and will not do so until requested and proposals are clearly specified.

Strikes

Hywel Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many strikes due to industrial dispute have occurred in the UK in the past 10 years; and what the (a) location and (b) duration was of those that went beyond six weeks. [71789]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 22 July 2002]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Hywel Williams, dated 24 July 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question about the number and location of strikes due to industrial dispute in the UK over the last 10 years. (71789)

Figures for 1992–2001 are given below. They cover the number of days that strike action took place; not the number of days that the parties to the dispute were actually in disagreement. Data on the location of stoppages are not available.

Stoppages due to labour disputes in the UK in the last ten years

Year	Total number of stoppages	Of which, over 30 days duration
1992	325	28
1993	211	13
1994	205	4
1995	235	9
1996	244	15
1997	216	7
1998	166	8
1999	205	5
2000	212	5
2001	194	7

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) dates, (b) location and (c) sources were of attributable (i) articles, interviews or contributions for the media, books or other journals and (ii) speeches or presentations made in the public domain, by departmental special advisers since March 2001; who in his Department authorised the activity; and on what date this activity was recorded with the departmental Head of Information. [72244]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer the Prime Minister is giving him today.

Public Appointments

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action his Department has taken in response to the comments in the Seventh report by the Commissioner for Public Appointments concerning (a) an independent element in interviews undertaken by HM Treasury and (b) performance assessment systems; and if he will make a statement. [72676]

Ruth Kelly: (a) HM Treasury is already fully compliant with the Code of Practice issued by the Commissioner for Public Appointments that requires an independent member to form part of any appointments panel. In the past, we have used fully independent members who understand Treasury business, and who are familiar with the nature of the relationship between the Treasury and its public and other bodies. We will ensure—for the future—that such independent members receive formal training from the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments.

(b) We will consider whether it is appropriate to introduce more formal performance assessment processes for any bodies that currently have only informal systems in place.

Pregnancy Statistics

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the incidence per 1,000 population of (a) under-16 pregnancies, (b) 16 to 18-years-old pregnancies, (c) under-16 having abortions and (d) 16 to 18-years-old having abortions in (i) St. Helens, (ii) Merseyside, (iii) the North West and (iv) England in each year since 1996. [71278]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 23 July 2002]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Shaun Woodward Esq MP, dated 24 July 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question on incidences per 1,000 population of (a) under 16 pregnancies, (b) 16 to 18-years-old pregnancies, (c) under 16 having abortions and (d) 16 to 18-years-old having abortions in (i) St. Helens (ii) Merseyside (iii) the North West and (iv) England in (A) 1996, (B) 1997, (C) 1998, (D) 1999, (E) 2000 and (F) 2001. (71278)

The information requested is given in the table.

Advertising

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent on advertising in the last five fiscal years by (a) National Savings and (b) National Statistics. [72675]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 7 May 2002, Official Report, column 36W.

Departmental Appointments

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions on which appointments were made by Treasury Ministers in financial year 2001–02 an additional candidate was added to the shortlist at the request of the Minister. [72654]

John Healey: On one occasion in 2001–02 an additional candidate was put forward to a selection panel, at the request of a Minister, to improve the sectoral and regional balance of the available candidates. The selection panel considered that he merited a place on the shortlist.

Cervical Cancer

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of deaths from cervical cancer occurred in women (a) over the age of 60, (b) between 30 and 59 and (c) under 30 years for (i) 2001 and (ii) 2002; and if he will make a statement. [72502]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 23 July 2002]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Dr. Vincent Cable, dated 24 July 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question, on what proportion of deaths from cervical cancer occurred in women (a) over the age of 60, (b) between 30 and 59 and (c) under 30 years for (i) 2001 and (ii) 2002. (72502)

The latest available data are for deaths occurring in 2000. For that year, figures are shown in the table below.

Deaths from cervical cancer,[1] England and Wales, 2002[2]

Age	No	Percent
Under 30	14	1.3
30–59	443	40.0
60 and over	649	58.7
All ages	1,106	100.0

[1] Cancer of the cervix has been defined to the International Classification of Disease, 9th Revision , code ICD9 180.

[2] Data are for occurrences of death per calendar year.

Euro Preparations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the staff costs are for NHS staff from trusts in the South East Region NHS trusts involved in the possible UK changeover to the euro preparations; [72195]

(2) if he will provide a breakdown of the non staff costs for health trusts in Sussex involved in possible UK changeover to the euro preparations. [72196]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 23 July 2002]: Details of changeover planning work in the national health service were set out in the Sixth Report on Euro Preparations, published on 18 July. Copies of the report are available in the Library of the House.

Euro

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what rate of entry he regards as suitable to join the euro. [72900]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given by the then Financial Secretary, Mr. Boateng on 3 July 2001, Official Report, column 125W.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has obtained EU permission to enter the euro without first rejoining the ERM, subject to a referendum. [72898]

Ruth Kelly: The Government has no intention of rejoining the ERM.

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of British overseas trade in 2001 took place using the euro. [72923]

Ruth Kelly: Customs and Excise conduct an annual survey of trade invoices used by British business for the import and export of goods between the UK and the rest of the world. The survey indicates the extent to which UK traders use the euro as a means of payment for international trade.

The results for 2001 are not yet available. They will be detailed in the next Press Release, now scheduled for the 30 July 2002.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total cost involved to date in collating, drafting, completing and publishing the National Changeover Plan. [72948]

Ruth Kelly: Details of expenditure on changeover planning were included in the Sixth Report on Euro Preparations, published on 18 July 2002. Copies of the report are in the Library of the House.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the period the UK should hold steady at his preferred rate for joining the euro before holding a referendum. [72899]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the right hon. Member to the comments made by the then Chief Secretary, Andrew Smith on 24 January Official Report, column 992–93.

11 Downing Street (Functions)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many times he has permitted charities to use 11 Downing Street for functions since 1997; and how much money has been raised. [73243]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my written answer of 11 July to the hon. Member for Yeovil, (Mr. Laws), Official Report, column 1107W. The funds raised are a matter for the charities concerned.

EU Economy Report

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the document he sent to the EU giving the six monthly report on the UK's economy. [72897]

Ruth Kelly: The UK submits an Excessive Deficit return (Article 104 of the Treaty) to the European Commission every September and March. Copies can be found in the Library of the House. The returns are based on figures published in the previous Budget or Pre-Budget Report, and on figures included in the "Government deficit and debt under the Maastrict Treaty" First Releases issued by the Office for National Statistics in August and February.

Solicitors

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what accounting procedures exist to log the amount of funds given to solicitors from private practice who are instructed to act for the Treasury. [73242]

Ruth Kelly: Direct transactions between the Treasury and solicitors in private practice are recorded in the Department's accounting system against the appropriate account code, together with details of the relevant supplier and the responsible unit within the Department. Other transactions are similarly treated. To distinguish transactions with solicitors in private practice would require a review of every transaction, which would entail disproportionate cost.

Equities

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the (a) real and (b) nominal annual rate of return on UK equities between May 1997 and 16 July 2002. [72903]

Ruth Kelly: Between May 1997 and 16 July 2002, the nominal annual rate of return for the FTSE All Share was one per cent. equivalent to a total nominal return of 5.6 per cent. over the period. The annual real rate of return over the same period was 1.1 per cent. equivalent to a total real return of minus 5.8 per cent. over the same period.

Financial Services Offences (Buckingham)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which (a) companies and (b) individuals in Buckinghamshire have been found to have committed offences by the FSA; and what action was taken in each case. [73145]

Ruth Kelly: The FSA assumed its powers and responsibilities as single statutory regulator under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 on 1 December 2001. Where appropriate, it has disciplined under the Act those responsible for conducting financial business in breach of the rules and it has publicised the measures taken. These measures do not include any companies or individuals in Buckinghamshire.

Pension Taxation

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Inland Revenue review of pension taxation will be completed; whether the report will be published; and if he will make a statement. [73018]

Ruth Kelly: When the Inland Revenue review of pension taxation was commissioned early last year, it was expected to take a couple of years. Work is proceeding well and, when Ministers have considered the proposals, there will be a public consultation exercise in the autumn.

Pension Schemes (Tax Relief)

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the annual tax relief in each of the last five years received by individuals in (a) final salary, (b) defined contribution, (c) group personal and (d) personal pension schemes; and if he will make a statement. [73540]

Ruth Kelly: A breakdown of tax relief into the categories asked for is not available. However, estimates of the annual cost of tax relief attributable to individual and employer contributions to occupational and personal pension schemes are contained in table T7.9 of Inland Revenue Statistics. The latest version is on the Inland Revenue's website http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/pensions/pt091.htm

Service Attributable Pensions

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what advice his Department has given to the Ministry of Defence about the eligibility of retired disabled officers in receipt of a pension granted on account of medical unfitness attributable to military service to (a) have their pensions exempted from income tax and (b) be awarded a refund of tax wrongly deducted from their pension; and what advice it gave on whether such entitlement should be backdated to the date of discharge. [72853]

Mr. Boateng: The Inland Revenue has provided advice over a number of years to the Ministry of Defence on matters relating to the taxation of pensions granted to disabled officers. The Inland Revenue has advised that the tax legislation exempts from income tax:

> "retired pay of disabled officers granted on account of medical unfitness attributable to or aggravated by naval, military or Air Force service".

Unless a pension was granted because of a disabling condition attributable or aggravated by service, the statutory exemption will not apply.

The Inland Revenue has further advised that where the Veteran's Agency (VA) or one of its predecessors has made an award in respect of a disability which is attributable to service, it is prepared to treat the VA award and any service pension in payment as one combined and tax exempt pension from the date of the VA award.

Where tax has been wrongly deducted from an exempt pension, the Inland Revenue has advised that the tax should be refunded and backdated to the date on which an attributable pension was first granted.

Community Development

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 2 July 2002, Official Report, column 286W, on the community development venture capital fund, if he will list those private sector initiatives in which his Department has invested in the last three years, indicating (a) the amount and (b) the purpose. [71364]

Nigel Griffiths: I have been asked to reply.

The UK High Technology Fund has been developed to encourage institutional investment in predominately early stage high technology venture capital funds, and to increase the finance available for investment in technology based businesses. Government cornerstone investment of £20 million enabled a fund of £126.1 million to be raised.

Regional Venture Capital Funds (RVCFs) are being established to ensure that small businesses in each of the English regions have access to equity based finance in amounts below £500,000, and to demonstrate to institutional investors that robust returns can be made in this sector. £155 million of small scale risk capital is now available from the five funds that have become operational during 2002. £46.75 million of this is Government cornerstone investment.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Paramilitary Symbols

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what actions his Office is taking to address the problem of (a) paramilitary flags, (b) paramilitary murals and (c) kerbstone painting; and if he will make a statement. [67222]

Jane Kennedy: The subject you have raised is now a devolved matter and therefore no longer the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Public Inquiries

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his policy is on using 0870 telephone numbers for inquiries by the public to the Department and its agencies. [66196]

Jane Kennedy: The Northern Ireland Office does not have a central policy on the use of such telephone numbers.

EU Funding

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what assessment he has made of the future job security of those employed in the voluntary and community sector after EU funding ceases in 2006; [70621]

(2) what provision is being made financially to support the voluntary and community sector when EU peace funds cease to be accessible after 2006. [70620]

Dr. John Reid: The subject matters raised have been devolved and are no longer the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Escaped Prisoners

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the commitments he has given on the future treatment of prisoners on the run when they voluntarily return to the United Kingdom. [66085]

Jane Kennedy: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers given to question refs. 63942, 3943 and 63944 from the hon. Member for Grantham and Stamford on 20 June 2002, Official Report, columns 136–37W.

Faith Communities

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list projects involving faith communities which are supported by his Department. [71851]

Jane Kennedy: There are no projects involving faith communities supported by the Northern Ireland Office.

Police Co-operation

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the agreement between the British and Irish Governments on police co-operation will come into operation. [73435]

Jane Kennedy: The agreement between the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Government of Ireland on police co-operation was signed in Belfast on 29 April 2002 and was laid before Parliament on 22 July (Cm 5579). It will come into operation when the necessary parliamentary procedures have been completed in both jurisdictions; this may not be until the autumn. In the meantime, both Governments and the two police services will continue to progress work on the various measures required to give it effect.

Forensic Science

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to publish the accounts of the Forensic Science Northern Ireland for the year 2001–02. [73436]

Dr. John Reid: The accounts have been published today and I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Life Sentence Review Commissioners

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends publishing the annual report of the Life Sentence Review Commissioners. [73446]

Dr. John Reid: The annual report has been published today and I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will reply to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Basingstoke on 4 July on the future of the full-time police reserve in Northern Ireland, ref 68440. [73534]

Jane Kennedy: The question referred to has now been answered.

Full-time Reserve

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many full time reserve police officers there were in Northern Ireland on 1 April in each year since 1990. [68458]

Jane Kennedy: The numbers of full-time reserve police officers in Northern Ireland in each year since 1990 are as follows:

	Number of officers
1990	3,007
1991	2,969
1992	3,072
1993	3,199
1994	3,211
1995	3,181
1996	3,066
1997	2,898
1998	2,963
1999	2,858
2000	2,668
2001	2,459
2002	2,123

Police strengths are calculated at the end of each month. Therefore the figures illustrated in the table reflect the number of full-time reserve officers on 30 April in each year.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the future of the full-time reserve in Northern Ireland. [R] [68460]

Jane Kennedy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Gentleman for Lagan Valley on 27 June 2002, Official Report, column 1040W.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Grant Distribution

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will revise the exemplifications of each of the options set out in "Formula Grant Distribution: A Consultation Paper" to take account of the comprehensive spending review decisions. [72907]

Mr. Leslie: We are not intending to revise the exemplifications set out in the consultation paper, because using the spending review figures would introduce a new source of variation between the figures 2002–03 and those produced by the options we have set out. This variation would obscure the consultation's focus on options for the new system.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what the proposed percentage rates are of the floors and ceilings in relation to the transition to the new local government funding methodology set out in "Formula Grant Distribution: A Consultation Paper"; [72904]

(2) what options he is considering for the length of the transition period for the new formula grant distribution system. [72905]

Mr. Leslie: We will take decisions on the movement between the old and new grant distribution systems, including the duration of the transition and the levels of floors and ceilings, ahead of the 2003–04 provisional local government finance settlement. As in previous years, we will announce those decisions around the end of November as part of the provisional settlement process.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will estimate for each London borough the effects of each of the options set out in Chapter 9 of "Formula Grant Distribution: A Consultation Paper". [72906]

Mr. Leslie: The effects on each London Borough of the options contained in Chapter 9 of "Formula Grant Distribution: A Consultation Paper" are set out on page 112 of that document.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will set out illustrative grant charges for Wokingham DC and West Berkshire DC for the current year on the assumption that each of his possible changes to grant distribution was taking effect this year. [72896]

Mr. Raynsford: The question cannot be answered except at disproportionate cost.

Area-based Initiatives

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list for each area-based initiative for which his Department is responsible the amount originally budgeted for in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02, stating in each year what funds budgeted for were not spent and if they were carried forward. [71464]

Mr. Leslie: The RCU Area-based Initiative (ABI) website lists 11 ABIs that are currently the responsibility of Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. The details requested are as follows:

£ million

Area-based Initiative	2000–01	Carried paforward	2001–02	Carried forward
Coalfields	54	16	52	7
Community Chest	0	0	10	3

[1] ERDF funding carried over into the next FY can be called upon at any time during the programming round (2000–06).

[2] The partnerships wrote their delivery plans after the provision had been made and planned to spend £49 million in 2000–01 and £129 million in 2001–02.

[3] URCs do not receive any central Government funding. Running costs are met by the main partners themselves—the local authority, the Regional Development Agency, English Partnerships (in some cases), the private sector and other key partners.

Note:

All figures rounded to nearest million.

Improvement and Development Agency

Mr. Steen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the annual cost is of the Improvement and Development Agency to public funds; how many staff have been employed there in each of the last four years; and what evaluation has taken place as to its effectiveness. [72745]

Mr. Leslie: The Improvement and Development Agency (IDeA) received £14.2 million of revenue support grant for 2002–03.

Under the Memorandum of Understanding with the ODPM the Local Government Association is required to assess the IDeA's effectiveness at intervals of no more than five years. The first review is due within the next 18 months.

The IDeA from time to time receives additional financial support to implement particular projects. For example, with support from the capital modernisation fund it has undertaken work on the preliminary stages of a platform for a national electronic electoral register. In line with other Government-funded IT projects this has been subjected to a Gateway Review process, designed to review the arrangements for leading and managing the project.

The approved number of permanent full-time staff as at 1 April for each of the last four years were as follows:

	Permanent full-time staff
1999	193.5
2000	185.2
2001	204.0
2002	210.0

Council Housing

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which councils retain control of council housing. [73032]

Mr. McNulty: The 251 local authorities in England with council housing are in the following list. A few of the 103 authorities which have carried out whole stock transfers continue to own a small number of dwellings.

Social Landlords

Ms Buck: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many units were disposed of and what the total value was of disposals by registered social landlords in each year since 1997. [70275]

Mr. McNulty: The Housing Corporation advises that the number of units disposed of by registered social landlords (RSLs) during the past four years were as follows:

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
100 per cent. sales
Total right-to-buy sales	4,532	4,414	7,245	7,127
Total voluntary sales	550	370	359	213
Total outright sales	554	317	1,008	1,134
Total 100 per cent. sales	5,636	5,101	8,612	8,474
Estimated market value per sale	49,308	51,288	56,661	60,373
Estimated total value of 100 per cent. sales (£ million)	277.9	261.6	488.0	511.6

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Partial sales and other disposals
Shared ownership: total sales of initial shares	6,887	6,209	4,392	3,718
Total demolitions	1,612	1,961	3,335	2,640

Notes:

1. Sales and demolitions data are derived from the Housing Corporation's annual Regulatory and Statistical Return (RSR).
2. The estimated market values of 100 per cent. sales are derived from CORE (reported sales).
3. The value of the sale of initial shares sold under Shared Ownership schemes cannot easily be determined.
4. A monetary value cannot be associated with demolitions.
5. Sales under the Home Buy scheme are not reported on separately the RSR—but it is likely that they have been included in the Shared Ownership total.

The market values of sales are "estimated" rather than "actual" because not all sales are reported in CORE. Consequently the average value derived from CORE may not be the actual average value of the total sales as reported in the RSR.

Buildings (Height Restrictions)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what height restrictions there are on buildings in major cities throughout the UK. [72859]

Mr. McNulty: Within the plan-led system of development control, local development plans form the framework within which decisions on proposals for tall buildings are taken. A number of local authorities have, or are developing, policies on tall buildings.

Fire Safety Legislation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans his Department has to introduce new fire safety legislation. [70777]

Mr. Leslie: We intend to publish shortly a consultation document giving details of our proposals to reform fire safety legislation by means of a Regulatory Reform Order under the Regulatory Reform Act 2001. The aim of the reform is to simplify, rationalise and consolidate fire safety law. It would provide for a risk-based approach to general fire safety allowing more efficient, effective enforcement by the fire service and other enforcing authorities. It would reduce the burden on business by removing the confusion caused by overlapping fire safety regimes. We hope to make the Order next year.

Single Housing Inspectorate

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much it will cost to set up and run the Single Housing Inspectorate; and if he will make a statement. [72510]

Mr. McNulty: As my right hon. Friend, the Deputy Prime Minister told the House on 18 July (column 441), he intends to establish a single housing inspectorate, building on the excellent work of the Audit Commission and the Housing Corporation. He said he would announce further details later in the year, in the light of discussion with key stakeholders.

English Partnerships

Mr. Pond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he proposes to announce the outcome of stage 2 of the review of English Partnerships; and if he will make a statement. [73451]

Mr. Leslie: I am today announcing the conclusion of stage two of the Review of English Partnerships.

English Partnerships will be a key player in the delivery of my new "living communities" agenda. As I announced in my Statement to the House on 18 July, I am instructing English Partnerships to use its new role to search out and deliver even more land for housing and sustainable urban development. I also want English Partnerships to help in regenerating those places most badly affected by abandonment and decay.

Stage one of the Review confirmed English Partnerships as having an important role as an agency for best practice regeneration and development of brownfield land. I am keen that it develops that role, and in particular, I am asking the organisation to draw up plans to meet the following objectives:

To bring about speedy development of new schemes that can help meet the objectives set out in my policy statement of 18 July. In particular, I am determined to see a step change in both the quantity and the quality of new development in those areas that are facing acute demand pressures. I am therefore today announcing an initial list of their sites on which I wish EP to concentrate, as shown in the table, and we will be consulting on the way forward for those sites. A further list of sites will be announced in the autumn.

2. To work closely with the Housing Corporation, and with other key agencies including the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs), to ensure effective co-ordination in the delivery of plans for key worker and affordable housing within the wider context of "living communities".

3. To advise on the efficient and effective development of surplus Government land and buildings that may help deliver new communities where most needed.

4. To help with the assembly of sites for regeneration and sustainable development purposes.

5. To produce and maintain a national brownfield strategy, to include best practice guidance in the assembly, remediation and development of land and buildings, to help drive forward the Urban Renaissance.

6. To continue to operate its innovative programmes, including the Coalfields Programme, Millennium Communities, support for Urban Regeneration Companies (URCs), the English Cities Fund, the National Land Use Database (NLUD), Priority Sites Ltd, Land Stabilisation Programme, and Englishsites.com, and to develop new ideas for extending good practice.

7. To operate a regime that enables developers to use approved 'gap' funding for the delivery of housing projects that would otherwise be commercially unviable.

Land and Property Programme

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how the land and property programme budgets were calculated for 2000–01 and 2001–02. [72963]

Mr. McNulty: The allocation of the Land and Property (L&P) budget (from April 1999) between the RDAs and the LDA (from July 2000), took into account both their anticipated capital receipts arising from the L&P programme and the level of European funding they expected for L&P purposes. This was achieved by adding the total of all capital and European receipts to the grant in aid to create a 'gross' L&P budget that was then allocated to the RDAs and LDA.

The European funding was as follows:

£ million

	2000–01	2001–02
European funding
North East	6.800	1.800
North West	12.000	7.800

Transport (Deprived Areas)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much public money has been invested in transport provision for deprived areas in each of the last five years. [69378]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

The following table compares total capital allocations for local transport provision in England with the amounts allocated to those local transport authorities which include within their boundaries one or more of the 88 local authorities in the most deprived areas of England which are eligible for the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund (NRF). London is excluded.

£ million

	Total	NRF area authorities
1998–99	541	256
1999–2000	540	276
2000–01	657	367
2001–02	1,360	698
2002–03	1,580	817

For London, capital allocations for local transport provision for the years 1998–99 to 2000–01 were £82 million, £84 million and £102 million respectively. Of this, £46 million, £47 million and £52 million was allocated to authorities in the most deprived areas which are eligible for the NRF. From 2001–02 onwards, capital allocations for local transport provision in London have been the responsibility of the Mayor and Transport for London.

Indices of Deprivation

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what indices of deprivation he will use to allocate funds within the proposed new formula for the SSA for education. [71743]

Mr. Miliband: I have been asked to reply.

The options illustrated in the consultation paper issued on 8 July use the following indices of deprivation: the proportion of children of parents on income support; the proportion of children of parents in receipt of working families' tax credit; English as an additional language and ethnicity, as recorded in the annual schools' census; and the proportion of live births less than 2.5kg. All indices have been calculated at local authority level.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment has been made of the accuracy of the figures used for deprivation in the DETR report "Indices of Deprivation 2000"; and what use is made of these figures. [73000]

Mr. McNulty: The "Indices of Deprivation 2000" was based on a robust review of methods and data sources in 1999. Where possible, the data underpinning the indices have been published via the Neighbourhood Statistics website hosted at the Office for National Statistics. The indices have been used to inform the allocation of resources that are directed to areas affected by multiple deprivation, including the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund administered by my Department. They are also used in the formulation of the Government policy towards deprived areas, such as the National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal.

Children Act

Ms Buck: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many families with children have been assisted with accommodation through the provisions of the Children Act 1989 in each of the last 10 years. [67684]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not collected centrally.

Housing Statistics

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a document specifying for each of the last three years (a) the number of people presenting as homeless, (b) the number of council homes sold under the right to buy, (c) the number of new affordable homes completed, (d) the capital value of public investment in affordable housing and (e) the number of new lets of affordable homes, and at a specified date in each of the last three years (i) the number of people on the housing waiting list and (ii) the stock of affordable homes in each (A) English region and (B) housing authority in England. [72014]

Mr. McNulty: Data on the requested items can be found in various ODPM publications, available in the House of Commons Library and electronically via the ODPM website. The publications provide the data for each local authority in England and regional totals include estimates for any incomplete or missing data.

(a) ODPM publication "Statutory Homelessness: England", quarterly statistical release and associated "Supplementary Tables";

(b) ODPM publication "Progress on Council Houses Sales" quarterly report;

(c), (d) and (e) ODPM "Housing Investment Programme: Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix 2001" return and "Operational Information" return for earlier years; Housing Corporation "Annual Review" report.

Information about stock completions or acquisitions of additional affordable housing by local authorities (LA), Registered Social Landlords (RSL) and the private sector for rental, outright or shared equity for each year since 1997–98 were collected for the first time on the 2001 return. Summary data on recent years' LA and RSL lettings is also presented.

Local authority capital investment in housing, including HRA dwelling stock and support to RSLs, since 1997–98 is summarised on the 2001 return. Equivalent information about RSLs' expenditure is included in each of the Housing Corporation's "Annual Review" reports.

LA and RSL dwelling stock as at 1 April is reported on each year's HIP return. Total private sector dwelling stock is also reported, although there is no centrally collected information on those classified as affordable.

Property Statistics

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of properties are in (a) Band A, (b) Band B and (c) Band H in (i) Wigan MBC, (ii) the North West Region, (iii) inner-London boroughs, (iv) outer-London boroughs and (v) England. [71894]

Mr. Leslie: Information on the number of properties in each council tax band is shown on the valuation list, compiled by the Valuation Office Agency. The number and percentage of properties in council tax Bands A, B and H as at 26 March 2002, for Wigan Metropolitan borough council, the North West Region, inner-London boroughs (including the City of London), outer-London boroughs and England are shown in the table below.

Number and percentage of properties in council tax bands A, B and H

	Number of properties				Number of properties as percentage of total
	Band A	Band B	Band H	Total	Band A	Band B	Band H
Wigan Metropolitan borough council	65,562	28,110	49	131,735	49.8	21.3	0.0
North West Government Office region	1,322,421	563,533	5,612	2,996,664	44.1	18.8	0.2
Outer-London boroughs	53,358	212,568	15,594	1,928,308	2.8	11.0	0.8
Inner-London boroughs (including the City)	55,859	212,013	37,315	1,197,376	4.7	17.7	3.1
England	5,562,268	4,131,021	117,936	21,436,841	25.9	19.3	0.6

Note:

Percentage figures are subject to rounding.

Open Space and Playing Fields

Claire Ward: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures he intends to take to increase the protection for open space and playing fields through the planning system. [73376]

Mr. McNulty: The Government have today published revised planning policy on open space, sport and recreation. Planning Policy Guidance (PPG) Note 17 replaces PPG17 published in 1991. It contains a range of policies designed to protect and enhance open spaces and sports and recreational facilities.

PPG17 sets out how the Government expect local authorities to plan for the delivery of high quality open space, sport and recreational facilities in a sustainable manner. The policies it contains are crucial to our efforts to deliver an urban renaissance and rural renewal by ensuring that everyone has access to high quality and well maintained and managed open spaces, sports and recreational facilities. It will be a vital tool in delivering the Government's agenda for sport by providing an up-to-date strategic framework within which local authorities can plan effectively for new sports and recreational facilities. The policies in PPG17 will be supported by Good Practice Guidance on how to plan effectively for open space. This will be published shortly.

The Government remain fully committed to the protection of playing fields. PPG17 sets strict criteria to limit the circumstances in which playing fields can be developed for non-sporting and recreational purposes. Additionally I intend to reduce the threshold for the size of playing field upon which Sport England must be consulted when a planning application for development is submitted from 0.4ha to 0.2ha. This will enable Sport England to be consulted on planning applications affecting these smaller playing fields, and help to protect these important facilities which are used by young people for the small sided games of football and rugby.

Regional Assemblies

Mr. Patrick Hall: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the process for deciding which regions will be the first to hold a referendum on establishing an elected regional assembly. [73682]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 5 July to the hon. Member for Altrincham and Sale, West (Mr. Brady). When the announcement is made, a copy will be put in the Library.

Planning Appeals (Castle Point)

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many planning appeals relating to Castle Point were successful in each of the last five years for which statistics are available. [73031]

Mr. McNulty: The number of planning appeals allowed in Castle Point in each of the last five years were:

	Number of planning appeals
1997–98	24
1998–99	29
1999–2000	13
2000–01	20
2001–02	13

Town Planning

David Wright: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what consultations will take place with relevant former new town local authorities on which sites and projects will be designated as strategic under stage two of the review of English Partnerships. [70793]

Mr. McNulty: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that the Deputy Prime Minister gave today to a question from my hon. Friend, the Member for Gravesham (Chris Pond), announcing a number of sites on which English Partnerships will concentrate.

There will be consultation, in due course, with the relevant local authorities and other interested parties about the way forward for the sites announced today and over the remaining portfolio

Ministers (Compensation)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much his Department paid in compensation to Ministers from the former Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions who left Government in June; and if he will make a statement. [70747]

Mr. Leslie: Under the terms of section 4 of the Ministerial and other Pensions and Salaries Act 1991, all Ministers (except my right hon. Friends, the Prime Minister and Lord Chancellor) are entitled to a severance payment equal to one quarter of their final ministerial salary on leaving office, provided that the individual has not attained the age of 65 or been appointed to another paid office within a period of three weeks. The salaries of Ministers who left the Government in June are already in the public domain.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the (a) dates, (b) location and (c) sources were of attributable (i) articles, interviews or contributions for the media, books or other journals and (ii) speeches or presentations made in the public domain, by departmental special advisers since March 2001; who in his Department authorised the activity; and on what date this activity was recorded with the departmental Head of Information. [72246]

Mr. Leslie: All special advisers' contacts with the media, speeches and presentations must be conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers. All civil servants, including special advisers are expected to keep departmental heads of information informed of contacts with the media. Details of such contacts are for internal purposes only.

Parliamentary Answers

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) for how long he retains documents referred to in parliamentary answers on his Department's website; [72289]

(2) whether it is his policy to ensure that documents referred to in parliamentary answers are available via his Department's website. [72270]

Mr. Leslie: My office aims to be as helpful as possible in responding to hon. Members' questions. Where it is helpful to refer hon. Members to other documents as part of the substantive reply, this may be done by making hard copies of documents available in the Libraries of the House, or by reference to material available on the office's website.

Minimum requirements for the type of documents which should be published on Government websites are set out in guidance issued by the Office of the E-Envoy, 'Guidelines for Government Websites' (Illustrated Handbook for web management teams section 2.2 'What content should be on your website?' and section 2.3 'Cross-government requirements'). In addition to setting out guidelines on documents for inclusion, the guidance explicitly requires Departments to ensure that content of the site as a whole is up to date and current, and where it is necessary to update the content of individual documents, to show the latest date of amendment clearly on the document concerned. Section 1.2.7 deals with the issue of .Record management and the Office of the e-Envoy currently has a consultation paper out on archiving websites. The purpose of this draft annexe to the Illustrated Handbook is to provide government website managers with a framework towards developing within their website management policy suitable procedures and systems to assist in the management, appraisal and preservation of electronic records. A copy of this draft is available online at http://www.e-envoy.gov.uk:/webguidelines.htm

A copy of the Guidelines for UK Government websites is available at http://www.e-envoy.gov.uk/webguidelines.htm

Crichel Down Rules

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to bring forward proposals to change the Crichel Down rules. [72770]

Mr. McNulty: The Government's policy statement entitled "Compulsory Purchase Powers, Procedures and Compensation; the way forward", published on 18 July, made it clear that there will be a consultation exercise on the details of a revised set of rules which we envisage will then form the basis for the formulation of statutory rules in due course.

Double Glazing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many council homes in the UK do not have double glazing; and what is being done to ensure that modernisations to council housing take place as soon as possible. [72858]

Mr. McNulty: We estimate that approximately 1.3 million council homes (45 per cent.) did not have any double glazing in 2001. This estimate comes from 1996 English House Condition Survey, which showed that two million council homes did not have any double glazing (about 60 per cent. of all council homes), updated by data provided by local authorities on the works they carried out between 1996 and 2001. Final 2001 estimates will be available when the 2001 English Housing Condition Survey results are published later this year.

A target was set in the 2000 Spending Review to bring all council houses, and those owned by housing associations, up to a set standard of decency by 2010. The commitment to meet this target was reaffirmed in the Deputy Prime Minister's statement on the 2002 Spending Review.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which Minister will be responsible for taking decisions related to planning applications in respect of the Dome and surrounding developments on the Greenwich peninsula. [73450]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: Taking account of the constituency interests and other policy responsibilities of Ministers in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM), and in order to ensure that the advice set out in the "Guidance on Propriety Issues in the Handling of Planning Casework" is followed, I have decided that any planning matters arising in respect of the Dome and related developments should be dealt with by Christopher Leslie MP (Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State).

Lord Rooker will be responsible within ODPM for policy issues related to the Dome.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what representations his Department has had regarding the fitness of Anschutz Entertainment Group to proceed with the deal to hand over the Millennium Dome; and if he will make a statement; [72515]

(2) what assessment he has made of the suitability of the Anschutz Entertainment Group as partner for the Millennium Dome's development; and if he will make a statement; [72513]

(3) what processes of due diligence have been undertaken by his Department during the deal to hand over the Millennium Dome to the Anshutz Entertainment Group; and if he will make a statement. [72514]

Mr. McNulty: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has received no representations about the fitness of Anschutz Entertainment Group to proceed with the deal that was signed on 29 May, other than a number of press inquiries.

The Anschutz Entertainment Group is part of one of the largest private companies in the United States, and has extensive expertise and experience in delivering world class entertainment facilities. It is, therefore, an eminently suitable partner for the development of the Dome and the continued regeneration of the Greenwich peninsula.

English Partnerships, which is the contracting party on behalf of the Government, has carried out full due diligence on all relevant counterparties, as is the normal practice for a commercial transaction of this nature.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of progress with the deal to hand over the Millennium Dome to Anschutz Entertainment Group; and if he will make a statement. [72516]

Mr. McNulty: Following the exchange of contracts between English Partnerships and Meridian Delta Limited (MDL) on 29 May, MDL and Anschutz Entertainment Group (AEG) are continuing to work up their proposals and to consult with stakeholders. They expect to embark on a public consultation exercise early next month, and to submit a planning application in the autumn.

Social Services

Clive Efford: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what level of demand he estimates there will be for social care beds in each London borough area over the next three years; what resources will need to be made available to meet that demand; and if he will make a statement. [69148]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington) on 1 February 2002, Official Report, columns 626–27W. Funding for personal social services will increase by an average of 6 per cent. a year in real terms for each of the next three years.

Foster Care

Clive Efford: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what action he is taking to improve recruitment rates of foster carers for London boroughs; what has been the change in use of agency foster placements (a) for each borough and (b) for London as a whole in the last five years; what steps he is taking to limit the cost of agency foster care placements in London; and what representations he has received on this subject; [69153]

(2) how many looked-after children there were in the care of each London borough and how many were (a) in borough foster care, (b) fostered with family or friends, (c) in agency foster placements and (d) in care homes in each of the last five years. [69216]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

A table has been placed in the Library which provides total numbers of looked-after children, and the proportion in foster care and in residential care in each London borough for years ending 31 March 1997 to 31 March 2001.

The breakdown of placements between family and friends care, in-house placements, and agency placements is collected on the SSDA 903 statistical return, a one-third sample of anonymised care histories of looked-after children. In 2000–01 a breakdown of in-house and agency placements has been collected for the first time. However the resulting figures for these particular placement categories are too small to form a reliable basis upon which to estimate activity for individual London boroughs. Therefore such a breakdown has not been included in the table.

A national campaign for recruiting foster carers was carried out in 2000 by the Department.

Local authorities commission placements according to their needs and strategies, and will negotiate with agencies accordingly. It is the responsibility of local authorities to consider and agree the level of payments that it makes to fulfil the needs of those children who require these services.

The role of independent foster agencies will be reviewed in the context of the current "Choice Protects" review, announced on 20 March, and in particular in relation to the Government's plans to improve the number and quality of placement options for looked-after children.

Housing Benefit

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people claimed housing benefit as a percentage of the (a) population of London and (b) population of the UK in (i) each London constituency and (ii) each London borough in each year since 1995; and if he will make a statement. [72834]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The available information is in the tables.

Notes:

1. Housing benefit data for parliamentary constituencies are not available; figures are only available by local authority area.
2. The data refer to households claiming housing benefit which may be a single person, a couple or a family. More than one benefit household can live in one property, for example two or more adults in a flat or house share arrangement.
3. The percentages are rounded to two decimal places.
4. '—' indicates that the percentage is statistically negligible.
5. Figures exclude any housing benefit extended payment cases
6. Figures for any non-responding authorities have been estimated.
7. Social security matters in Northern Ireland are the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Assembly.

SCOTLAND

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many overseas visits she has undertaken since her appointment; to which countries; to meet which institutions and bodies; and at what cost. [30315]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 25 January 2002]: Since my appointment as Secretary of State, I have visited Europe, North America and South East Asia, at an approximate cost of £17,500. My meetings on these visits focused on constitutional and trade issues and the Friends of Scotland initiative.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the guidelines set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the House Library.

Ministerial Private Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the running costs were of (a) her Ministers' private offices, separately identifying expenditure on staff, and (b) her Department in each year from May 1997 to the nearest date for which the information is available. [40977]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

In the period 1 July 1999 to 31 March 2000, an incomplete year as it was the first for the Department, were £3.6 million, of which £2.0 million were staff costs. The running costs in 2000–01 were £5.7 million, of which £3.6 million were staff costs.

Litigation

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases (a) her Department and (b) its agencies have defended in (i) industrial tribunals and (ii) the courts in each year since 1997; how many were concluded in their favour; and what the total cost to his Department of litigation was in each year. [41110]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

My Department has not been involved in any industrial tribunal cases since it was established.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in her Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44944]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department's 2002–03 target time for replying to letters is 15 working days in both instances.

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the total amount of money spent by Ministers in her Department since its creation on food, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks for official entertainment purposes. [47210]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The information is not held in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent by departmental special advisers on food, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks for official entertainment purposes in each of the last five years. [46833]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

Since that date, my special advisers have not spent any departmental funds on entertainment.

Press Office

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the total cost of running the Department's press office was in (a) 1996–97 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [46817]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

The identifiable cost of running the press office in 2001–02 was £147,244. This does not include certain accommodation and support costs, which are not held separately.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland with reference to the 2000 Spending Review service delivery agreement targets, if a three-year rolling audit programme of local authorities by the Food Standards Agency in Scotland began in April 2001; and if a third of Scottish authorities were audited in 2001–02. [49073]

Mrs. Liddell: This is a matter for Scottish Ministers, but I understand that the local authority audit programme undertaken by the Food Standards Agency Scotland commenced in April 2001. The three-year rolling programme consists of each Scottish local authority receiving an annual partial audit, equating to a full audit over the three-year programme, and the target was met in 2001–02.

Recruitment

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many net additional staff her Department has recruited in each month since June 2001 at (a) executive officer level and (b) administrative level. [52421]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department has recruited seven net additional staff in the 12-month period from June 2001—three at executive officer level: one in September 2001, one in november 2001, one in April 2002; and four at administrative level: two in June 2001, one in November 2001 and one in April 2002.

Press Subscriptions

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the magazines and periodicals subscribed to by her Department, stating for each subscription the (a) number of copies taken and (b) annual cost. [52824]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 26 April 2002]: My Department subscribes to the following magazines and periodicals:

Title	Average number of copies
Economist	2
European Voice	1
New Statesman	2
Press Gazette	1
Private Eye	2
PR Week	1
Scottish Field	1
The Week	1
Spectator	2

Some titles are cancelled during the recess and the numbers supplied may vary depending on the location of Ministers. The total cost of magazines and periodicals in 2001–02 was £1,328.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the newspapers subscribed to (a) Monday to Saturday and (b) on Sunday by her Department, stating for each subscription (i) the number of copies taken, and (ii) the annual cost. [52823]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 26 April 2002]: My Department subscribes to the following newspapers:

Newspaper	Average number of copies
Aberdeen Press and Journal	2
Business AM	2
Daily Express	3
Daily Mail	4
Daily Mirror	3
Daily Record	5
Daily Star	2
Daily Telegraph	4
Dundee Courier	1

Observer	2
Sunday Express	2
Sunday Herald	4
Sunday Mail	3
Sunday Mirror	1
Sunday Post	3
Scotland on Sunday	4
Sunday Telegraph	2
Sunday Times	2

Some newspapers are cancelled during the recess and the numbers supplied vary depending on the location of Ministers. The total cost of newspapers in 2001–02 was £11,640.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of ordinary written questions for her Department were answered within a week of tabling in each month since June 2001; and what proportion of questions for named day received a substantive answer on that day in each month since June 2001. [58987]

Mrs. Liddell: Approximately 60–70 per cent. of both types of written question were answered within the required time scales. In view of the large increase in the number of questions being tabled, an upgraded PQ tracking system is being considered as one of the options in improving performance in this area.

Staff Numbers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff were employed by her Department on (a) 2 May 1997 and (b) 31 May 2002. [60926]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office, on 13 June 2002, Official Report, column 1402W.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many families are in receipt of the national minimum wage in each constituency in Scotland. [61303]

Mrs. Liddell: The information is not held in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, some 110,000 people across Scotland have benefited from the national minimum wage since it was introduced in April 1999.

Beef Exports (France)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions she plans to have with French representatives concerning the export of beef from the UK to France. [72441]

Mrs. Liddell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs regularly raises the French Government's illegal ban on British beef with her French counterpart and will continue to do so until the ban is lifted.

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations she has received from quarry operators since the aggregates levy come into effect in April. [72410]

Mrs. Liddell: One representation from the British Aggregates Association has been received since the levy came into effect on 1 April. The Aggregates Levy has been introduced to address the environmental impacts of the extraction and transportation of aggregates, including noise, dust, vibration, visual intrusion, loss of biodiversity and amenity. The levy will result in prices for primary aggregates which better reflect these environmental costs, and so encourage both the use of recycled aggregates as an alternative and more efficient use of aggregates.

Offshore Workers

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations she has made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding claims by offshore workers, pursuant to the Court of Appeal's decision Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v. Perks and other appeals; and if she will make a statement. [72550]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the answers he has received from my right hon. Friend, the Paymaster General, on this subject.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the (a) dates, (b) location and (c) sources were of attributable (i) articles, interviews or contributions for the media, books or other journals and (ii) speeches or presentations made in the public domain, by departmental special advisers since March 2001; who in her Department authorised the activity; and on what date this activity was recorded with the departmental Head of Information. [72256]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister.

Temporary Staff

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many employees under contract from temping agencies worked in her Department; and how much was spent on temporary staff (a) as a total and (b) as a percentage of the total staffing budget in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [72645]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. Since that date my Department has had a number of employees under contract from temping agencies. Details are given in the table.

Year	Number of temporary staff	Total spend on temporary staff (£)	Percentage of total staffing budget
1999–2000	13	38,431	1.9
2000–01	16	79,643	2.4
2001–02[1]	19	90,798	2.4

[1] Provisional

Departmental Bodies

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many jobs under the remit of her Department in (a) the core department, (b) non-departmental public bodies, (c) executive agencies and (d) independent statutory bodies, organisations and bodies financially sponsored by her Department and other such organisations, are located in (i) Scotland, (ii) England, excluding Greater London, (iii) Greater London, (iv) Wales, (v) Northern Ireland and (vi) overseas, broken down by (A) whole time equivalent jobs and (B) the percentage per individual department, body or organisation. [72738]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested is as follows:

Scotland Office

Location	Number of staff	Percentage of Department
Scotland	86	72
Greater London	33	28

The Boundary Commission

Location	Number of staff	Percentage of NDPB
Scotland	4	100

Ministerial Meetings

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many formal and official inter-ministerial meetings her Department has held with the Scottish Executive since May 1999, broken down by (a) Scottish Executive department, (b) subject and (c) date. [72710]

Mrs. Liddell: Information is not available in the form requested. Ministers from my Department have frequent meetings with Ministers from the Scottish Executive, both formal and informal, covering a broad range of topics.

Illegal Meat Imports

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions she is having with Customs and Excise on (a) detecting the people responsible for importing illegal meat products from China and (b) increasing checks on meat imports coming into Scotland. [73002]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office has frequent discussions with HM Customs & Excise on a wide range of issues.

The relevant public authorities, including HM Customs & Excise, are participating in discussions about illegal meat imports and in an action plan to tackle the problem.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he is having with the Scottish Executive on illegally imported meat from China found on sale in shops; and if she will make a statement. [73003]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office has frequent discussions with the Scottish Executive on a wide range of issues.

The question of illegally imported meat is the subject of discussions and an action plan involving the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, the Scottish Executive, HM Customs & Excise and other public authorities.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will publish for each constituency in Scotland the (a) actual and (b) percentage change in (i) youth, (ii) long term and (iii) total unemployed since May 1997 and present. [61294]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The National Statistician will write to the hon. Gentleman shortly and a copy of his letter will be placed in the Library.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in her Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44942]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Recruitment

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Advocate-General how many net additional staff her Department has recruited in each month since June 2001 at (a) executive officer level and (b) administrative level. [52422]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Staff Numbers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General how many staff were employed by her Department on (a) 2 May 1997 and (b) 31 May 2002. [60924]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Minister of State at the Cabinet Office, on 13 June, Official Report, column 1402W.

Overseas Trips

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General if she will list the overseas trips on departmental business that have been undertaken in each of the last five years by officials in her Department; and what the (a) cost, (b) purpose and (c) result was in each case. [68738]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

TRANSPORT

Ferries (Southern Europe)

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in extending the terms of the Stockholm Agreement to ferries operating in Southern Europe. [73198]

Mr. Jamieson: The European Commission's proposal for a directive to extend the "Stockholm" stability standards to all EU-flagged ro-ro ferries and third country flagged ro-ro ferries calling at EU ports was agreed at Transport Council in June. It will now go to the European Parliament for debate, under co-decision procedures.

Community Councils

Mr. Tom Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many community councils were operating in England in (a) 1997 and (b) 2001. [58877]

Mr. Raynsford: I have been asked to reply.

Community councils operate in Wales and Scotland. Their counterparts in England are parish councils. 79 new parishes have been created between the years 1997 and 2001.

Mobile Telephones

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce legislation (a) enforcing a ban and (b) introducing a criminal offence for driving while operating a hand held mobile telephone; and if he will make a statement. [72517]

Mr. Jamieson: In accordance with our road safety strategy we are keeping the need for new legislation under review.

Aviation Policy

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the Government are evaluating runway options for Heathrow and Gatwick that will provide additional runway capacity in five years or less; and if he will make a statement. [71900]

Mr. Jamieson: The South East airports consultation document published on 23 July 2002 sets out options for future development of runway capacity in the South East, but none of these options could deliver more runway capacity within five years.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that London Gatwick maintains a network of full service operators and operations to enable passengers from UK regional points who fly into Gatwick to make connections to a network of world-wide services. [71901]

Mr. Jamieson: It is a commercial choice for airlines to decide which routes they serve. Gatwick airport offers a range of inter-connecting opportunities which enables passengers from UK regional points to make connections to a variety of world-wide destinations.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many take-off and landing slots have been handed back to the airport co-ordination slot co-ordinator at London Gatwick in the last 12 months, broken down by airlines. [71902]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is not held by the Department.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Ministry of Defence airfields have been included in the Government review of UK aviation policy and subsequent consultations; and if he will make a statement. [71801]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made to the House on 23 July 2002 by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport. The use of military airfields is considered in the published consultation documents on regional air services and airports. These documents cover the whole of the UK.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many take-off and landing slots have been bought at London Heathrow and Gatwick in the last 12 months, broken down by company. [71904]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is not recorded.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to hold discussions with airlines giving up slots on re-allocating them through the slot co-ordinators for use by regional air services. [71903]

Mr. Jamieson: DfT officials are engaged in ongoing discussions with airlines about regional air services. When an airline gives up a slot, it is returned to the slot pool and allocated by the co-ordinator in accordance with the criteria set out in the Regulations 95–93.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Ministry of Defence about opening up more RAF airfields for civil operations; if such openings will be on a full cost recovery basis; and if they will recognise the obligations on other Government owned airfields. [71905]

Mr. Jamieson: During the preparation of the consultation documents on the Future of Air Transport in the UK, which was published yesterday discussions were held with MOD about the potential commercial use of some of their airfields. The outcome of those discussions is reflected in the consultation documents.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has ensured that in the negotiations with the EU on changes to the slot allocation rules the existing mechanisms to allow for ring fencing of slots and application of public service obligation protection will be maintained after the change in the rules. [71895]

Mr. Jamieson: During Working Group negotiations on the Commission's proposal to amend European Regulation 95-93, the UK will argue that the existing mechanisms available for the ring-fencing of slots for regional air services be maintained.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on recent studies undertaken by his Department on UK-US Government aviation policy options and place the findings of such studies in the Library. [71785]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 22 July 2002]: The Civil Aviation Authority have undertaken an analysis of UK-US aviation policy options on behalf of the Department. This study is informing the evaluation of those options. It would not be appropriate to place the CAA study in the Library at this time, as to do so might undermine the UK's position if further bilateral aviation talks were to be held.

Runways

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his policy regarding the location of new runways to be built in the South East. [71928]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made to the House on 23 July 2002, Official Report, columns 847–68 by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Transport.

Passenger Overcrowding

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the level of passenger overcrowding on the railways as the percentage of passengers in excess of capacity was during (a) the morning peak, (b) the evening peak and (c) both peaks together, (i) for each train company and (ii) overall in each of the last three years. [71061]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The number of passengers now travelling into London each morning are at the highest level for over 10 years. Overcrowding figures for 2001, which were published in June, show a decrease on most lines compared to the previous year. That year, however, showed an increase overall compared to 1999. The figures are:

Per cent.

Note:

The information is only collected for train operating companies serving London and South East commuter lines and one Scotrail commuter line.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which train operating companies have an overcrowding standard as part of their franchise agreement; and what each such standard is. [71062]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 July 2002]: All train operating companies are required by their franchise agreements to avoid "regular, systematic, excessive overcrowding".

In addition, train operating companies which provide local services into London (South Central, Connex South Eastern, South West Trains, Thameslink, Thames Trains, Chiltern Trains, Silverlink, c2c, First Great Eastern and West Anglia Great Northern) and Scotrail (for Fife/Edinburgh area services only) are required by their franchise agreements to comply with the standards laid down under "Passengers in Excess of Capacity". These are the same for each operator and are: not more than 4.5 per cent. in excess of nominal capacity which varies with journey length and rolling stock type; and not more than 3 per cent. overall.

London Underground

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the discussions his Department has held with the EU about the PPP for London Underground and state aid. [62418]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 17 June 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to Part (a) of my answer of 17 June 2002, Official Report, column 67W.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what the extra money in expenditure on the London underground announced in the spending review will be spent on; and if he will make a statement; [71064]

(2) what representations he has received from the consortia involved with the public-private partnership for the London underground about the extra spending announced in the spending review. [71065]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 July 2002]: The spending review takes full account of the Government's commitment to full funding for the first seven-and-a-half years of the tube modernisation plans. A statement of how the Government intend to fund the London underground in the long term was annexed to the draft letters of comfort reported to Parliament by my right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State's Minute of 20 March 2002.

No representations have been received from the consortia involved with the public-private partnership.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 16 July 2002, Official Report, column 143W, what contingency plans he has for the case where, after the financial close of PPP, a key partner in the Tubelines or Metronet Consortium fails and no replacement partner is found. [71812]

Mr. Jamieson: As my answer of 16 July made clear, the PPP contracts allow for changes in the shareholders of the consortia, subject to the consent of London Underground, including changes to the number of shareholders.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out Government spending on London Underground in each of the next three years as a result of the CSR. [72216]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I have given to the hon. Member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May) today.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the overcrowding statistics for (a) 2001 and (b) 2002 to date for the London Underground. [71735]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 22 July 2002]: This is an operational matter for London Underground (LU), who have informed me that they measure how crowded services are in terms of the percentage chance of boarding a train with:

(i) all seats full,

(ii) one person standing for each seated passenger, and

(iii) two persons standing for each seated passenger.

LU have provided the information in the table showing this information for 2001–02 and the first quarter of 2002–03.

[2] Sample is too small to provide a meaningful percentage figure, but is less than 1 per cent.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to send the first payments to London Underground PPP contractors. [72894]

Mr. Spellar: The Government will make no direct payments to the PPP contractors. London Underground will pay a monthly Infrastructure Service Charge to the contractors, once the Infrastructure Companies have been transferred to the private sector, following completion of the PPP contracts.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish details of the performance and investment targets set for London Underground in 2002–03. [73536]

Mr. Spellar: The table shows the targets that have been set for London Underground Ltd. in 2002–03, together with the previous targets, and actual performance achieved at the end of March 2002.

[2] Customer satisfaction scores are being rebased in 2002–03 to better reflect customers' views of journeys undertaken in the peak periods. Although not set as formal targets the five individual elements of the customer satisfaction scores will continue to be monitored and published by London Underground Ltd.

[3] A number of other investment works on escalators, rolling stock, signalling, stations and track will also be started, progressed or completed during the year.

The Government are separately discussing longer-term performance targets for the London Underground with the Mayor as part of the proposed tube modernisation plans.

Railtrack

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action the Government are taking to ensure that Railtrack consults with the relevant local authority before it removes trees from railway property. [71773]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 22 July 2002]: I understand that Railtrack seek to consult with local authorities and other interested parties wherever practicable.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on maintenance of track by Railtrack in each of the financial years since 1996–97. [72901]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given to the Hon. Member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May) on 18 June 2002, Official Report, column 179W.

Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the European Commission's decision of 13 February to approve state aid towards the rescue of Railtrack Plc (in administration) has been published. [73547]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government informed the house on 13 February 2002 that state aid clearance towards the rescue of Railtrack plc in administration had been given Official Report, column 390W. However the Commission only recently published the decision and copies have been placed in the House Libraries of the House for the record.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the expenditure on capital account by Railtrack in administration since being placed in administration. [72890]

Mr. Spellar: As the administrator holds this information, and not the Department, this is a matter for him.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money has been drawn down by (a) Railtrack in administration and (b) Network Rail. [72891]

Mr. Spellar: £1.9 billion was drawn down from the original Government loan facility, and to date, £1.2 billion has been drawn from the commercial banking facility. The Government loan facility was repaid, with interest, on 25 March 2002.

Railway Vandalism

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 25 June 2002, Official Report, column 772–3W, on railway vandalism, if he will (a) place a copy of the speech referred to in the Library and (b) state how the Department was represented at the recent National Route Crime Group. [66045]

Mr. Spellar: A copy of my speech to the Trespass and Vandalism on the Railways Conference on 17 October 2001 has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

The Department is not represented on the National Route Crime Group, which is a cross-industry group. However, the Health and Safety Executive and the Strategic Rail Authority are members.

Rail Insurance

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action is proposed to ensure that companies involved in railway repair and maintenance continue to have access to insurance cover liability in respect of their companies' and their employees; and if he will make a statement. [63619]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 21 June 2002]: Railtrack is aware that certain infrastructure maintenance companies have experienced difficulties in renewing insurance cover; and is considering a range of alternative options in response to emerging circumstances and changing market conditions.

Replacement Rails

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average present cost is of relaying one mile of twin track on the UK railway network with replacement rails, and what the cost was five years ago. [65636]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 1 July 2002]: My Department does not possess the information requested. I understand from Railtrack, however, that the cost of rail replacement will vary significantly according to track layout, maximum linespeed, tonnage capacity and other factors relating to particular lines.

Gatwick-Inverness Transport Link

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make a decision on the proposed public service obligation between Gatwick and Inverness. [66878]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 4 July 2002]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport to the hon. Member for Caithness, Sutherland and Easter Ross (John Thurso) following yesterday's statement on the future of air transport, Official Report, columns 847–68.

Rail Delays

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his reply of 19 December 2001, Official Report, columns 524–25W, on rail delays, if he will place copies of the latest updated information in the Library. [70637]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 8 July 2002, Official Report, column 665W.

Crossrail

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment has been made for his Department and the Strategic Rail Authority on the benefits of Crossrail; and if he will make a statement. [70740]

Mr. Jamieson: Cross London Rail Links has been charged with developing the case for Crossrail, and will be reporting to Ministers, the Mayor of London and the Strategic Rail Authority in October. The project development work will include a full assessment of the benefits Crossrail could deliver in terms of relieving congestion on the existing national rail and underground network, increasing transport accessibility and capacity in London, and its contribution to the national economy.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations his Department and the Strategic Rail Authority have received on Crossrail proposals from (a) the Royal Docks Cross Rail Group, (b) Crossrail and (c) other groups; and if he will make a statement. [70745]

Mr. Jamieson: A number of groups have made representations on Crossrail either to my Department, the Strategic Rail Authority, or Cross London Rail Links Ltd.—particularly in response to the CLRL's Stakeholder Consultation document issued in May. The Royal Docks Crossrail Group is one. CLRL will give full consideration to all these representations in reaching a view on a preferred scheme, which will be reported to Ministers, the Mayor of London and the Strategic Rail Authority in October.

Great Western Rail Network

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what investment programmes are planned for the Great Western Rail Network; and if he will make a statement. [70828]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority's Strategic Plan sets out its plans for investment in the rail network in the short, medium and longer term.

Rail Fares

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to allow increases in regulated rail fares above the current cap. [71384]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The Strategic Rail Authority issued a consultation paper on fares on 19 July. The document sets out current policy and practice on fares regulation, and invites views. We will review our current policy on fares regulation in the light of responses to this consultation. Copies of the SRA's paper have been placed in the House Library.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made as to the changes in the level of unregulated rail fares in comparison to the RPI in each of the last three years; and if he will list those train operating companies that have increased unregulated fares above the RPI, in each of the last two years. [71385]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The level of unregulated fares is a matter for train operating companies. The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) has responsibility for monitoring fare levels and pricing policies. As part of its duties, the Authority has compiled a 'fares index', published in the June (2001–02 quarter 4) edition of National Rail Trends, available in the House Library. This details the average increase in unregulated fares since January 1999 by class of operator. Information on company specific increases is commercially confidential and is not published by the SRA.

Fatalities

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what value for preventing a fatality is used by (a) his Department and (b) the Highways Agency when assessing cost benefit ratios on (i) the roads and (ii) the railways; and how these are calculated. [72943]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department and the Highways Agency use an appraisal figure of £1.14 million (in 2000 prices) per fatality prevented when assessing the costs and benefits of road investments. The Department uses the same appraisal figure of £1.14 million for valuing road and rail fatalities prevented through railway investments. The final decisions on all transport investments are not just based on cost benefit ratios, but a wide range of criteria, namely: environment, economy, safety, accessibility and integration.

The appraisal value was derived from research into individual's willingness to pay for reductions in highway risk. Full details of the road values used are published annually in Highway Agency's Economics Note No. 1, which is available in the Library of the House and on the Department's website. The value is updated annually for inflation and economic growth.

Public Transport (Taunton)

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment he has made of the reliability of rail services to Taunton. [73268]

Mr. Jamieson: Performance figures for each of the train operating companies are published by the Strategic Rail Authority in their quarterly publication, "National Rail Trends", and in more detail in their six-monthly publication, "On Track". Copies of these publications are available in the Libraries of the House. The most recent editions of both documents were published on 6 June.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to encourage the greater use of bus travel (a) within Taunton, (b) within Wellington and (c) in and around Wiveliscombe in Somerset. [73267]

Mr. Jamieson: Our policies are aimed at encouraging the greater use of buses in all parts of the country. Implementation at local level is a matter for the local transport authority, in this case, Somerset county council, through its local transport plan. The Department is providing local authorities, including Somerset, with substantially increased capital funding and on-going increases in revenue funding to enable them to plan and implement a range of measures to improve bus services in their areas.

In addition, Somerset county council has been allocated £1.49 million for the support of rural bus services in the current financial year. Since 1998, the council has also been successful with nine bids under the Department's Rural Bus Challenge scheme, including an award last year of £100,000 towards a community transport service for the areas around Wiveliscombe.

Train Protection and Warning System

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what value for preventing a fatality is used in assessments conducted (a) by and (b) for his Department from the fitting of (i) train protection and warning system, (ii) ERTMS level 1, (iii) ERTMS level 2 and (iv) ERTMS level 3. [72944]

Mr. Jamieson: The Health and Safety Executive tell me that in the regulatory impact assessment, which they conducted for the train protection and warning system, a figure of £2.65 million (1997–98 prices) was used for the prevention of fatalities in railway accidents. This is broadly equivalent to the figure of £3.46 million (2002–03 prices) currently used by Railway Safety for the prevention of multiple fatalities or where the risks are close to intolerable.

The report on ERTMS, published earlier this year by Railway Safety and the Strategic Rail Authority, did not use an explicit value for preventing a fatality.

Following research into the willingness of individuals to pay for reductions in risk and independent expert evidence given to the Ladbroke Grove public inquiry, the Health and Safety Executive no longer encourages the use of a higher figure than that used by the Department for Transport and the Highways Agency for appraising road risk. This is £1.14 million at 2000 prices.

Railway Lines

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of new railway line have been completed in the last year; and how many are planned for each of the next two years. [72892]

Mr. Spellar: Railtrack's Network Management Statement estimates 790 km of line renewed in 2001–02, and 785 km in each of the following two years.

Railway Rolling Stock

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new carriages have been delivered to train operating companies in Britain in the last year. [72889]

Mr. Spellar: In the year 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 a total of 615 new passenger vehicles entered service.

Railway Bridges

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking to ensure that Railtrack and its successor body are undertaking the work necessary (a) to maintain, (b) to clean and (c) to keep free of birds those railway bridges in its ownership; and if he will make statement. [73009]

Mr. Jamieson: I understand from Railtrack that their maintenance regime for rail structures includes visual inspection annually and in detail every six years. Annual inspection includes cleaning as required. Railtrack seeks to work in partnership with local authorities to tackle pigeon nuisance and is also currently assessing alternative pigeon deterrents to netting.

Railway Infrastructure (Repointing)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many square metres of gridland stone work on the railway system have been repointed in each year since 1992. [72848]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department does not hold this information.

Railway Speed Restrictions

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many structures on the railtrack system have been subject to speed restrictions in each year since 1992. [72847]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department does not hold this information.

Network Rail

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what interest rates have been agreed for the different financial facilities being made available by the SRA to Network Rail. [67056]

Mr. Jamieson: The interest rates that would be charged in the unlikely event of a drawdown on the standby credit facilities will be:

(a) facilities supporting the bridge financing: LIBOR plus 1.5 per cent;

(b) facilities supporting the financing of legacy costs: LIBOR plus a margin of between 1.5 per cent. to 6 per cent., depending upon the facility drawn upon and the circumstances of the drawdown;

(c) facility for long-term contingency buffer: LIBOR plus 6 per cent.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what Railtrack's cost of borrowing was in 2001–02; and what the cost of borrowing for Network Rail will be; [71260]

(2) by how much the proposed financing arrangements for Network Rail will increase the buying power of the transport settlement announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 15 July. [71261]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Railtrack's cost of capital was determined by the Rail Regulator. He determined an eight per cent. rate of return (in real terms) in his October 2000 periodic review.

The interest rate on the finance secured by Network Rail is a commercial matter for the company. Network Rail has been designed to secure a strong investment grade credit rating to raise finance in a cost-effective and efficient manner. It is expected to have a cost of capital substantially lower than that of Railtrack, which will have a significant positive impact on the buying power of the company's income.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library the documents referred to in the Rail Regulators statement on 27 June on the (a) enhancement refitting, (b) funding and (c) co-operation regime between SRA and Network Rail. [71053]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: These documents remain confidential, as Network Rail has yet to conclude its purchase of Railtrack plc shares. Disclosure now could harm Network Rail's competitive position if its bid failed and the administrators then proceeded with inviting bids for a transfer of Railtrack plc's assets under Schedule 7 to the Railways Act 1993. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will review the status of these documents and the information in them if Network Rail's acquisition of Railtrack plc is successfully completed.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his estimated date is for the first day of trading of Network Rail CLG. [72895]

Mr. Spellar: Network Rail have said that it is possible that Railtrack could be released from administration by the end of September.

Road Deaths

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action the Government are taking to reduce the number of road related deaths. [73686]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer to the hon. Member for Leominster (Mr. Wiggin) on 9 July 2002, Official Report, column 805W.

Disabled Parking

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recommendations the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee have made to him in relation to the Disabled Persons Parking Badge Scheme Consultation Paper; and if he will make a statement. [73400]

Mr. Jamieson: The Committee have made a series of recommendations following analysis of responses to the discussion paper, covering eligibility, administration and enforcement. We are currently considering their report together with our colleagues in the devolved Administrations with whom we are working collaboratively on this review.

Alternative Fuels

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that the UK takes a leading role in meeting the European Commission's objective of a 20 per cent. substitution by alternative fuels in the road transport sector by 2020. [72862]

Mr. Jamieson: The UK actively promotes the wider use of alternative fuels through the low rates of duty on liquefied petroleum gas, natural gas, biodiesel and hydrogen road fuel; the lower rates of vehicle excise duty and company car tax on alternatively-fuelled vehicles; Enhanced Capital Allowances for investment in compressed natural gas and hydrogen fuel infrastructure; and the TransportAction programmes of grants for purchase of or conversion to alternatively-fuelled cars, buses and goods vehicles. There are also fuel duty exemptions under the Green Fuels Challenge, subject to European agreement, for three pilot projects relating to the capture and use of landfill bio-gas, hydrogen refuelling infrastructure and the use of methanol, with a further round of the Green Fuels Challenge currently in progress, offering support for the pilot testing of further promising alternative fuels.

A46 (Little Beckford)

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ask the Highways Agency to remove the bollards at the pedestrian safety refuge on the A46 at Little Beckford. [72860]

Mr. Jamieson: The pedestrian safety refuge and bollards at Little Beckford are part of a general scheme of traffic calming through the village to enable pedestrians to cross the A46 safely. A road safety audit carried out after installation has shown no major problems with the scheme design and the police have not identified any safety concerns as a result of their accident investigations. To remove any of the refuges would reduce the effectiveness of the traffic calming and thus increase the risks to road safety. The Highways Agency will, however, continue to monitor the performance of these measures to ensure that they remain effective.

Intelligent Motor Generator Technology

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the effectiveness of the intelligent motor generator technology developed by Ricardo in reducing fuel consumption in road vehicles. [72624]

Mr. Jamieson: There are a range of technologies in development—including the intelligent motor generator system developed by Ricardo—that promise substantial reductions in vehicle fuel consumption. My Department's New Vehicle Technology Fund is currently assessing proposals from various suppliers of such technology for demonstrating and testing the effectiveness of their vehicles in real-world operating conditions. The results of the projects will be available from the Energy Saving Trust which manages the Fund on behalf of my Department.

Road Schemes (South West)

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for new road schemes in the South West; and what the (a) cost and (b) commencement date is in each case. [73266]

Mr. Jamieson: Within the targeted programme of improvements for the Highways Agency the following major schemes (that is schemes costing more than £5 million) are being delivered in the South West area:

Scheme	Estimate of cost (£ million)	Estimated start of construction
A303 Stonehenge	130	2005–06
A30 Bodmin—Indian Queens	49	2004–05
A38 Dobwalls bypass	17	2005–06
A419 Blunsdon bypass	20	2006

Further schemes may emerge from the London to South West and South Wales Multi-Modal Study.

In addition, the Highways Agency will deliver a number of small scale schemes aimed at, for example, improving safety. It is estimated that around £11 million will be spent on these schemes this year.

A12 (Colchester)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects work to be completed on connecting the Colchester northern approach road to the A12. [72097]

Mr. Jamieson: Proposals for a junction between this road and the A12 trunk road are included in one of five current applications for planning permissions for comprehensive redevelopment of the site of the former Severalls hospital. The Highways Agency has agreed to the principle of the proposed junction and is currently discussing with the developers details of its design and location. Work is not programmed to begin on site within the next three years.

HGV Lanes

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the strategic routes with HGV lanes. [71336]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: There are no lanes in the Highways Agency's strategic road network dedicated solely to the movement of heavy goods vehicles.

Car Use

Jim Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 16 July 2002, Official Report, column 143W, on car use, what evaluation he has made of the impact of the Mayor of London's policies in this regard. [72001]

Mr. Jamieson: Road engineering in London is a matter for Transport for London and the London local authorities.

A3 Hindhead

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his latest estimate is for (a) the commencement and (b) the completion of construction of the A3 at Hindhead; what representations he has recently received about the improvement scheme there; and what further steps must be completed before its commencement. [71915]

Mr. Spellar: There has been no change to the programme for the A3 Hindhead scheme. The Highways Agency is presently assessing bids from contractor/designer teams to progress the scheme through statutory procedures and construction phases. It is expected that the contract will be awarded in September, that draft orders will be published in the late summer of 2003; and a public inquiry, if required, would be held in 2004. Subject to the satisfactory completion of these statutory procedures, work would start in 2005 and be completed by 2009.

Amendments to the preferred scheme as a consequence of on-going consultation with the local community were announced last March. Since then 11 representations have been received about the revised proposals. These were either seeking more information on specific local impacts or about changes in traffic patterns on local roads as a result of the scheme.

Variable Road Speeds

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 2 July 2002, Official Report, column 217W, on variable road speeds, if he will place a copy of the report in the Library. [70694]

Mr. Jamieson: The trials on the use of variable message signs outside schools formed part of a wider piece of research carried out by the Transport Research Laboratory on behalf of the Department. The results of the trials were unpublished.

However, my Department is preparing guidance in the form of a traffic advisory leaflet on the use of vehicle activated signs. This new guidance will reflect the results and conclusions of these earlier trials. We expect to publish by the end of the year, and at that time, a copy will be placed in the Library.

Highways Agency Contracts

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research and contract work has been conducted for the Highways Agency since 7 June 2001 by (a) W. S. Atkins, (b) Amey and (c) Balfour Beatty; and if he will make a statement. [70660]

Mr. Jamieson: The research and contract work that has been conducted for the Highways Agency since 7 June 2001 to the present time by these companies is as follows:

Contract description	Approximate value	Date awarded and duration
(a) W.S. Atkins
Research
Provision of research and development advice facilities framework. For design and management of highways structures	£700k	7 September 2001, for 3 years
General roadworks, including design services
Highways Agency (HA) area 2 managing agent (MA)	£25 million	Commenced pre-June 2001; runs until 31/3/04
HA area 4 MA	£5.8 million p.a.	Commenced pre-June 2001; runs until 31/5/03
HA area 6 MA	£3.5 million p.a.	Commenced 1/9/2001 for 5 years[1]
HA area 10 MA	£5 million p.a.	1/7/2002 to 30/6/2006[1]
HA area 11 MA	£7 million p.a.	Awarded pre-June 2001, ending 30/6/2002

Silverstone Bypass

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 28 June 2002 to the hon. Member for Bath (Mr. Foster), Official Report, column 880W, on the Silverstone Bypass, if he will (a) place his letter of direction in the Library, (b) state the component reasons of the wider national interest that justified his decision and (c) state the category of direction; and if he will make a statement. [70237]

Mr. Jamieson: A copy of the letter of direction from the then Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions my right hon. Friend the Member for Tyneside, North (Mr. Byers) to the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency has been deposited in the Library.

The British Grand Prix is an important global showcase for the UK motorsport industry, which is estimated to contribute approximately £5 billion annually to the national economy. In addition it brings about £30 million to the local economy over the Grand Prix weekend. In the light of doubts expressed by the Federation Internationale de l'Automobile (FIA) about retaining the British Grand Prix at Silverstone because of access problems in previous years, Ministers felt that the wider national interest would be best served by speeding up the Silverstone project and thereby providing the best available road access for this year's event.

The direction was sought for reasons of economy, efficiency and effectiveness.

Public Highway Closures

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 7 February 2002, Official Report, column 1094W, on public highway closures, when and by which magistrates court Downing street was closed under section 116 of the Highways Act 1980. [69973]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the right hon. Member to my answer of 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 538W.

Road Accidents

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average incidence of people (a) killed and (b) seriously injured in road accidents in Great Britain was for 1994 to 1998; and what the average incidence was in disadvantaged communities. [71624]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The Neighbourhood Renewal Unit has designated, for Neighbourhood Renewal Funding, 88 local authorities which include the majority of the most deprived wards in England. Casualty figures are available for these authorities. However, these figures relate to the whole of the authority areas, which may include relatively advantaged areas as well as deprived wards. The averages for these authorities therefore, as shown in the table, do not fully represent the position in the most disadvantaged areas.

The table provides the average number of people, and the average number of pedestrians, (a) killed and (b) seriously injured in road accidents for 1994 to 1998, together with the rate per 100,000 population. Figures are given for Great Britain, and the average for the 88 most deprived local authorities in England as designated for Neighbourhood Renewal funding.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the criteria for assessing whether a road accident in Great Britain takes place in a disadvantaged community for the purposes of the PSA targets for transport set out in the 2002 Spending Review. [71622]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The Neighbourhood Renewal Unit has designated 88 local authorities which include the majority of the most deprived wards in England. The criteria for the purposes of the road casualty PSA target set out in the 2002 Spending Review will be looking to specifically address the child pedestrian problem within these areas.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average incidence of children (a) killed and (b) seriously injured in road accidents in Great Britain was for 1994 to 1998; and what the average incidence was in disadvantaged communities. [71623]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The Neighbourhood Renewal Unit has designated, for Neighbourhood Renewal Funding, 88 local authorities which include the majority of the most deprived wards in England. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how he plans to take forward his responsibility for delivering the public service agreement to reduce fatalities and serious injuries in traffic accidents in Scotland. [71619]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: My Department's public service agreement target for reducing road casualties covers Great Britain as a whole. We will continue to work in partnership with the devolved Administration in Scotland—and likewise the one in Wales—to achieve the casualty reduction targets set out in the national road safety strategy document "Tomorrow's roads—safer for everyone" that we agreed and published in March 2000.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many children were (a) killed and (b) seriously injured in Great Britain in road accidents in each year from 1994; and what the average was for 1994 to 1998. [71504]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The table gives the number of children (a) killed and (b) seriously injured in Great Britain from 1994.

Roads

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total length of HGV lanes is on the strategic network. [71337]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: There are no lanes in the Highways Agency's strategic road network dedicated solely to the movement of heavy goods vehicles.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the roads providing drivers with instant access to network conditions; and what the total length of road is providing this information. [71334]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Variable message signs are being installed on the busiest parts of the motorway network as part of a commitment to have automatic hold up warning systems operating on 30 per cent. of motorways (825km) in England by March 2005. As part of the Traffic Control Centre project, variable message signs are also being installed at strategic points on the English trunk road network to provide drivers with information about major incidents, including, where appropriate, advice on alternative routes. Some local authorities provide similar information on their own roads but those details are not held centrally.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of new (a) motorway and (b) trunk roads have been completed in the last two years; and how many are planned for the next two years; [72893]

Mr. Spellar: 9.4 miles of new motorway and 13.75 miles of new trunk road were completed in the last two years. 30 miles of new motorway and 66.1 miles of new trunk road are planned for completion in the next two years.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the estimated number of people living within 600m of a trunk road; [71338]

(2) what length of strategic road network was widened in each of the last three years; [71321]

(3) what the average noise level is (a) 100m, (b) 300m and (c) 600m away from a trunk road in each of the last three years; [71339]

(4) what length of the trunk road network has been given lower-noise surfaces (a) since July 2000 and (b) in each of the last three years. [71335]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Tim Matthews, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Tim Matthews to Mrs. Theresa May dated 24 July 2002:

I have been asked by the Transport Minister to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the estimated number of people living within 600m of a trunk road; the length of trunk road that has been given lower-noise surfaces; the average noise level at 100m, 300m and 600m away from a trunk road; and the length of strategic road network widened in each of the last three years.

The Highways Agency estimates that there are over 2.1 million households located within 600m of the trunk road network. In the National Office of Statistics 'Living In Britain' publication (published 2000) the average number of people per household was 2.3. it is therefore estimated that approximately 4.83 million people live within 600 metres of the trunk road network.

Since July 2000, 3,257 of the 34,000 trunk road lane kilometres have been laid with lower noise surfacing. Between April 2001 and March 2002 lower noise surfacing was laid on 1,611 lane kilometres and between April 2000 and March 2001 this figure was 1431 lane kilometres. Prior to April 2000 this information was not collated by the Agency.

It is not possible to provide average noise levels at given distances from a trunk road because the noise level arising from any major road is determined by the characteristics of the traffic it carries, principally the amount of traffic and the percentage of heavy goods vehicles. The type of road surface and other noise mitigation measures will also affect the noise level. Provided that other factors remain the same, the effect of traffic growth year on year is minimal.

A number of important widening schemes are currently under construction, but none have been completed in the last three years. The M1 to A1 Lofthouse—Bramham Link Road DBFO was completed in May 1999 and this contained within it some stretches of widening of the A1, the M1 and the M62 totalling 9.9km. These stretches were completed by February 1999, just prior to the three-year period in question.

I hope this is helpful.

Congestion

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport to what extent he estimates the Mayor of London's proposals for congestion charging will contribute to the delivery of the public services agreement targets to reduce congestion in large urban areas in England. [71627]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: My Department's forecasting work for the 10-year plan assumed that a central London road user charging scheme would be introduced as part of the plan. The impact of individual schemes was not assessed.

While congestion reduction benefits of road user charging schemes may be significant at the local level in specific urban centres, they are likely to be small within the context [illegible] total traffic volumes, and hence the national congestion target, in England as a whole.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how he plans to take forward his responsibility for delivering the Public Services Agreement to reduce congestion in London to below 2000 levels by 2010. [71628]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The Public Service Agreement target relates to large urban areas, including London. The Mayor of London's Transport Strategy and Transport for London's Business Plan set out measures which are designed to tackle congestion. We shall monitor the delivery of them and their impact on congestion and from time to time we shall review the situation with the Mayor.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on progress towards the target of a 15 per cent. reduction in traffic congestion across London, as given in the 10-year plan; [71320]

(2) what the benchmark is against which he will judge the 10-year plan target of 15 per cent. reduction in traffic congestion across London; and what the subsequent performance statistics relating to this target are. [71319]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: There is a Public Service Agreement target to reduce road congestion in large urban areas below 2000 levels by 2010. The 10-year plan listed the 15 per cent. reduction in traffic congestion across London among a number of possible outcomes for transport in London which could be delivered over the life of the plan, but the plan made it clear that the Mayor was responsible for specific priorities. The Mayor's Transport Strategy and Transport for London's Business Plan indicate these priorities. We shall monitor the delivery of them and their impact on congestion and from time to time we shall review the situation with the Mayor.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish the next surveys relating to the level of congestion on the inter-urban trunk road network and in large urban areas. [71565]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: We hope to publish the year 2000 baseline for congestion in the autumn.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will bring forward proposals to restrict the power of the Mayor of London to introduce congestion charging. [72953]

Mr. Spellar: No. Parliament has given powers to the Mayor in the Greater London Authority Act 1999 to decide whether or not to introduce congestion charging.

Transport Benchmarks

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the benchmarks are for (a) rail punctuality, (b) rail reliability and (c) rail use against which the PSA targets for transport contained in the 2002 Spending Review are set. [71621]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The benchmark year is 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001, against which we will measure the PSA target to increase rail use, while at the same time securing improvements in rail punctuality and reliability.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the level of overcrowding on London trains; and if he will give the benchmark against which he will judge the target of reducing overcrowding to meet the SRA standards by 2010, as indicated in annex 2 of the 10-year plan. [71345]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The Strategic Rail Authority publishes overcrowding statistics on an annual basis. The most recent information was published on 6 June 2002 in the Authority's "On Track" publication. Overcrowding in London is controlled by the Authority's "Passengers In Excess of Capacity" (PIXC) mechanism.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department will publish local competition benchmarks. [71617]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: I assume the hon. Member's question refers to local congestion benchmarks.

The Department plans to use the national transport model to provide congestion benchmark profiles for different areas and reflecting different needs. Publication will follow once we are satisfied this information will be helpful to local authorities in planning how to tackle local congestion.

Road Maintenance

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made as to (a) the current level and (b) the level as at July 2000 of maintenance backlog for (i) local roads, (ii) bridges and (iii) lighting. [71343]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The maintenance backlogs on local roads in England in 2000 were estimated at £2 billion for carriageways and footways, £750 million for bridges and retaining walls, and £1 billion for street lighting. Estimates of the current backlogs will depend upon data that is being collated at present.

Road Works

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice his Department issues to the Highways Agency with regard to the (a) phasing of roadworks and (b) timing of verge grass cutting. [72949]

Mr. Spellar: In line with Road User's Charter targets, the Highways Agency is tasked with ensuring that a minimum of 90 per cent. of works carried out during a year are no more than 2.5 miles long and are at least six miles apart.

The guidelines for verge grass cutting are set out in the Agency's Trunk Road Maintenance Manual. This sets out minimum standards. Higher standards may be used at particular locations for, for example, safety or environmental reasons.

Buses

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many (a) passenger journeys on buses and (b) bus trips per person per year there were in each of the last three years for which figures are available; [71330]

(2) how many (a) passenger journeys on local bus services and (b) local bus trips per person there were in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [71329]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The Department collects details of passenger journeys on local bus services as part of the annual public service vehicle operators' survey. We do not at present collect information on passenger journeys on other types of bus service.

Figures for England are as follows:

(a) passenger journeys on local bus services

	Million

1999–2000	3,732
2000–01	3,761

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, (1) pursuant to his answer of 2 July 2002, Official Report, column 205W, on bus priority schemes, how many routes were operated by guided buses as part of the London bus initiative in each of the last three years; and what the average level of Government funding was for each route; [71383]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 23 July 2002, Official Report, column 205W, on bus priority schemes, what the components are of the London Bus Initiative, including the breakdown of the purposes for which funding provided by Government have been used; and if he will make a statement. [71382]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The London Bus Initiative (LBI) is a matter for the Mayor and Transport for London (TfL). I understand from TfL that improvements are specifically tailored to each route but could include:

Upgraded buses;

Improved safety measures;

Improved accessibility;

New bus priority measures;

Improved customer information systems;

Passenger waiting environments;

Enforcement of bus lanes and other bus stop infringements.

There are currently no guided bus routes forming part of the LBI.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on progress towards the output of (a) improved bus frequencies, (b) enhanced off-peak and (c) enhanced night bus services in London as part of the 10-Year-Plan; [71318]

(2) what the benchmark is against which he will judge the 10 year plan output of (a) improved bus frequencies, (b) enhanced off-peak and (c) enhanced night bus services in London; and what the subsequent performance statistics relating to this target are. [71317]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The 10-Year-Plan indicated a number of possible outcomes for transport in London which could be delivered over the life of the Plan, while making clear that the Mayor was responsible for specific priorities. In respect of improvements to bus services in London, we shall monitor delivery and from time to time we shall review the situation with the Mayor.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 10 July 2002, Official Report, column 976W, on bus services, against what benchmark he will judge whether his Department is meeting its public service agreement to secure improvements in bus punctuality. [71372]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: We are considering the most appropriate means of measuring improvements to punctuality in relation to this target.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the accessibility indicator (households within 13 minutes walk of a bus stop with a service frequency at least once an hour was for (a) small urban areas three to 25k, (b) small urban areas three to 10k, (c) small urban areas 10 to 25k, (d) median urban areas, (e) large urban areas, (f) metropolitan built-up areas and (g) London boroughs in each of the latest three years for which figures are available. [71328]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The proportion of households within 13 minutes walk of a bus stop with a service frequency of at least once an hour was:

England

	1996–98	1997–98	1998–99
(a) small urban areas 3–25k	79	76	75
(b) small urban areas 3–10k	69	66	63
(c) small urban areas 10–25k	88	85	87
(d) medium urban areas 25–250k	95	96	96
(e) large urban areas over 250k	98	98	97
(f) metropolitan built-up areas	99	99	98
(g) London boroughs	98	98	98

In 1998–99 we introduced new funding to improve accessibility to bus services in all rural areas. Since that year, Rural Bus Subsidy Grant has supported 1,800 new or improved bus services in rural England. The grant was extended in 2001–02 to cover all areas outside towns with a population of 25,000 or more and has now been increased to £47.5 million this financial year. In addition, we are now supporting over 200 rural transport projects under the Rural Bus Challenge scheme, which was also first introduced in 1998–99.The source is the National Travel Survey and normally three years of data are aggregated. However, the sample numbers for rural areas were exceptionally low for 2000, casting doubts on the validity of using the data for that year within the indicator. To provide consistency across areas, the average for 1998 and 1999 has been used instead of the average for the three years 1998–2000, as previously published. Figures for the average of 1999 and 2001 will be published when the results for 2001 are released on 25 July.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he collates on the frequency of buses in London; and if he will provide such statistics for the last four years. [71498]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: Bus services in London are the responsibility of the Mayor and Transport "for" London (TfL), and my Department does not routinely collect this information. However, I understand from TfL that there are currently 322 high frequency routes (every 12 minutes or better) and 185 low frequency routes. These exclude school routes, mobility services and night services. Figures for previous years are not available.

Bus service frequencies are planned by TfL to allow the majority of passengers to use the network on a "turn-up-and-go" basis, with as many routes as possible running every 12 minutes or better. In general, service frequencies will not fall below hourly, including night services where applicable.

Buses and Taxis

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve the sustainability and environmental quality of buses and taxis in city areas. [73206]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government have introduced a range of fiscal incentives to encourage the wider availability and use of cleaner fuels such as ultra-low sulphur petrol and diesel and road fuel gases such as LPG and natural gas. These incentives are relevant to all road vehicle sectors including buses and taxis.

My Department's PowerShift and CleanUp programmes—administered by the Energy Saving Trust—provide grants towards the cost of converting vehicles to run on cleaner fuels and towards the cost of fitting emission reduction technologies such as particulate traps. Both taxis and buses have benefited from these programmes.

In addition, my Department has set up the New Vehicle Technology Fund to support the demonstration of innovative clean, fuel-efficient technologies such as fuel cells and hybrid vehicles. The Department views urban vehicles such as taxis and buses as important early markets for the introduction of these technologies and is currently assessing a number of taxi and bus proposals.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will establish a working group to review the quality of taxi systems in major English cities. [73204]

Mr. Jamieson: While we are responsible for the legislative framework for taxis throughout England and Wales, taxi licensing rests with local authorities; it is up to them to use their licensing powers to ensure that their local taxi system is of a satisfactory standard.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will license a new class of taxis in inner city areas based on smaller vehicles. [73203]

Mr. Jamieson: Under the legislation governing taxi licensing in England and Wales, a taxi must be a vehicle with fewer than nine passenger seats. Within this broad provision, it is up to local licensing authorities to determine which vehicles they consider suitable for licensing as taxis, bearing in mind that taxis are licensed for the purpose of enabling both individuals and small groups to hire them at a rank or hail them in the street.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the Smart car and similar vehicles as taxis for city areas. [73205]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department has made no specific assessment of the Smart car or any similar vehicle for use as taxis in city areas. Decisions about which vehicles to license as taxis are made by local licensing authorities based on their assessment of local conditions and circumstances. They would, of course, want to bear in mind the needs of people who wish to travel in small groups as well as those of disabled people, some of whom may need to travel in a wheelchair.

Trams and Light Rail

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment for the purposes of the 10-year plan he has made as to the change in journey speeds on tram systems in London over the last two years; and if he will make a statement; [71499]

(2) what the average journey speed on light rail systems in London was at July 2000; and what the benchmark is against which he will judge whether he has achieved the output of faster journeys by light rail in London in the 10-year plan; [71312]

(3) what assessment he has made of the change in journey speeds on light rail systems in London in the last two years; and if he will make a statement; [71315]

(4) what assessment for the purposes of the 10-year plan he has made as to the change in journey speeds on guided buses in London over the last two years; and if he will make a statement; [71500]

(5) what the average journey speed on tram systems in London was at July 2000; and what the benchmark is against which he will judge whether he has achieved the output of faster journeys by tram in London in the 10-year plan; [71313]

(6) what the average journey speed on guided buses in London was at July 2000; and what the benchmark is against which he will judge whether he has achieved the output of faster journeys by guided bus in London in the 10-year plan. [71314]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 19 July 2002]: The 10-year plan indicated a number of possible outcomes for transport in London which could be delivered over the life of the plan, while making clear that the Mayor was responsible for specific priorities. We shall monitor delivery and from time to time we shall review the situation with the Mayor. The outcome in the plan concerning new routes and faster journeys by light rail, tram or guided bus, was a general reference to possible new services which could result from new infrastructure which could be delivered using the plan's resources.

Departmental Reorganisation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent by his Department in re-branding his Department (a) in total and (b) sub-divided between (i) design of the departmental logo, (ii) design and orders of new stationery, (iii) Department signage and (iv) website design as a result of the Department structural change in June; and if he will make a statement. [70692]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department is spending a nominal sum of less than £25,000 from within existing budgets, to make the required changes to these items.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much has been spent on consultancy fees in relation to the change in Department structure since June; and if he will make a statement; [70711]

(2) how much has been spent on changes in office accommodation as a result of the change in Department structure since June; and if he will make a statement. [70704]

Mr. Jamieson: So far no changes to office accommodation have been made as a result of the recent machinery of government changes and no money spent to date. Over the summer Ministers and officials will be co-located with Department for Transport staff currently in Great Minster House. This will be more effective and reduce travelling between Great Minster House and Eland House.

Public Transport

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish new guidance on the flexible public transport services which the law already allows. [73537]

Mr. Spellar: Fresh guidance on the range of flexible public transport services, which can currently be undertaken, will be published later this week. It is aimed at bus, taxi and private hire vehicle operators, local authorities, transport partnerships and voluntary groups because many may not be aware of the opportunities available. We want to encourage greater use of these services because they can bring more benefits both to passengers and providers and help improve public transport provision. We are distributing the document, which is a free publication, widely as well as publishing it on our website. Although this guidance has been produced as a follow up to the rural White Paper and gives examples of schemes being undertaken in rural areas, I would stress that the services apply equally for urban areas.

REPPIR

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the meaning is of the term 'carrier' as used in REPPIR. [73189]

Mr. Jamieson: In the Radiation (Emergency Preparedness and Public Information) Regulations 2001 a 'carrier' is an employer undertaking the transport by rail of any radioactive substance, which includes a carrier for hire or reward and a carrier on own account, and an employer transferring or conveying a radioactive substance through any public place otherwise than by rail, road, inland waterway, sea or air or by means of a pipeline or similar means.

Anglo-Scottish Ministerial Meetings

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many formal and official inter-ministerial meetings his Department has held with the Scottish Executive since May 1999, broken down by (a) Scottish Executive department, (b) subject and (c) date. [72717]

Mr. Jamieson: Ministers have held meetings with members of the Scottish Executive on a variety of transport issues since May 1999.

Ministerial Meetings

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when and where Ministers in his Department have held meetings with Ministers and officials of the Irish Government since 1 June 2000; which Ministers were involved in each meeting; which Irish Government Departments were involved in each meeting; and which Ministers and officials from the Irish Government attended each meeting. [72699]

Mr. Jamieson: Ministers have held meetings with representatives of the Irish Government on a variety of transport issues since June 2000.

Job Location

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many jobs under the remit of his Department in (a) the core Department, (b) non-departmental public bodies, (c) executive agencies and (d) independent statutory bodies, organisations and bodies financially sponsored by his Department and other such organisations, are located in (i) Scotland, (ii) England, excluding Greater

London, (iii) Greater London, (iv) Wales, (v) Northern Ireland and (vi) overseas, broken down by (A) whole-time equivalent jobs and (B) the percentage per individual Department, body or organisation. [72733]

Mr. Jamieson: I would refer the hon. Member to the following table, which shows the position within the Department for Transport at 1 June 2002:

Department for Transport	Full-time equivalent	Location
Core Department[1]	1,700	London, rest of England and Scotland
Executive Agencies[2] consisting of:	12,212
Driver and vehicle licensing	5,144	England, Scotland and Wales
Driving Standards Agency	1,970	England, Scotland and Wales
Highways Agency	1,770	England
Vehicle Certification Agency	112	UK, USA and Japan
Vehicle Inspectorate	2,116	England, Scotland and Wales
Maritime and Coastguard Agency	1,100	UK
Grand Total:	13,912

[1] The core Department for the Department for Transport (DfT) employs approximately 1,700 staff. This figure is composed of staff working on policy areas and includes an estimate of 50 per cent. of the support staff who worked for the former Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions (DTLR). This figure may change when re-structuring is complete and final decisions have been taken on how support staff are to be allocated to the Office for the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) and Department for Transport (DfT).

[2] The figures for the Executive Agencies are estimates—based on their plans for year 2002–03 and are taken from the DTLR (C) departmental annual report 2002.

I will write to the hon. Member with details for non-departmental public bodies and independent statutory bodies in due course.It has not been possible to calculate the percentage per individual Department, body or organisation as we do not have a breakdown of the total figures by region.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will answer the question from the hon. Member for Chichester, tabled on 22 May, on the official travel of departmental and non-departmental special advisers. [72683]

Mr. Jamieson: We have no record of such a question being tabled to this Department or its predecessor by the hon. Member.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) dates, (b) location and (c) sources were of attributable (i) articles, interviews or contributions for the media, books or other journals and (ii) speeches or presentations made in the public domain, by departmental special advisers since March 2001; who in his Department authorised the activity; and on what date this activity was recorded with the departmental Head of Information. [72248]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

Temporary Staff

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many employees under contract from temping agencies worked in his Department; and how much was spent on temporary staff (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of the total staffing budget in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [72637]

Mr. Jamieson: The information is not held centrally and is therefore not available.

Travel Concessions

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which local authorities grant a 100 per cent. concession for travel by (a) bus, (b) train and (c) bus and train. [72670]

Mr. Jamieson: In England, Crawley, Reading and Redditch provide free concessionary travel for pensioners and disabled people on local bus services only. There are no free concessionary travel schemes that cover only local train travel. Those areas which provide free concessionary travel on local bus services and other transport modes (including travel by local train) for pensioners and disabled people are: the London boroughs (together), Merseyside PTE, West Midlands PTE (pensioners only), and Rutland (disabled people only).

An additional 81 areas in England provide free concessionary travel for blind people on local bus services; of those areas 39 also offer free concessionary travel on other transport modes.

Transport Schemes

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many transport schemes to address demand in rural areas were funded by the Government in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02. [72671]

Mr. Jamieson: Precise information on the number of transport schemes in rural areas is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, funding for transport schemes in rural areas is available through the Government's targeted programme for improvements (TPI) to the trunk road network, the local transport plan (LTP) system and the rural bus challenge.

Of the schemes in the TPI, one rural bypass has been completed and a further 15 rural bypasses and road improvements are under construction. Under the LTP system, local authorities have been allocated ring-fenced capital funds for major schemes costing over £5 million, some of which will benefit rural areas, and block allocations for smaller scale schemes. Authorities have reported in their LTP annual progress reports that capital allocations for local transport are expected to deliver 31 schemes in rural areas in 2000–01 and 55 schemes in 2001–02. This covers rural bypasses on local roads, quiet lane schemes and rural 20-mph zones. The rural bus challenge supported 77 innovative public transport projects in 2000–01 and 85 such projects in 2001–02.

We have also funded improved transport services in rural areas through the rural bus subsidy grant, and the rural transport partnership and parish transport fund schemes administered by the Countryside Agency.

Parliamentary Answers

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether it is his policy to ensure that documents referred to in parliamentary answers are available via his Department's website; [72278]

(2) for how long he retains documents referred to in parliamentary answers on his Department's website. [72288]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department aims to be as helpful as possible in responding to hon. Members' questions. Where it is helpful to refer hon. Members to other documents as part of the substantive reply, this may be done by making hard copies of documents available in the Libraries of the House, or by reference to material available on the Department's website.

Minimum requirements for the type of documents which should be published on Government websites are set out in guidance issued by the Office of the E-Envoy, "Guidelines for Government Websites" (Illustrated Handbook for web management teams section 2.2 'What content should be on your website?' and section 2.3 'Cross-government requirements'). In addition to setting out guidelines on documents for inclusion, the guidance explicitly requires Departments to ensure that content of the site as a whole is up to date and current, and where it is necessary to update the content of individual documents, to show the latest date of amendment clearly on the document concerned. Section 1.2.7 deals with the issue of record management and the OeE currently has a consultation paper out on archiving websites. The purpose of this draft annex to the Illustrated Handbook is to provide Government website managers with a framework towards developing, within their website management policy, suitable procedures and systems to assist in the management, appraisal and preservation of electronic records. A copy of this draft is available online at: http://www.e-envoy.gov.uk:/webguidelines.htm

A copy of the guidelines for UK Government websites is available at: http://www.-envoy.gov.uk/webguidelines.htm

Thames Gateway

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding is available to develop transport links to the Thames Gateway. [72110]

Mr. Jamieson: Approved transport schemes will be funded from the resources in the 10-year Plan for transport.

Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what public consultations have been commenced by his Department since 1 April; and what the (a) closing date and (b) website address of each were. [72067]

Mr. Jamieson: A list of the public consultations by the Department or its predecessors since 1 April 2002 is listed below, including the closing dates for responses and the website address of each document. The list is based on central records and reflects the public consultations undertaken within the areas for which the Department is currently responsible.
